The first white man to touch Arkansas soil was De Soto, a Spaniard. As a young man he had gained some fame and fortune exploring Central America. Lured by the stories of gold and the fountain of youth, he came to Florida and spent two years wandering over what is now Florida, Georgia, Mississippi and Alabama. In May, 1541, he came to a river so broad he called it "Rio Grande," the Spanish for great river. The natives called it "Meschacebe," or father of waters, which we call Mississippi. The next year the great captain spent traveling through what is now Arkansas, but what was then a vast wilderness full of wild animals and savages. At his death, De Soto's followers buried him in the river he had discovered.

The Father of Arkansas, Henri de Tonti, was an Italian by birth and a Frenchman by adoption. He was a member of the expedition under La Salle, whose plan it was to build a chain of forts from the Great Lakes, down the Mississippi and along the Gulf of Mexico. He built Ft. St. Louis while La Salle returned to France for supplies and settlers. Then he went down the river to meet La Salle, but did not find him. In 1686 he built a log cabin on the Arkansas River a few miles from its mouth. The fort established here was called Arkansas Post, and was not only the first white settlement in the present boundary of Arkansas, but also the first in the great Louisiana Territory.

Foreword

As a symbol of the spirit of Harding, as a record of lasting friendships, and hours of joy and toil; and as a service to our Alma Mater, whose future shall uphold the traditions of its past: if these things are embodied in the pages of this book, then our purpose has been accomplished.

Arkansas became a part of the United States in 1803. Before that time Louisiana Territory was a ball tossed to and fro between Spain and France, and consequently no permanent settlements were made except around military posts. Arkansas was a parish in the territory, its name being that of a tribe of Indians and spelled after the manner of the French explorers. At the threatened outbreak of war with England, Napoleon sold the whole territory to the United States. Monroe and Livingston signed the purchase treaty at fifteen million dollars—less than three cents an acre. December 20, 1803, the United States took possession of Louisiana. From 1804 to 1812 Arkansas was part of Louisiana Territory; from 1812 to 1819 it formed part of the territory of Missouri.

In 1819, by an act of Congress, Arkansas was made a territory. President Monroe appointed Robert Crittenden secretary of the new territory. He rendered Arkansas a great service in appointing county officers, organizing local and central government and setting things in motion before the new governor, Colonel James Miller, arrived. The first legislature provided Arkansas with a full set of laws by adopting those in use in Missouri. The same year William E. Woodruff issued the first number of the "Arkansas Gazette," the oldest living paper west of the Mississippi. The second legislature convened in 1820 at Arkansas Post and moved the capital to Little Rock. The "Baptist Meeting House" in Little Rock was the scene of many meetings of the territorial legislature.

Arkansas Territory became a state in 1836. It was one of the seceding states during the Civil War, was under military control in 1869, and adopted its present Constitution in 1874. On account of the natural resources and the recent progress, Arkansas is now known as the "Wonder State." It has the greatest variety of surface and the most attractive scenery of any of the states bordering the Mississippi. No sections are subject to drouth or extremes of temperature. The state of Arkansas excels all others in natural resources, its store of mineral wealth being practically inexhaustible, its vast forests supplying pine and hardwood in quantities sufficient to place the state in the forefront, and its agricultural and horticultural prowess are recognized not only in the United States but in foreign countries as well.

Alma Mater

In the foothills of the Ozarks, near to Petit Jean;
Stands our glorious Alma Mater; Harding is her name.
Christian standard is her motto; Christian life is stressed;
And in every branch of learning, each one does his best.
Harding opens wide her portals, thus inviting all
Who would tread the path to knowledge; heed then to her call,

REFRAIN:

Sing the chorus! Shout it loudly! Echoing through the vale.
Hail to thee, beloved Harding! Alma Mater, Hail!

Dedication

To Mrs. J. O. Garrett, instructor in Harding College, the Petit Jean of Nineteen Hundred and Twenty-nine is affectionately dedicated. By her possession of those qualities which are the measure of high ideals and fine influence among the students, by her untiring efforts and unselfish devotion to Harding College, by her sound policies and constant example, she has set for us a standard, a goal to which all who aim may work on, secure in the belief that by their efforts they will be made better.

To the Students of Harding College

Once again we come to you in this, our annual message, to lay upon your hearts one of the greatest needs of the college that is so dear to us all. Though like every other private institution of learning, Harding College has many needs, there is one need that stands out preeminently at this time.

The greatest asset any institution of learning can have is its student body representing nineteen different states; a student body that is unexcelled in conduct and in loyalty to the college and its ideals. One of its greatest needs at this time is more students.

If the college enrollment can have an increase in 1929-30 of one hundred students and the academy an increase of fifty students, many of Harding's most urgent needs will be automatically supplied. With the present faculty, the institution will become self-supporting insofar as current expenses are concerned. This will be a marvelous thing for a standard senior college in the sixth year of its life and will flood with new zeal and enthusiasm an entire institution.

