FROM THE PRESIDENT

Stephens gift provides opportunities for service

Harding has received one of the most significant gifts in the school's history (see page 2). The gift of $5 million to Harding's permanent endowment by Jack Stephens of Little Rock, Ark., has become the pacesetter in the $52 million "Dream Continues" Campaign. Few universities of Harding's size in the United States can boast of such a significant one-time contribution to its endowment.

However, the size of the gift is far overshadowed by what it will allow the University to accomplish. Earnings from the endowed fund will allow Harding to have a greater influence on the Arkansas Delta region, by any standards one of America's most deprived areas. The Delta has one of the highest illiteracy and high school dropout rates in the nation, a situation that has been closely linked to increased teen-age pregnancy, drug abuse and crime in the region.

Mr. Stephens' gift calls for the incorporation of the Cities in Schools of Arkansas organization into the work of Harding's American Studies Institute. In so doing, Harding will be able to use more of its educational resources to combat some of the Delta's problems. Through new seminars, continuing education programs, family counseling and literacy programs, significant inroads can be made to curb the high dropout rate in the Delta.

The endowment gift also will allow us to enroll up to 30 high school graduates from the Delta each year in the Stephens Scholars Program. The program provides significant scholarships at Harding for first-generation college students from low socioeconomic backgrounds, many of whom were not expected to finish high school or even have a chance at a college education. After two years of the program, the Stephens Scholars are well on their way to achieving their career goals.

We are very appreciative of the gift from Jack Stephens because it perpetuates his strong interest in community development and allows Harding new avenues of service to the state of Arkansas.

Oct. 29 will be a very special day for Harding. Not only is it the day of our annual Homecoming football game, but it is the day that faculty, students, staff, alumni and friends will gather on the campus to celebrate the dedication of the Jim Bill McInteer Bible and World Missions Center. I hope that many alumni and friends of the school will be able to attend the 11 a.m. dedication ceremony to honor Jim Bill McInteer, who has been such an integral part of this University for 50 years. I believe the activities of the day will be a fitting conclusion to our Fall Fest Week, which also includes the annual Bible Lectureship. ❧

Stephens establishes $5 million endowment fund

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., investment banker Jack Stephens created a $5 million endowment fund in August to support the new Stephens Center for Community Development on the Searcy campus.

The announcement of the gift was made Aug. 29 by Arkansas Gov. Jim Guy Tucker at a press conference attended by Stephens, Lt. Gov. Mike Huckabee, Arkansas congressmen and civic leaders, statewide media representatives, and Harding students, administrators, and faculty and staff members.

The Stephens Center was established as a division of the University's acclaimed American Studies Institute. The center will direct two existing programs, the statewide Cities in Schools of Arkansas (CISA) and Harding's Stephens Scholars Program. Both programs focus their work on assisting individuals and communities in the 17 counties comprising Arkansas' Delta region, one of the nation's poorest and most underdeveloped areas.

In making the announcement Gov. Tucker praised Stephens for his interest and concern for the Arkansas Delta and for his foresight in helping to develop programs that address the needs of the region. The governor also praised Harding's willingness to join with Stephens and provide private-sector efforts to confront the challenges facing the Delta.

Twenty percent of the earnings of the $5 million endowment will be put back into the corpus to assure the continued growth of the fund. The remaining 80 percent of the earnings will be used to fund the Stephens Scholars Program and many of the programs of Cities in Schools of Arkansas.

Press Conference. Current Stephens Scholars and investment banker Jack Stephens listen as Arkansas Gov. Jim Guy Tucker announces Stephens' $5 million gift Aug. 29.

Included in those expenditures will be all costs related to the Stephens Scholars Program at Harding, grants to three CISA communities in Arkansas, and the salaries, clerical support and travel of CISA supervisory personnel.

In 1992 Stephens and Harding began the Stephens Scholars Program, which creates scholarships for first-generation college students from low socioeconomic backgrounds in the Delta. Participants receive full federal and state financial assistance. Educational expenses not covered by financial aid are paid by the Stephens Scholarship. Each student now receives approximately $5,500 in scholarship assistance annually.

Currently, 16 Stephens Scholars are enrolled, although the program can accommodate up to 30 students each year.

Cities in Schools of Arkansas is a comprehensive, nonprofit organization devoted to dropout prevention. The organization forges a partnership of public and private leadership for bringing together, in the local schools, all appropriate resources for solving the multiple needs of students at the highest risk of educational and economic failure.

