SUMMER 1994

FROM THE PRESIDENT

McInteer Center to be dedicated at Fall Fest '94

Some major events are planned at Harding for the 1994-95 school year, but none is more special than a week of activities in October we are calling "Fall Fest '94."

This year we have combined our Bible Lectureship and Homecoming Weekend activities into a single week, Oct. 24-29. Our hope is that by combining the two events, more people may be able to attend the dedication of the Jim Bill McInteer Bible and World Missions Center, which will also be held that week. This new facility, just like the Bible Lectureship, epitomizes the reason for Harding's existence — educating for eternity. It was only fitting that the building be dedicated during this special week.

Heading Fall Fest week is the 71st annual Bible Lectureship, which begins Monday evening, Oct. 24. Its theme, "To God Be the Glory: Ephesians' Call to Unity," promises an in-depth study of the book of Ephesians — an extremely timely study for the Lord's church today, as the book focuses on the nature of the New Testament church. More than 80 speakers will conduct classes or make presentations during the week, focusing on Ephesians and its vital truths.

Homecoming at Harding is always a great time for old friends to reacquaint themselves, enjoy a spirited football game, and attend the annual musical production. This year will be no exception, as a full slate of reunions, banquets and other activities are planned, including an excellent presentation of "West Side Story."

I believe that as many alumni as possible should be able to participate in Saturday's dedication ceremonies for the McInteer Center, as they played such a vital role in raising the funds to build the $6 million facility. I hope alumni will show up in record attendance for Fall Fest, and together we can all share in this great accomplishment and the impact this building will have on Harding's ministry program.

The structure now stands empty and nearly completed. In only one month it will be bustling with activity as the bulk of the student body begins entering its doors every day. It's an exciting prospect to think of the learning and life-changing experiences Harding students will encounter for decades to come in this building named for such a fine man who has dedicated his life to the service of others and of Christ.

The dedication of the McInteer Center, followed by a barbecue feast, is Saturday, Oct. 29 on the new plaza between the Center and Benson Auditorium. We hope to fill the plaza and the surrounding areas with alumni, friends, faculty, students and parents as we honor this alumnus and board member who has given so much of himself to Harding.

Harding has more than 30,000 alumni, but we're all part of the same family. Come join us for this big family reunion in October! III

Finley, Morgan and Plummer take teaching honors

THREE PROFESSORS received the Distinguished Teacher Award in special chapel ceremonies April 28. Selected were Dr. Tony Finley, Dr. Jan Morgan and Dr. Mike Plummer, who were each presented a framed certificate and a $1,000 check.

Finley is an associate professor of education who joined the faculty in 1988. He previously taught math and science at public schools in Missouri and Arkansas for 20 years, and at Harding Academy for seven years.

Finley received his master's degree from Southeast Missouri State University in 1972, and his doctorate in education from the University of Arkansas at Fayetteville in 1984. He is a member of the Arkansas Association of Colleges for Teacher Education and of the Arkansas Association of Educational Administrators. He now serves as coordinator of Arkansas' K-4 Crusade, a multimillion-dollar program that emphasizes the teaching of math, science and reading at the kindergarten through fourth-grade levels.

Morgan is an assistant professor of education who also joined the faculty in 1988. She has taught special education at the elementary and high school levels in Hope, Carlisle and Searcy, Ark., and taught at Harding Academy from 1984-88.

Morgan received her master's degree from Ouachita Baptist University in 1982 and her doctorate from Memphis State University in 1993. She is a member of the International Reading Council and begins serving in the fall as chair of elementary and special education in the University's School of Education.

Plummer, a professor of biology, is a 1967 alumnus who received his master's degree at Utah State University and his doctorate at the University of Kansas. He taught at Harding in 1971-72 and returned to the faculty four years later after completing his doctorate. He served as chairman of the biology department from 1985 to 1991.

He is a recognized herpetologist for his research on turtles and snakes, particularly the green snake. Plummer recently conducted research in Australia and also during a six-month sabbatical in 1989 at the Savannah River Ecology Laboratory at the University of Georgia in Augusta. His research has been published in several science journals and books.

Recipients of the Distinguished Teacher Award are determined by in-class teacher evaluations by students, as well as evaluations from their faculty colleagues. Scholarly activity, professional service and community involvement are also taken into consideration. Faculty members may receive the Distinguished Teacher Award only three times, at which point they receive a promotion in rank to distinguished professor in their particular field.

Four staff members honored for service

WHAT DO A DORMITORY supervisor, a bookstore clerk, an electrician and a computer software developer all have in common? Checks for $1,000 each!

They are the recipients of this year's Distinguished Service Awards, presented annually to four staff members who best represent service and skill in their positions on campus. Having been nominated in letters from members of the Harding community, the award recipients were chosen by President David Burks and the University's vice presidents. Each was then recognized for the honor with a $1,000 gift at the annual faculty and staff recognition dinner April 15.

Honored were Mike Chalenburg, Doris Dalton, Catherine Mars and Alfred

Prince. Chalenburg, director of software development and support for the University's Information Center, has worked at Harding since 1980. Dalton joined the staff in 1975 and has served as supervisor for Cathcart, Sears and, presently, Stephens dormitories.

Mars, a bookstore clerk at the Graduate School in Memphis, started working for Harding in 1974. In addition to her Distinguished Service Award, she also received her 20-year recognition pin at the April dinner. Prince, an electrician and plumber, joined the staff of the physical plant in 1964. He has also served as supervisor of mechanical services. Prince received his 30-year pin at the dinner.

$2 million challenge grant issued by Mabee Foundation

THE MABEE FOUNDATION of Tulsa, Okla., has issued Harding yet another big fundraising challenge.

After meeting in April, the board of directors of the foundation announced a $2 million challenge grant to Harding. The grant is the largest single gift ever received by the University from the foundation.

The Mabee grant will be used toward a $10 million phase of Harding's "The Dream Continues" Campaign. The Campaign is a five-year project with a goal of $52 million to be used for various campus improvements and the University's endowment and annual funds.

To meet the conditions of the grant, Harding must secure $4 million in gifts and pledges by April 1, 1995. Approximately $1 million has already been raised toward that challenge goal.

"The grant will provide the impetus to complete this initial phase of 'The Dream Continues' Campaign," said President David B. Burks. "The Mabee Foundation has again stepped to the forefront to help Harding marshal the resources necessary for its campus development program. We have met the previous Mabee challenges, and I'm confident Harding alumni and friends will again meet this even bigger challenge."

With a previous challenge grant of $2 million received from the Harvey and Bernice Jones Foundation, as well as more than $3 million in gifts from other individuals and businesses, more than $5 million already has been raised to date toward the $10 million phase of the Campaign.

Campus improvements designated for this phase include the construction of the Jim Bill

McInteer Bible and World Missions Center and a pedestrian plaza in front of it, the renovation of the Ezell Bible Building, the first phase of installation of a campus fiber optic network, and additional parking for the central portion of the campus.

The $6 million Bible and World Missions Center is expected to be completed next month for the start of the fall semester. The building contains 17 classrooms and 47 faculty and staff offices, and is now the University's largest classroom building.

The plaza and new parking areas are also expected to be completed next month. Renovation of the Ezell Building for Educational interests lead to $600,000 gift

HARDING RECEIVED A $600,000 gift in May from a trust established by Charles C. and Nadine Baum of Fayetteville, Ark.

The Baums were known in Arkansas as philanthropists to hospitals, colleges and the arts. In line with their generosity, they created a charitable remainder unitrust to benefit various organizations, including Harding, at their deaths.