And how easily it can be done! If each of you to whom this message comes will resolve to secure during the summer one new student for the fall enrollment, Harding will have to build "shacks" in order to house the students. What an inspiration to your faculty, to your fellow students, and to the board of regents and the loyal friends of your school!

Everything Harding may undertake will succeed or fail according to your attitude toward it. At least, any undertaking that you solidly support cannot fail.

As in the past, we have turned to you for help. In this, our annual message, we want to lay on your hearts this prime need of Harding College. We most earnestly appeal to you to make it your chief objective during the approaching summer. Surely in your town or county you can find one young man or woman for Harding. If you cannot return yourself, redouble your efforts that your place may be filled in your absence.

As we conclude, we want to say once more that we believe in you. We believe you will do whatever is necessary to keep Harding College the standard institution that it is. We are counting on you to watch its progress, to know from year to year its needs, and to stand solidly behind every campaign launched to supply these needs.

Finally, we love you, we are for you, for Harding College.

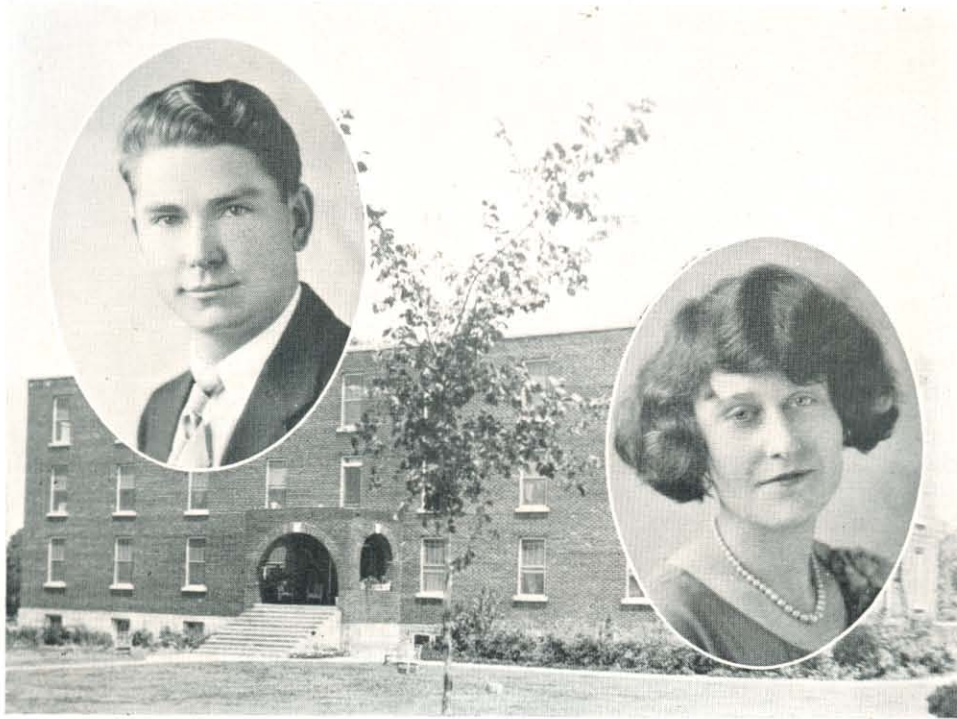

BROTHER AND SISTER ARMSTRONG.

THE WAY TO EAT

Academy

Education within a Christian environment, and under Christian teachers, is just as valuable for the high school student, as for those of college rank. If there is any difference, the greater development may be made with the younger student. For this purpose, Harding Academy is maintained. It is fully accredited by the State Board of Education as a class "A" high school. This indicates the quality of work done, and the standard maintained by the school.

The correlation of business courses with the high school gives the student an opportunity to finish high school at the same time he receives his business training. Many of the college students also take advantage of courses offered in the Commercial Department.

Training School

The Teachers' Training School serves a two-fold purpose: it is a laboratory for the Department of Education in the training of efficient teachers, and it gives a limited number of children the finest training it is possible to give them in a model elementary school. The training school includes the entire eight grades below the academy. It is under the general direction of the Department of Education, but each grade is also under an experienced and capable teacher, who conducts all the work and supervises the practice teaching.

Commercial Honor Students

The Commercial Department is by no means least in importance among the numerous special interests at Harding College. In location and in nature of work it is quiet and un-obtrusive (except for the staccato clatter of typewriters). Yet the teachers and students work together persistently and effectively in obtaining mastery of keyboards, ledgers, and strange hieroglyphic characters which are intelligible only to the initiated.

A number of special honors came to the Commercial Department during the year. Beulah Harwood and Ray Black won places as honor students in the annual competition. Geraldine Brown was awarded a medal by the Underwood Typewriter Company for making a high rate of speed without errors.

J. D. Fenn likewise received a medal from the same company for efficiency as a teacher of typewriting. He and Ray Stapleton, by their untiring efforts, have raised the Commercial Work to a maximum prestige.

The Campus Players was organized in the fall of 1927, with thirty-six charter members, others being added during the year. Then in 1928, the membership was limited to fifty, and the members segregated into three groups—probationers, apprentices, and Campus Players.