Stephens spearheaded the efforts to make CISA a viable force in solving problems of the Delta. Since 1988 approximately 1,500 students and their families have been served. In the first five years, more than 92 percent of the at-risk students are staying in school and graduating, and 66 percent of them are enrolling in college.

The creation of the Stephens Center for Community Development expands the work of CISA by utilizing the readily available resources of the University. The center will implement three new programs: (1) leadership development seminars for businessmen in targeted communities; (2) continuing education programs in CISA communities; and (3) counseling for Delta families.

These three new projects will significantly increase the influence and visibility of CISA and Harding, and they will be in addition to the current annual projects promoted by CISA.

Another record: Fall enrollment reaches 3,800

ENROLLMENT CONTINUES its upward path for the seventh consecutive year, with 3,800 students registering on the Searcy campus for the fall 1994 semester from all 50 states and 39 foreign countries.

The University was able to accept approximately 100 more students than last fall, largely due to the new international studies programs in Athens, Greece, and London, England. The international program in Florence, Italy, is in its 13th year.

"With approximately 40 students in both of the new programs, we had 80 additional openings available on our Searcy campus," said President

David Burks. More than 120 students are studying overseas this fall at the University's three international campuses.

The record-high fall enrollment figures follow on the heels of three successful summer school sessions that enrolled more than 1,350 students, the highest summer enrollment of the past six years.

The 3,800 enrollment is an increase of 248 over fall 1993 totals. The total includes 1,079 students who are new to Harding, 788 of whom are freshmen. One hundred sixty-seven students comprise the University's international student population.

Enrollment at Harding University Graduate School of Religion in Memphis, Tenn., had not closed at press time, but admissions officials at the school anticipated about 200 students. Enrollment at Harding Academy in Searcy stood at 480, an increase of more than 70 students due to its new early childhood development program for 2-, 3- and 4-year-olds.

"The total enrollment of the Harding system, including the University, the Graduate School and the Academy, now stands at 4,480 students. I believe we're blessed by this number, and I thank all of those who have worked so hard to make it possible," Burks said.

17 National Merit Scholars enrolled in freshman class

THIS FALL'S 788-MEMBER freshman class includes the highest number of National Merit Scholars ever to enroll at the University, bringing the total number of scholars at Harding to more than 50.

Seventeen freshmen this fall are National Merit Scholars, compared to 12 in last year's freshman class.

"In comparison with other schools, it puts us among the top 100 in the nation," said

Mike Williams, director of admissions services. In Arkansas, Harding ranks second only to the University of Arkansas at Fayetteville in the number of scholars enrolled.

"These students are the most highly sought after in the country," Williams continued. "And although they receive our largest scholarship, we can't always offer them the perks of free computers, books and board like many larger schools are able to do. When they select Harding anyway, I think it really says a lot for the University."

National Merit Scholars are selected from a group of 14,000 semifinalists that represent about half of 1 percent of all graduating high school seniors in the nation. The National Merit Scholarship Corp., which is located in Evanston, Ill., was established in 1955 to enhance educational opportunities for scholastically talented students and to increase public support for academic excellence.

McInteer Center to be dedicated Oct. 29

ALL ALUMNI AND FRIENDS are invited to attend dedication ceremonies for the Jim Bill McInteer Bible and World Missions Center, to be held Saturday, Oct. 29 during Fall Fest '94.

Fall Fest, which begins Oct. 24, incorporates the McInteer Center dedication, the 71st annual Bible Lectureship, Homecoming activities, the fall musical production and other special events into one exciting week of fellowship. The event promises to be the year's biggest gathering of Harding friends of the past and present — as well as a celebration of the University's future.

The centerpiece of that celebration is the dedication of the McInteer Center, Harding's newest and largest classroom building. The 70,000-square-foot facility is named for a man who has generously given of his time and services to Harding for more than 50 years.

Jim Bill McInteer graduated from Harding in 1942 and was elected to the board of trustees in 1950. No other board member has served longer. Since 1980 he has served as its secretary. In 1964 McInteer was named Harding's Distinguished Alumnus of the Year, and in 1991 he was presented an honorary doctorate from the University.

Dedication ceremonies are scheduled to be followed by a barbecue luncheon on the University's front lawn.

Nurses' article published in Nurse Educator

Cathleen Shultz and Jackie Harris (nursing), along with Dr. Sam Shultz of Arkansas Children's Hospital, jointly wrote an article titled "Accidental Needlestick Injuries in the Academic Setting," which appeared in the July/August issue of Nurse Educator.