Baum, 82, died in June 1992, and Nadine, 76, died in March 1994.

The couple had a strong interest in education in Arkansas, and the trust provided financial support to a number of Arkansas colleges. During their lifetimes, Charlie and Nadine Baum contributed generously occupancy by the department of behavioral sciences will be completed in 1995. Installation of the fiber optic network will begin during the fall semester this year.

Since 1951 the Mabee Foundation has given grants totaling more than $5 million to Harding in support of various capital projects. Included in these projects were construction of the Mabee American Heritage Center in 1965, an addition to the former Beaumont Memorial to academic scholarship programs for average students with financial need and promise of achievement.

The couple endowed scholarships at the University of Arkansas in Fayetteville and Little Rock, and at Arkansas State University.

Baum was a retired Wal-Mart and Ben Franklin Stores executive. He was one of the original investors and one of the first store managers hired by Sam Walton when Wal-Mart Stores Inc. was formed.

Walton called Baum "the most efficient store layer-outer I've ever known," and he once described Baum as "the most competitive person I've known; He would compete with a buzzsaw."

"The Mabee Foundation has again stepped to the forefront to help Harding marshal the resources necessary for its campus development program."

"Fall Fest" week combines lectureship, homecoming

THE BEST OF HARDING'S fall events will be combined into one big week of fellowship, learning, entertainment and fun for the family Oct. 24-29.

The six-day event, which has been dubbed "Fall Fest," will feature the 71st annual Bible Lectureship, Homecoming festivities and several special events, including the dedication of the new Jim Bill McInteer Bible and World Missions Center.

During the Lectureship portion of Fall Fest, 60 speakers will present more than 100 classes and lectures punctuating this year's theme, "To God Be the Glory — Ephesians' Call to Unity." Scheduled are keynote lecturers Paul Faulkner, Neale Pryor, Richard Rogers and Jim Bill McInteer, and a host of other talented men and women, including Jimmy Allen, G.P. Holt, Jimmy Jividen, Jack Lewis, Martha McKee, Prentice Meador, Ed Myers, Jeanene Reese, Joan Ritchie Toepel, Earl West, Dan Williams and Flavil Yeakley.

Several lectures prepared and presented entirely by Harding students are planned, as are performances by the Harding University Chorus, Concert Choir and Pied Pipers children's troupe. Inspirational ladies' classes will be offered three times daily, and special Friday-only seminars will focus on family, youth ministry, education, expository preaching, counseling, and church leadership and conflict resolution.

Homecoming events gear up Thursday evening with the Golden Circle Dinner, honoring alumni who graduated from Harding 50 or more years ago. The next evening the annual Black and Gold Banquet will feature entertainment and fellowship for all Harding alumni and friends. During the banquet the 1994 Distinguished Alumnus and five Outstanding Alumni will receive recognition awards. Capping off festivities will be the fanfare surrounding Saturday's 2 p.m. football game against Ouachita Baptist University, and reunions for members of various social clubs, campus organizations and departments.

Fans of Harding's annual Homecoming musicals will want to schedule in their plans this year's student production, the ever-popular "West Side Story," on Friday or Saturday evening. The five principal roles have been cast, and the remaining cast members will be selected in the fall.

Landing the role of Tony is Shane Jackson, a sophomore management major from Atlanta. Playing Maria is Jessica Pell, a senior music education major from Wadsworth, Ohio, who starred as Fanny Brice in last year's "Funny Girl." Christine Creasy, a senior art education major from Jackson, Tenn., will play Anita. The roles of Riff and Bernardo will be played, respectively, by Jamie Ireland, a senior preveterinary medicine major from Little Rock, Ark., and Steve Curo, a junior Bible major from San Diego.

Fall Fest will also incorporate some special events into the week's program, the most significant of which is the dedication of the new Jim Bill McInteer Bible and World Missions Center. After more than two years of planning and construction, the McInteer Center is scheduled to open in time for the beginning of fall classes in August. A special dedication ceremony is planned for Saturday morning during Fall Fest, to be followed by a barbecue luncheon along the new pedestrian mall in front of the McInteer Center.

Also planned for Thursday of Fall Fest is a country music concert featuring "Star Search" sweepstakes winner David Slater, a 1990 Harding graduate.

For more information about Homecoming activities, contact Doris Coward, assistant director of alumni relations, at Harding University, Box 768, Searcy, AR 72149-0001; or call (501) 279-4276. For information about Lectureship and all other Fall Fest activities, contact Dr. Allan Isom, director of special programs, at Box 2280; or call 279-4289.

University considers construction of retirement home

PRESIDENT DAVID B. BURKS announces that a feasibility study is now being conducted for the construction of an independent-living retirement center on the Harding campus.

Dr. Jimmy Carr, assistant to the president, is coordinating the study, which will utilize a survey developed by a consulting firm and submitted this month to members of 47 churches within a 50-mile radius of Searcy. The survey will determine whether there is sufficient interest in the project to pursue it further.

Carr believes in the need for such a facility, and its potential to serve Harding's alumni, faculty retirees and friends from around the nation.

"Because of the 'graying of America,' more and more people are looking for alternatives to staying in their own homes and the physical responsibilities it brings," Carr said. "A Harding-affiliated center would offer retirees convenient access to University classes and recreational facilities, the library, lectures and other events, as well as local churches, excellent medical facilities and recreational areas. And University students interested in careers in nursing, gerontology and recreation among older people could benefit academically and personally from interaction with them."

Tentative plans call for 110 to 125 one- and two-bedroom units in a multi-level building. One monthly rental fee would cover a resident's apartment and amenities such as food service, laundry and maid service, planned activities, and a shuttle operation for shopping, medical appointments and University events.

Carr touted the facility's Searcy location as one of its greatest potential benefits. The city, as a medical and trade center for the region, offers good shopping, two hospitals and more than 70 physicians. And Searcy's close proximity to Little Rock and Memphis, as well as popular outdoor recreational areas, could draw interest from seniors desiring the advantages afforded by both environments.

According to a report from The Covenant Group Inc., the vast majority of senior citizens today do not require assistance in their daily activities; only 5 percent of all seniors live in nursing or assisted-care homes. Seniors are living longer, are more prosperous, and are more independent.

Invade your child's world at Parents' Weekend

PARENTS, EVER WONDER just what your kids do at Harding? You'll get your chance to find out during the annual Parents' Weekend Sept. 9-10.

Join with hundreds of other parents and their children for two days of informational and enjoyable activities. You can visit classes and chapel with your son or daughter, check out their dorm rooms, take a campus and Searcy tour, hear about our financial aid and career planning programs, meet faculty members, have a family photo taken in a famous Harding swing, hear the Good News Singers, and attend a pep rally and an evening lily pool devotional.

Saturday evening is Parents Night, as the Harding Bisons open their 1994 home football season by taking on Southeast Oklahoma State University. Before the game, Parents' Weekend families are invited to meet at the home of President and Mrs. David Burks in Harding Park for a barbecue dinner.

In response, educational institution-related retirement housing is becoming more common in the United States. Facilities are now in operation nationwide at schools such as the University of Virginia, Iowa State, Minnesota and Dartmouth. Among brotherhood institutions, Oklahoma Christian University has enjoyed great success with its own facility.

Those interested in more information about Harding's proposed retirement center may contact Dr. Jimmy Carr at Harding University, Box 1224, Searcy, AR 72149-0001; or call (501) 279-4276.