One would go far indeed to find more zealous workers than the members of the Dramatic Club, the laws of which make it most unprofitable, and almost impossible for a non-worker to remain a member. Their high ideals have brought to the school many high class entertainments, and their untiring efforts have given to the town of Morrilton two local lyceum courses that compare favorably with those brought by professional players. The proceeds of these courses have put a substantial roof on the auditorium, besides some permanent repair work on the girls' building, and some much needed improvement on the campus.

The purpose of the Campus Players is to develop the talent of its members, to hold up the standards of the school and town by providing wholesome entertainment of a high order, and to put into the school each year some permanent equipment.

The College Male Quartet, organized during 1927-'28, under the direction of Mr. L. O. Sanderson has, as usual, been a real asset to our school, both in local entertainment and especially in doing some very effective advertising for the college.

They started traveling last June and continued until the first of this year, 1929. During this time they traveled extensively in Arkansas, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Oklahoma, and Louisiana, giving their high class entertainment. The climax of their year's work was the program broadcasted from Shreveport, Louisiana.

Bison Squad

Hailed as the surprise team of Arkansas by all the state's sports writers, the 1928 Bisons of Harding College rose from the position of one of the weak teams of the state to a real championship contender in 1928. The Bisons, who had been scheduled as a "set up" in 1927, turned out to be the "dark horse" of the 1928 campaign, and before the middle of October they were recognized throughout the state as the "Thundering Herd" that was trampling the championship hopes of many of the state's best teams under foot.

The Bisons began to attract early attention when it was learned in September that Frank Turbeville, former star on Morley Jennings' championship Ouachita teams and a permanent fixture on the all-state elevens for three years, was to be head coach at Harding during the 1928 season. Harding, who has always had good material and inferior coaching, found in "Turbie" the man desired and under his competent guidance the Bisons quickly found their stride and set a pace with which only the best of the state's teams were able to cope.

The one dark spot in the brilliant 1928 season was the abbreviated schedule. Unfortunately, Harding did not become a member of the Association until near the close of the football campaign and because the Bisons were a non-conference eleven, the Harding mentor had a tough job in securing games for his team. Many of the teams that had been scheduled, because their contracts were not governed by any conference ruling, canceled their games. The non-conference loophole offered a chance of escape to those surprised coaches who had scheduled Harding as a "soft" spot before a regular Association tilt, and then had seen their "easy meat" defeat Ozarks and tie the Teachers and Ouachita.

Coach Turbeville arrived late in September to begin work, and after less than two weeks of practice the Bisons met the powerful Tech team at Russellville. Hot weather and lack of a long conditioning season were factors against the Bisons, and it was at the hands of Tech that they met their sole reverse of the season. A powerful reserve strength and a long pre-season training helped much in Tech's 19-0 victory. Tech, incidentally went through the regular schedule without a defeat in the state, and was the conference champion.

The State Teachers College, touted in the September sports reviews as a team of veterans and a likely state champion, was the Herd's next opponents. For three quarters Lady Luck frowned and the breaks of the game saved the pedagogues from being put out of the championship race early in the season. The game ended a scoreless draw.

It seems that many teams in the state had hopes for a championship, for the Mountaineers of the College of the Ozarks were so confident of the superior caliber of their aggregation that they sent an opening line-up consisting of five letter men and six freshmen against the Bisons in the game at Clarksville. One quarter was sufficient to convince the Ozarks coach that the Bisons were a bit too rough for freshmen, and he replaced his rookies with veterans. With this strengthened line-up on the field the game was a seesaw affair until the final minute of play when "Buck" Arnold, Bison back, intercepted an Ozark pass and raced sixty yards for a touchdown. This exciting Frank Merriwell finish gave Harding the game, 7-0.

The Jonesboro College Parsons furnished opposition for the homecoming affair at Morrilton. The Parsons were a light team whose attack was built on passing and skirting the ends. Heavy line-smashing by Arnold, Fiddes, Fuqua, and Ames accounted for 27 points in the first half, and a counter passing attack ran the score up to 64-0 in the final period.

In a downpour of rain and on a field impossible for football the Herd next met Coach Turbeville's Alma Mater, Ouachita. On the wet field anything but straight football was useless and the game was a defense battle throughout. Bisons and Tigers floundered about in the mud for sixty minutes without either team being able to score.

The season closed with a 13-7 victory over Henderson-Brown. Henderson, with eyes on the championship, played the game with only a part of her regular team. The Bisons were anxious to play and consented to an agreement that the Reddies could play whom they pleased and that the outcome of the affair would not be considered in the standing for the championship. Two sixty-yard passes by Fuqua, to Crain and McLain, in the third quarter accounted for Harding's scoring and victory.

