HARDING UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

Passing it on

By DAVID B. BURKS, president

$91,025 seems like a sizable contribution to give to Harding. As you look on that figure, you may be impressed by the amount but think, "I could never do that."

Then again, maybe you did.

Maybe you were part of the 2,389 families, organizations and churches who gave less than $100 to the University last year. You may have thought your gift was insignificant and really didn't matter. But as that larger figure testifies, a small gift, when combined with others, truly has a ripple effect.

We are pleased to present in this magazine a list of donors who gave to the University in 2010 [Page 16]. Every name on that list is important to us because there is a face behind each name. There's a story to every gift.

One story we are sharing in this issue is that of Jody ('96) and Louise Fry ('86) Venkatesan [Page 12]. During their time at the University, the generosity of others helped them make it through. Now they are passing on the favor given them through the Paul Carter Endowment Fund.

I have a vision of just how big this ripple effect can be. My dream for the future includes every living alumnus giving $250 per year. I also envision what would happen if every living alumnus gave $5,000 from their estate. If those two things happen, undergraduate debt would be eliminated altogether. What began as a small ripple grows into a steady stream of financial aid.

With everyone's help, this dream can become a reality. And who are the beneficiaries of this aid? The answer is simple — thousands upon thousands of Harding students who will have a profound influence in God's kingdom.

2011 is the year for the cumulative effect of all our ripples to multiply into much, much more. H

Health sciences growth spurs restructuring

President David B. Burks announced April 15 a major academic reorganization of the University effective in August.

Included in the reorganization is the naming of a provost, formation of a provost council, creation of a Center for Health Sciences, and creation of a College of Allied Health.

Dr. Larry Long, current vice president for academic affairs, will become the University's first provost. Burks noted that most schools like Harding with numerous graduate programs have a provost serving as the chief academic officer.

"By naming a provost and a provost council, we will be giving Dr. Long more time to make and direct policy decisions affecting the entire scope of Harding's academic programs," said Burks.

Serving on the provost

Newly named provost Larry Long (seated) is surrounded by his provost council consisting of Julie Hixson-Wallace, Marty Spears and Cheri Yecke.

council with Long will be Drs. Marty Spears, Cheri Yecke and Julie Hixson-Wallace. Spears will be associate provost with responsibilities for undergraduate and institutional effectiveness programs. Yecke and Hixson-Wallace will be assistant provosts. Yecke will assume responsibilities for research and graduate and professional programs.

Hixson-Wallace will provide oversight and direction of the Center for Health Sciences, which will include the College of Pharmacy, the College of Allied Health, and the Carr College of Nursing. In addition to serving as assistant provost, Hixson-Wallace will continue to serve as dean of the College of Pharmacy. Dr. Cathleen Shultz remains dean of the College of Nursing.

Burks commented, "Creating a Center for Health Sciences brings together all of the health sciences for the first time in the University's history. This will be a much more efficient way to administer these programs."

Included in the newly organized College of Allied Health will be the Communications Sciences and Disorders Program directed by Dr. Dan Tullios, the Physician Assistant Program directed by Dr. Michael Murphy, and the new Physical Therapy Program directed by Dr. Mike McGalliard.

Dr. Rebecca Weaver will serve as dean of the College of Allied Health. She previously served as dean of the College of Communication, which will be no more. The department of mass communication, department of theatre, and division of oral communication will move to the College of Arts and Humanities.

Burks noted the University's continued interest in adding health-related programs and degrees made the creation of a Center for Health Sciences a very significant move in the academic reorganization.

Physical therapy program strives to educate, serve

Long hours of preparation are making way for the physical therapy program's first class this fall. The 30-student cohort will be the first church of Christ-based program in the country and aims to have Christ at the core of its curriculum.

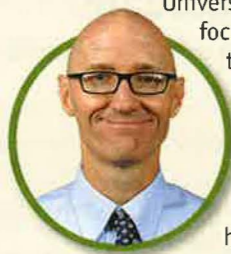

The program currently has six faculty hired and is in the process of developing classrooms and labs for physical therapy coursework. This includes the creation of a gross anatomy lab.

In addition to the basic physical therapy courses, there will also be a focus on medical missions. "We've got three missions classes, and we're going to be teaching them in conjunction with the missions and Bible faculty," says Director Mike McGalliard. "The first class is a basic medical missions class. We want to teach students how to view physical therapy as a way to serve God and mankind. The second course is going to be a very specific missions preparation course, which will be country-specific. In the third missions class, we're going to take students to Zambia to practice what they've learned in the all of their physical therapy coursework."

In building this foundation of medical mission work, the program hopes to equip students with the tools needed to provide effective care for all patients. "We want to produce therapists with service-oriented mindset and who view the world through the eyes of Christ," emphasizes McGalliard.

Coming to the University from Texas Tech University, McGalliard's background focuses on orthopedic physical therapy, manual therapy and research. One of the sparks to which he attributes his passion for medical missions is from his time in Ethiopia, where he and his wife adopted one of their sons.

For prospective students, information regarding the admissions process, prerequisites and details on the program may be found online at www.harding.edu/pt.

Harding is seeking accreditation by the Commission on Accreditation in Physical Therapy Education (1111 North Fairfax Street, Alexandria, VA 22314; 703-706-3245; accreditation@apta.org). The program will submit an Application for Candidacy, which is the formal application required in the preaccreditation stage. Submission of this document does not assure that the program will be granted Candidate for Accreditation status nor does it assure that the program will be granted accreditation.

The Oglesby Preaching Studio is a new tool to help prepare preachers.

Studio helps students prepare for ministry

When Jacob Hawk graduated with a degree in preaching in 2009, he felt more than prepared academically to bring the word of God to a local congregation. But after starting to preach full time, he realized that oral communication training had not received as much attention.

"It's one thing to study how to preach," he says. "It's a completely different thing to actually do it. Words can't describe the adrenaline or dynamics a preacher feels when he steps into the pulpit. The moment cannot be duplicated or recreated through a textbook or packet about homiletics. This type of education can only be learned through action."

Hawk grew up attending Waterview Church of Christ in Richardson, Texas, where his father is an elder. When the congregation heard about the University's need for a training facility for preaching students, they didn't hesitate to step in.

"The Waterview Church of Christ has been concerned for many years that churches of Christ are not educating, training and equipping enough young men to fill the pulpits of our domestic churches," says Danny Hawk. "While Waterview has certainly been extremely involved in world missions through the years, the training of preachers to fill local pulpits has also been a strong passion and major focus of our ministry."

In June 2010, the church made a commitment to the University to donate $200,000 over a period of four years toward the construction of a state-of-the-art preaching studio. Their initial contribution was made in September, and the church has included the facility as part of its domestic ministry budget within their regular contribution.