Sutherlin receives service award

Dr. Gordon Sutherlin (education) was recognized in August by the Instructional Microcomputer Project for Arkansas Classrooms program as the recipient of its distinguished service award for contributions he has made to the program.

Nursing society featured in Reflections

Harding's chapter of Sigma Theta Tau, the international nursing honor society, will be featured in the winter issue of Reflections. The international publication will spotlight the group for its recent honor as the society's outstanding chapter, with the chapter's officers pictured on the magazine's cover.

Faculty joined by 16 new, returning members

SIXTEEN NEW AND RETURNING full-time faculty members have joined the instructional staff for the beginning of the fall semester.

Eight of the additions come in the College of Arts and Sciences. Beverly Austin, who received both the B.A. and M.A.T. degrees from Harding, joins the art department as a lecturer. Before joining the faculty she taught in Arkansas high schools and was a freelance artist with her own art studio in Brinkley, Ark.

Nicky Boyd returns from doctoral leave after having completed requirements for the Ed.D. degree at the University of Memphis. He teaches in the department of kinesiology and serves as director of the Walton Scholarship Program.

Debbie Ann Ford is an assistant professor of social work in the behavioral sciences department. She holds the M.S.W. degree from the University of Arkansas at Little Rock. She is a 1983 Harding alumna and a former social worker for the White County Home Health Agency in Searcy.

Janet Fortner joins the department of history and social science as a lecturer. She holds the M.A. degree from Texas Tech University and has completed some doctoral studies at the University of Cincinnati. She previously served as an adjunct professor in the College of Bible and Religion during the 1992-93 school year.

Kevin Klein, a 1986 Harding alumnus, also joins the department of history and social science as an instructor. He holds the M.A. degree in American history from Florida State University. He is now a doctoral candidate in southern history at FSU and will complete requirements for the doctorate during the fall semester.

Alumnus Brian Mitchell joins the faculty of the physical science department as supervisor of the physics laboratories. He received the B.S. degree from Harding in May.

Sharon Pitt is a lecturer in the department of communication, where she had previously served as an adjunct professor. She holds both the B.A. and M.Ed. degrees from Harding.

Jack Shock returns to the department of communication as an assistant professor. He completed the Ed.D. degree at the University of Arkansas at Fayetteville and rejoined the faculty at the beginning of the spring 1994 semester.

The School of Education has one new faculty member, Delores (Dee) Carson. She is an assistant professor who holds Ed.S. degrees in administration and mathematics. Carson has completed coursework for the doctorate in administration and educational leadership at the University of Alabama. Before joining the faculty, she was administrator at Union Park Elementary School in Orlando, Fla.

Gordon Hogan joins the faculty of the College of Bible and Religion as this year's missionary-in-residence. He and his wife served as missionaries for eight years in Pakistan and for 26 years in Singapore. Hogan has also served as a missionary-in-residence for Freed-Hardeman University and for Oklahoma Christian University.

David Johnson returns to the faculty of the School of Business as an associate professor after teaching two years at Pepperdine University. Johnson holds the Ph.D. from the University of Cincinnati and is a former director of Harding's accounting program.

Four members were added to the School of Nursing faculty. Elizabeth Dominski is a lecturer, coming to Harding from Capital Rehabilitation Hospital in Tallahassee, Fla. She earned her B.S.N. from the University of Florida and is a certified rehabilitation registered nurse.

Karen Kelley joins the faculty as an instructor. She received her B.S.N. degree from Harding in 1987 and was previously employed by Partners in Care, a division of PharmaThera, as a clinical coordinator managing nursing care.

Cheryl Lee comes to the faculty after serving as clinical instructor and clinical nurse specialist in gerontology at West Jersey Hospital in Marlton, N.J. She received her B.S.N. degree from Harding in 1984 and the M.N.Sc. from the University of Arkansas for Medical Sciences in 1989.

Denise Stout joins the faculty as a lecturer, having served on the nursing faculty of North Arkansas Community Technical College. She received her baccalaureate degree from Harding and is completing degree requirements for the M.S.N. at the University of Central Arkansas.

Jennifer Hurd has been serving as communications skills coordinator for the University's Student Support Services program since January. She holds both the B.A. and M.A. degrees from Harding and the Ed.D. from the University of Memphis.

Harding now has 192 full-time faculty members, and 70 percent hold doctoral or terminal degrees.

NASA grant enables Honors Symposium to expand

HARDING'S HONORS Symposium, a program initiated in the summer of 1993 for academically talented high school juniors, received some helpful financial assistance for its 1994 sessions in the form of a $23,000 grant from NASA.