Basketball

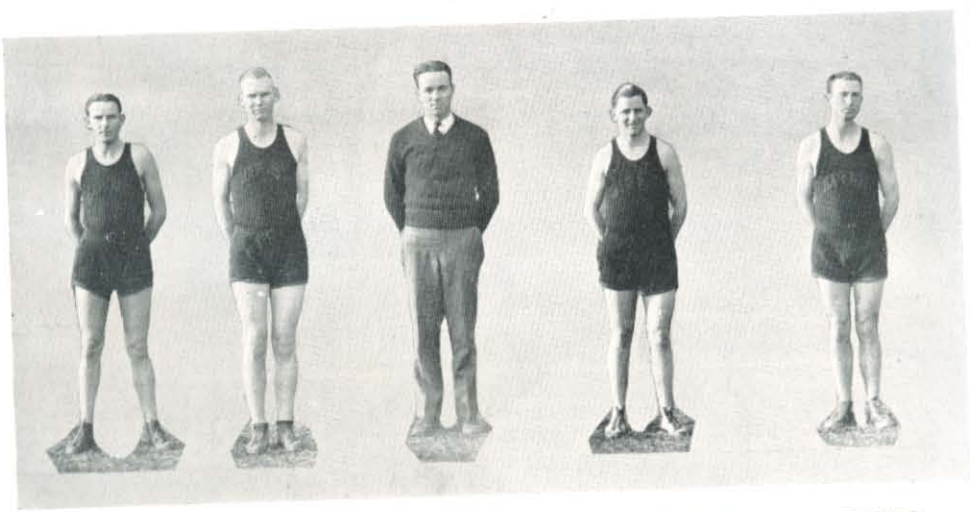

Shortly after the close of football season the coaches of Arkansas met in Little Rock to arrange schedules for the winter basketball season and the 1929 football campaign. At a special session of the Arkansas Athletic Association during the regular meeting of all the state coaches, Harding was voted in as a member of the Association.

The news that the Bisons were to enter the season of cage play as Association members served to stimulate an added interest to the already popular winter sport.

Of the large squad that reported to Coach Brown only two letter men were available for the season's play. Realizing that his team must be built from the promising freshman material the coach arranged a holiday tour for the team. Games with college fives and fast independent organizations were secured in order that the freshmen would have considerable experience in fast company before the opening of the Association schedule. With the closing of school for the holidays the Bisons were off on a long jaunt through Oklahoma and Texas. In a schedule of eight games, all with fast teams, the Bisons won four and lost the four others by narrow margins. The Bisons attracted considerable attention in all these games.

After the holiday trip work was begun in earnest for the Association schedule. With a team composed almost entirely of freshmen the Bisons' first year as a conference member was a successful one. Finishing in a tie for third place in the Association race, and well up in the standing for the state title, the Bison Cagers, like the football team, were constantly drawing favorable comment from the sport writers.

The late days of February, which usually means early baseball days in the south, were days of snow and rain this year; and when Jupiter Pluvius continued to send his worst weather southward through February and March, baseball was obliged to sit back and wait for the sunshine.

In spite of these bad weather conditions the Bisons began their baseball practice on schedule southern time, and during the dreary days of the prolonged March winter, practice sessions were held indoors in the gym. Prospective pitchers and catchers were down there early tossing the ball around, and after a week or two of "limbering" process, the pitchers were able to "bear down" a little and the remainder of the indoor period was spent learning the rudiments of "standing in there" and in practicing control.

While the pitchers and catchers were busy with this, candidates for the infield position were employing daily "pepper" sessions as a means of getting into condition.

When, in late March, weather conditions were warm enough for outdoor practice the Bisons took to the field in good condition for the coming campaign. The long conditioning season had eliminated the danger of sore arms and the pitchers were ready to "cut a loose" from the start.

For two weeks following the first outdoor session most of the time was spent in long batting practices. With his pitchers in good condition, Coach Brown gave his men plenty of time to get their eyes on the ball and the pitchers gave plenty to "look at."

A bad condition of the playing field held up infield workouts for weeks, and not until April was the infield in shape for real work. This lack of infield workouts was a big handicap to the team and poor fielding and throwing accounted for an 8-6 reverse at the hands of Tech in the season's opener.

The infield has been put into fair condition and by the time of the opening of the association schedule the Bisons should be in the best of condition.

Four veterans from the nucleus around which Coach Brown hopes to build an Association championship team.

John Bannister, who did most of the receiving last spring, is back in harness for the year's campaign. Eubanks is also a catcher, but because of his excellent speed, he will probably play in the outfield. "Tate" Mills, veteran, of four years, is the squad's leading hurler and is likely to draw the first assignment in all the big games. At first base, Patton, a veteran, will perform when Mills is on the mound. Patton also plays outfield and is the general utility man of the squad.

Hopkins, a tall Texas freshman, has shown plenty of speed, and will help Mills carry the pitching burden.