"We are very impressed with the commitment that Harding has made to aggressively deal with the crisis of a shortage of preachers," says Danny. "We believe that many have had an awareness of the crisis for years, but Harding is stepping out to offer a solution. This will give student preachers a wonderful opportunity to watch and learn from their own presentations and later film sermons that can be sent to churches when they begin the interview process."

Designed by Mike Steelman and built by the physical resources department, the studio is reminiscent of Cone Chapel, trimmed with the same dark woodwork lining the walls and round, saucer-shaped light fixtures hanging from the ceiling. The room is housed on the first floor of the McInteer Bible and World Missions Center and seats 34 people. The facility features two video cameras and other audiovisual equipment, including three flat-screen monitors mounted on the side and back walls, and a control room. According to Danny, the room "provides the atmosphere and feel of a church auditorium."

Named the Oglesby Preaching Studio in honor of Robert K. Oglesby, whose ministry has spanned 57 years with 48 of those as minister for Waterview, the facility will primarily be used for filming student preachers, allowing them to see themselves and review their sermons with professors. In addition, it will be used for teachers to film classes they would otherwise miss and for preachers who want to come and film sample sermons to help them in their interview and resume process.

"It will obviously be a great blessing to student preachers as they develop their skills," says Dr. Bruce McLarty, vice president of spiritual life at the University. "In addition, we think it will say to prospective students and their parents that Harding takes a very high view of preachers and preaching."

The project was completed in March and a formal dedication ceremony took place May 13.

Graduate School of Religion has new name

Harding School of Theology has been chosen as the new name for the Graduate School of Religion in Memphis, Tenn. The change comes at the end of a two-year process involving the dean, faculty, staff, alumni, advisory board, University president and board of trustees.

The process culminates in a rebranding strategy that seeks to reflect better the School's goal of equipping and inspiring servants of Christ with deeper faith and higher standards of scholarship. "Graduate School of Religion" as a designation no longer communicates who we are," explains Dr. Evertt W. Huffard, vice president and dean of the school. "We are much more interested in students knowing God than knowing religion."

And while the name changes, the core values of the school remain the same. "The Graduate School is not changing its commitment to the word of God or to serving churches of Christ," Huffard says. "Rather, this change helps us communicate those commitments."

Huffard explains that Harding Graduate School has always focused on helping ministers be better equipped for the challenges of ministry. "That commitment is in no way changing," he adds.

The name change has no associated administrative or academic changes. The school remains under the leadership of the Harding University president and board of trustees.

The rebranding will help communicate that the school is a caring, engaged academic community. "We have a relentless passion to understand and live the word of God," says Mark Parker, assistant vice president.

Self-portrait

A candid look at four staff members

PAM CELSOR

Role at Harding: I am the administrative secretary for Student Affairs and Admissions in the College of Pharmacy.

Television shows you love: "Castle," "NCIS" and "Criminal Minds"

Favorite part of your job: I love having the opportunity to meet all of our applicants and then work with our accepted students on a daily basis. Our students come from all over the country, as well as several foreign countries. They are bright and caring and will be amazing pharmacists some day. I feel so blessed to be able to work with them!

Where's the best place you've traveled or where would you love to travel? Probably my favorite place to visit at this point was Carmel, California — beautiful! Someday, I would like to visit Austria and Ireland.

Favorite Bible verse: Proverbs 3: 5-6 "Trust in the Lord with all your heart and lean not on your own understanding; in all your ways acknowledge him, and he will make your paths straight."

FELICIA PATTEN

Role at Harding: Resident Life Coordinator in Allen Hall

The weirdest part of my job is ... feeling motherly responsibility for 200-plus boys!

Favorite Biblical character: Right now, David. He's such a poet!

Best thing to do with your family: Anything really, but we love to go camping.

What superpower would you most like to have? Being able to clean house in an instant

JOHN SULLIVAN

Role at Harding: I am the Tennessee recruiter for Admissions.

Last movie you saw: "The King's Speech"

The best part of my job is ... getting to work with the best students in the country!

What do you get to eat in the Student Center? A double Angus burger with Pepper Jack and cheddar cheese seated neatly beneath a smear of guacamole and chipotle sauce topped with grilled onions and Pico de Gallo. Roughly a 1,250-calorie jumpstart.

Favorite Bible verse: Deuteronomy 1:30-31, "The Lord your God, who is going before you, will fight for you, as he did for you in Egypt, before your very eyes, and in the desert. There you saw how the Lord your God carried you, as a father carries his son, all the way you went until you reached this place."

Dream vacation spot: Curtain Bluff Resort in Antigua, West Indies

DAVID UNDERWOOD

Role at Harding: I work in the Advancement Office as a regional director.

In my spare time, I ... like to read, travel, and keep up with college football.

Biggest inspiration? Jesus Christ for sure. Others are David and Myra Underwood (my parents), Dr. Henry Farrar, Dr. Tom Drinnen, Craig Jones, Mike Cope, Jim Woodroof, Dr. Clifton Ganus; Steve Smith (Tulsa, Okla.); Monte Cox; Marty Mathiesen (a high school coach and teacher); Old Man Tomba (a night-watchman in West Africa); my wife, Jan; and my two sons, Matt and Luke.

Currently reading: The Hole in our Gospel by Richard Stearns

Favorite thing about working at Harding: The blessing of the relationships I have made with the people I get to go and visit. They love Harding, and they love the Lord even more! All of those wonderful folks bless me more than I am able to put into words, and I could never put a value on how blessed I am because of their influence. I wouldn't trade jobs with anybody in the world.

Dana Steil looks over the work Alex Avance is preparing to aid in traffic safety.

Fighting crime with software

Since fall 2010, students working under Dr. Dana Steil, assistant professor of computer science, have been given the opportunity to contribute to developing software that goes directly into professional use, a task rarely offered to undergraduate students.

The program — Harding University Branch of the Center for Advanced Public Safety, or HUB-CAPS — employs the skills of eight upper-level computer science students to develop software used by Alabama state and federal agencies, such as the department of transportation and state law enforcement agencies, to facilitate traffic and officer safety. Students are paid for 20 hours of work per week and are able to contribute to advancements being made in traffic safety.

"Working for CAPS has been a fantastic experience," senior computer science major Paul Sherrod of Alpharetta, Ga., says. "I have learned a lot about what it is like to work for a software company, gained various practical programming skills, and also gained confidence in knowing that I can succeed in the software industry. It has been great to gain this valuable experience while still in school, which will greatly assist in finding a job after graduation."

The projects, including software that allows law enforcement to analyze crash, citation and crime records and also view real-time and historical locations of other officers, are funded by subgrants through University of Alabama with the Center for Advanced Public Safety, where Steil did his Ph.D. work.