The grant enabled symposium participants to study the Apollo space project and also

High school students to experience Harding during Insight activities

THE UNIVERSITY INVITES all high school students to visit the campus and take a personal look at Harding during Insight '94, scheduled for Nov. 11-12.

The annual event, planned exclusively for high school students, includes campus tours, class visits, and informational sessions about admissions procedures, housing and financial aid. Also scheduled are a concert by the music group Acappella, performances by a variety of campus student groups like the Good News Singers and Conquerors dramatic troupe, a devotional beside Harding's lily pool, and a football game with the University of Arkansas-Monticello.

Insight's keynote speaker this year is Dr. Ross Cochran, a popular youth speaker and as-visit NASA facilities in Huntsville, Ala.

In addition, they studied other facets that affected the culture of the 1960s, including the decade's music, art, poetry and politics, as well as the Vietnam War. The symposium also included visits to Elvis Presley's Graceland and to the National Civil Rights Museum in Memphis, Tenn. "We've had great success with this program and had to expand to two different sessions this summer," said Dr. Jeff Hopper, who serves as director of the program. Hopper had enrolled 43 in the program last year; this year's two sessions enrolled a total of 70 students. From locations as distant as Mexico, California and New York, symposium students represented 22 states and two foreign countries.

Aside from what Hopper said was "great word of mouth from original participants," he noted the key that enabled the symposium to expand its enrollment was the NASA grant.

Assistant professor of Bible at the University. A graduate of Harding and of the University's Graduate School of Religion, Cochran served as a missionary in Ireland and as associate minister of the Holmes Road Church in Memphis, Tenn., before joining the faculty in 1986. Insight guests will benefit from his congenial manner and ability to simplify complex concepts.

Housing in campus dormitories is provided for Insight guests at no expense. Guests may register for the weekend upon arrival, and housing will be assigned at that time.

Neale Pryor, vice president for academic affairs; Dr. Carl Mitchell, dean of the College of Bible and Religion; Barbara Statom, assistant dean of the School of Business; and Dr. David Perkins, director of the accounting program. No timetable has been established for filling the position.

Dr. Randy McLeod, associate dean, will serve as acting dean until Tucker's permanent replacement is named.

Faculty promotions named in August

FOURTEEN FACULTY MEMBERS received promotions in rank effective at the beginning of the 1994 fall semester.

Promoted to the rank of professor were Dr. David Cole, physical science department; Dr. Tony Finley, School of Education; Dr. Ken Hammes, English department; Dr. Ken Hobby, behavioral sciences department; Barbara Statom, School of Business; and Will Ed Warren, College of Bible and Religion.

Promoted to associate professor were David Allen, School of Business; John Fortner, College of Bible and Religion; and Dr. Steven Frye and Dr. Mike James, communication department.

Three faculty members were promoted from instructor to assistant professor. Promoted were Monte Cox, College of Bible and Religion; Ron Pacheco, computer science department; and Bryan Phillips, kinesiology department.

Linda Etridge of the School of Nursing was promoted to the instructor rank.

Diffine named to academic board

Dr. Don Diffine (business) has been named to the National Academic Advisory Board of the American Economic Foundation, Cleveland. Diffine will chair efforts to provide a focus for opinion leaders who are committed to economic, political and intellectual freedom.

Clement heads Graduate School's Advisory Council

The Graduate School of Religion's Memphis Advisory Council has named Mike Clement its chairman for the 1994-95 school year.

Clement, one of the group's original members, is vice president of sales for Baptist Health Services Group. He is also a member of the board of Harding Academy in Memphis.

Organized in 1992, the council's 148 members work to help the school maintain financial stability and attract quality students.

S.A. gears up for year of service

"SERVICE, OBVIOUSLY, should be a part of every Christian's life. Sometimes that service is seen, and sometimes it is unseen. However, the S.A.'s goal is not simply to focus on projects but to give students chances to become involved, to become a part of something bigger than themselves."

If one didn't know better, he might think these were the words of Rich Little, last year's Student Association president who was considered one of the most effective campus leaders in recent years. But they're not; they're the words of Nathan Mellor, the new S.A. president for the 1994-95 school year.

Mellor, a junior Bible major from Mobile, Ala., has proven to be a noted campus leader in his own right. After playing for the Bison football team his first two years, he decided to focus his time more on mission work. That desire led him to join campaign groups to Rostov-on-Don, Russia, three years ago and Dubna, Russia, last year. Last year he also established Word Search International, a group that organizes and leads mission campaigns, and returned this summer to Dubna for 12 weeks with a group of 26 workers. On campus, last year Mellor served as president for Knights social club and the University Singers.