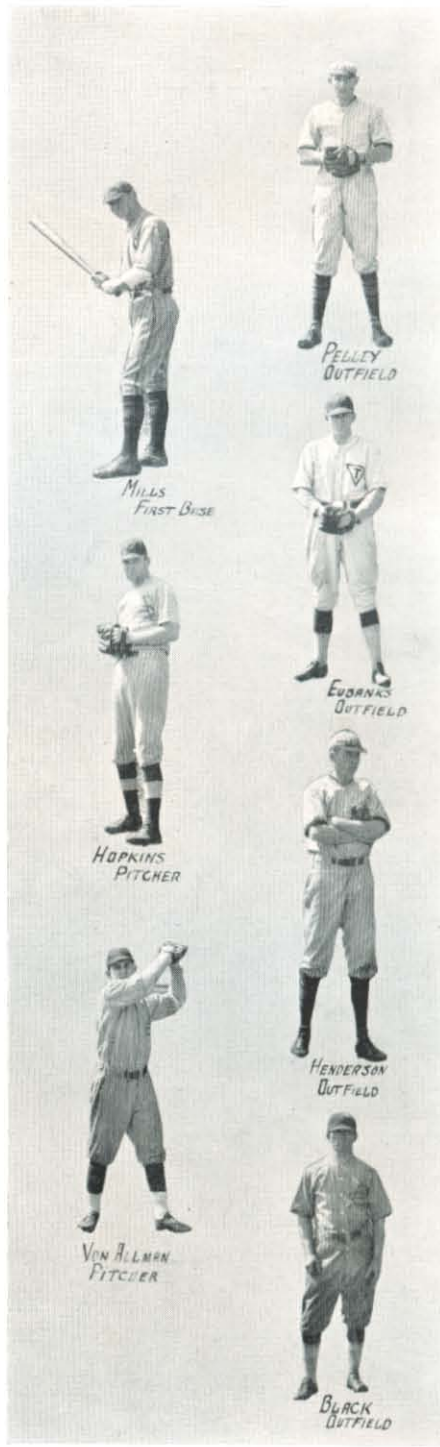

Von Allman, a southpaw from Kentucky, is being used as a relief hurler.

"Buck" Arnold, captain of the team, will be out there in the short field. "Buck" is the leading hitter of the club and a brilliant fielder.

At second base, Cloud, a freshman, has won the position by clever, fast, fielding; while Bill Banister draws the "hot corner" job. Bannister fields well and is one of the heavy hitters of the club.

The outfield is well fortified with good outfielders. Jones, Eubanks, Hopkins, Black, and Von Allman are all nice defensive outfielders, and Jones and Eubanks are consistent hitters, while Hopkins is likely to "park one" any time.

In spite of a defeat in the opening game, Coach Brown feels sure that the Bisons will finish well up in the Association standing.

Tennis

The sport of sports at Harding is tennis. Winter or summer, rain or shine, the two excellent outside courts, or the gymnasium, which can be used in any weather, are in use a good part of the time by wielders of the racket.

Tennis is no respecter of persons and is played for recreation by a large group, varying from the most dignified of the faculty to the most timid inhabitant of Jennye Hill Hall. However, there is also inter-class and inter-collegiate competition in this sport. Every spring, matches are played with other colleges, and representatives are sent to the annual inter-collegiate meet at Little Rock.

The tennis team which attended the state meet last year won third place in singles and tied for third place in doubles.

Golf

Golf is rapidly coming to the front as an intra-sport at Harding. In the fall of '27 an organization was completed through which members may check out clubs as they would books from the library. More work on the greens is to be done with fees collected from new members this year.

Track

Not only does Harding have its football, basketball, baseball, tennis and golf it also has its track team. This is the first year that Harding has sponsored and supported a track team, but we hope this feature of athletics will be developed until it will be one of the leading activities of the school.

The work of no other department can be of more practical value than the training received in these classes. It makes little difference what other profession a young lady chooses, she will find a thorough knowledge of the arts and sciences taught in this course to be her greatest asset.

While the Home Economics students are learning that they must do some real reflective thinking and spend hours in practice before they can do the thing that seemed simple when they watched mother or some other experienced housewife, they are also enjoying working with their classmates. They learn not only the scientific theories but are taught to put them in practice.

This is one of the most practical and a favorite department among the girls. They can not forget the old adage: "The way to a man's heart is through his stomach."

Local Students

A great many local boys and girls take advantage of the college at their doors, and enjoy participating in the various activities with boys and girls from many distant places. Close friendships are formed in the months of association in the classroom, on picnics, and class outings, in study, and social clubs, in fact everywhere that young people work and play in true comradeship.

Boarding Girls

Those who leave home to come to school, find a home influence in Jennye Hill Hall. Each girl in the dormitory can carry her problems to the sponsor for that one of the four divisions of the dormitory in which her room is located. Each boarding girl, whether in the dormitory, or in a private home, is an object of concern to President and Mrs. Armstrong, whose aim it is to compensate for the loss of the student in leaving her own home by surrounding her with the care and protection that should be in every Christian home.

Boarding Boys

Not only among the girls is the home influence of dormitory life felt, but also among the young men. How many times is the thought expressed: "I like Harding, because the students are so friendly. Why, we seem just like a big family. Even the teachers work with us, and for us."