"The students get great experience developing software that people use within weeks of their efforts," Steil says. "The work we are doing has a direct benefit to society, and I hope they get a sense of fulfillment from that."

HUB-CAPS currently completes several projects each month for Alabama's programs. Steil says he hopes the projects continue indefinitely and will soon aid Arkansas agencies as well.

Academy-award winning film brings voice to speech therapy

When "The King's Speech" premiered last December, the Stuttering Foundation of America, a nonprofit educational and referral organization, reported receiving call after call from individuals inspired to take control of their own speech problems. The film, recounting the efforts of King George VI and an eccentric speech therapist to overcome the monarch's debilitating stutter during WWII, recently earned four Academy Awards — including Best Picture — bringing global attention to the vital work of speech-language pathologists, including those trained through the University's Communication Sciences and Disorders program and others working in the Harding University Speech Clinic.

"Harding has served a significant role in training speech-language pathologists that are currently serving all over the world," chair of the Communication Sciences and Disorders program, Dr. Dan Tullos, said. "I am happy that people who see ["The King's Speech"] will finally understand what it is that [speech-language pathologists] do. Perhaps the greatest impact, however, involves the realistic voice that Colin Firth as King George VI has given to individuals who stutter."

For 58 years, the speech clinic has provided speech therapy services for students, faculty and staff, their families, and members of the community at little or no cost. The 150 undergraduate students and 33 graduate students currently enrolled in the program conduct therapy sessions under the close supervision of a nationally certified and state licensed speech-language pathologist with clients benefiting from their pairing with individuals at the forefront of the speech pathology field.

Amy Smith of McRae, Ark., enrolled her son, Gunner, in the program in fall 2010 and now confidently reports seeing significant improvement in her 3-year-old's communication disorder.

"[The clinic's staff] has worked so diligently with the small stuff," Smith said. "What is day to day for everyone else is a milestone for us — like sentences. They rejoice with me in the milestones."

Jennifer Fisher, the clinic's current director, reported that the office served approximately 65 clients during the spring semester and offers free diagnostic, evaluation and management services for speech and language disorders.

"I feel the mission of our clinic is to be the client's advocate in his or her journey to being the best communicator possible," Fisher said.

Putting around indoors

By SCOTT GOODE, sports information director

It's a cold, dark late afternoon in mid-January in Searcy. Temperatures outside are in the low 30s, and snow is in the forecast. But in Ganus Athletic Center, it's a perfect day for golf. ● In the fall semester, the University began transforming the gymnastics room in the Ganus Center, converting one-third of the 40-by-60-foot room into a year-round practice facility for both the men's and women's golf teams.

"There was not a room that existed yet when this idea was hatched," men's golf coach Dustin Howell says. "It has been a dream of mine since taking over [the men's program] three years ago to have a place where we could practice regardless of daylight and weather conditions and always have the perfect roll of the green."

Howell and women's golf coach Nicky Boyd began a search around campus for a suitable location.

Sophomore Bison golfer Lewis Jackson enjoys utilizing the new indoor facility to practice and improve his game.

"The biggest hurdle was financial and also finding a place for the room without building an external building," Howell says. "Several locations were considered that were less than ideal. I'm thankful to Dr. Stephen Burks [facility director for the Center] for carving out a place in the Ganus and saying, 'This will be your home.'"

The room includes a full-sized putting green, a chipping area and two hitting bays, similar to a driving range. One is a virtual driving range that has access to a computer that extrapolates each shot and gives data to help determine how to correct or improve the swing.

"One of the ways that the hitting bays have helped us is by letting the players know how far they hit each club," Boyd says. "That has been great, and I've really been surprised how much it has helped the putting."

The reaction from the players has been predictably positive.

"They love it," Howell says. "I have a couple of keys that I give out to the guys, and probably four or five nights a week, one of our guys is over there putting or chipping, even when we've had good weather."

"About five golfers can fit in there comfortably," Howell says. "That's actually better than trying to instruct all 10 at once. What we've done is try to divide them into two groups and send one group to conditioning and weightlifting and then we'll swap after an hour or so."

Howell noticed the benefits of the new facility almost immediately. "The greatest benefit I've seen is that our putting has improved drastically coming out of our winter break," Howell says. "It's nice when all of the golf courses around us are closed, and we are still able to practice just like we would if we were outside."

The new golf facility is not the only change occurring at the Ganus.

Construction has begun on the east side of the building that will include a new athletic training room and new football locker room and weight room. The expansion is slated to finish by August when the Bison football team reports for fall practice.

The old football locker room space will be vacated and renovated for use by other Harding athletic teams. ■

Men's basketball 11th in NCAA

The 2010-11 men's basketball team completed its best season in program history. The Bisons won a school-record 25 games and their first Gulf South Conference Tournament Championship, advanced to their third NCAA Division II National Tournament, and finished the season ranked 11th in Division II. The No. 11 finish marked the first time the Bisons ended a season ranked in the NCAA Top 25.

The 25-5 record topped the previous best mark of 24-6 by the 1995-96 team.

The Bisons went 12-2 in GSC West Division play and qualified as the second seed in the West at the GSC Tournament. The team opened the tournament with a 74-63 victory over University of West Georgia, demolished GSC East No. 1 seed University of Alabama-Huntsville 82-51 in the semifinals, and won the conference championship with an 80-61 victory over Arkansas Tech University.

The University qualified for the NCAA Division II National Tournament as the No. 2 seed in the South Region but lost 87-86 in overtime to No. 7 Stillman College in the regional quarterfinals.

Seniors Stephen Blake and Kevin Brown became the first Bison duo to earn First Team All-GSC honors in the teams 11 seasons in the conference.

Blake was also named National Association of Basketball Coaches First Team All-South Region and GSC Tournament Most Outstanding Player. He averaged 16.0 points and led the GSC in free throw percentage (86.4) and 3-point field goal percentage (54.5).

Brown was NABC Second Team All-South Region and was a member of the GSC All-Tournament Team. He averaged 15.7 points and led the Bisons with an average of 7.3 rebounds. Brown became only the ninth Harding basketball player to finish his career with more than 1,500 points.

Lady Bisons reach GSC semifinals

The 2010-11 women's basketball team qualified for its fifth-straight Gulf South Conference Tournament. The Lady Bisons defeated University of North Alabama 67-58 in the quarterfinals before falling to Delta State University by three points in their second consecutive trip to the semifinals.

The Lady Bisons finished the season 18-10 overall and earned the fourth seed in the GSC Tournament from the West Division with an 8-6 conference record.

The team's signature win was a 69-66 victory Jan. 15 over the No. 1 team in Division II, Delta State.

