HARDING

FALL 1993

David B. Burks,
President

FROM THE PRESIDENT

Record enrollment brings many opportunities

Another exciting fall semester has begun for those of us at Harding. The August 25 convocation set in motion the 1993-94 school year, the 70th year that Harding has opened her doors as a four-year institution. Another record enrollment greeted the faculty and staff, and more than 1,000 of these students are new to our campus as either freshmen or transfer students.

As I participated in the convocation, I looked out over the student body and realized a record enrollment also means a record number of opportunities for Harding to impact the lives of students. I shared with the students a brief paragraph from a small book I'd read.

It began, "A Return to Basic Goodness — Once upon a time there was honor and virtue in the land; it was a time when a man's word was his bond, a woman felt secure in a safe community, children were raised with strong moral values, and neighbors helped each other without restraint. That era symbolized generations of Americans who took pride in their work and achievements; it was a period when belief in basic values of home, family and community made this country the leader of the free world."

This quotation reminded me of Harding and what we are attempting to do. We are in the business of changing lives. That involves developing Christian scholarship, promoting Christian ethics and asking people to live by a Christ-like standard in all that they do. It also involves developing lasting relationships — relationships with fellow students, relationships with faculty and, most of all, I hope a deeper, stronger relationship with God.

Yes, the 1993-94 school year will be full of opportunities. The biggest challenge each student will face will be that of growing in his or her faith and coming to grips with a faith of his or her own. That challenge, however, is not new. Harding has been helping students grow in their faith for 69 years. III

Memphis administration building sustains significant fire damage

An early morning fire July 29 in the E.H. Ijams Administration Building at the Graduate School of Religion in Memphis heavily damaged administrative other structures on the campus, although firefighters battled the blaze for three hours.

The cause of the 3 a.m. fire has not yet been determined, store the facility.

Architects and structural engineers have examined the building to determine the extent to which the building can be restored using existing portions of the facility. Renovation and rebuilding are expected to be completed during the spring semester.

Classes for the summer session at the Graduate School of Religion were completed on schedule, and the fall schedule of classes began in August. Administrative and faculty offices have temporarily been moved to an adjoining classroom building.

The school's computers and records were saved despite the heavy water damage to the lower floors of the building. Many of the books in the personal libraries of faculty members were not damaged. However, more than 14,000 volumes did receive water damage and were immediately sent to a company that specializes in freeze-drying water-damaged books.

President David Burks said a special capital fund-raising campaign has begun to help defray the cost of rebuilding the structure. Funds raised will help with expenses not covered by insurance.

Three administrative staff positions announced

Three administrative staff appointments have been announced by President David Burks for the Office of University Advancement (formerly University Relations).

Floyd Daniel, long-time vice president for university relations, has been promoted to senior vice president. In this new position Daniel will spend more time working with major donors off campus.

"Floyd is exceptionally talented in this area and has a real gift in working with people on behalf of Harding," Burks said. He added that Daniel will continue to play a major role in policy decision-making for the University.

Daniel, an Alabama native, has worked for Harding since 1965 and has served as a vice president for the past 16 years. He attended Georgia Military Academy in College Park, Ga., and holds a bachelor's degree in business administration from Auburn University.

Dr. Gary Elliott has moved into the position of vice president for university advancement. He will be responsible for the overall fund-raising system of the University, including the annual fund, the capital program and the planned giving program. Elliott is a familiar face to many at Harding, having served on the English Department faculty from 1967-1981. He chaired the department for eight of those years and received the Distinguished Teacher Award in 1980.

Since leaving Harding in 1981, Elliott has served as academic dean, executive vice president, and then president of Columbia Christian College. He then joined the staff at Pepperdine University in 1991, where he has served as senior development officer and as acting assistant vice chancellor.

Elliott is a native of Chickasha, Okla. He received his bachelor's degree from Harding in 1962, his master's from North Texas State University in 1968, and his doctorate from Kansas State University in 1973. He is married to the former Cheryl Guild, and they have two adult children.

Phil Dixon, a 1967 Harding graduate, has been named director of deferred giving. He comes to the University advancement team from First National Bank, a division of Arvest Trust Co. NA, in Rogers, Ark., where he was senior vice president. Dixon has worked in banking for 19 years, the last nine for Arvest.

Concerning goals for his new position, Dixon said, "I would like to see the University's endowment large enough that we can keep tuition as close to current levels as possible. We also need to be able to provide ample scholarships. I don't want to see any student unable to come to Harding because of money."

Dixon received his J.D. degree from the University of Arkansas-Fayetteville in 1974 and is a veteran of the Coast Guard. He and his wife, Ann, have four children.

Enrollment reaches record high

Harding University continues to grow at a rapid pace. For the sixth consecutive year, enrollment has reached a record high.

Registering for the fall semester on the Searcy campus were 3,552 students, an increase of 89 over fall 1992 totals. The total includes 1,038 students new to Harding, 825 of which are freshmen.

Enrollment at Harding University Graduate School of Religion in Memphis, Tenn., had not closed at press time and was therefore unavailable.

Included in this year's enrollment at the main campus are students from all 50 states, thanks to Joseph Chappel of Narragansett, R.I. Rhode Island had been the only state not represented by last year's student body.

The number of international students at Harding is on the rise, too. One hundred sixty-two students from 38 foreign nations are represented this year. Those nations include Denmark, Russia, France, Germany, Romania, Scotland, Australia, Japan, Zambia, Finland, Belgium and Honduras, among others.

Director of Admissions Mike Williams said the 1,650 applications received during the past year was also an all-time high, as is the number of National Merit Finalists enrolled this fall. Those 13 students put Harding among the top 100 colleges and universities in the nation with the most National Merit scholars enrolled.

"We're excited about this new school year," Williams said, "because this promises to be one of the most talented freshman classes we've ever attracted to Harding — and early signs show that next year promises more of the same."

Williams reports that he has already received more than 350 applications for the fall 1994 semester, which is a 25 percent increase over this time last year. He therefore is encouraging those interested in enrolling for next fall to do so as early as possible.

Harding's enrollment has increased by 25 percent during the six-year presidency of Dr. David Burks.

The meeting focused on how libraries are coping with journal price increases.

21 new, returning faces on faculty

The beginning of the fall semester brought 21 new or returning faculty members to the Harding campuses.

The School of Business has two new faculty members, Dr. Budd Hebert and Bill Hemphill, and one member of the faculty returning from doctoral leave. Scott Stovall has returned from two years of study at North Texas State.

Hebert comes to Harding as an associate professor from Albuquerque, N.M., where he was executive director of the Rio Grande Development Co. He received his bachelor's and master's degrees from Arizona State University, and he obtained his doctorate from Ohio State University. He previously taught at the University of Cincinnati and at Virginia Commonwealth University.

Hemphill has completed a 20-year career with the Air Force, stationed at the Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, Colo. He was commander of the 54th Security Police Squadron and was responsible for the continuing education and training of cadets. His undergraduate degree is from Oklahoma State University, and his master's degree is from Auburn University. He is an assistant professor.

The College of Bible and Religion has added Dr. Duane Warden, Dr. James Vann Rackley and Dr. Adrian Hickmon to its faculty.

Warden, professor of Bible, was most recently chairman of the Bible and Religion Division at Ohio Valley College. He received his bachelor's degree from Harding in 1965, the M.A.R. degree from Harding Graduate School in 1978, and his doctorate in New Testament from Duke University. He was recognized as Professor of the Year in 1990 by the OVC student body.