Just as the girls have their social clubs and organizations, so do the inhabitants of Scroggin Hall have the "Straight 8," and other bands of seekers for development along social and other lines.

College Club

- MRS. J. N. ARMSTRONG Adviser
MRS. A. W. HASTINGS Manager
MRS. H. P. LASHLEE Assistant

One of the items of expense to the student is that of board. In order to accomplish the greatest amount of work, it is necessary that we have wholesome food, and this means that we must have money. The College Club was created primarily for the purpose of helping the student solve this problem. Nobody makes any profit. The students pay for the food, and the work of preparing it. Besides furnishing board at the minimum price, the Club furnishes employment every year to a number of students who could not otherwise attend school. By doing this, it renders valuable service in two ways.

During the greater part of the time since the Club was organized, it has been under the supervision of Mrs. Armstrong to whom much credit is due for its success. The work this year has been under the direction of Mrs. Hastings, assisted by Mrs. Lashlee. They have been untiring in their work, and have rendered valuable service to the student body.

SECRETARY

REPETITION

"What a peach of a wedding suit that is," said Mildred to Billy, indicating a display in a department store window.
"Why that isn't a wedding suit," corrected Bill. "That's a business suit."
"Well, I mean business," said Mildred.

"We went to Niagara Falls on our honeymoon," Mr. Brown remarked when the matter of popular tours was up.
"Were you embarrassed?" someone asked.
"Over $1,000" replied Mr. Brown, "and that isn't all. Most of it is still hanging over me."

Smith asked Osler what his father did.
"He cleans out the bank," replied Osler.
"Janitor or president?" asked Smith.

"Wilt thou be true to me, Hazel dear, while I'm gone?" asked Dallas.
"Sure darling", said Hazel, "Don't be long."

Miss Gardner in cafe at Little Rock, "Look here, yesterday I ordered this same thing, and they served me twice as much as this measley quantity."
Waiter: "Where were you sitting, Miss?"
Miss Gardner: "Right over there by the window."
Waiter: "Oh, that was for advertising, Miss."

"What are ancestors, Pa?" asked Frank Rhodes.
"Why, I'm an ancestor, your uncle is an ancestor, your grandfather is an ancestor," said Brother Rhodes.
"What is there about an ancestor to be proud of, Pa?" asked Frank.

Gene H.: "What shall we get Robert for Christmas?"
Homer H.: "Oh, I suggest that we pick out eleven new records for his victrola. Then he will have an even dozen."

"Why did you leave your last job?" they asked Gary McKee.
"I didn't like the way they used me."
"In what respect?" they asked.
"Well, for one thing," said Gary, "they took my name off the payroll."

Mrs. Armstrong: "Wake up! There are burglars in the house!"
Bro. Armstrong: "Well, what of it? Let them find out their mistake themselves."

Bro. Brown (at track practice): "Raise the right leg and hold it at right angles to the body."
J. T. Lewis by mistake raised the left leg close to the one on his left.
"Who is that lifting both legs at once?" shouted Brown.

"After tonight I am going to have you killed in Act I instead of Act II," said Mrs. Armstrong to Everette Evans.
"Wherefore the change?" asked Everette.
"I don't want to take the chance of having the audience do it," she replied.

"Gee, Neva, you forgot to put on your lipstick. Don't you feel positively undressed?"

Lindsey asked his science class what he should talk about, and got an immediate answer: "Talk about three mice."

When Elsie Mills asked Professor De Chaudron why he never married, he said that he forgot to.

Taken to task for extending his sermon beyond the noon hour, Mr. Fenn observed, "You know, brother, we are admonished to declare the milk of the word."
"Well, make it condensed milk, then, Brother," said the parishioner.

At the Sunday dinner table, Bro. Bell's son, Sam, said to him, "Dandy sermon this morning, pop! But you missed three good chances to quit."

There was a fellow who never could understand where so many Smiths' and Jones' came from. He chanced to take a trip to Chicago one day, and the first thing he saw as he alighted from the cars was an immense building, and on its side in great white letters were the words, "Smith Manufacturing Company." That explained it.

THE PETIT JOURNAL

Mrs. Garrett: "What is the plural of mouse?"
Lois Watson: "Mice."
Mrs. Garrett: "What is the plural of spouse?"
Lois Watson: "Spice."

HINT

They were lingering at the door of the reception room long after the bell had rung. Finally, his hand still toying with the door-knob, Lindsey murmured, "There was something I was going to say to you."

"Was it good-night?" asked Ruby.

"That's it," said he, taking the hint and his departure.

They were watching the pagentry of the heavens.

"Do you know," said the lovelorn Everette, after a long interval of meditation, "if I had money I'd travel and travel."

"Here's fifty cents and I'll go up to my room and get you some more," said Margaret.

"How did you come to fail in your examination?" asked Bro. Kieffer of John B.

"I thought I crammed you thoroughly."

"Well, you see," replied John, "the trouble was that you crammed me so tight that I couldn't get it out."

This advertisement was found in the Lost and Found column of the college paper on Saturday preceding the exams.