Two librarians receive hands-on experience

Ann Dixon and Mary Binkley (library) attended an emergency preparedness workshop sponsored by the Arkansas State Library Association April 5-6 in Little Rock. The workshop included hands-on experience in disaster recovery, including drying methods for water-damaged books, computer care and salvaging priorities.

1994 Petit Jean dedicated to Monte Cox

THUNDEROUS APPLAUSE filled Benson Auditorium as a surprised Monte Cox made his way to the chapel podium April 29. He had just learned that the 1994 Petit Jean yearbook had been dedicated to him, and was accepting his copy of it.

The annual yearbook dedication ceremony was coordinated by Editor-in-Chief Scott Baine, a senior graphic design major from Tyronza, Ark. More than 3,100 copies of the 1994 Petit Jean, "Building on a Firm Foundation," had been delivered earlier in the week.

Cox, director of Harding's Mission Prepare program and an assistant professor of Bible, was selected for the dedication honor through voting by the senior student body. The 1993-94 school year had been Cox's first at Harding as a permanent faculty member, having returned to the States after nearly 10 years of mission work in Kenya, East Africa. A 1981 Harding

Alumna awarded substantial fellowship

LORI WEST, A 1992 ALUMNA, has been awarded a prestigious three-year, $36,000 fellowship by the Pew Younger Scholars Program of Philadelphia.

West graduated from Harding with high honors, majoring in English and history. She was a member of the University's Honors Program and Alpha Chi national honor society, and was listed in Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities. She is now a graduate student at the University of Memphis (formerly Memphis State University), where she is obtaining a master's degree in English. Upon the completion of her master's, she plans to use the fellowship in pursuing a doctorate in the same field.

Mentor in Missions. Respected by his students, Assistant Professor of Bible Monte Cox was recognized in the 1994 Petit Jean as "an example of endless dedication."

graduate, he had also served during the 1988-89 and 1992-93 school years as Harding's visiting professor of missions.

"I'm very honored but a little embarrassed about this," Cox said. "I thought someone made sure this only went to people who deserve it! People like Don England are supposed to get this every year — people who work very hard and have been here a long time. Bible teachers often have a higher profile among the students because we teach so many of them — and because of the subject matter, we often get to know them on a more personal level than others may have the opportunity to do. That's why the students know me."

Also honored was Kappa Sigma Kappa men's social club, recipient of this year's Petit Jean Service Award. The award is given annually to the social club whose service projects have best reflected Harding's ideals of Christian humility and servanthood. During the school year, the members of Kappa Sigma Kappa helped a local elderly couple care for their cattle ranch, and they raised more than $7,000 for the medical bills of Eric Jenkins, a club member who was suffering from a recurrence of cancer.

The 320-page yearbook, volume 70, was produced by an editorial staff of 10, along with 28 copy writers and 16 contributing photographers. The book's head photographer was Jason Burt, and section editors were Jenny Tyree, student life; Tracy Evans, classes; LeAnn Pierce, academics; Kerri Hartman, organizations; Laura Rice, social clubs; Jamie Martin, sports; and Melissa Forrest, copy editor.

Summer adventure tour of Kenya planned for 1995

IF YOU'RE 50 OR OLDER and thrill to the excitement of great adventure — then the call of the wild beckons you.

Harding is sponsoring Senior Safari, a fascinating two-week tour of Kenya, Africa, May 25-June 8, 1995. The tour is open to anyone interested, but the number of participants is limited.

A land of diversity, Kenya offers visitors high mountain snows, the dusty heat of deserts, dense forests and lakes lined with tropical vegetation, and vast grassy plains. From breathtaking views of Mount Kilimanjaro to the rhythm of photographic safaris in open Range Rovers, Senior Safari participants will experience Kenya at its best.

The tour package cost of $4,795 is all-inclusive, covering round-trip air travel from the United States to Nairobi via Rome; overnight stays at four of Kenya's most colorful and unusual hotels; meals and refreshments; and all performance, admission, gratuity and cover charges incurred by the group.

Six attentive, experienced tour directors will accompany the Senior Safari group to ensure an enjoyable and educational trip: Dr. Warren Casey, professor of music, and his wife, Suzanne; Monte Cox, assistant professor of Bible, and his wife, Beth; and Dr. Jeff Hopper, professor of music, and his wife, Judy.

With them participants will enjoy game drives, wildlife shows, native entertainment, visits to a giraffe orphanage and the National Museum of Kenya, shopping at the world-famous Nairobi city market, scenic Mount Kenya and the Great Rift Valley, the sight of half a million flamingos on Lake Nakuru, hot sulphur springs at Lake Bogoria National Park, dinner and an overnight stay at a forested wildlife reserve, and many other experiences.

This tour is designed exclusively for the mature, fully ambulatory traveler age 50 or older. A deposit of $1,000 secures a place on the tour. For a

Estate seminar, Branson tour slated

THE OFFICE OF UNIVERSITY Advancement is sponsoring a combination seminar and recreational tour Sept. 12-14 for alumni and friends of the University age 55 and older.

The program features a four-hour estate planning seminar and a two-day tour of Branson, Mo. Hosts for the event are Bill Harris, former chairman of the President's Council, and his wife, Lil; and Phil and Ann Dixon.

Dixon, Harding's director of planned gifts, will conduct the estate planning seminar. Topics to be covered include wills, revocable living trusts and charitable remainder trusts.

The seminar will begin in the University's American Heritage Center at 8 a.m. on Sept. 12. Afterward, the tour group will travel from Searcy via bus to Branson, where they will have dinner and attend a musical performance at the Lawrence Welk Theater.

Highlights of the next day will include three musical programs: Anita Bryant's inspirational morning show at the Theater of the Ozarks, the Will Rogers Follies starring Pat Boone, and the Osmond Family Theater. Before returning to Searcy Sept. 14, the group will tour either the seven-story IMAX 3-Dimensional Theater or the Ripley's "Believe It or Not!" Museum, and Mutton Hollow Craft Village.

The cost of the seminar and tour is $350 per person. The fee covers all meals, transportation and double-occupancy lodging, including Sept. 11 accommodations at the on-campus Heritage Inn and two

College Bowl team defeats Tulane, Rice

HARDING'S INTERCOLLEGIATE College Bowl team compiled a 5-3 record in regional competition at Sam Houston State University in Huntsville, Texas, in February.

The competition involved students from Arkansas, Louisiana and Texas schools. Of 17 teams participating, Harding finished in a third-place tie with the University of Arkansas.

Harding defeated Tulane University, Rice University, the University of Houston, the University of Texas-Austin and the University of Texas-Permian Basin. Losses came at the hands of the University of Texas-Dallas, the University of Arkansas and Midwestern State University.

Members of Harding's team were Jay Bawcom of Searcy; David Billam of Bartlesville, Okla.; John Crockett of Germantown, Tenn.; Jason Jewell of Searcy; and Jim Massie of Memphis, Tenn. Dr. Fred Jewell, professor of history, and Dr. Dennis Organ, professor of English and department chair, serve as sponsors for the team.

Librarians meet, focus on special collections

Suzanne Spurrier, Shirley Williams and Winnie Bell (library) attended the state meeting of the Arkansas Library Association April 18-19 in Arkadelphia. The meeting's theme, "Treasures in Arkansas Academic Libraries," focused on special collections at various state institutions and how to properly manage archives.