Rackley is a licensed professional counselor who comes to Harding from Christiansburg, Va., where he worked as a supervisor in the court services unit of the Department of Youth and Family Services. He received his bachelor's degree from Harding in 1983 and completed his master's in marriage and family therapy in 1986 from Abilene Christian University. He has recently completed doctoral work at Virginia Tech University in Blacksburg. He serves as an assistant professor for the new master's program in marriage and family therapy.

FACULTY FACT

Ten new faculty members have earned doctorates.

Hickmon is a 1977 alumnus who completed his master's in education degree at Harding two years later. He also has earned a master's in substance abuse counseling from Northeast Louisiana University, and he is in the process of completing doctoral work in marriage and family therapy from Virginia Tech University. For 11 years he served as football coach and teacher at Ouachita Christian School in Monroe, La., and was named District Coach of the Year four times. Hickmon also serves as an assistant professor for the new MFT program.

Also in the College of Bible and Religion, Ross Cochran has returned from doctoral leave in Boston, and Dr. Ed Myers has returned to the Searcy campus from the Graduate School campus in Memphis.

Three new faces have joined the faculty at the Graduate School in Memphis, Tenn., making the school's faculty strength greater than it has been in five years. Dr. Donald Kinder serves as associate dean and as associate professor of church history, Dr. Edward Gray serves as assistant professor of counseling, and Dr. Dave Bland serves as associate professor of homiletics.

Kinder formerly taught at Columbia Christian College, where he served as chair and professor of Bible. He holds his doctorate in church history from the University of Iowa. Gray is a counseling psychologist and a marriage and family therapist. He received his doctorate in counseling psychology from New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary. Bland also comes from Columbia Christian College. He received his doctor of ministry degree from Western Baptist Seminary and is completing his Ph.D. at the University of Washington.

Janice Linck, assistant professor, has been added to the School of Nursing faculty. She received her bachelor of nursing degree from the University of New York in 1985 and her master's from Wichita State University in 1992. She most recently has worked in both classroom and clinical settings at Northern Oklahoma Medical College, and she previously worked as the head nurse at Oklahoma State University in Stillwater, Okla.

The School of Education has added Linda Thornton, assistant professor, who has come to Harding from Boca Raton, Fla., where she taught for the past five years at Calusa Elementary School. Thornton received her bachelor's in elementary education from Harding in 1968 and her master's in educational research from Florida Atlantic University in 1989. She received her Ed.S. degree in educational leadership in 1992, also from Florida Atlantic, and is now working on her doctoral degree.

Mark Hudson has joined the Department of Music as an instructor. He most recently worked as director of bands for Fort Clarke Middle School in Gainesville, Fla. He graduated from Harding in 1981 with a bachelor's in music education, and he received his master's in music conducting from the University of Florida in 1989. Hudson has completed his doctoral work in music education and is in the process of writing his dissertation.

The Department of Behavioral Sciences has added Dr. Ken Cameron to its faculty as associate professor of psychology. Cameron is a 1977 graduate of Harding who received his doctorate in clinical psychology from the University of Arkansas in 1982. For the past six years, he has been the chief of clinical psychology at the Department of Corrections for the state of Missouri.

New to the Department of Communication as an instructor is Karen McLarty, a 1986 alumna. She received her master's from the University of Tennessee in 1987. She has worked as a speech pathologist for both Saint Francis Hospital in Memphis, and for National Health Corporation. She is a member of the American Speech, Language and Hearing Association.

Janie Giles, a 1991 Harding alumnus, has been added to the Art Department faculty as an instructor. After receiving her bachelor's degree from Harding, Giles began graduate work at Emporia State University in Emporia, Kan., in the area of art therapy and psychology. She has worked at Searcy Children's Home and with an elementary school in Emporia.

The Department of Kinesiology has added two new instructors who also serve as men's basketball coaches. Jeff Morgan is the new head basketball coach, and Tim Kirby is assistant basketball coach.

Morgan has come to Harding from West Texas State University, where he was head basketball coach. A Corning, Ark., native, he attended both York College and West Texas State. Kirby comes to Harding from Poteau, Okla., where he was head coach at Carl Albert State College. He is a graduate of the University of Science and Arts of Oklahoma and East Central (Okla.) University.

Dr. Steven Moore of St. Jude's Children's Research Hospital in Memphis, has joined the Biology Department as an assistant professor. His expertise is in immunology, and his research has provided new data in the area of genetic regulation of white blood cells. He is a graduate of Abilene Christian University and received his doctorate in microbiology and immunology from the University of Arkansas for Medical Sciences.

Another faculty member returning from doctoral leave is Alice Jewell, who has been at the University of Arkansas for two years. She rejoins the Department of English.

Faculty members named to new administrative responsibilities

New administrative responsibilities have been announced for several faculty members by President David B. Burks.

Dr. Allan Isom, professor of Bible, has been named associate dean and director of special programs of the College of Bible and Religion. His new duties include the direction of two programs that he initiated: UPLIFT summer youth Bible camp and the Good News Singers. Additionally, he will succeed Dr. Don Shackelford as director of church relations at the end of this academic year.

Pruitt and Welch join Admissions

The Office of Admissions Services has two new faces this fall. Mark Pruitt and Darrell Welch have joined the staff as admissions advisors.

Pruitt graduated from Harding in May 1992 with an accounting degree. The Nichols, Iowa, native comes to his new position from St. Louis, where he served as a staff auditor for Coopers and Lybrand, a Big Six accounting firm. He recruits students primarily from the Mid-West. While a student at Harding, Pruitt was assistant manager of a men's dormitory, a member of Alpha Chi honor Barbara Statom, associate professor of business education, has been named assistant dean of the School of Business. Dr. David Perkins, a CPA and associate professor of accounting, will now direct the accounting program.

Don Yates, who served as assistant director of the Walton Scholarship Program last year, has been named director of the program.

At the Florence, Italy, campus, Robert Shackelford is now associate dean of administrative affairs for the HUF program.

society and the intercollegiate business team, and an officer with Kappa Tau men's social club.

Welch, who received his bachelor's degree in professional sales from Harding in August 1992, recruits students from the West Coast. Originally from Lake Charles, La., he most recently was a management trainee for Bud's Discount Stores. He also has worked for Jackson and Coker, a physicians recruitment firm. Welch was a member of the intercollegiate golf team while a student at Harding.

Nichols serves association as president

Dr. Jim Nichols (education) began serving as president of the Arkansas Association of Teacher Educators July 1 after being selected last fall by the association as president-elect. Since that time he has attended the national ATE meeting in Los Angeles.

Wilson presents food classes at annual meeting

Dr. Beth Wilson (home economics) presented two classes titled "Food in the 21st Century: Better by Design" at the annual meeting of the Arkansas Association for Family and Community Education, held June 15-17 on the Harding campus.

Cheney, Quayle highlight American Studies Lectures

Dick Cheney

James Humes

Fred Barnes

Dan Quayle

Dick Cheney and Dan Quayle headline the American Studies Institute Distinguished Lecture Series for 1993-94.

The series began Sept. 7 with author and sales consultant George R. Walther, followed with film critic and nationally recognized television personality Michael Medved Sept. 21.

Scheduled as the series' next speaker is Dick Cheney, U.S. secretary of defense from 1989-1993, who became known around the world as leader of the Pentagon during Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm. For his service during the Gulf War, President George Bush presented him with America's highest civilian award, the Presidential Medal of Freedom. He will speak in Benson Auditorium at 7:30 p.m. Nov. 4.

Cheney served as assistant to the president and White House chief of staff during the Ford administration. At 34, he was the youngest person ever to hold that position. He was later elected six times to Wyoming's only seat in the U.S. House of Representatives. Congressman Cheney then rose through the leadership ranks to become the House Republican whip in 1988, the second-ranking minority leader in the House.