"If the person who picked up a 'pony' at the college book store will return the same to Box A before Monday, reward will be paid and all questions will be answered." Leonard Kirk.

"Papa", said Von "Al" before he entered school last fall, "what do they mean by college-bred? Is it different from any other kind of bread?"

"My son," said the father, "it is a four-year loaf."

Teacher: "What have you done to save our timber?"

Hud (speaking from the rear): "I shot a woodpecker once."

Carrie Olson had returned from a trip abroad. She claimed to be a lover of art. "I'll tell you how strong I am for art," she declared. "I don't believe I've missed an artery in any city our party visited."

"Can you use my last poem?" pleaded Bro. Rodman.

"Yes, if you'll agree that it is, we will," said the publisher.

Fiddes: "Mrs. Hastings, this coffee is not settled."

Mrs. Hastings: "It come as much to it as your last months' board bill."

Butcher: "You want some brains, Madam?"

Mrs. Waldrum: "Yes, please, my husband hasn't had any for a long time."

Hazel Conn did not come out very well in her first lesson in Home Economics. She ran to the 'phone and called up the teacher. "Miss McClure," she sobbed, "I can't understand it. The receipt says clearly to boil for two minutes on a brisk fire, stirring constantly. Then beat it for ten minutes. And when I came back it was burned to a crisp."

Margaret: "How did you know I was going to wear my hair curled this evening?"

Everett: "I saw it in the papers."

It's always leap year for the pedestrian.

Ed Beasley: "A sensible man doubts everything, only a fool is certain of what he says."

Bee Loftis: "Are you sure of that?"

Ed Beasley: "Positive!"

Evelyn: "He's so romantic. Whenever he speaks to me he starts 'Fair lady'."

Bill: "That's just force of habit. He used to be a conductor."

Harlan: "Now do you know what I hit you for?"

Ralph: "Gee, don't you know, either?"

CAPTAIN JUAN

Ethel: "Sister, let me introduce my friend, Mr. Spiegeleisen."
Pearl: "I'm sorry; didn't quite catch the name."
Ethel: "Mr. Sipegeleisen."
Pearl: "What was it again, please?"
Ethel: "Mr. Sipegeleisen."
Pearl: "I'm afraid I shall have to give it up—it sounds to me like Spiegeleisen."

Ruby: "Were you fired with enthusiasm when you tackled your first job?"
Lindsey: "Was I? I never saw a man so glad to get rid of me in my life."

Swede: "Didn't Mr. Edison make the first talking machine?"
Brother Kieffer: "No, God made the first one, but Edison made the first one that could be shut off."

Inez: "Why don't you go to work if you are hungry?"
Odus Kennedy: "I tried that once, and it only made me hungrier."

Ruth Ann: "Where are you going with that lantern?"
Johnson: "Oh, I just found it. Some careless gink left it beside a hole in the road."

Ora: "What makes so many Scotchmen humorous?"
Willomay: "You see it's a gift."

Billy: "I want a present for a young lady."
Salesman: "Sister or fiancee?"
Billy: "Well, er—she hasn't said which she would be yet."

Emily: "Why do you do so much darning?"
Marie: "Runs in the family."

Carrie: "Let's have some ginger ale."
Adrian: "Pale?"
Carrie: "Oh, no, just a glass will do."

Swede: "He's in a bad state. Shall I call a doctor?"
Bro. Rhodes (absentmindedly): "No a statesman."

Frank: "How are you coming with your reducing?"
Mrs. Hastings: "I guess I must be one of those poor losers."

Outsider: "I see your school now boasts of an orchestra."
Insider: "No, we don't boast of it."

Evelyn Ray: "I wish every year had 365 days of rest."
Inez: "Are you mad? Then we should have to work a day every fourth year."

Mrs. Garrett: "This theme written on a Ford is exactly like the one Bailey wrote."
Eubanks: "Yes'm, it was the same Ford."

Rodman: "Fools ask questions that wise men can't answer."
Bright: "Yeah, thass why so many fail your quizzes."

Ed Beasley (substituting for Beeson): "Bill, do you understand that?"
Bill (bored): "Yeah."
Ed: "Well, I guess everyone does."

Evelyn Mills has taken a great interest in Greek mythology—especially Homer.
Ed. N. This is no joke.