Service was the resounding emphasis of last year's S.A. administration — and Mellor has a handle on the concept, too. Besides the usual ice cream socials, concerts, tailgate parties, Homecoming activities and weekly movies, most of his plans for the year revolve around service to others. Helping him implement those plans are the other members of his S.A. team: Michael Brooks, vice president, a junior from Bethany, Okla.; Stephanie Neff, secretary, a junior from Parker, Colo.; and Marquis Jackson, treasurer, a sophomore from Morrilton, Ark.

Although several excellent University service projects in recent years have taken place out of state, Mellor said he would like to see students involved this year in more local projects. A Searcy service project day during new-student orientation in August was the first of what Mellor hopes will be several such events.

"I want us to focus on Arkansas this year, and what we can do in Searcy and Little Rock," Mellor said. "I think this will allow us more follow-up opportunities and will let the people around us see that there are still people in the world doing things that are good. The world is in such despair today that people often forget that."

Other projects that Mellor would like to see accomplished this year include a local clean-up weekend in conjunction with the University's Bison Boosters; the annual "Angel Tree" project that allows students to provide gifts at Christmas for underprivileged local children and the children of inmates in White County prisons; fund-raising relief efforts that aid programs like the Christian children's home in Morrilton; and a common service project involving all social clubs.

But Mellor's vision for the year also extends beyond the Searcy city limits. For inspiration in scheduling S.A. events, he plans to draw on his administration's familiar theme scripture, Matthew 28:19 — "the Great Commission": "Therefore go and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit."

"In that verse Jesus was talking about everyone — in foreign countries, in our homes, in the dormitories," Mellor said. "The S.A. intends to be true to that commitment."

And how does Mellor intend to do this? Through projects that encourage stability of the American family and support for overseas mission efforts.

"People in America feel like they've lost ownership of their country," Mellor said. "We must encourage Christians to take it back, and rescuing our families is of critical importance in doing so. Until we take our families back from the world, our success at saving lives will be minimal."

Rescuing families through stronger Christian leadership will be the focus of a visit this fall by Steve Farrar, noted Christian author of Point Man and Standing Tall. Mellor is looking forward to his visit, which is being sponsored during a special S.A. "Family Week" by the University's marriage and family therapy degree program.

True to the verse in Matthew, Mellor's tentative plans also include a relief project for the people of Haiti, as well as fund-raising events to aid a team of missionaries in Uganda, East Africa.

"The concept I like to get across is that God is larger than America; therefore, helping our global Christian family is a priority — and a responsibility," he said.

And what one thing does Mellor hope to leave in the minds of students this year?

"There's a song that comes to mind that my mother wanted me to listen to before the year began," he said. "It was about a youth minister who said that he could use fancy phrases and clever words to impress people, but if that was all they remembered, then he was a failure because he only wanted them to see Jesus more clearly. I feel that way, too. This year we want people to see Jesus in all that we do."

Outreach camp scheduled for June

THE FUTURE OF THE church depends on today's Christian young people — a realization that has inspired a new summer leadership camp on the Harding campus.

The camp is called "Outreach," and the first session is scheduled for June 11-16, 1995. According to Outreach Director Dr. Allan Isom, the camp is open to young men and women who will be entering their junior or senior years of high school in the fall of 1995.

Besides field trips, campouts and other recreational activities, Outreach campers will attend special sessions covering topics they may select according to their own talents and interests. These sessions are designed to help campers identify and develop

Experienced editors named for both student publications

THIS YEAR'S TWO STUDENT publications editors are drawing on experience for their success.

Scott Baine, a senior graphic design major from Tyronza, Ark., is serving as editor of the Petit Jean yearbook for the second consecutive year. His appointment is a first at Harding — no other student has taken on the editorial job twice in the 70-year history of the publication. While editors always feel challenged to "outdo" their predecessors' work, Baine finds himself in the unique position of trying to outdo himself.

"I feel like last year's book was great, but I also think the book should always get better each year," he said. "We're making some changes this year in the traditional format of the book that I think the student body will enjoy, and we're trying to make some of the more mundane sections more exciting. The hardest thing is trying to pick a theme that summarizes the whole year before it ever starts!"

Baine, a member of the yearbook staff since his freshman year, attended summer publications workshops in St. Louis and Washington, D.C., to help him gear up for the job ahead.