James Humes, an actor, historian and politician, is scheduled to speak Feb. 8, 1994, at 7:30 p.m. in the Administration Auditorium. His leadership seminar presentation will be "The Sir Winston Method: Language of Leadership," a riveting portrayal of one of this century's greatest world leaders. His popular one-man show has been presented in all 50 states, as well as in Great Britain, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, Bermuda and Hong Kong. He has performed for members of the Royal Family and at the White House.

Humes has been an elected legislator, White House speech writer for four presidents, and author of a biography of Shakespeare and three books about Winston Churchill. His program about the famed prime minister aired on PBS television in 1986, and his biography, Churchill: Speaker of the Century, was nominated for the Pulitzer Prize in 1981.

Fred Barnes, a columnist and nationally known commentator on politics and cultural affairs, will address an Administration Auditorium audience March 24, 1994, at 7:30 p.m. A senior editor at The New Republic, Barnes appears on television as a regular panelist for "The McLaughlin Group" and frequently on CNN's "Crossfire." He is a moderator for the weekly Voice of America show "Issues in the News," and has appeared on "Nightline," "Today," "Good Morning America," "Meet the Press," "Face the Nation" and "The MacNeil/Lehrer Newshour."

As one of the nation's most respected commentators and journalists, Barnes covered the Supreme Court and the White House for the Washington Star before joining the Baltimore Sun as a political columnist and national political correspondent.

Dan Quayle, 44th vice president of the United States from 1988-1992, speaks April 14, 1994, at 7:30 p.m. in Benson Auditorium. Quayle was the first chairman of the National Space Council, a space-policy body established by statute in 1988. In 1989 President Bush named him head of the Council on Competitiveness, which worked to ensure U.S. international competitiveness into the 21st century. The former vice president is serving as chairman of the new Competitiveness Center of the Hudson Institute, and he also serves on the Institute's board of trustees.

Mr. Quayle was first elected to Congress in 1976 from Indiana's 4th Congressional District, defeating an eight-term incumbent Democrat. In 1980 he became the youngest person ever elected to the U.S. Senate from the state of Indiana, defeating three-term incumbent Democrat Birch Bayh. He again made Indiana political history in 1986, winning reelection to the U.S. Senate by the largest margin ever achieved to that date by a candidate in a statewide Indiana race.

Part of the 1993-94 ASI Distinguished Lecture Series was underwritten with a grant from the Young America's Foundation, headquartered in Virginia. The Foundation annually assists colleges and universities in bringing nationally known speakers to campuses throughout the country.

Student Association stresses service as school year's focus "And let us consider one another to provoke unto love and good works." This verse from Hebrews 10:24 is serving as the focus for this year's activities planned by the 1993-94 Student Association.

Led by President Rich Little of Capalaba, Australia, the Student Association is stressing service as its theme. "We must first serve God and then others," Little said, "because without a focus on service and spirituality, we have no purpose."

Little has three year-long projects planned to provide the SA and students with ample opportunities to serve. Fund-raising efforts throughout the year will assist two of the SA's service projects by helping establish a preaching school in Haiti and provide a mobile medical clinic for a church in Ghana.

"These year-long projects will enable us and all the students more time for follow-up reports on the progress of our efforts. I think we'll maintain better contact and see more results than we've been able to in past projects that have been undertaken," Little said.

A third project began Sept. 9-12 when 120 students and four faculty members participated in a flood relief project in Arnold, Mo. The students helped clean up debris, cleaned out basements of flooded homes and removed sandbags. The Arnold Church of Christ, which has received more than $300,000 in flood-relief contributions, assisted in organizing the effort. Goods bought by the church with the donations were distributed by the students.

"Help was readily available as flood waters rose," Little said, "but now that they've receded and it's time to clean up, help is harder to find. We helped one home owner remove 200,000 sandbags from around his house, and there are still sandbags everywhere."

There was no cost to any student participating in the effort. The congregation in Arnold arranged accommodations, and the College Church of Christ in Searcy provided transportation and gasoline. "The only negative thing about the whole trip was that we all had to receive tetanus shots," Little said.

Other efforts planned by Little will prove less hazardous. Theme dinners in the cafeteria served by faculty members, Sadie Hawkins Week, the "President for a Day" role reversal between a student and President David Burks, the "Light Up Campus" Christmas display, and an International Emphasis Week are some of the activities Little has planned. "And my plans are in no way conclusive at this point," he added.

Faculty promotions announced

Nine faculty members have received promotions in rank, and three have been named to emeritus status, effective with the beginning of the fall 1993 semester.

Dr. Helen Lambert, associate dean of the School of Nursing, was promoted to full professor status. Also promoted to professor was Dr. Dan Tullos of the Communications Department. Tullos also serves as director of the speech clinic.

Promoted to associate professor were Dr. Paul Haynie of the history faculty, Dr. Kathy Howard of the Behavioral Sciences Department, and Dr. Randy McLeod and Dr. David Perkins, both of the School of Business faculty. McLeod also serves the School as associate dean.

In addition to Little, a senior Bible major, other officers for the year include David Rubio, a senior history major from Memphis, Tenn., serving as vice president; Michele Regauld, a junior nursing major from North Little Rock, Ark., serving as secretary; and Glen Metheny, a senior accounting major from Kennett, Mo., serving as treasurer.

Three faculty members were promoted from instructor to assistant professor. Promoted were James Frank, assistant football coach and member of the kinesiology faculty; Scott Ragsdale, also an assistant football coach and member of the math and computer science faculty; and Keith Schramm, who joined the Chemistry Department last year.

Given emeritus status were three recently retired faculty members. Dr. Eddie Baggett of the Music Department, Ed Sanders of the College of Bible and Religion, and Dr. Bill Williams of the Chemistry Department were all given this designation.

Pitt's works on exhibition

Paul Pitt (art) recently had several of his works exhibited at the Thirteen Islands Gallery in St. Simon's Island, Ga., and also in the Van Cleave Gallery in Hot Springs, Ark. Pitt's work has been exhibited in more than one dozen locations throughout the nation this year.

Leadership theme of November Grad School Elders Workshop

"Faithful Leadership for an Anxious People" is the theme for this year's Elders Workshop to be conducted by the Graduate School of Religion in Memphis, Tenn. An addition to the program this year is the inclusion of topics for the wives of elders, so the school is encouraging participants to attend as couples.

The workshop is scheduled for Nov. 5-6 with six different speakers delivering messages. Opening the schedule will be Dr. Keith Stotts' address "Secure Leaders for an Anxious People."

Stotts is president of Ohio Valley College in Parkersburg, W.Va. He serves as an elder for the Grand Central Church of Christ in Vienna, and is a 1956 alumnus of the Harding Graduate School. Stotts' message on the second day of the workshop will be "Knowing the Sheep."

Discussion groups are scheduled to be a part of the program and will be conducted twice. Three different topics will be offered simultaneously, and participants may choose which group they wish to attend.

Leading the first set of group discussions will be David Ralston on "Leading the Church into the Next Century"; David Chadwell on "A Realistic Approach to Congregational Unity"; and Mary Peden with a ladies class titled "A Love Affair."

Ralston is an elder at the Highland Street Church of Christ in Memphis. He is a graduate of David Lipscomb University and is active in a mission effort centered in Kiev, Ukraine.

Chadwell has been the pulpit minister for the Oxford, Miss., Church of Christ since 1974. He has 40 years of ministry experience and is a graduate of both David Lipscomb University and the Graduate School.