Two players earned All-Gulf South Conference honors. Junior forward Sierra Rollins averaged 14.7 points and 9.3 rebounds and earned First Team All-GSC. Senior guard Bailey St. Clair averaged 12.8 points and led the team with 83 steals and was Second Team.

Kristen Celsor was named the GSC West Division Freshman of the Year, averaging 7.8 points and 5.2 rebounds.

Kirwa third at nationals

Senior Daniel Kirwa's performances highlighted the 2011 men's indoor track season earning his fifth indoor track All-America honor with a third-place finish in the mile at the NCAA Division II Indoor National Championships in Albuquerque, N.M.

It was the third time in Kirwa's career that he finished in the top three nationally in the indoor mile. He was national champion in 2008 and placed second in 2009. Kirwa also has two All-America honors in the indoor 5,000-meter.

Junior Milton Stewart set the only new indoor school record in the 2011 season. He ran 22.25 in the 200-meter at the Nebraska Tune-Up in Lincoln.

The team had eight student-athletes earn All-South Region honors from the United States Track and Field and Cross-Country Coaches Association. They were Blake Arnold (distance medley), Logan Callier (high jump), Andrew Evans (5,000-meter), Ryan Johnson (distance medley), Kirwa (800-meter, mile, distance medley), Wojciech Kopec (distance medley), Stewart (200-meter), and Josh Winslager (pole vault).

Ebenja national indoor qualifier

The 2011 women's indoor track team sent one member to the NCAA Indoor National Meet, set a new school record in the mile relay, and saw a sophomore break two school records in field events.

Junior Cathy Ebenja provisionally qualified for the indoor national meet in her first race of the season. She ran the 55-meter dash in 7.11 seconds, which converted to 7.64 for the 60-meter. At the national meet in Albuquerque, N.M., Ebenja ran 7.74 in her preliminary heat and did not qualify for the finals.

Ebenja teamed with freshman Ryane Ledington, junior Callie McAlister and freshman Hannah Schliiffka to run the mile relay in a school-record time of 4:14.41 at the Fazoli's/Baymont Inn Invitational hosted by Missouri Southern State University Feb. 4.

Sophomore Rhiannon Roper of Fortuna, Calif., set a new school record in the weight throw with a toss of 37-3 at the Mule Relays in Warrensburg, Mo., Jan. 28. She then broke the school record in the shot put at Missouri Southern with a mark of 36-2 1/4.

The team had nine student-athletes earn All-South Region honors from the United States Track and Field and Cross-Country Coaches Association. They were Hagen Atkins (distance medley), Portia Bell (60-meter, 200-meter), Tiffany Chambers (pole vault), Ebenja (60-meter), Dia Gibson (high jump), McAlister (distance medley), Rachel Roberts (mile, distance medley), Roper (shot put, weight throw), and Schliiffka (distance medley).

PAYING IT forward

the ripple effect

*“Individually, we are one drop.
Together, we are the ocean.”*

—RYUNOSUKE SATORO

By JENNIFER HANNIGAN
AND HEATHER WILLIAMS

Account balance: $80.

Staring at their dwindling checking account, Jody and Louise Venkatesan found themselves financially drained, unsure where to turn.

“We were broke,” says Louise. “Money had always been tight, but now we didn’t know if we would be able to cover tuition, rent or food.”

She met Jody in 1986 at church while he was on active duty with the U.S. Army. Louise moved to Washington, D.C., after graduating from the University. The couple relocated to Searcy in 1993 so that Jody could begin work on his Bachelor of Business Administration while Louise pursued her master’s in marriage and family therapy.

While in school, the Venkatesans sought jobs to pay the bills. According to Vice President of Advancement Mike Williams, Jody’s outgoing attitude made it easy for him to find odd jobs around campus. “He was always helping, always working,” says Williams. “Jody was constantly looking for opportunities. Everyone knew him.”

However, despite their efforts, the couple was still struggling to make ends meet. “At that point it became painfully apparent to me that I was in over my head,” says Jody. “I had to ask for help. It was truly a humbling moment in our lives.”

The Venkatesans found the relief they needed in the form of the Paul Carter Endowment Fund. >>

Jody and Louise felt their financial burden lift when they discovered that the next year and a half of their schooling would be taken care of through the endowment. During an American Studies Institute luncheon, Jody met and thanked Carter, then CFO of Wal-Mart Stores Inc. and a member of the University's board of trustees, for the life-changing gift that he had granted them. Carter made one request of the Venkatesans: "All I ask is, someday, do it for someone else if you can."

Since that moment, Jody and Louise have taken Carter's simple statement and made it their motto, striving to help other students the same way. As a result, they established the Jody and Louise Venkatesan Endowment Fund, providing financial aid to students living east of the Mississippi River with a grade-point average of 3.0 or higher.

"[Upon starting the fund], we have had so many individual opportunities to help," says Jody, now a member of the President's Council, Builder's Circle and ASI Board. "It has added to the blessing in our lives in so many ways."

Jody and Louise have used the endowment fund to help students from their congregation, Silver Spring (Md.) Church of Christ, who do not qualify for financial aid while, at the same time, are unable to afford to attend otherwise. In the event that a student from their church was not going to the University, "God has always put someone there," says Louise.

One summer, a Harding student interning at NASA became involved with the Venkatesans' church. Jody and Louise learned that he was in need of financial assistance and directed the endowment to him. Recently, they took the remaining available funds and gave it to a member of the spring break campaign group who visited their church.

"I called [the Advancement Office], gave them a list of students who had been on the campaign, and asked to give the remainder to the student who needed it most," says Jody. "There's really no rhyme or reason to it; we just want to help. We know the lasting and permanent investment being made in the lives of these students."

In addition to helping students through the endowment fund, the Venkatesans also give of their time and home. They heavily recruit potential students in the Washington, D.C., area. On several occasions, they have opened their home to spring break campaigns and summer interns. "We've seen the difference that Harding makes," says Louise. "We want others to have the same opportunity we had."

As their endowment fund recipients begin to graduate — the first student received his diploma in May 2009 — the Venkatesans hope that each will continue to pay it forward, aiding the next generation of students.

"This experience has provided us a network of people who have helped us grow in the grace of giving and to bless others in the same way that we were blessed," says Jody. "We have found giving really does make a difference for somebody, and we continue to challenge ourselves as best we can, knowing God has blessed us for a reason — to serve others like God has blessed us."

The greatest barriers to a private college education are all too often the financial burdens accompanying it, just like the Venkatesans faced. But what would happen if every student who desires a top-quality Christian education could afford it? What would be the impact if every Harding student could enroll and graduate free of debt?

The average total amount borrowed by undergraduates on campus during one academic year is $21 million. Although several steps are being taken on campus to ensure that a Harding education is affordable to all, the University can't do it alone. You may wonder how you could possibly make even a dent in such a staggering amount. But if everyone joins together, your gift — no matter how big or small — can make an astonishing impact.