Serving as head photographer of the 1995 Petit Jean — also for the second consecutive year — is Jason Burt, a sophomore from North Little Rock, Ark. Jenny Tyree, a junior from Chariton, Iowa, is copy editor. Section editors include graduate student Leah Mangrum from McComb, Miss. (student life); senior Rachel Hale from Searcy (classes); junior Jimmy Brooks from Searcy (academics); freshman Andrea Stark from Wynnewood, Okla. (organizations); freshman Carrie Woodruff from Texarkana, Ark. (social clubs); and freshman Amanda Krape from St. Peters, Mo. (sports).

Serving as editor of the weekly Bison newspaper is Petit Jean alumna Tracy Evans, a senior public relations major from Asheville, N.C. Editor of the "classes" section of last year's yearbook, she is responsible for producing 20 issues of the newspaper. Evans attended the publications workshop with Baine in Washington, D.C., and she has made some updated design changes and added columns that she hopes will encourage more student involvement and feedback.

Librarians attend national meeting

Winnie Bell, Mary Binkley, Suzanne Spurrier and Henry Terrill (library) attended the national meeting of Christian college librarians May 18-21 in Oklahoma City. Ideas and techniques were presented about extending the shelf life of library holdings and included a hands-on demonstration of practical book-repair techniques.

Game scores provided to Associated Press

Bison football and basketball scores are run each week on the Associated Press wire service. If you don't find listings of Harding scores, call your local newspaper.

Fumble Recovery. Linebacker Paul Simmons comes up with the ball for the Bisons after a University of Arkansas-Pine Bluff fumble. A crowd of more than 6,000 people turned out for the season opener at Alumni Field.

Bisons lose opening game by one point

A HEARTBREAKING LOSS kicked off the 1994 football season as the Bisons dropped a 15-14 decision to the University of Arkansas-Pine Bluff.

Harding led by seven with only two minutes left in the game when UAPB scored a diving reception of a 35-yard touchdown pass and then made the two-point conversion to seal the victory.

A record crowd of more than 6,000 jammed into Alumni Field to watch the season opener for both schools.

The 1994 schedule, judged by many to be the toughest in the team's history, included September games against East Central Oklahoma, the defending NAIA national champions; Delta State, an NCAA Division II member of the Gulf South Conference; and Southeastern Oklahoma University.

In October the Bisons faced Southwestern Oklahoma University (Oct. 1) and Ouachita Baptist University (Oct. 29) in home games. The OBU contest is the Homecoming game. Road games included trips to Northeastern Oklahoma University (Oct. 8) and Southern Arkansas University (Oct. 15).

The Bisons close out the season in November with games against Arkansas Tech University in Russellville (Nov. 5) and the University of Arkansas-Monticello at home (Nov. 12).

In the pre-season poll, the Bisons were picked to finish second to UAM, last year's AIC champs. Two-time NAIA first-team All-American Paul Simmons was selected as the pre-season Defensive Player of the Year in the AIC for the second straight year. He was joined on the pre-season All-AIC team by senior All-American Thad Hill (TE), junior Jeff Patterson (G), senior Paul Mann (QB), and senior Lorne Latiker (SS). Simmons, Latiker and Hill appear on various pre-season All-American teams.

Men's and women's cross country teams hope to repeat as conference champs

BISON CROSS COUNTRY teams appear to have good odds at repeating as Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference champions.

While the Lady Bisons were hit hard by graduation in losing four seniors, the top two performers in the AIC, Jessica Barraza and Ketty Jensen, have returned along with Heather Muir for a rebuilding nucleus. A good freshman class will give the women a shot at their ninth conference title.

Jonathan Griffin, Jay Hurt, Mitch Seim and Matt Quigley return as solid runners for the men's team. An exceptionally good recruiting class gives the men a good chance to repeat as AIC champions as well.

Richmond resigns, Tribble new football coach

HEAD FOOTBALL COACH Larry Richmond unexpectedly submitted his resignation July 25, citing personal reasons as the motivation for his decision.

Defensive Coordinator Randy Tribble was named by President David Burks to fill the vacancy created by Richmond's departure.

Moving quickly to fill the head coaching position, Burks and Athletic Director Harry Olree met with all the assistant football coaches before announcing Tribble's selection. The announcement was made 24 hours after Richmond's resignation.

Tribble, a native of Ft. Walton Beach, Fla., had served 13 seasons as an assistant coach at Harding. A former Bison All-AIC defensive back, he coordinated Harding's defensive alignment and coached the Bison secondary.

He is only the fourth head coach since the Bisons returned to intercollegiate football competition in 1959.