Peden and her husband, Joe, work with the Westport Road Church of Christ in Louisville, Ky. Mary is active with the congregation's teaching program at all age levels and in small-group Bible studies. Joe is an elder at the congregation and is active in mission campaigns in Canada and Scotland.

Joe Peden will conduct a discussion group during the second set of offerings titled "The Many Loves of an Elder." Also scheduled are "Setting Priorities" with Ralston and another ladies discussion led by Mary Peden titled "See You at the House."

The workshop will close with an address by Dr. Bill Flatt, dean, titled "Overcoming Anxiety." Additional information about the workshop may be obtained by calling Dr. Evertt Huffard at (901) 761-1356.

140 graduate in August ceremonies

Friday the 13th was a great day for the 140 students who received their diplomas at August commencement exercises in Benson Auditorium.

From the College of Bible and Religion, three received bachelor of arts degrees. The College of Arts and Sciences conferred 37 bachelor of arts degrees, 14 bachelor of science degrees, one bachelor of music education degree, two bachelor of science in medical technology degrees, four bachelor of social work degrees, and one bachelor of fine arts degree.

The School of Business conferred 15 bachelor of business administration degrees, one bachelor of arts degree, and one associate of arts degree. The School of Education conferred 14 bachelor of arts degrees, 37 master of education degrees, and 10 master of science in education degrees. No degrees were conferred from the School of Nursing.

Serving as speaker for August commencement was Larry M. Bills, president of Crowley's Ridge College in Paragould, Ark. Bills, who received his bachelor's degree in music education from Harding in 1958, began his career teaching music in Des Arc, Ark.; Tyler, Texas; and at Harding Academy in Searcy. He then worked for 13 years as music instructor and choral director at Northeastern Christian Junior College in Pennsylvania, later serving as director of development and vice president for development. He has been president at Crowley's Ridge for six years. Bills and his wife, the former Sara Jane Good, are recipients of the Northeastern Christian Service Award, presented by Northeastern Christian Junior College.

Human Resources program receives ACBSP accreditation

Faculty and students involved in the human resources management program received some encouraging and much-anticipated news at the close of the 1992-93 school year.

The human resources program, which is a joint venture between the School of Business and the Department of Behavioral Sciences, is now accredited by the Association of Collegiate Business Schools and Programs (ACBSP). It is the first undergraduate interdisciplinary program in human resources to be accredited in the state of Arkansas, and the accreditation brings this major into company with the majors of the School of Business, all of which are also accredited by the ACBSP.

"This accreditation adds significant credibility to the quality and value of this major," said George Oliver, manager of the program.

Additionally, the National Society for Human Resource Management in Washington, D.C., awarded the Superior Merit Award to Harding's chapter of the society. "This achievement is the highest award possible in the profession of human resources, and the officers and students who participate in our Harding chapter are solely responsible for this achievement," Oliver said.

Nearly 70 students at Harding now major in human resources. "These honors will greatly impact the professionalism of these student's major as well as their future careers," Oliver said.

Distinctive new Harding VISA card available

Alumni and friends of the University are now able to carry a Harding swing with them wherever they go.

The swing comes in the form of a distinctive design on the Harding University VISA card from First Tennessee Bank. Harding and First Tennessee have joined together to offer the card to the University's various constituencies.

Each time a purchase is made with a Harding VISA card, First Tennessee makes a financial contribution to the school at no cost to the cardholder. In 1992 alone, Harding received more than $17,600 from First Tennessee. More than 3,000 cards are already in use.

No annual fee is charged the first year for a Harding VISA card, and with an average monthly balance of $500 or more, the customary $18 annual fee will continue to be waived. For Arkansas residents the fee is waived only for the first year.

First Tennessee's interest rates are well below the national level. If cardholders choose to pay their balances in full each month, interest charges can be avoided altogether. Free convenience checks allow cardholders to transfer more expensive credit card balances to the new Harding VISA card.

For more information about Harding's VISA card, call the Office of University Advancement at 1-800-477-4312.

Economics team takes sixth place in competition

Harding's Economics

Team won sixth place in the International Students in Free Enterprise (SIFE) competition in Kansas City, Mo., May 23-25. This year's honor, combined with the six national first-place trophies and six other first-runner-up trophies won previously, further established Harding's "capitalism corps" as the winningest economics team in the country.

The team's entry, "Free Enterprise — It Works When We Do," elaborated on more than 60 projects and programs that were presented to civic, professional and educational groups in White County throughout the last school year. Judges for the competition were 100 chief executive officers of American businesses and industries.

Members of the team were Clint Blair, co-captain from West Liberty, Ky.; Tracy Crouch, co-captain from Judsonia, Ark.; Aaron Haston from Salem, Mo.; Sheri Benthall from Little Rock, Ark.; Anessa Hobby from Searcy; and Jonathan Pace from Searcy. The group's sponsor is Dr. Don Diffine, professor of economics.

"The overall quality of the teams was the toughest we've ever faced. More than 300 colleges started the year-long competition, and I can say that this team was the strongest, hardest working and most talented I've seen in years," Diffine said.

Benson book still available

The biography of Dr. George S. Benson, Before Any Were Willing, is available from the Harding University Bookstore. The book was written in 1991 by Dr. John C. Stevens, chancellor emeritus of Abilene Christian University, just before Benson's death.

Copies of the $19.95 book may be obtained by writing the Harding University Bookstore, Box 2266, Searcy, AR 72149-0001.

Freddie Woodruff

Alumnus, U.S. diplomat Woodruff killed

The shooting death of a U.S. diplomat Aug. 8 drew national attention to Searcy and the Harding campus.

Career diplomat Freddie Woodruff (BA'69) was shot while riding in a car near Tbilisi, Georgia, the former Soviet republic. He had arrived in Georgia in June and was scheduled to return to the United States later in August.

Woodruff, 45, was listed as a foreign service officer employed by the State Department, but was later identified as a CIA agent. R. James Woolsey Jr., director of the CIA, was in Moscow at the time of the shooting for meetings with Russian officials and went to Tbilisi to retrieve the body.

The Harding alumnus was riding in a car driven by Eldar Gugusladze, the chief bodyguard for Eduard Shevardnadze, president of the former Soviet republic. Woodruff was reportedly training Shevardnadze's security forces as part of a U.S. program to support Shevardnadze in a civil war struggle in Georgia.

A 22-year-old Georgia man has been arrested in the shooting. Political motives for the shooting have been ruled out, as the man was apparently attempting to stop the car to steal it. Woodruff was hit in the head by a single bullet.

Woodruff was the son of Dr. George Woodruff, a retired professor of biology at Harding. His mother, Dorothy, was also a retired employee of the University, having worked in the Office of University Relations. His three sisters, Cheri Gardner and Jill Pulley of Searcy and Georgia Alexander of Russellville, Ark., are all alumnae of Harding.

Woodruff's assignments had taken him to Sudan, Ethiopia, Thailand, Singapore, Pakistan, India, Egypt, Jordan, Turkey, Kazakhstan, Germany, Netherlands and France.

He is survived by his wife, Meredith, who lives in Herndon, Va., with the couple's three children, and two children from his first marriage. Memorial services for Woodruff were conducted in Washington, D.C.

Business supporter Belden dies in August

Delbert Ralph "Del" Belden, former president and chief executive officer of Lomanco Inc. of Jacksonville, Ark., died Aug. 9 in Las Vegas. He was 66.

Belden established the Clark David Belden Center for Private Enterprise Education on the Harding campus in 1979. The Center was named to honor Belden's father, who had begun Lomanco in Minneapolis in 1946. Lomanco, which employs 175 workers, is one of the world's leading manufacturers of turbine vents, louvers and ventilators.