The Dream

There are 42,000 alumni in the Harding family. If every living alumnus gave $250 per year, undergraduate debt would be cut in half!

▶▶ $250 x 42,000 alumni = $10.5 million for scholarships
If every alumnus gave $5,000 from their estate, the result would be unlike anything the Harding community has ever seen.

▶▶ $5,000 x 42,000 alumni = $210 million for endowment
▶▶ $210,000,000 x 5% (endowment spending policy)
$10,500,000

▶▶ TOTAL available to scholarship fund = $21,000,000
With these two efforts combined, undergraduate debt would be eliminated altogether, making it possible for every student to attend Harding and graduate free from financial burdens.

No amount is too small if everyone makes a contribution. There truly is power in numbers. We can't make an impact alone — we must do it together. These contribution examples are just some of the ways you can open the doors of a Harding education to students worldwide. But the University is also working to meet you halfway.

Throughout Harding's history, the University has done its best to keep costs low. During the 2010-11 academic year, the University's tuition increase was 3.4 percent, making it the lowest in 11 years. The University provided nearly $22 million in scholarships, grants, institutional aid and work study to undergraduate students during 2009-10. In addition, a change in the freshman grant in 2009 continues to award up to $7,000 per first-year student based on financial need.

Harding's costs also compare favorably to other schools. The University is ranked annually by U.S. News & World Report as one of the best colleges in the South and was ranked 20th in the 2011 "Best Colleges" issue. Of the top 25 universities in the category, 17 are private institutions, and, of those 17 schools, Harding has the lowest tuition and fees and the lowest estimate of total price. The University is also annually named to the Great Schools, Great Prices list as a best value.

Harding also fares well amongst our sister schools. When compared to the 11 largest schools affiliated with churches of Christ, the University has the lowest tuition and fees and the lowest estimate of total price.

The time has never been more urgent for you to give as our nation continues to climb out of one of the worst economic downturns in U.S. history. We must work together and continue to provide opportunities for a quality Christian education to our broad-based constituents. Students come to Harding from all walks of life and go out and make an impact all over the world. Don't just make a donation — make an investment in these students and the lives they will influence around the globe.

For more information about how you, like the Venkatesans, can serve others as God has blessed you, contact the Office of Advancement at 800-477-4312, ext. 2. H

Ways YOU can make an impact

There are a variety of ways you can contribute to the Harding experience, and there are numerous scholarships that need your support.

▶▶ Annual Scholarship Fund

THE HARDING GRANT – This program provides need-based financial assistance to students with demonstrated financial need. For students from lower socioeconomic backgrounds, this grant makes a Harding education possible and lowers dependence on student debt.

MISSIONARY SCHOLARSHIPS – Since 1924, Harding has placed a premium on preparing individuals who will serve in full-time missions. In an effort to support these families, Harding provides scholarships to the children of foreign missionaries.

INTERNATIONAL STUDENT SCHOLARSHIP – Harding is home to students from 49 states and 53 foreign nations. This scholarship makes it possible for students to come here from all over the globe. Many of these graduates will return to their home country and make a profound difference in the kingdom.

▶▶ Endowed Scholarship Fund

PRESIDENT'S ENDOWED SCHOLARSHIP FUND – Your gift of $25,000 will establish a need-based scholarship in perpetuity. President's Endowed Scholarships are granted to upperclassmen with good academic records and significant financial need.

ENDOWED SCHOLARSHIP – Your minimum gift of $25,000 will establish an endowed scholarship in the area of your choice. Scholarships can be awarded to students in specific programs or from specific regions of the country. Scholarship agreements can be drafted to articulate your preferences in the criteria used in determining scholarship recipients.

▶▶ Century Club

Each year, hundreds of individuals and families are part of the Century Club. Their annual gift of at least $100 is constant and faithful. Some might question the magnitude of their impact, but there is power in their number and steadfastness. Their loyal and devoted support makes it possible for students to attend Harding. Each dollar given reduces the amount of debt incurred by our students.

▶▶ President's Council

Since 1965, the President's Council has been an integral part of the trajectory of this University. As ambassadors for this institution, they have helped us recruit students and faculty and have served as an advisory board to help us construct our strategic vision. As partners in this ministry, they commit to give at least $1,500 annually to Harding. Much of their financial support goes to the scholarship fund and endowed scholarships.

[Honor Roll of Donors 2010]

To the donors of Harding University,

It has been said that if you want to assess one's values, look at their checkbook. This fundamental proverb is true for the individual; it is also true for an organization. As you look at the annual budget of Harding University, two fundamental values surface very quickly. We value people who work for us, and we value the students whom we serve. The two principal expenditures of this ministry are salaries for our associates and scholarships for students.

Colleges and universities are profoundly shaped by two primary decisions:

- ❶ Who do you hire?
- ❷ Who do you recruit?

At Harding, we take these two questions very seriously. We believe that it is imperative that we attract and retain outstanding men and women of faith to serve on our faculty. They must be accomplished scholars who integrate faith into their respective disciplines. They must be intentional in their attempt to give our students a distinctive worldview that is shaped by Scripture. They must be models of integrity and professionalism. Our investment in people is born out of our belief in the power of an influential mentor.

The lifeblood of any college is the student body. This is especially true at Harding. As you read in this magazine, you will notice the premium we place on affordability. We strive to make a Harding education affordable to every Christian student regardless of the ability to pay. Our cost of attendance and scholarship offers are born out of our values and the mission given to us by our founders.

In the following pages, we recognize the thousands of individuals who give to this institution. We want to be very transparent in how we shepherd the financial support that you give. We pledge to be faithful stewards of your confidence and generosity.

Words cannot express our depth of gratitude for your generosity. H

“When my parents died, I wondered where the money would come from. I wasn't making enough at work, so I really appreciate the scholarships. I don't know how I would've gotten through the last few semesters without them.”

Twins Casey & Kelli Mott

“ [Casey] To the ones that did give, thank you. I don't know where I'd be, what I would do with these dreams that I have, if I didn't receive their help.

[Kelli] We wouldn't be here without these scholarships. Even though it's just money, it's a huge blessing for us.”

I'm definitely not the only one out there who needs money and who will make an impact in the world. The world is getting into [my generation's] hands. In giving to a school like Harding, donors enable students to get the quality education along with the morals that will help us change the world for the better.

Romas Roberson

The biggest concern for me in coming to college was the living expenses. I play football here, and it's tough trying to find a job working around practice hours. I was really worried about not being able to work and having those living expenses paid for. The scholarship money helps with that. It's one less thing for me to worry about.

The power of MUSIC

When 53 members of the Harding Chorus went on their annual January tour, they didn't just sing. They touched lives. Two alumni allow us to share blog posts of what the performances meant to them.