James delegate at convention

Dr. Mike James and Kyle Reeves (communication) attended the national convention of the Broadcast Education Association March 17-22 in Las Vegas. James represented Arkansas educators as a voting delegate. After the conference they also attended the National Association of Broadcasters' annual convention exhibit.

Robinson receives AWH Service Award

Shirley Robinson of Searcy was presented the Volunteer Service Award of the Associated Women for Harding (AWH) at the group's annual spring meeting on campus April 22. Robinson has been chairman of the Searcy chapter's "Cheers" project for six years. The project gives parents the opportunity to send their students care packages during the fall final exams week.

Students' artwork on exhibit in state senator's office

WORKS BY FIVE STUDENTS from the art department have been selected for display in Arkansas Sen. David Pryor's office complex in Little Rock.

The senator's wife, Barbara, visited the University in early April during Youth Forum and Spring Sing Weekend. She selected 17 pieces of artwork to be featured for six months to a year in the senator's office. The exhibit is titled "Celebrating Artists of the Future."

"It's our hope that through this exhibit we can open a new window through which our artists can receive the recognition they deserve," Mrs. Pryor said.

Don Robinson, chairman of the department, said that Pryor was impressed by the uplifting nature of the work being produced by Harding's art students.

Students whose works were selected include sophomore Scott Baine of Tyronza, Ark.; senior Christine Creasy of Jackson, Tenn.; junior Melissa Ellis of Pensacola, Fla.; senior Allan White of Ft. Collins, Colo.; and senior Tawnya Widel of Savannah, Mo. Several works from the University's permanent collection also were selected.

Three regional awards won for publications, television ad

MEDIA PROJECTS PRODUCED by the University's Office of Public Relations garnered three awards in March at the 1994 Southwest District IV Conference of the Council for the Advancement and Support of Education (CASE) in Houston.

The case statement for the new "Dream Continues" Campaign received the Excellence Award in the Publications — Fundraising Literature category. In the Print Advertising Projects category, the Achievement Award was given for Harding's "Check Out Our References" student recruitment ad.

And the Special Award in the Audiovisual Communications — Television Spots category was presented for the television ad promoting former Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney's visit to Harding in November 1993 as part of the American Studies Distinguished Lecture Series.

Woods selected 1994 Grad School Alumnus of Year

DR. CLYDE M. WOODS, professor of Bible at Freed-Hardeman University, was named the 1994 Alumnus of the Year by the Graduate School of Religion in Memphis, Tenn., during its annual Preachers' Forum April 12.

Woods is also director of Old Testament studies at FHU, where he has worked since 1965. He received his bachelor's degree in Bible from Abilene Christian University in 1958 and then attended the Graduate School from 1958 to 1961, obtaining three different degrees. He received his doctorate from Hebrew Union College in Cincinnati in 1965.

In addition to teaching, Woods has preached part time for congregations in Mississippi, Ohio, Tennessee and Texas.

"Clyde is a great friend to his students, a significant author and a faithful preacher of the Gospel. He possesses many of the characteristics we seek to instill in all of our students," said Dr. Bill Flatt, dean of the Graduate School.

Woods has served as president of the Graduate School's Alumni Board. A native of Memphis, he and his wife, Ann, have three children, Scott, Mark and Tricia.

CASE's top honor is the Grand Award, followed by the Excellence, Achievement and Special awards. Awards are not necessarily presented for each place in each category.

One hundred forty colleges and universities in Arkansas, Texas, Oklahoma, New Mexico and Louisiana are members of CASE's Southwest District. More than 900 entries were submitted in this year's awards contest.

DAN QUAYLE flies high at HARDING

Former Vice President Dan Quayle's April 14 appearance as the last speaker in the American Studies Institute's 1993-94 Distinguished Lecture Series drew overwhelmingly positive response from the more than 3,500 in attendance. If he had been concerned about speaking in Arkansas, Quayle was put to ease immediately when he received a standing ovation before speaking his first word.

Quayle addressed everything from the current health-care reform debate and our nation's troubled educational system to family values and the now-infamous "Murphy Brown" incident. Below are some excerpts:

FAMILY VALUES

This issue was something for which Quayle "took a lot of abuse" while vice president, but today he still believes he took the right and moral stand. "We're essentially talking about a breakdown in civilization, where we have dysfunctional families with no one assuming responsibility," he said. "We see crime, violence and drug addiction, and we ask, 'Why?' You can trace it time and time again right back to the family."

EDUCATION

"Our education system today, unfortunately, is a monopolistic system that breeds mediocrity," he said. "Excellence is not rewarded or recognized." To encourage a higher-quality system, Quayle expressed support of a plan allowing parents to choose their children's public schools.

HEALTH CARE

Quayle disagreed with the focus of the current health-care reform debate, believing that the crisis lies in the health insurance industry. He suggested regulatory laws requiring insurance companies to accept and manage risk by insuring everyone. "You can do all of this without a grandiose health-care plan," he said. "We already have the best quality of health care anywhere in the world, and I don't want to change that. I guarantee that if the government is running things, you won't have the security of timely access to the health-care system. When has the government done anything less expensively or simply?"

FOREIGN POLICY

Dismissing the Clinton administration's cutting of the national defense and security budget, Quayle said, "The stronger America is, the better it is for the American people. We can recover from mistakes in health care or in tax and education policy, but if you make serious misjudgments in foreign policy, sometimes it takes a generation or more for a nation to recover.

"Even though we've won this Cold War," Quayle continued, "the world is still a very dangerous place. If we're not willing to support our military operations and we become weak, then we'll become irrelevant." ■

LETTERS TO ANNABELLA

The drama of the American Civil War unfolds through a series of discovered letters written between a young Union lieutenant and his bride in the 1860s. Those letters — and their surprising content — have become the focus of a Harding history professor's captivating research project.

BY PHILLIP TUCKER

One hundred thirty-three years ago, America was torn apart by a bloody struggle for equality that would forever change the way we view ourselves and each other as human beings.

It was the Civil War. Brother pitted against brother. Father against son.

And at the dawning of this national tragedy, in Tennessee a young man and his wife had just brought their first child into the world. Unknowingly, through a series of engaging letters to each other during the ensuing years, their story would become the subject of a fascinating — and history-changing — research study by Harding's Dr. Paul Haynie, associate professor of history.

Haynie, a Civil War buff and teacher of a popular course on the subject, was intrigued to learn in 1991 that several letters written during the time of the Civil War were in the possession of Dr. Travis Thompson, professor of mathematics and computer science. In 1960, as teenagers, Thompson and his brother had gone to visit their grandparents, who were renting an old farmhouse in Athens, Tenn. Bored one day, they decided to explore the attic, where they found a trunk of long-forgotten artifacts, including a box of letters. Excited by their discovery, they examined the letters and then bundled them up and kept them. For 30 years Thompson had stored them away.

Haynie asked to borrow the letters and began studying them with great interest. The next spring he, along with six graduate students taking his Civil War course, embarked on a research project involving the letters. The seven of them read, studied, transcribed and discussed their context, using magnifying glasses and examining sentence contexts to interpret the loops and dips of the penmanship so common in that era.

More than 100 letters dating from 1836 to 1917 are in the collection, but the group primarily focused on the 40 written during the Civil War years, 1861-1865. As they worked, an interesting story unfolded.

Most of the letters were written by the same man, Jacob Ziegler, to his wife, Annabella, or by Annabella to Jacob. When the war started in April 1861, the young couple had been married less than a year, and their first child, a son, had been born only one month before. They lived in Athens, which lies half-way between Knoxville and Chattanooga in East Tennessee.