Through Del Belden's efforts and contribution, a sales curriculum was developed at Harding, and now the School of Business offers a degree in professional sales. He was also instrumental in the hiring of a visiting professor of sales.

Belden was the recipient of the University's Trustee Award and was the first inductee into the school's National Leadership Video Library. In 1979 he was awarded an honorary doctor of laws degree from Harding.

Belden established "Always Available," a program to help people with alcohol problems, and "Jacksonville Care Channel," which provides food and other assistance for the poor. He was president of the Jacksonville Chamber of Commerce in 1979 and helped raise funds to build the present chamber's building in 1980. He was also a member of the board of directors of the First National Bank of Jacksonville.

He is survived by his wife, Valerie Grayce; a daughter, Penny; four sons, John, Dennis, Paul and Ted; 14 grandchildren and six great-grandchildren; and a brother and two sisters.

Dr. Don Diffine, director of the Belden Center, gave the eulogy at Belden's memorial service in Jacksonville Aug. 16.

Stevens Art Center namesake dead at 93

Mildred Taylor Stevens, a long-time supporter of Harding, died July 20 at her Macon, Ga., home at the age of 93.

Stevens was a graduate of the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music, where she studied piano. She was a well-known benefactor who donated her time and money to numerous charities and institutions in Georgia and outside the state.

The art center built at Harding in 1969 is named in honor of Stevens. The Mildred Taylor Stevens Art Center was dedicated Nov. 8, 1971. The two-story, L-shaped structure contains nearly 12,000 square feet and was built at a cost of $200,000.

The center was the fifth building completed in Harding's

"Decade of Development."

Among other contributions, Stevens created the Billy and Bobby Stevens Foundation at The Medical College of Georgia in Augusta. The foundation, which funded medical research, was named for her two sons, who died as children.

In 1971 Stevens funded the construction of a small museum on the grounds of the American Camellia Society headquarters in Marshallville, Ga. She filled the museum with a $250,000 collection of Boehm porcelains as a memorial to her husband, children and parents.

Her husband, clay-products manufacturing executive William Parks Stevens, died in the late 1960s.

Chorus plans 1994 European campaign

Although it's early fall, the Harding Chorus is well on its way to finalizing its summer 1994 tour and campaign, which will take the group to Europe for four weeks.

Scheduled for May 20-June 19, the tour will first take the chorus to England, where they will visit London and present concerts in Cambridge and Loughborough. Additional concerts will be held in Aberdeen and Edinburgh, Scotland, and in France, Belgium and Italy.

This will make the eighth trip the chorus has made to Europe since 1979, and during those years the group has modified its campaign strategies. "We now concentrate almost entirely on presenting concerts in situations that the local churches arrange," said Chorus Director Dr. Cliff Ganus III, "and this has worked well at drawing attention to a church's activities, getting neighbors and relatives involved in the church, attracting media attention and putting church leaders in contact with leaders of the cities."

Traveling by chartered bus throughout Europe, the 40-50 singers who make the trip find the campaign very uplifting. "It's as encouraging to them as it is to the local Christians, and it introduces our students to mission work," Ganus said.

On the two most recent tours, Ganus said that several alumni accompanied them, and he is hoping that will be the case again next summer. "We're open for any friends and alumni to travel with us, and we try to travel inexpensively," he said. The group usually stays in the homes of the host congregations, which keeps travel expenses to around $1,600.

According to Ganus, a highlight from 1992's tour was a concert in Bratislava, Czechoslovakia, where the congregation there rented the Slovak Philharmonic Hall for two concerts. Nearly 1,400 people attended the concerts, which were followed by religious lectures.

Fabulous Florence tour successful; scheduled again during May 1994

The 19 travelers who returned from May's Harding-sponsored "Fabulous Florence" tour of Renaissance Italy say the tour lived up to its name — and then some.

The complete tour package was the first ever offered to friends of Harding. Designed for participants age 55 or older, the tour cost included air travel, accommodations, meals, concert tickets, entrance fees and all tips during the 14-day experience.

"Several in the group asked us, 'How can you provide all this for so little money?'," said Dr. Jeff Hopper, professor of music and one of six Fabulous Florence tour directors. He said that all needs of the travelers, most of whom were Harding alumni, were met with the tour's fee of about $3,000.

Accompanying Hopper as tour directors were his wife, Judy; Dr. Warren Casey, professor of music, and his wife, Suzanne; Robert Shackelford, associate dean of administrative affairs on the Florence campus, and his wife, Mona, assistant to the dean on the Florence campus. The enthusiastic guides gave introductory lectures for concerts and museums, led social activities and shopping expeditions, and taught conversational Italian.

Tour guests stayed at the villa "Il Palazzaccio," the University-owned authentic landmark where Harding University in Florence (HUF) students live during their sessions abroad.

picked up free Bibles and signed up for Bible correspondence courses, and it was encouraging to know that we played a part in helping that church make so many contacts," Ganus said.

During their two-week stay, the group traveled to such places as Scandicci, Pisa and Milan, and visited Pitti Palace; Boboli Gardens; the Accademia Gallery, where Michelangelo's "David" is displayed; the Uffizi Museum; Ponte Vecchio; and the tombs of Michelangelo, Galileo, Rossini and Machiavelli.

"The greatest thing about the trip is the chance to meet the people who go and, in just two short weeks, to become deep friends with them," Casey said. "That sounds trite, but it's reality in this case. You're with those people on the road, at eating times, visiting — all the time. Making friends with people who have experienced so much together. is, by far, the best part of the trip."

Plans are now being made for next year's Fabulous Florence tour, scheduled for May 5-19. The tentative schedule of activities calls for visits to many of the same points of interest as this year's tour, but some new sites have been added. An excursion is planned to Rome, where guests will see the Forum, Colosseum, Circus Maximus, St. Peter's Church, the Vatican Museum and Sistine Chapel.

To receive a brochure with more information about the Fabulous Florence tour, contact Dr. Don Shackelford, dean of international studies, Harding University, Box 754, Searcy, AR 72149-0001; or call Mary Lou Daughety at (501) 279-4529.

Tucker attends workshop in North Carolina

Dr. David Tucker (business) attended a workshop titled "Managing the School of Business," co-sponsored by Georgia Southern University and the Southern Business Administration Association Aug. 2-3 in Asheville, N.C. The workshop was designed for faculty development and the recruiting and retention of business students.

Shultz co-authors article with First Lady

Dr. Cathleen Shultz (nursing) has co-authored with First Lady Hillary Clinton an article for the National League of Nursing's publication Nursing and Health Care. The article described the Clinton Administration's program aimed at ensuring that every child in America is immunized. The article appeared in the June issue.

Designer finds musical set challenging

"This is the most difficult show I've ever tried to build sets for. It's definitely a challenge!"

So says Dr. Morris Ellis, professor of communication, about this year's Homecoming musical, "Funny Girl." Ellis is scenic designer for the production, which will highlight Homecoming Weekend festivities planned for Oct. 28-30.

"Funny Girl" is a large-scale musical, featuring 15 different set configurations and a large cast of named characters with identifiable speaking and singing roles. The numerous set changes and cast entrances and exits have presented a special challenge for Ellis and his crew this year.

Ellis has played a key role in the production of about 10 plays per year for the last 10 years, and he said this show has demanded the most meticulous planning of all. He even had to assemble a wooden scale model of the set configurations from the audience's point of view before he could begin engineering the actual sets.