Chorus

SUNDAY, JANUARY 9, 2011

A couple of weeks ago, we got an email detailing the upcoming performance calendar for the Harding University Chorus. They are traveling around our area, and it just happened that they would perform at a church less than a mile from our house tonight. When I saw that, I knew I wanted to take my kids, especially Ava, to the concert.

It's almost impossible to explain how much my life has been affected by being a member of choruses and by choral music. From middle school through college, I was always a choral member. I majored in music education and taught music for five years before staying home with kids. But over the past decade, choral music has been almost nonexistent in my life.

When I got to the church tonight, I was immediately assailed with memories of being in choir in college. The college kids look the same to me. About a dozen of those college kids reminded me of specific friends I knew then ... things just don't change much I guess. I remembered going on trips exactly like tonight. We would be split into small numbers of two to three and hosted by families from the church at which we performed. That could be a blog post on its own because I had some strange experiences staying in the homes of strangers, let me tell you.

As the concert was about to begin, all I could think about was what Ava would think. I had this feeling that she would love it, but I didn't know for sure. The chorus opened with a beautiful — really it was absolutely stunning — piece with intricate, swelling harmonies. In fact, it was my favorite song of the night. And I saw Ava go completely still. I swear she was not moving a muscle as she stared at the stage with her mouth slightly agape. I kept looking at her, the singers, back to her ... and she was frozen. And then, during a somewhat quiet part in the music I actually heard her exhale. It was like she had forgotten to breathe and had finally remembered to do so. I cried. I was so full of joy seeing her swept away in appreciation for music that means so much to me. It was a deeply emotional experience.

She kept still, not frozen as she was during the first song, for the entire performance and truly enjoyed listening. During one spiritual she leaned over and said, "This one has a catchy tune." You know, I can't believe I let her reach age 7 without ever hearing the type of choral music that impacted my life for so many years. I should have shared it with her earlier, although maybe this was just the right time. Not only that but I had not realized what a musical drought my own life has been in for so many years. I love singing choral music. I no longer participate in something I loved for 20 years, and I really do miss it.

At the end of the concert, as always, Harding alumni were invited to the stage to sing "The Lord Bless You and Keep You." I brought Ava along with me so she could experience standing in the midst of the singers. I neglected to mention that the director of this chorus is still the same one I had nearly 15 years ago! So I stood under his direction tonight, singing as I did back then, cherishing the experience, thankful for the beautiful evening.

I went to the director after the concert (yes, he remembered me). I told him that it was my daughter's first time to hear this kind of music and thanked him. It was nice to share a hug with a mentor from long ago. I also thanked some of the chorus members who probably thought I was a crazy old lady while secretly hoping they weren't staying in my home tonight.

My Parents' Song

TUESDAY, JANUARY 11, 2011

We had all-school chapel today — except it wasn't really all of the school, and it wasn't really chapel. The Harding University Chorus from Searcy, Ark., came to Westbury Christian [School] and sang for us for 45 minutes. Our students from grades two through 12 listened to approximately 60 wonderful young voices sing praises to God with a few other selections thrown in for good measure. I have no musical background, but even I could tell they are very good, this choir that is making appearances throughout Texas on their way to a choral festival in Oklahoma.

It's here, though, that I have a confession to make. My mind wandered during their concert on a cold morning in Houston. But, even though I daydreamed a little bit, all the way through their traditional farewell hymn of "The Lord Bless You And Keep You," I paid rapt attention. You see, my mother and father were in that same Harding chorus more than 60 years ago. They weren't married or even engaged as far as I can tell, but they were moving inexorably toward their union of husband and wife, which resulted in the birth a number of years later of their second son.

As the performance unfolded, I looked for young men and young women who reminded me of my folks. I can't say I saw any matches, but then I can't see my folks as teenagers or early 20-somethings anyway. I did witness a big bunch of fresh-faced and optimistic college kids who love singing and love the Lord just like a boy from Flint, Mich., and a girl from Nashville, Ark., did in the late 1940s.

It made me wish I had paid more attention to my mom and dad when they sang in church and in the car. Their voices are starting to fade a little from my memory. But you know what? In the tones of those five-dozen singers today, I thought I heard the echo of Nelda Chesshir ('49) and Roger Wayne Hawley ('50). And believe me, it was a beautiful sound. ■

Capturing hope on film

When Milwaukee native Tim Frakes ('84) arrived at Harding in 1979, he didn't even know where Arkansas was and knew very little about the University. But his time in Searcy would shape his life and career far beyond anything he could ever imagine. Frakes initially began as a journalism major but later moved to broadcast media. He gained his first television experiences in, of all places, the College of Bible and Religion.

"They had this big television studio, and I got a job working for David Hurd," says Frakes. "He taught me about the craft of television right there in that Bible TV studio. Harding gave me my television career — it's the thing I was called to do, and it's been a passion ever since."

Today Frakes lives in the Chicago suburbs and is an award-winning videographer, producer, script writer and editor. The owner of Tim Frakes Productions, his videos are broadcast on major television networks and distributed worldwide through DVD sales. The company does single-camera, documentary and image video for nonprofit organizations, faith-based groups, and a few corporate clients as well. Frakes says each workday is far from ordinary.

"A typical day is anything from recording baptisms in Cuba to filming stories about people cleaning up rubble after the earthquake in Haiti to shooting documentaries like 'Ready to Forgive: An African Story of Grace.'"

"Ready to Forgive" aired on ABC in 2009 and tells the story of the Acholi people of Northern Uganda who endured endless torture through 20 years of civil war. Today the Acholi are striving to offer forgiveness to their tormentors and achieve reconciliation. The documentary is hosted by Rwandan genocide survivor and author of Left to Tell, Immaculée Ilibagiza.

Frakes has also produced documentaries about Johann Sebastian Bach, Martin Luther, and apostles Peter and Paul. In addition, he did a documentary about Rome with Rick Steves, host of "Travels in Europe."

For the last two years, Frakes has worked with Herald of Truth on a series of testimonial videos called Hope for Life. Herald of Truth distributes the videos, which feature people telling their story and how God is working in their lives. Earlier this year, he traveled to Cuba to capture Hope for Life video there. According to Frakes, the church in Cuba has grown rapidly during the past 25 years, from less than 200 members in 1985 to more than 100 congregations and 3,000 members today. He filmed 28 baptisms in one weekend alone during his time in Cuba.

No matter what project he is working on, Frakes says one thing is for sure — he'll be "telling stories about God's amazing grace somewhere around planet Earth." H — Heather Williams

[ALMA MATTERS] Snowy baptism a cornerstone experience

By LIZ HOWELL, assistant to the president for alumni and parent relations

Snow started falling on campus around 11 a.m. Jan. 20, and students began building snowmen and having snowball fights on the front lawn. Temperatures were hovering around 30 degrees as the campus became a winter wonderland for the second time in January.