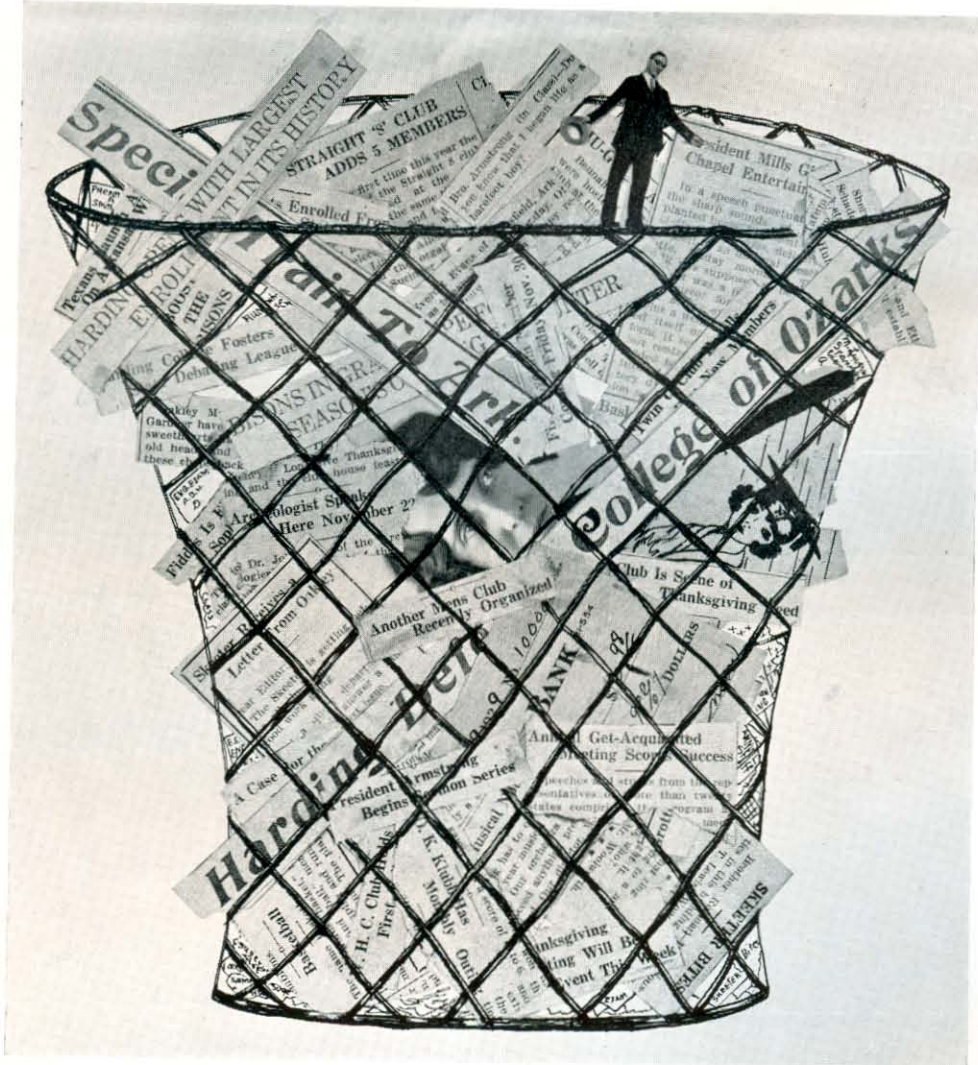

I'd surely like to smack the clown,
Who insists on shouting, "I Faw Down."

Editors note—Now folks, if you can't laugh at the jokes of the age, laugh at the age of the jokes.

REPETITION

1. Von Allman, who hails from Kentucky
That surely is one guy that's plucky.
He took the pinkeye,
In the land without sky.
And brought it to us—how unlucky.
2. There is a young laddie, La Nier,
In the barn he is all you can hear.
He sings foolish songs
Most all the day long.
It's mostly, "I love you, my dear."
3. There's Marvin who carries in wood.
He would be a shiek if he could.
Wears Harold Lloyd glasses
And pleases the lassies,
But his curls are what show him up good.
4. There is a young laddie named Buck,
With Thalia he had not much luck;
For she went away
And left him to stay,
In Harding and much a lame duck.
5. There is a young laddie named Blake;
Who thinks he is sitting quite jake.
A rare tennis shark
But his doggies both bark
If he meets with a hoe or a rake.
6. Now here's a young lad we call
Foster.
He sang to a girl and lost her;
Then Lou Ellen he met,
And he's loved her—you bet
Since the very first day he accost her.
7. A springtly young laddie is George,
His mind is as deep as the gorge.
He's mild and he's meek;
Makes "A" plus in Greek.
This blushing freshman named
George.
8. Next door is the mule barn quartette;
They're not quite as bad as they get.
They have a short bass
Who screws up his face,
And fishes for deep ones, you bet.
9. There is a young laddie named Pete,
Who never had too much to eat.
His legs are all length;
They haven't much strength,
And his head simply isn't complete.
10. There was a director named Kirk,
Who did all his work with a jerk.
There came a surprise,
To our watching eyes,
And that's how he made us all work.

COLLEGE CLUB

2½ TONS of Year Books for Arkansas Schools

—Two and one-half tons of moving, lasting remembrances and remarkable achievement forever recorded on the printed pages of Arkansas College and High School annuals, now on the presses of the Russellville Printing Company.

—The orders for these books were placed by practical young economists, who realize that Arkansas institutions are on a par with foreign competitors, and who, by their faith and far-sightedness have benefited their publications and added materially to the State's growth in the Graphic Arts.

—Surely here is an example of young men and women possessing the faith their fathers are seeking.