"In most shows I can find a mood or visual style that works for the whole production, therefore calling for only a few big-unit sets with minor changes," he said. "That works well because we try to eliminate as much waiting time as possible for the audience during set transitions.

"This show, though, jumps from scene to scene with little continuity. You can't go for more than three scenes without a set change. It will be interesting to see how it all works together in the end!"

Auditions for "Funny Girl" were held the last week of August, and cast meetings and rehearsals began immediately. Although the musical calls for a large cast, there is only one lead role: Fanny Brice, played by junior music education major Jessica Pell. It will be the first lead performance in a major Harding production for Pell, who transferred last year from Michigan Christian College.

"Jessica's extremely talented, and she's a great joy to work with," Ellis said. "I think the talent we've got among these students will certainly make the show a memorable one!"

"Funny Girl" will run for two performances during Homecoming Weekend, Friday at 8:15 p.m. and Saturday at 7:30 p.m. Directing is Robin Miller, associate professor of communication. For more information contact the Department of Communication at (501) 279-4445.

Insight planned for November

High school students will experience firsthand the sights and sounds of Harding during Insight '93 Nov. 12-13.

The annual event is exclusively for high school students and usually attracts hundreds of guests. During the weekend, students may tour the campus, visit classes and attend several planned activities.

Scheduled events include two performances by the music group Acappella; a performance by Harding's Good News Singers; a devotional by the lily pool, and one featuring the dramatic group Conquerors; and a Saturday Bison football game with Southern Arkansas University.

Popular youth speaker Randy Gill will be Insight's special guest this year. Gill, a 1976 Harding graduate, is youth minister for the Malibu, Calif., Church of Christ and is associate professor of music and director of choral activities at Pepperdine University. He has spoken in the past at numerous Harding events, including the Bible Lectureship and UPLIFT summer youth Bible camp.

Housing in campus dormitories will be provided for Insight guests at no expense. Guests may register upon arrival, and housing will be assigned at that time.

For a complete schedule of events and times, contact the Admissions Office, Harding University, Box 2255, Searcy, AR 72149-0001; or call toll free 1-800-477-4407.

Petit Jean, Bison editors announced

Editors for the University's yearbook and newspaper publications have been announced by Kay Gowen, assistant professor of communication and director of student publications.

Editor of the 1994 Petit Jean will be Scott Baine, a junior graphic design major from Tyronza, Ark. Baine worked on the 1992 yearbook staff and was a section editor on the 1993 yearbook. Baine was in Searcy throughout the summer working on the book's theme and cover design.

Duane Barron, a junior American studies major from Stuarts Draft, Va., has been named editor of the weekly Bison. Barron will have a staff of five editorial positions plus several students who work on the paper through a journalism practicum course.

Michael Bass, a junior biology major from Searcy, will serve as head photographer for the Petit Jean, and serving as business manager for the Bison is Jeff Goodson, a junior public relations major from Jackson, Tenn.

All four key positions have received significantly increased scholarships this school year.

TNT celebrates 60th anniversary

TNT, the second oldest men's social club at Harding, celebrated the 60th anniversary of its founding at the club's annual spring banquet, held in Little Rock at the close of the '93 spring semester.

TNT was organized in the fall of 1933, when Harding was still located in Morrilton, Ark. The four charter members were Walden Gardner, Gus Meuli, John Stewart and Carroll Trent. These founding members chose the initials TNT to stand for trustworthiness, noble ideas and tact. By the end of that initial year, there were 15 members. The club now maintains a yearly membership of almost 100 students.

Dr. R.R. Coons, former chairman of Harding's Physical Sciences Department, was the first sponsor of the club. He served in that position for four years until he left Harding to help start Pepperdine College.

At the April 3 spring banquet, the club had special guests from its early years. Among them were Trent, now editor of the Arkansas Christian Herald in Morrilton, and his brother Glen, who was one of the first members inducted. "It's rather unusual that two brothers who were members in 1933 could attend the annual club banquet almost 60 years later," said the elder Trent.

Carroll Trent went on to become club president its first year on the Searcy campus. Speaking at the banquet, he recounted some of the club's history, citing names of former members and telling anecdotes from the early years.

Others at the banquet included Dr. and Mrs. Mark White and Mr. and Mrs. Ken Stamatis. White, a 1983 TNT alumnus, and Stamatis, a 1980 club alumnus, are now sponsors for the club. Also present was Dr. William Hollaway, professor of music, who was a former club sponsor for 20 years.

Hollaway provided part of the banquet entertainment in the form of a comic opera titled "Oh, Pledge," which he wrote for the club in 1975. The opera was performed again this year for entertainment with 1977 TNT alumnus Doug Langston playing the part of the pledge. He also played the part in the original 1975 presentation.

AWH is offering for sale 3,000 personalized commemorative bricks, which will be installed in the plaza in front of the Jim Bill McInteer Bible and World Missions Center. Funds raised from the sale of the bricks will be used to provide scholarships for students.

Each brick will cost $100 and will have a maximum message area of two lines with 14 characters per line. Multi-brick orders will receive discounts.

AWH members will be contacting alumni, parents and friends of the University, asking them to buy a brick that will have a permanent place in Harding's history while helping provide scholarship assistance.

Those interested in participating in the project should contact AWH by writing Brick-by-Brick, Harding University, Box 2238, Searcy, AR 72149-0001.

The construction of the McInteer Center will cost $6 million. When completed, the 63,000-square-foot facility will be the largest classroom building on campus. The building will open for use in August 1994, and the plaza will be constructed at that time.

Diffine named Walton Fellow

Dr. Don Diffine (business) was named a Samuel Moore Walton Free Enterprise Fellow by the Wal-Mart Foundation at the International Exposition on Students in Free Enterprise in Kansas City, Mo., May 23-25. He was cited in part for his academic entrepreneurship through a series of annual monographs, which have been republished by numerous organizations around the country.

UPLIFT draws record attendance

UPLIFT '93, Harding's 10th annual week-long Bible camp for young people, drew a record capacity attendance this year, prompting an expansion of the program for 1994.

Dr. Allan Isom, professor of Bible and UPLIFT director, reported that 1,843 junior- and senior-high campers attended the event June 20-25, and more than 2,000 attended the nightly lectures and music presentations. Resulting from the week's activities were more than 50 baptisms and 250 prayer responses.

Because of this year's capacity crowd, the 1994 program will be expanded to two one-week sessions. Session 1 is June 18-23, and Session 2 is June 25-30.

"UPLIFT exists for the purpose of developing spirituality in young people," Isom said. "Focusing individually on those young people with a qualified staff and then developing a rich camaraderie in the camp are our two great goals. I believe the two smaller sessions will help us achieve these goals by serving our students in a more individual way."

UPLIFT '93 featured entertainment by hypnotist Gil Eagles, musical presentations by Acappella, and a series of encounter classes focusing on teamwork, biblical principles and morals. For more information about next year's UPLIFT program, contact Isom at Harding University, Box 2280, Searcy, AR 72149-0001; or call (501) 279-4289.

Olree chosen Administrator of the Year

Dr. Harry Olree, athletic director, was selected as NAIA District 17 Administrator of the Year in July. He has been a member of the faculty since 1957.

During his tenure, Olree has served on the district's executive committee and served two terms as committee chairman. He also has served on NAIA national committees and National Sports Medicine committees.

Three receive coaching honors

Three Harding coaches received NAIA District 17 and AIC Coach of the Year honors for their efforts during the 1992-93 school year.

David Elliott (men's and women's tennis), Bryan Phillips (men's track) and Ted Lloyd (women's cross country) were selected by their peers for the awards. Each of their teams won conference championships.