This snow day would prove to be a cornerstone of the Harding experience, a testimony to the power of influence, and a witness to God's amazing hand at work. At 5 p.m., I witnessed a baptism in the fountain between the Benson and McInteer buildings. The plan had been made the day before, so the prospect of snow and freezing conditions were not unknown but added another dimension to the story of Bruce McMullen, a junior golfer from Cape Town, South Africa.

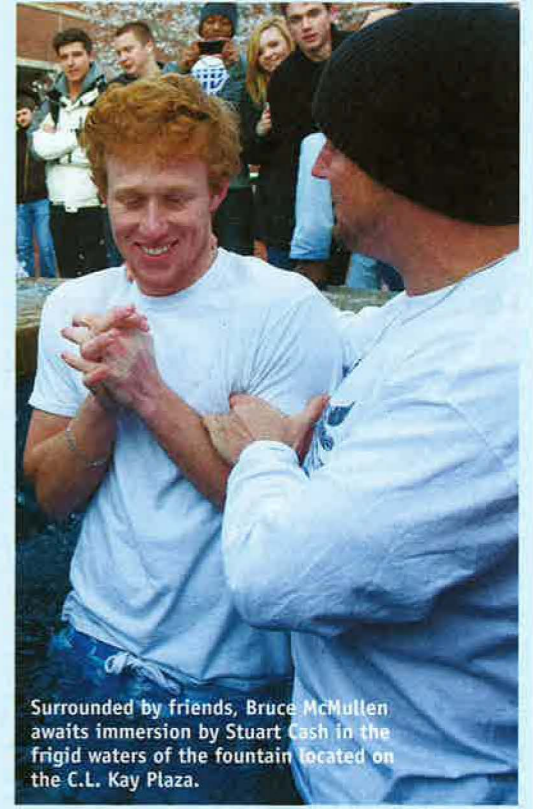

When McMullen accepted a scholarship to play golf at the University, he was looking for an American education with the goal of becoming a physical therapist. "He knew Harding was a religious school but really didn't know what 'religious' meant," explained Dustin Howell, men's golf coach.

In August 2008, he arrived on campus for Student Impact. As he was walking down the hall in Harbin, another student ran by, smiled, said "Jesus loves you," and kept on running. Little did McMullen know that encounter was to be the beginning of a strong friendship between he and Alex Johnson from St. Louis. He thought Johnson's actions were a little odd and certainly was not prepared for the differences in culture that were ahead. As classes began, McMullen realized that he was in uncharted waters. He discovered daily chapel, Bible classes and participated in service projects. At first, he was unsure and skeptical. As he immersed himself, he began to see that something was different.

The strawberry-blonde South African is a natural leader with charisma and a charming accent. In addition to being captain of the golf team, he is on the dean's list, skipper of Sub-T social club, beau for Ju Go Ju social club, and an Associated Women for Harding scholarship recipient. Through his involvement, he has encountered many people who genuinely love and care for him and was greatly influenced by the way Christians live their lives. He began to study and search his Bible and ask people about their Christian walk. Bruce knew something was missing in his life and decided to become a Christian.

He sent a text and invited his friends to come. Because of the frigid temperature and his thoughtfulness, he arranged for hot chocolate and cookies to be on site as he prepared to be baptized. Surrounded by nearly 200 of his friends, he confessed Jesus is the son of God and was baptized in the icy water by Stuart Cash, young adults and involvement minister from Pleasant Valley Church of Christ in Little Rock, Ark.

Among the host of witnesses was McMullen's first Harding friend, Alex, who told him that Jesus loved him. Johnson had driven more than four hours through the snow to be with his friend as he made the most important decision of his life. Lives were changed, friendships were strengthened and God was glorified.

Surrounded by friends, Bruce McMullen awaits immersion by Stuart Cash in the frigid waters of the fountain located on the C.L. Kay Plaza.

We moved into the McInteer to get out of the cold and stood on the mosaic tiles of the world. The words surrounding the map are from the Great Commission. "Go and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit" came to life as we welcomed our new brother in Christ. Pictures and video are on Facebook, and I am reminded again "It's great to be at Harding!" H

At home with Hardy

In order to better understand the subject of her Ph.D., Jacqueline Dillion ('05) has put into practice the old adage of "walking a mile in another's shoes" by opting to live in author Thomas Hardy's home, Max Gate. Located in Dorset, England, the home serves as a portal to share the life of Hardy, and Dillion acts as its caretaker. The initial offer came as a shock to Dillion. "[When] the National Trust asked me to live in Max Gate, I was stunned and speechless, but I quickly found the words to say, 'Yes,' and I moved in a month later," she says. "It's been amazing ever since."

For Dillion, Hardy had been a reoccurring element throughout her schooling, first reading Tess of the d'Urbervilles as a teenager in Arkansas. "Hardly anyone else in the class liked it, and I felt kind of sad for his sake because it's such a good book," she remembers. "I read a few more of his novels over the years, and at Harding I wrote some papers on Hardy. The English department encouraged me to pursue studying and writing on Hardy at the graduate level." Dillion did just that, completing her master's in Victorian literature with Hardy at the center of her thesis.

Now, living in the home where the works she's studied were written, Dillion finds herself inspired by the same stimuli as the author. "It's incredible for me to be just sitting here living in the four walls where he wrote Tess of the d'Urbervilles and Jude the Obscure," she says. "He wrote, for instance, more than 900 poems, most of them in this house, and much of his poetic inspiration came from the garden and the surrounding landscape. 'The Darkling Thrush' is about a bird that sings in his backyard, and I'll hear a bird singing, look out the window, and think, 'I'm looking at the same things that he did.'"

In addition to pursuing her Ph.D. from University of St. Andrews in Scotland while living in Dorset, Dillion's role in Max Gate is to help promote Hardy along with the National Trust, the charity organization that owns the house. "Although many people perceive Hardy as gloomy, the National Trust is wanting to stress the good parts of Hardy, so we are coming up with new approaches for that," she says. "I am opening the house, and we have the house open five days a week, from April to October. I work and host visitors, give tours, manage National Trust volunteers, talk to the media and help students."

For Dillion, one of the highlights of her job is the people with whom she connects. Formerly serving as director of Harding University in England, she enjoys interacting with students and those who visit Max Gate. "I'm getting to meet a lot of people out here from Dorset that I never would have," she says. "They are people from all different walks of life — from the very old and very young. I've even met a woman who knew Thomas Hardy. She is 105 years old and knew him in the 1910s and 1920s."