A 1977 graduate of Harding, Tribble directed Fort Worth Christian High School to the state championship in 1980 in the Texas Association of Private Schools. He compiled a 19-5 record in his two seasons as head coach before joining the Bison staff.

Tribble earned the M.Ed. degree from Harding in 1983. He only lacks completing the dissertation to earn his doctorate from Middle Tennessee State University.

Richmond, during his six-year tenure as Bison head coach, directed the team to a 37-26-1 record. His 1989 squad

Lady Bison volleyball team features strong offense, experienced players

IF THE PIECES FALL INTO place, the 1994 volleyball team has the potential to be the best in the school's history.

A quartet of experienced players lead the team. Seniors Amy Deuel and Angela Johnson and juniors Regina Huddleston and Lori Hendricks form the nucleus of Coach Karyl Bailey's team.

Four additional returnees — junior Marcy Winters and sophomores Casey Wolfe, Shela Burns and Shannon Massey — have the talent to contribute and possibly become starters.

Bailey has signed four freshmen who he expects to compete for playing time and to make important contributions to the team's success. Amanda Rhoads of Arlington, Texas, at 5-10, can play the middle. Jennifer Stein of Allen, Texas, will play the back line. LeKay Bain of Tyler, Texas, will also get a chance to play the middle, and Hannah Crider of Fort Collins, Colo., may be the back row specialist.

Traditionally, Harding teams have been tough on defense and have been able to win with tenacity and by taking advantage of breaks, but this year's team may take the opposite strategy. According to Bailey, their offense may be the best Harding has had, but the defense will have to grow up fast. Two NCAA II tournaments are on the schedule, plus three more tournaments that will involve some top NAIA schools.

was 7-4, AIC co-champions, and made Harding's first-ever trip to the NAIA national playoffs. The 1992 team also posted a 7-4 record, earning a berth in the national playoffs.

Work and Queen-Perez win scholar-athlete awards

DAMON WORK AND Shauna Queen-Perez, former track and field competitors, have been selected as recipients of scholar-athlete awards from the Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference.

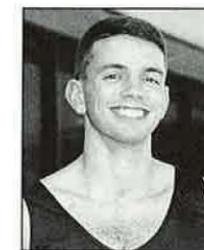

Work, a 1994 graduate, is the winner of the Cliff Shaw Scholar-Athlete Award. An accounting major, he compiled an impressive grade point average.

In cross country Work captured top honors at the AIC and National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics District 17 meets. He won the 880-meter, mile and two-mile at the NAIA District 17 indoor track championships, and he captured first place in the mile, 5,000- and 10,000-meter at the AIC outdoor competition.

Queen-Perez, who graduated from Harding in December 1993, earned an excellent grade point average with a double major in English and Spanish. She received the Downing-Swift-Wallace Scholar-Athlete Award and won 10 AIC running titles while earning NAIA All-American honors three times.

During her career Queen-Perez earned All-AIC honors six times, All-District 17 three times, and was a two-time nominee for NAIA All-American Scholar-Athlete.

She holds the 800-meters and 1,000-yard records for the Lady Bisons.

BROTHERS KEN AND TERRY BECK REVEAL THEIR AMAZING ARKANSAS

By David Crouch

The rise of Bill Clinton from humble beginnings in a place called Hope to the White House created an unprecedented interest in Arkansas — and two native Arkansans have parlayed that interest in the Natural State into a successful publishing venture.

Ken Beck (BA'74) of Watertown, Tenn., and Terry Beck (BBA'85) of North Little Rock, Ark., compiled an archive of 500 little-known facts into a 128-page book, President Clinton's Amazing Arkansas.

The book is now in its third printing and can be found in bookstores nationwide.

More than just a casual knowledge of Arkansas has become politically correct for many of those living and working within the Washington, D.C., beltway. The Becks' book is helping to fill that void of information.

"With so many Arkansans having taken up residence in Washington, it seems only fair that the rest of us learn a little something about where they hail from," commented the Washington Post in its review of the book.

The idea for the book came as Ken was watching the televised Clinton inauguration. Sitting in the newsroom of The Tennessean, where he has been entertainment editor and a feature writer for 17 years for Nashville's daily newspaper, Ken decided it was time to give the nation more information about Arkansas.

That night he called his brother, Terry, and explained his "crazy idea." Terry, a sales manager with the Arkansas Democrat-Gazette newspaper in Little Rock, thought about the idea and then urged Ken, "Let's do it!"

The two began their search for facts with tours of local bookstores to determine what was available about Arkansas. Much to their surprise, most stores had less than half a dozen books book. Ken readily admits that Terry did most of the research because "he was the one closest to where everything actually happened."