Woodson, Williams take AIC academic/athletic titles

Harding student athletes swept the top academic/athletic honors in the Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference for the 1992-93 school year.

Lori Woodson, a member of both the cross country and track teams, was named the Downing-Swift-Wallace scholar-athlete. The award is presented to the AIC's senior female athlete who has achieved the highest grade point average and who has earned at least two athletic letters.

An accounting major from Ardmore, Okla., Woodson graduated in May with a 4.0 grade point average. She was an All-AIC performer in track in 1991 and helped the Lady Bisons win conference championships in both track and cross country.

Woodson was named to the dean's list each semester, and was chosen to receive the Senior Accounting Award from the School of Business.

Morris Williams, a four-year letterman in basketball, was named the Cliff Shaw scholar-athlete with a 3.58 grade point average in pre-law. He also graduated in May and has been accepted at Vanderbilt University Law School.

He was a three-year starter for the Bisons and was an All-AIC and NAIA All-District 17 honorable mention selection his final two years.

Williams' other awards include GTE District VI Academic All-American in 1992 and 1993 and the NAIA All-American Scholar-Athlete Award in 1993. The North Little Rock, Ark., native also received the M.E. Berryhill Award as Harding's top senior male athlete.

Cross country teams seek conference wins

Harding's cross country teams are looking to November with two very specific goals. The Lady Bisons are seeking their eighth consecutive conference crown, while the men's team has set its sights on dethroning the Ouachita Baptist University Tigers.

The women's team returns intact from the 1992 season. Senior Shauna Queen is seeking her third consecutive individual championship, a feat that has not been accomplished in the 10-year history of women's competition in the Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference.

Joining Queen are All-AIC runners Ketty Jensen, Edna Duran, Keri Hutchison and Mandy Crider, plus a talented group of freshmen.

The men's team looks to rebound from a disappointing season in 1992. The team is led by seniors Damon Work (All-AIC) and Dave Hutson.

Also on the young squad are three sophomores and three freshmen. The conference championship races will be held Nov. 4 at Southern Arkansas University.

Veterans Bassham, Deuel and Johnson lead young Lady Bison volleyball team

A trio of veteran players are leading the Lady Bison volleyball team as it challenges for a conference championship in 1993.

Senior Kathleen Bassham, junior Amy Deuel and junior Angela Johnson are providing the leadership for the young squad. Deuel is a two-year starter and an all-conference and all-district performer. Bassham is a two-year starter, and Johnson started last year as the team's setter and play maker.

Four sophomores, Regina Huddleston, Marcy Winters, Tove Sporsheim and Casey Wolfe, returned from last year's squad hoping to nail down starting positions. Also vying for positions are seniors Robin King Heasley and Larrie Maples.

Both Heasley and Maples are returning to the team following knee surgery. Heasley played in 1992 as a starter, but Maples missed the entire season because of corrective surgery and rehabilitation.

Three talented newcomers add strength to the team. Wendy Rucker, a transfer from Three Rivers Community College; Sheila Burns, a 6-1 middle player from Arlington, Texas; and Shannon Massey, a 5-9 standout from Columbia Christian, add depth to the squad.

The Lady Bisons entered the season as one of the favorites to capture another AIC championship. The team is trying to take its fourth crown in five years.

Gridders lose, then win first game

The Harding Bisons opened the 1993 gridiron season with a loss and a win — all in the same game.

On August 25 the Bisons began their 10-game schedule by participating in the Arkansas Classic at Little Rock's War Memorial Stadium. The opponent was the University of Arkansas-Pine Bluff.

Harding jumped out to an early first quarter lead of 14-0 only to fall victim to the Golden Lions' punishing ground attack, losing 32-22.

Two days later UAPB forfeited the game because 10 Golden Lions players had been found to be ineligible for the contest. Ten other players had been held out of the game by UAPB because of questions about their eligibility.

The UAPB team was returning to the gridiron after a two-year absence for NAIA rules violations under a former head coach. The school had received the "death penalty," banning it from participation in football.

After a week off, the Bisons continued their schedule, which included games with five opponents ranked in the NAIA's top 15 nationally and two strong NCAA Division II teams. Scores from other games were unavailable when this publication went to press.

Opponents ranked in the NAIA were East Central Oklahoma (4th), University of Arkansas-Monticello (6th), Northeastern Oklahoma (7th), Southwestern Oklahoma (9th) and Arkansas Tech (14th). On the road the Bisons faced NCAA Division II foes Delta State and West Georgia College, both members of the Gulf South Conference.

The Bisons have 40 returning lettermen with 18 of the 22 starting positions filled by experienced players. The squad includes 12 seniors, 11 juniors, 21 sophomores and 27 red-shirt freshmen.

The defense is anchored by three NAIA All-Americans — defensive end Paul Simmons (6-2, 200), free safety Jon Newby (6-3, 197) and line-backer Eric Howell (5-10, 200).

Team captains are Newby, Howell, Kyle City and Eric Peters.

ARKnet Links Campus WORLDWIDE

BY SCOTT MORRIS • PHOTOGRAPHY BY JEFF MONTGOMERY

For the past year and a half, faculty members and students have been discovering the benefits of a new data communications network that provides instantaneous access to unlimited sources of information worldwide.

The system is called ARKnet, and it links 21 Arkansas educational institutions to international databases and supercomputers. It is one of only 10 statewide networks in the United States, and its use of advanced telecommunications technology from Southwestern Bell and powerful computing systems make it among the most sophisticated of its kind.

According to Dr. Steve Baber, professor of computer science, it has proven very popular among Harding students. "If I need to see a student for some reason, I've found that the quickest and most effective way of getting them to my office is not to use campus mail or the telephone, but to shut off their account to the ARKnet. They'll be in my office in no time!" Baber said.

Baber said that student requests for ARKnet accounts have increased dramatically as word spreads about the system's benefits. He said that it does not attract only computer or business-oriented majors, but that users represent a cross-section of all majors. "You could take almost any afternoon when school is in session and find more than 15 people of different majors using the computer lab," Baber said.

He said that students have established electronic friendships around the world. Electronic mail, referred to as "E-mail," has become a very popular service that many students are using. "We have an international student from Guatemala who regularly sends E-mail to her father back home," Baber said, "and it's free." E-mail is also used by Harding when communicating with its campus in Florence, Italy, or even in conversing with sister institutions.

Faculty members linked to ARKnet have found the system to be useful in research or in finding valuable information in their areas of expertise. "Even if faculty members aren't performing research, they can subscribe to electronic discussion groups on topics that affect their areas of work," said Baber.

ARKnet allows faculty members on-line connections between its computers and NASA computers at Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala. Physical Science faculty at Harding have joined with colleagues at the University of Arkansas at Little Rock and at Arkansas State University-Jonesboro to participate in NASA's Joint Venture (JOVE) program, and ARKnet expands their capabilities by allowing instant communications with other scientists and engineers.

ARKnet is still not a campus-wide network, which means that some faculty members cannot establish a direct link to the system from their offices. Those finding themselves in this situation must set up an account in the computer laboratory as students do.

Similarly, the entire staff is not linked either. "But the library staff and the Registrar's Office staff use it extensively," Baber said. Completing the network to make it directly available to all faculty and staff is part of Harding's new five-year plan.

Other uses of the ARKnet are unlimited. Users can access library card catalogs all over the world and receive data such as satellite photographs and updated weather radar, and supercomputers can be accessed through the National Center for Supercomputer Access. "There's probably over a thousand subject areas," Baber said. He said users can even receive White House legal briefings and can send E-mail to President Clinton or Vice President Gore, who both have accounts to receive such mail.