Dillion has agreed to three years at Hardy's home and is open to wherever the next chapter may take her. "I think I'll stay international," she says. "I like being in another culture and especially working with students in an international setting. That's always exciting to me." H — Jennifer Hannigan

Passages

Sylvia Turley Price Lasley ('40), 92, died Dec. 25, 2010. During World War II, she moved to Kansas City, Mo., and worked at Pratt & Whitney inspecting war plane engine parts. After living there for 20 years, she moved to Blackwater, Mo., where she worked as a substitute teacher at Nelson High School and later as a bookkeeper for Blackwater Schools until she retired in 1979. She was a member of Fairview Road Church of Christ, a volunteer at Boone Hospital Center for 10 years, and enjoyed quilting at the Columbia Senior Center for 11 years. She was preceded in death by her first husband, Woodrow Price, in 1975, and her second husband, John Lasley, in 1994. She is survived by two sons, Kirk and Michael; seven grandchildren; and seven great-grandchildren.

Hugh Rice Mingle ('51), 83, died Dec. 20, 2010. He served in the Army at the end of World War II. He and his wife did missions and higher education work in Germany and Austria, as well as in California, Michigan and Texas. He is survived by his wife of 59 years, Joy Smith ('53); two sons, Tim and Jeffrey; two daughters, Beth Phillips and Bonnie Taliaferro; 14 grandchildren; and nine great-grandchildren.

Nancy McDaniel Hughes ('54), 77, died Jan. 20 from complications resulting from vascular dementia. She married Norman Hughes in June 1954, and they began their careers teaching high school in Dasher, Ga. After one year, they moved to Atlanta where she worked for Southern Bell Telephone Co. while Norman was in graduate school. After Atlanta, they lived in Texas and Arkansas and finally settled in Agoura Hills, Calif., in 1970. She taught kindergarten briefly and was a substitute teacher in Agoura Hills for several years. She then was employed at Pepperdine University — first as an acquisitions clerk in the library, then as an administrative assistant in the computer center, and later as a copy editor/proofreader in the development office. She retired from Pepperdine in 1996. Nancy is survived by her husband of 56 years, Norman ('54); two sons, Michael and Russell; a brother, Paul McDaniel ('68); a sister, Jane Patterson; and four grandchildren.

Venice Hazlet Danley Boxer ('57), 75, died Sept. 20, 2010, from ovarian cancer. She was an administrative assistant prior to her work as benefits manager at Mental Health

Corp. in Denver. She loved reading, gardening, decorating and traveling. She was a member of University Church of Christ. ENHANCING THE MISSION

Serving others while serving yourself

By TED HACKNEY, director of the Center for Charitable Estate Planning

There are few things in life we do for ourselves that also benefit others. A charitable gift annuity (CGA) is one of them. A CGA is a simple contract between you and Harding where you agree to donate a sum of money to the University. In return, Harding agrees to pay you a fixed percentage of that amount every year for as long as you live.

Ted Hackney

Funding a CGA is simple.

- ▶ Write a check
- ▶ Use a credit card
- ▶ Transfer stock

We will provide you a detailed illustration showing:

- ▶ Your personal payment rate
- ▶ Your income tax deduction for this year
- ▶ Your capital gains tax savings

When funding a CGA, you have some important decisions to make. Do you want the payments to go to you or to you and someone else such as your spouse? The payment rate is different for two people yet remains very attractive. In addition, the payments continue for as long as either of you live. You can also fund a CGA as a gift for someone else. Just remember, there may be gift tax implications if you do. Be sure to ask us about this possibility.

Once a CGA is funded, you will receive payments every year, or you can specify a period of every three months. Either way, the payment schedule is up to you and continues at the fixed annual amount for life. Also, the payment rate is based upon the funding amount and never changes.

All CGAs begin with one thing: an illustration that is simple, free and easy to understand. Call, email or ask us for one today. With this illustration, we can show you what your full benefits will entail including your payment rate, income tax deduction and capital gains tax benefits. After that, it's up to you. Funding a gift annuity takes only a few moments yet produces a lifetime of value.

After comparing your CD and money market rates to our CGA payout rates, you will be pleasantly surprised.

We may even be able to help you save taxes on the sale of stock, real estate or other property.

THREE SIMPLE STEPS TO A GIFT ANNUITY:

1. Ask for a no-obligation illustration
2. Agree to a funding amount and sign contract
3. Receive payments for life

Sharing the stories

By KYLIE AKINS

There's just something about the Bison's nonnegotiable deadlines that attracts cataclysmal mishaps. In the two and a half years I have worked with the campus newspaper, I have seen some absolutely unpredictable things happen within the 24 hours before we print. Computers crash, news breaks two hours before deadline, and people disappear off the face of the planet. During our 10-day news cycle, anything and everything can go wrong.

After many nights of drinking unhealthy amounts of caffeine, losing my temper and crying my eyes out, you might wonder why I accepted a position on the Bison staff for my fourth and final semester before graduation in May. It's simply this: Beyond the strict deadlines and stressful assignments is the reward of working closely with passionate people.

Every story begins with an idea written in dry erase marker on the budget meeting board, and that idea is connected with people who have something to contribute to the story.

Within the first few articles I wrote for the Bison, I learned what separated the apathetic sources from the inspirational ones; the sources that breathed life into a story were those that had their hearts in their work.

While I was a class writer for the Bison my sophomore year, I grew to appreciate stories with a cause. I covered fundraisers often, admiring the selfless passion that student leaders spoke with about African communities, Honduran children, or international missionaries for whom they sought to raise money and awareness. Musicians fascinated me for the strong ideas they possessed and the medium through which they could both spread ideas and donate a skill to a cause. Alumni who attended Harding during its founding years eagerly told me stories of their youth and why they chose to remain involved in the lives of people my age. My peers willingly shared with me the core convictions that moved them to action. For me, journalism is less about the news and more about the chance to step into the shoes of dedicated people like these and share with others the beliefs and hopes that inspired the headlines in this week's paper.

After hours of listening to people who allowed me and my voice recorder into their offices, homes and lives, I feel grateful to each person for sharing a piece of his or her life with me. To be given the opportunity to tell the stories of people whose lives are made up of bigger-than-life achievements and acts of selflessness has been a blessing from God. I watch people living out their faith in a diverse range of activities and ages, and they continually shape my perspective of life for the better.

Whether I'm given the opportunity to speak with a McArthur Genius Grant winner, a Searcy resident committed to fighting illiteracy, the 2008 American Idol winner or a student selling bracelets for an orphanage in Africa, I get pre-interview jitters every time because I know these people will give me some piece of themselves that is treasured and important. I fall in love with the stories, and then I give them away every Friday delivery. After the stress of deadlines fades, the blessing I receive from interacting with genuinely passionate people is what endures. H