Citizens of Tennessee were divided over which side of the war they supported. Consequently, the state was the last to secede from the Union and the first to rejoin it. East Tennesseans had particularly strong Union loyalties, voting to support it and even threatening to secede from the rest of the state if necessary. Jacob, as he would write later, saw "nothing but destruction in dissolving our connection with the Federal Government," so he left his family in Athens, crossed the Cumberland Gap into Kentucky, and joined the Union Army just as the war began.

Jacob eventually became a lieutenant in the Union 4th Tennessee Calvary. Apparently an educated man, he argued his case for the Union cleverly in many of his letters. Included in the collection is a particularly creative letter written June 2, 1861, from Athens by Jacob to his father, Joram Ziegler, who strongly supported the Confederate forces. In it Jacob explained that he had been ill the previous week. He then used that illness to paint an expressive allegorical picture of the nation's woes:

"The symptoms [of my illness] were more like them now making their appearance on the body politic of the seceded states and them about to secede, and I think in a short time they will be bleeding in the belly. And as their constitutions have become so corrupted and in a manner ruined by prescriptions from quack doctors, I fear nothing will save them but a heavy dose of hard pills and black powders, and some blood-letting prescribed by Uncle Sam."

After making a rational argument for his Northern allegiance through a discussion of slavery and of trade between the states, Jacob ended his letter with an oath: "Vote for separation, and sustain and serve the Southern Confederacy. I for one will die first: But I will ... vote against it, if it is the last vote I ever give."

In that same letter Jacob told his father that he felt he must rename his newborn son, John Joram — his father's namesake — because of their divided loyalties. As recorded in a letter three years later, the Zieglers did, indeed, change their son's name from John Joram Ziegler to John Brownlow Ziegler, in honor of a Union leader who later became governor of Tennessee. (It is interesting to note that Jacob recanted his actions several years later by naming his fourth child after his father. Jacob and Annabella eventually would have six children.)

Such compelling sentiments for the Union were met with equally compelling sentiments for the Confederacy by members of Jacob's family in Virginia. For example, in a general letter to relatives and friends dated later the same month — June 25, 1861 — Jacob's uncle, Joshua Ziegler of Franklin County, Va., issued a spirited call to arms. Certainly, no doubt is left as to where Uncle Joshua's support lay:

"This is the saddest period of my life. The condition of our country is such that we are at a loss what to do or say in regard to our own affairs or the affairs of the nation. ... While I am grieved and perplexed at the state of things existing, my whole life and soul is with the Southern Confederacy. ... There is nothing in life that would induce me to live under the same government with the Northern hordes of cutthroats, thieves and hypocrites. If there is a set of people under the sun that are more detestable than any other, it is the Northern Tyrants."

He continued, stating that he had read in the newspapers that East Tennessee had voted against separation. Among all the relatives and friends he had in East Tennessee, he hoped "not one single one [would] give their votes for living under that corrupt, savage, aristocratic, degraded, rotten, infamous, roguish, hypocritical, inhumane, despotic, tyrannical, bigoted Federal Government in preference to trying to establish a free government of our own. ... Let every man, woman and child in the whole South have but one thought and but one cry, and that be, 'To arms, to arms!' ... Come to the rescue of your country. Don't wait 'til our ranks are thinned by sword and disease, but come while you will add to our present strength. ... Can you stay, trifling away the precious moments you should be in action? I say no!"

Similarly strong language appears in several of the let-

Jacob wrote this four-page letter to Annabella Aug. 14, 1864, from his camp at Decatur, Ala. The horizontal lines of handwriting are in black ink, and the overlapping vertical lines are written in red ink — a fad in letter writing of that era. Haynie has determined that the practice probably was not an effort to save paper, as the Union forces tended to have adequate, superior-quality paper supplies.

ters, but the war wasn't the only thing on Jacob's mind. He missed his wife and son and the comforts of home, and he let them know it. In a descriptively touching letter dated Dec. 17, 1863, just before Christmas, Jacob wrote to his wife while camped at Murfreesboro, Tenn.:

"Such hard times have come over the country since I left. But I can readily assure you of one thing: It is very poorly I make out without you. I did not think before I tried it that I could live the way we live in the Army. Such cooking as we have would have turned my stomach wrong-side up, especially to eat it out of such vessels as we do, and off such a table. ... The table has always a heavy coat of grease and dirt on it so that I cannot lay my bread down on it without getting it blackened. I never think of inquiring as to whether the coffee is clean or not, for a cup of clean, nice coffee would be a perfect vanity. ...

"If God in His mercy will continue to so bless you and I, there is a hope that we may again be happy together. ... The weather at this time is uncomfortably cold after a thunderstorm 24 hours ago. Today is cloudy, and the wind blows very cold. Fire seems to do less good in my tent tonight than it ever did. My feet and hands get cold while I write, and then to think I have to sleep by myself — what a contrast now, when I look back to the comforts of the bosom of my family. I seldom ever lie down at night without thinking of the way you used to fix the cover around my neck and shoulders in cold weather like this. ... My wife, I entreat you to spare no opportunity to write me."

While these letters and their stirring messages give readers a sense of the personal struggles that were endured, they have proved important for one other reason: They've changed history.

During the last three years, Dr. Haynie has had assistance with this project from several other students, who have been responsible for valuable library research, organization of materials and scrutinizing of the letters. Last spring one of them, Rick Fought, came across a real discovery — one that sheds light on a discrepancy in an accepted historical account.

The discrepancy concerns "McCook's Raid," a famous

These photographs of Jacob (left) and Annabella (opposite page), still in the possession of the Ziegler family, are examples of the early daguerreotype process in which images were made on a light-sensitive, silver-coated metallic plate. In a letter dated Dec. 9, 1863, Jacob stated to his wife that he had sent her his daguerreotype and anxiously awaited one from her. In another letter, dated June 25, 1864, Jacob said he had received her photo. These are believed to be the photos mentioned in the letters.

maneuver executed as part of Gen. William Sherman's attack on Atlanta. By July 1864 Sherman's forces had surrounded Atlanta, except for the southern approaches from Macon. Desiring that the last major supply links from the south be cut, the general ordered a two-pronged attack.

Brigadier Gen. Edward Moody McCook commanded the First Calvary Division, which was instructed to proceed west of Atlanta and south to Lovejoy's Station. There they were to cut the railroad. Major Gen. George Stoneman and his men were instructed to circle east around Atlanta and then south to meet McCook at Lovejoy's Station. Stoneman requested that he and McCook be allowed to continue south to Macon and Andersonville, where they could free Union prisoners.

The two generals embarked on their mission. But rather than meeting McCook at Lovejoy's Station as instructed, glory-seeking Stoneman went on ahead to Macon, shelling it and then being pursued in retreat by Confederate Major Gen. Joseph Wheeler and his troops. Stoneman's men eventually were forced to surrender to Wheeler, and Stoneman was imprisoned. Wheeler then sent half of his troops to deal with McCook who, having not heard from Stoneman, had begun a cautious withdrawal northwest toward Newnan and the Chattahoochee River. Near Newnan, on July 30, 1864, Wheeler's rebels completely surrounded McCook's men.

The events that took place after this point are subject to question. According to his own reports in the U.S. War Department's The War of the Rebellion: A Compilation of the Official Records of the Union and Confederate Armies, McCook — when finding himself surrounded — ordered his commanding officers and their men to scatter and cut through the enemy lines to freedom as best they could. About 500, or one quarter, of the men were lost, but Gen. McCook was praised as a hero by Gen. Sherman "for this saving of his command."