Electronic discussion groups are available on subjects ranging from addictions to yachting, and a news program is available for users to subscribe to any area of news that might interest them. It may be hard to believe, but there's even a news group for the latest Elvis sightings!

Baber related a personal experience to prove how beneficial the ARKnet system can be. He was recently asked to speak at a conference for college admissions and registrar staff members. "I knew nothing about their area and didn't know what I was going to speak about, so I just subscribed to an electronic group discussion and made a few notes of what I saw coming across the screen," he said.

At the conference Baber took the podium and started making comments, asking the audience questions about some of the things he had made in his notes, one of which was a new law that directly affected them. "They knew nothing of what I was talking about because they had not heard the news or the fact that the law had been implemented. The system taught me more than I needed to know in just the three days that I subscribed, and I was way ahead of these individuals," Baber said with a smile.

Baber has even made the ARKnet system available to Harding alumni. Thanks to his efforts, alumni who have access to electronic mail may now subscribe to a special mailing list created to facilitate communications between alumni and the University. It serves as a worldwide electronic discussion forum dedicated to Harding alumni.

Information can be obtained about upcoming Harding events, other alumni and their jobs and children, and about the University, faculty and administration. Information sent to the Harding mailing list address is sent worldwide to all others that also subscribe to the same service. Harding's electronic address is ALUMNI@ACS.HARDING.EDU.

As uses for the ARKnet at Harding continue to grow, Baber said the same situation is true on a national level. He said that the national network is growing at a rate of 15 percent compounded monthly. "That's like bacteria gone wild," he said.

The two main reasons for this growth include commercial entities like IBM and other companies who are using the national system and, second, the increased usage among the general public.

"There will continue to be more and more public usage as students with Harding accounts graduate and set up accounts elsewhere. They find they can't live without it and don't wish to cease communications with contacts they've established with their electronic discussion groups," Baber said.

Harding's cost to establish and maintain access for students who desire it is relatively inexpensive. There is no cost to any student for the access. "Actually, when you consider what you're doing and how far you can send something instantaneously, it's very cheap," said Baber.

So, whether a faculty member, staff member or a student needs the ARKnet for legitimate research and communications, or if they're just curious to know the latest Elvis sighting, the ARKnet system is the source for their answer in an instant. ■

Talented high school juniors experience Harding's first
HONORS SYMPOSIUM

Harding offered for the first time this past summer an opportunity for talented young people to experience the campus in a unique way. The new program is Harding's Honors Symposium, an experience designed to simulate an entire semester at Harding in just 18 days. Three hours of college credit are earned by program participants, all of whom are high school students who have completed their junior year.

Honors Symposium Director Dr. Jeff Hopper said this summer's pilot run was such a great success that the University's administration has already announced that the program will again be offered next July. This year's 42 students came from 24 states — as far away as New Jersey and Alaska — and experienced a variety of activities together.

During the session, students attended classes tailored for them and taught by Dr. Ray Muncy, Dr. Larry Long, Dr. Don England, Dr. Lambert Murray, Dr. Mike Plummer, Dr. David Tucker, Jan Fortner and Dr. Hopper. Outside the classroom the students painted the home of a single mother as a service project, enjoyed recreational fun including a float trip and lock-in, toured the historic Napoleon exhibit at Cook Convention Center in Memphis, visited a Russellville power plant, and studied the artistic qualities of a film.

Calculating Chemists. Brad Whorton and Mark Farrar put classroom knowledge to use while performing a lab experiment.

The Honors Symposium is open to outstanding high school juniors. For more information about the program and applying for participation, contact Dr. Jeff Hopper, Harding University, Box 838, Searcy, AR 72149-0001. ☒

ALUMNI PROFILE

JERRY FLOWERS '70

Music is his business

Jerry Flowers, a 1970 alumnus, continues to rise in the ranks of the country music industry in Nashville.

As executive director of Opryland Music Group (OMG), a division of Gaylord Entertainment Co., Flowers guides all aspects of the company's day-to-day music publishing operations, having direct responsibility for international publishing activities and domestic and international business affairs. At OMG's foundation is Acuff-Rose Music, Nashville's first music publishing company.

In August Flowers was named chairman of Gaylord Entertainment's "One Company" group, a strategic planning process for the entire company. He coordinates the work of eight study teams that deal with a variety of inter-company topics, including marketing, management development and quality, country music franchise, and others.

"This truly is an exciting time for our company," said E.W. Wendell, president and CEO of Gaylord Entertainment Co. "The One Company project will chart a clear path forward, and I am pleased that Jerry Flowers is at the helm."

Flowers also was elected in August to the board of directors of the National Music Publishers' Association (NMPA). The association, founded in 1917, works to protect and advance the interest of the music publishing industry. It represents the most important and influential music publishing firms throughout the United States.

Since graduating in 1970 from Harding with a major in journalism, Flowers has been part of Nashville's artist management, music, recording and publishing scene. Before joining OMG in 1987, he worked for the Jim Halsey Co., RCA Records and ABC Records. He is an American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers songwriter and a past member of the boards of directors of the Country Music Association and the Nashville Entertainment Association.

Jerry Flowers

Flowers is regularly called upon by colleges and universities to lecture on music publishing. He was 1991-92 program chairman for the year-long Leadership Music series of professional seminars, and he is a frequent participant in such industry gatherings as the NMPA Forum series and the Nashville Songwriters' Association professional seminars.

He coaches Nashville-area youth sports and is a deacon and song leader at Hillsboro Church of Christ. Flowers and his wife, Sharon, have two children, Megan and Tyler. They live at 9235 Queensboro Court, Brentwood, TN 37027-7469. ☐

FOCUS ON THE FUTURE

Does your will work?

BY DONALD KEE

Some wills won't work. For example, if your state requires the signatures of two disinterested witnesses, and a beneficiary of your will signs as a witness, your will may not work.

Also, a will that's out of step with your other estate transfer documents may not work either. If your will dictates that your entire estate is to pass to your spouse, and yet your life insurance policy indicates a different beneficiary, will your will supersede your policy and redirect the proceeds to your spouse? Probably not.

An out-of-date will that fails to take full advantage of current estate tax law may not work well either. Nor can you feel confident in a will that has not been updated to reflect major changes in your family life or financial affairs.

Does your will do everything you want? Is it up-to-date? Is it valid? Do you even have a will?

We at Harding University want you to have the peace of mind that comes from knowing that you have a valid estate plan. We want you to have a will that works well for you and, frankly, one that works for us — one that includes a bequest to Harding University.

It's amazing how often people say, "I never thought about making a charitable gift through my will. It just never occurred to me."

When you name Harding in your will (or living trust) to receive a specific amount or a percentage of your estate, you make one final gift — your crowning gift — to an organization you have supported during your life. You declare in your Last Will and Testament that you believe in the mission of Harding and that you want a portion of your accumulated assets to be invested in furthering the good work of Harding.

If you have arranged for an estate gift through a will or other transfer document, we would like to know so we can thank you now. We want to express appreciation for your confidence in our future, and we want to honor you, discreetly, for your prudent planning.

The coupon inside this magazine is one way you can let us know of your gifting plans. You can also use this form to request free literature about making a will that works. If you want to talk with a representative of Harding about your gift and estate plans, you can indicate that as well.

As always, we urge you to consult with an estate planning attorney or other qualified advisor regarding a will, a living trust or whatever else may best suit your needs. Sound professional help will contribute to your — and your family's — peace of mind.

Please take a moment to fill out and return the coupon. We look forward to hearing from you soon. ☐