As a matter of fact, McCook reported, "I regard the raid as a brilliant success. ... I conclude my report by expressing gratitude to the kind Providence which enabled me, through the gallantry of my brave men and faithful officers, to extricate my command from the perils which surrounded it, and to bring them back, not only in safety, but crowned with success." And so the historical account of the brave Gen. McCook and his raid has stood as fact since 1864.

But Jacob Ziegler tells another story. His 4th Tennessee Calvary took part in McCook's Raid and, although Jacob had been sent for supplies that day and was not with the troops at Newnan, he recorded the surviving soldiers' firsthand account of their escape in two letters to Annabella one week later.

According to Jacob, not only was Gen. McCook ready to surrender upon being surrounded, but he had already prepared a white flag. It was second-in-command Col. Thomas Jefferson Harrison — not McCook — who refused to surrender and announced that he and his men were going to try to break through. The other commanding officers followed his lead, and McCook, who relinquished his command to Harrison, simply brought up the rear.

The break-through was successful, but Harrison was conveniently captured in the process. When McCook made it back to camp, he never even made mention of Harrison in his reports. Apparently, he simply claimed all the glory for himself.

Harrison's story was never told. By the time he was released from captivity in November the same year, he was in poor health and the nation had "Sherman's march" on its mind. After gaining some strength, he was reassigned to training recruits in Nashville, where he stayed until the end of the war. In 1871, while living in Ohio, he returned to Nashville on business and died there.

Since the discovery in Ziegler's letters, Haynie has found collaborative evidence — both from Union and Confederate sources — supporting Jacob's story. He plans to submit his findings for publishing in Civil War Times Illustrated or another national publication.

The excitement Haynie feels about this new twist on McCook's Raid is matched only by his excitement in actually meeting Jacob Ziegler's surviving family members during a week-long visit to Athens, Tenn., in 1992. There he and his wife, Kayla, met Ziegler's descendants, who are primarily great-granddaughters and great-granddaughters-in-law. Only a great-grandson, Bill Ziegler, carries on the family name. Nearly all of them still live in the Athens area.

Ziegler's family was thrilled to visit with Haynie because they knew nothing of the letters' existence. They showed him Jacob's uniform, sword and other memorabilia, and took him to see Jacob and Annabella's grave sites. They also toured the old Ziegler homestead — that same farmhouse where the letters were found 34 years ago. There he met the present occupants of the house, a couple who happened to be Civil War buffs themselves and were eager to hear the Ziegler story, too.

A final highlight for Haynie's week in Athens was his meeting the only surviving relative who actually knew and remembers Jacob Ziegler: his granddaughter, Miss Christian Ziegler, a retired schoolteacher in Chattanooga. She vividly recalled stories about her grandfather, although she was only 7 or 8 years old when he died in 1918.

"She was a delightful little lady," Haynie recalls. "She loved to go visit Grandpa Jacob and listen to his stories about the war. While visiting with her, she showed me several pictures she owned of Jacob and Annabella and very graciously had many of them copied for me."

Haynie plans to publish the edited letters of Jacob Ziegler, along with explanatory notes and helpful background information.

"The Civil War is the single event in our nation's history with the most abiding interest," Haynie said. "It really holds people's attention — and these letters provide a way to actually touch it.

Letter writing at that time was an art, a passion, something you looked forward to and would linger over. People don't write letters like that anymore; they make phone calls or send e-mail messages instead.

"I think it's sad that we won't have many letters like the Ziegler's to look back on in the future because these people really knew how to put their feelings down on paper — and that's where the thrill comes. There's some wonderful stuff in here!" III

WAR WAS DECLARED April 18 in Shiloh, Tenn., by 53 Harding students and a tall man named Haynie.

Actually, the students and their teacher, Dr. Paul Haynie, were “re-enacting” the 1862 Battle of Shiloh, a highlight of the traditional field trip that is part of Haynie’s Era of the Civil War course. Offered every other spring, the popular class involves students in a hands-on exploration of the battlefields at Shiloh and Vicksburg, Miss.

The first stop was Shiloh, the site of Gen. Ulysses S. Grant’s first big victory and the first modern battle with large casualties. There at the well-preserved military park, the students, who were divided into Union and Confederate armies, went into battle armed with water pistols, plastic swords and flags. Afterward, they solemnly viewed three mass graves, each containing at least 700 men, as well as the Shiloh national cemetery and Bloody Pond, so named as the spot to which thirsty soldiers crawled for water as they died.

The next day the group drove on to Vicksburg National Military Park, a larger park known for its many monuments erected by states to honor their dead. Here, along the hilly terrain, the students gained an appreciation of the months-long trench warfare waged there nearly 130 years ago. More than 30 students willing to experience the battle in a physical way charged up Thayer’s Approach, a steep, 300-foot hill that the Yankee forces fruitlessly besieged — although they ultimately won the battle.

Haynie offers the field trip in an effort to get his students excited about what they’re learning and to instill in them the importance of preserving and honoring national battlefields. “The trips to the battlefields give the students a tiny sense of what the scene looked like, of the bravery of the men who fought there, and of the futility of the battles.” ■

LITTLE'S

HEBREWS 10:24 SERVED AS THE adopted theme for the abundant activities during Rich Little's year as president of Harding's Student Association (SA): "Let us consider how to provoke one another unto love and good deeds."

The verse was a phrase that students, faculty and staff members repeatedly heard in his Aussie accent throughout the year. Little, a resident of Capalaba, Queensland, Australia, focused on the verse each time he and the SA planned and announced one of the more than 60 service projects they undertook during his presidency.

When elected by the student body last year, Little became the first international student ever to hold the office of Harding's SA president. He graduated in May with a bachelor's degree in Bible but will return in the fall to pursue graduate work in speech and communication.

Eleven months ago, at the beginning of the 1993-94 school year, Little stood before the University's faculty and staff at the annual pre-session conference and gave one of the first of his many speeches throughout the year. He outlined his planned goals and ideals for the year ahead, promising an overwhelming agenda.

At the close of the school year in May, Little was again before the faculty and staff at their annual recognition dinner. In perhaps his final address of the year, he recapped the year's activities and delivered a message of hope and encouragement to the more than 600 faculty and staff members and their spouses in attendance.

"The time has gone faster this year than in any other year I can remember," Little began, "but I honestly believe we were able to achieve a very productive year.

"I'm reminded of our flood relief project, the assistance we rendered in purchasing a mobile clinic for health-care workers in Ghana, our joint service project in Searcy with students from Ouachita Baptist University, our Christmas project in which we raised hundreds of dollars to purchase gifts for abused and neglected children in White County, the Bibles Harding students provided for native missionaries abroad who didn't have access to them, and sponsoring the education of illiterate children in Africa.

"I could mention more, but I don't need to because you were there. And my focus at this time is on you, the faculty and staff, instead of focusing solely on what the SA achieved.

"As I'm about to leave the only political office I'll ever hold in the United States, I want to share some of my heart with you. If I were to tell you that I believe we have the greatest Christian faculty in the world, you might ask me what my mode of comparison is. That's a valid response. My mode of comparison is the Word of God, and I can compare your lives and character to it and truly say that we have the best faculty in the world because of your reflection of the Word.

"This has only been a great year because the student leaders on campus recognized that our greatest examples of servanthood and commitment stood in front of us daily. We sat at your feet and watched your lives.

"If you think you're into changing lives, please realize that your influence goes beyond this life. You're into changing eternity. You've made this Australian boy madly in love with his God, madly in love with Harding and madly in love with you.

"I pray that you will remain steadfast in your desire to serve God and change lives, because you do it so well. Thank you for making this an amazing year."

With these words, Little closed out the school year, passionately admonishing the faculty and staff as he had the entire student body all year. As he spoke about this year's passing, he expressed pride in what he and the SA had accomplished — not so much in the quantity of work achieved, but in the attitude and spirit in which it was performed.

"I was impressed with the willingness of so many students who came together and wanted to serve those who really needed help," Little concluded.

Nathan Mellor, Little's successor for SA president, was elected by the student body April 27. "My advice to him is to keep a strong relationship with the Lord and to always encourage service to God and to one another," Little said. It's advice that sounds a bit like Hebrews 10:24 — a theme that might well be etched into the foundation of all future SA administrations. ■

Football brochure receives award

The sports information office has been honored in the NAIA Sports Information Directors of America (NAIA-SIDA) publications contest for the 1993-94 academic year with 10th-place honors in the football game program brochure contest. They received a Citation of Excellence at the 1994 NAIA-SIDA Convention in Chicago June 25.

University takes fifth straight All-Sports title

BISON ATHLETIC TEAMS scored 60 out of a possible 83 points during the 1993-94 school year to win their fifth consecutive AIC All-Sports Trophy. Harding finished ahead of Southern Arkansas University (43.5 points), Ouachita Baptist University (40.5), Arkansas Tech University (40), the University of Arkansas-Monticello (29.5), University of the Ozarks (23.5), Arkansas College (17), and John Brown University (13).

Harding's five individual championships won this year are second only to the 1989-90 school year, when Bison and Lady Bison teams won six titles. This year both men's and women's cross country teams took first place; the volleyball team tied for first, and the women's tennis team and men's track team won their championships for the second consecutive year. Second-place finishes were recorded by men's tennis and golf and women's track while the football, baseball and women's basketball teams came in third.

Only one team, men's basketball, finished below third as it managed a sixth place.

Harding also won the All-Sports title in 1974-75 and 1980-81, for a grand total of seven wins since the award was first presented in 1964. Only the University of Central Arkansas, with 14 wins, has received the coveted trophy more times. In 31 years of competition, Harding has finished first seven times, second 13 times, third six times, fourth four times, and seventh once.

Alexander, City named outstanding senior athletes

KYMM ALEXANDER, A basketball player from Flippin, Ark., and Kyle City, a football and track team member from Searcy, were selected to receive the M.E. Berryhill Outstanding Senior Athlete Awards for the 1993-94 school year.

Alexander, Harding's all-time leading scorer in women's basketball, has been a two-time All-AIC selection, a two-time NAIA

All-American honorable mention selection, and a NAIA All-American Scholar-Athlete. During her three years as a starter, the Lady Bisons compiled a 63-21 record, and this year they were runners-up in the District 17 play-offs.

City, the son of team doctor Jim City, has been a three-year starter and four-year letterman in football. He also lettered in track this year. His honors include being named a region VI Academic All-American and three-time NAIA All-American Scholar-Athlete.

The award was initiated by M.E. Berryhill, former long-time coach and athletic director, when Harding resumed intercollegiate athletic participation in 1958, and has continued since his death in his honor. The recipient is chosen not only for his or her athletic ability, but also for scholarship and all-around personal character.

Baseball team improves to third

THE BISON BASEBALL TEAM finished its 1994 season third in the Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference with a 14-10 record (29-22 overall).

Southern Arkansas University won the conference championship, with Arkansas Tech a game back. SAU won the district and is ranked 16th in the NAIA. Tech finished second in district play, and Harding finished third after defeating Tech in the first district game.

The Bison team improved as the season progressed. An aggressive hitting team all year, the players ended the season with a team batting average of .303 and had seven regulars over .300, led by Chip Busbee at .382. Wes McElroy at .352, Wade Wilson and Kevin Burton at .331, and Jerry Laird at .312 were tough outs for the Bisons.

All-AIC Daryl Johnson was the team's top defensive player and led the team in steals with 28 in 33 attempts.

As the defense improved, the pitching solidified. Burton (6-7), Busbee (6-2), Eric Dodson (6-1) and Nick Fouts (5-5) comprised the starting rotation.

Close second taken by young golfers

IN HIS SECOND YEAR AS golf coach, Scott Ragsdale's team remained in championship contention until the final day of play. Arkansas Tech won the six rounds of AIC play with 34.5 points to 32 for Harding and 30 for Southern Arkansas University. Seven teams participate in AIC golf.

The Bisons were tied with Tech going into the final two rounds of action. Harding played well, but Tech prevailed. Ragsdale's young team (three freshmen and a sophomore) gained valuable experience. "We will be better next year," said Ragsdale.

Freshman Brad Williams was AIC medalist with a 73.6 average. Rounding out the top five were freshmen Brad Wood and Bruce Johnston, sophomore James Clark and senior Kevin Kelly.

Ladies tennis team dominates; men competitive second

BISON TENNIS TEAMS continued their superior play in AIC competition this year. The Lady Bisons completely dominated conference teams en route to a 10-0 conference sweep and a 19-4 overall record.

Ranked 15th in the latest NAIA poll, the Lady Bisons were led by sophomores Alicia Rojas and Jessica Ruiz. Ruiz, the number-26-ranked singles player, had trouble during the season with Dita Kopečna of Ouachita Baptist University, but easily defeated her in the District 17 match. The Lady Bisons did not lose a set, winning all six singles and all three doubles matches.

The AIC runner-up men's team bowed to a strong Ouachita team but only after three magnificent efforts. Ouachita won the first time 6-3 on its home court and appeared to be in control of the AIC race. When they came to Searcy, the Bisons extended them to the limit before going down by a 5-4 margin. In the district tournament, the Tigers won 23-22, but all nine finals matched OBU and Harding. Three of the matches went three sets, and Ouachita won all three for another 5-4 victory, prompting Harding Coach David Elliott to call it "the greatest tennis match I have ever seen!" The Bisons are ranked 14th in the NAIA; Ouachita is ranked 11th.

Track teams take title, runner-up slot

THE 1994 ARKANSAS Intercollegiate Conference outdoor track meet looked like a repeat of the 1993 meet, with the men winning and the Lady Bisons taking second place.

Total domination by the Bisons was evident as Harding won eight of 17 events. Harding scored 130.5 to 58 for Ouachita Baptist University, 50 for Southern Arkansas University, and 23.5 for the University of Arkansas at Monticello.

Damon Work, a senior distance runner, won the 10,000, the 5,000 and the 1,500, and placed second in the 800-meter, a feat unequalled in AIC history. Two other runners had won the three long races but were never able to add scoring in the 800 to their credit.

Freshman Bryan Rampey (47-6) won the shot put and discus (147-4). Sophomore Clay Beason was first in the high hurdles (15.2), but lost first place in the high jump (6-6) on misses.

Senior All-American Tquan Moore won the triple jump (48-3), and freshman Jermaine Cuffie was first in the 200 meters (21.54).

All-American Penny Mayberry won the high jump, just missing a record 5-7.5 as the women finished second to Southern Arkansas. The Lady Bison 4 x 400-meter relay produced the only other gold medal for Harding in the meet. Mayberry, Moore and Cuffie went on to compete in the national meet in Los Angeles in May.

His heart-healthy habits inspire others

Dr. James Noonan is a physician who practices what he preaches — and he was honored for it in February by a division of the American Heart Association.

The Dyersburg, Tenn., internist and Harding alumnus received a plaque in recognition for his personal efforts to embrace a heart-healthy lifestyle and to encourage others to do the same. The award, the first of its kind, was presented to him Feb. 26 at the Heart Gala, sponsored by the AHA's Dyer County,

Dr. James Noonan

Tenn., Division.

Ellen Moore, coordinator of the formal fund-raising gala, said Noonan was selected for the honor "because he advances the mission of the heart association, demonstrates a strong civic involvement, receives high recognition from his peers, and personally exemplifies a heart-healthy lifestyle."

Noonan received his bachelor's and master's degrees from Harding in 1952 and 1953, respectively. After completing his medical degree requirements from the University of Tennessee and his residency in New Orleans, Noonan returned to his home in Dyersburg in 1968 as the city's first physician of internal medicine. Since then he has become known in the community for his health-promoting activities. In 1969 he helped organize a successful drive to fund a cardiac care unit at the local hospital. He has served as president of the West Tennessee Heart Association and has written several patient hand-outs about heart issues in an effort to better educate the public. He also helped start a boys' track team and both a boys' and a girls' swim team several years ago.

Personally, Noonan remains physically active, regularly running, cycling, race walking and swimming. As a matter of fact, the 62-year-old has been a competitive swimmer for 16 years, entering U.S. Masters tournaments in four Tennessee cities. In 1991, '92 and '93, he competed in the Tennessee Senior Olympics, capturing 11 gold medals, four silvers and one bronze. Through his great example, Noonan has encouraged many of his patients and friends to get moving again, and back on the road to healthier lives. III

Lomax served as the assistant chief of nursing services for the field hospital, and for his outstanding work he was awarded the Armed Forces Expeditionary Medal, the United Nations Medal, the Meritorious Service Medal and the 3rd Army Combat Patch. He now is clinical nurse manager of medical, surgical, pediatric and psychiatric patients at Ireland Army Community Hospital, Fort Knox, Ky. Ikuo Yamaguchi (BA'55) died Dec. 28, 1993, in Chicago. Ceremonies also were held in Japan.

Marian Phillips Barton (BA'49) died Jan. 25 at Fitzsimmons Army Medical Center, Aurora, Colo. Her mother had been an art professor, and her father was superintendent of construction at Harding. Her sister, Ernestine ('52), also attended Harding.

Clint Surber (BA'27) died Jan. 26.

Matthew F. Bugg (BA'89, MSE'90) died Feb. 21. His wife is the former Rebecca White (BS'89). (346 Bugg Lane, Bradyville, TN 37026)

Louis E. Green Jr. (BS'42), 73, a member of the Harding University Board of Trustees since 1950, died Feb. 24. He graduated from Harding with a chemistry degree after having been elected president of his class. In 1971 the Alumni Association chose him as the University's distinguished alumnus. Green worked 24 years for Amoco Oil Co.'s research laboratories. He then worked until his retirement in 1986 for Hewlett Packard. He also preached for a number of different churches. He is survived by his wife, the former Elizabeth Arnold (BA'42), and three daughters: Anita Hooper (BS'65) of Naperville, Ill.; Sandy Barron (BS'69) of Tifton, Ga. and Betty Gould (BS'75) of Huntsville, Ala.

W.B. West Jr., 87, founding dean of Harding University's Graduate School of Religion in Memphis, Tenn., died March 9 in Memphis after losing a battle with cancer. West began preaching in 1923, continuing his ministry for six decades, and focusing especially on the study of Revelation. Having received degrees from David Lipscomb University, Abilene Christian University and the University of Southern California, West taught at Pepperdine, Faulkner and Southern Christian universities, as well as Harding, both in Searcy and Memphis. Called "the father of graduate education among churches of Christ," he served as dean of the Graduate School from 1958 to 1972, and returned there to teach part time from 1985 until 1989. West's personal library of more than 25,000 books has been left to the Graduate School. In 1977 the school established its annual W.B. West Lectures in Christian Scholarship in his honor. West is survived by his wife, Gladys, and one daughter, Patty Parker of Wichita, Kan.

James W. Mills (special) died March 15 in Searcy. He is survived by his wife, the former Jimmie Lee Layton (BA'36); a daughter, Deanna Brooks (BA'66); and a son, Kenneth E. Mills ('67).

FOCUS ON THE FUTURE

Let Uncle Sam "match" your gift

BY PHIL DIXON

DOES IT SURPRISE YOU TO LEARN THAT THE federal government has the equivalent of a matching gift program? Yes, it will "match" your gift to Harding University!

Neither Congress nor President Clinton has passed a new law or established a new governmental agency to allow this type of "matching gift program." The program has been around for years, managed by the IRS.

In fact, federal tax laws have encouraged charitable gifts for many years. These gifts may be in the form of cash or property, for which you get a current income tax deduction. Or you may choose to make gifts at your death through your will or trust and, thus, pass the gift free of estate tax.

In addition to current gifts and testamentary gifts, the IRS's "matching gift program" allows gifts using Charitable Remainder Trusts and Charitable Gift Annuities. These two methods result in current income tax deductions while providing an income for life.

A current gift is one of the simplest examples of how the federal government encourages your gift to Harding.

Assuming you are in the 50 percent tax bracket, part of your income will be subject to a tax of 50 percent, or one half. By using this assumption, consider this example:

- You decide to make a $5,000 gift to Harding. A $5,000 charitable gift will reduce your taxable income by that amount, saving you $2,500 that you would otherwise pay in taxes. Thus, your $5,000 gift costs you only $2,500.

Perhaps you are not in a position to make a gift of this size now, but you do have a desire to leave a sizable gift to Harding in the future. We are in a position to structure your gift so that you receive an immediate benefit, although the gift will not actually pass to Harding until a future date. The following are some ways that you can benefit from this type of gift:

- Gift of your home and still live in it.
- Lifetime annual income based on the value of your deferred gift.
- Large gifts to family estate tax-free through Charitable Lead Trusts.
- Avoid or lessen capital gains tax by gifts of appreciated property.

If you would like more information about the incentives for charitable gifts, please complete and return the card found in this magazine. ☐

The Associated Women for Harding has a long tradition of helping Harding students, primarily through scholarships. To help pave the way to a brighter future for even more students through scholarships, AWH has initiated its unique BRICK BY BRICK project.

AWH is offering personalized commemorative bricks that will make up the Alumni and Friends of Harding Walk, a brick walk to be installed in the plaza in front of the new Jim Bill McInteer Bible and World Missions Center. Funds raised go toward student scholarships. By joining in the effort, you, your company or someone you care about can have a permanent place in Harding's history while helping deserving students.

By purchasing a brick for $100, you are investing in the future of a student. Additional bricks purchased by you will cost only $50 each. You may wish to purchase a brick as a memorial, to honor a friend or family member, as an alumnus, or as a friend of Harding. Simply complete the form on the back side today!

As a service to alumni, the Career Center (formerly the Office of Career Planning and Placement) will mail a list of current job openings to alumni who request to be placed on the mailing list. The list will be mailed every two weeks. In the beginning there will be no charge for this service, but if interest grows to the point that mailing costs stretch the Career Center budget, a nominal fee will be charged. Just complete the information on the reverse side of this card, and mail it to Harding University, The Career Center, Box 2243, Searcy, AR 72149-0001.