After about four months of research, hundreds of telephone calls, visits to various sites throughout the state, and meticulous verification of facts, the manuscript was sent to the printer. Neither Beck had any idea of how well the book would sell.

Amazing Arkansas hit the bookstores just in time for the 1993 Christmas season and immediately topped the holiday best-seller list at major Little Rock bookstores.

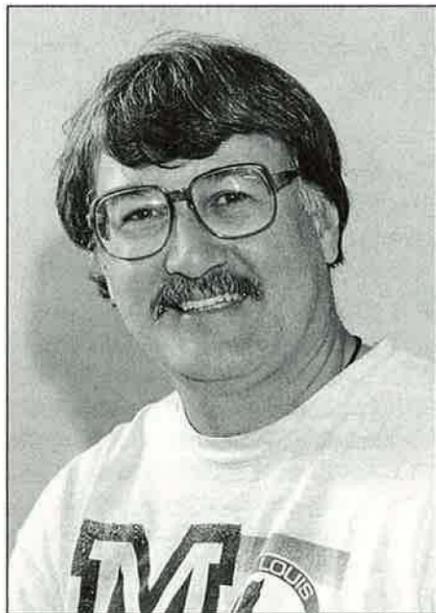

"We've already sold more than 8,000 copies with just regional distribution," said Ken. "Now that it is being distributed nationally, we hope to double or triple that number. I just wonder how many we could have sold if the book had been ready in time for Clinton's inauguration."

Both Becks are proud to call Arkansas home. "Research for the book became a fun project as we uncovered more and more trivia about the state," said Ken. "We hope readers will have as much fun reading it as we did compiling it. We also hope the book will make Arkansans proud to be Arkansans."

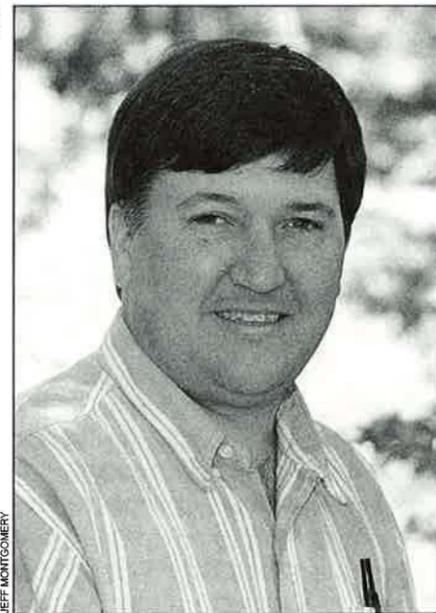

Of all the facts uncovered, which did Terry and Ken find most interesting? Terry's choice is the fact that a penitentiary once stood on the site of the Arkansas Capitol. "I won't comment on that fact other than to say there may be some implications historically about Arkansas' legislators," laughed Terry.

Ken is the history buff of the two, and he began reading anything he could find about Arkansas. Terry, because of his work with Arkansas' largest daily newspaper, began searching through old issues of the paper for items to be included in the

FACTS FROM PRESIDENT CLINTON'S AMAZING ARKANSAS

The Arkansas River is the third-longest river in the United States.

President Clinton's favorite movie is "High Noon," which he has seen about 19 times.

The town of Hector was named for President Grover Cleveland's bulldog.

Alma, known as the "Spinach Capital of the World," is where 56 percent of the planet's spinach is canned.

Park-O-Meter of Russellville manufactured the world's first parking meters in 1935.

The only diamond mine in the United States is in Murfreesboro.

Burns Park in North Little Rock, with its 1,575 acres, is the second-largest municipal park in the United States.

In 1881 the Arkansas General Assembly decided to pronounce the state name "Ark-an-saw" instead of "Ar-kansas."

Judge Isaac Parker, "the Hanging Judge," hanged 79 outlaws between the years 1875-1896 in Fort Smith.

More than 50 percent of Arkansas is forest land.

Arkansas is an Indian word for "downstream people." It was derived from the name of the Quapaw Indian tribe.

Bill Clinton was the 42nd governor of Arkansas and the 42nd president of the United States.

Winslow was the first town in America to elect a woman mayor, Maude Duncan. She became mayor in 1925 and was also the town's pharmacist and newspaper editor.

search for hen eggs. In 1942 Taylor took the rock to a local drugstore, and from there it was sent to the geology department at the University of Arkansas. University teachers sent it to Tiffany's in New York City.

Taylor later received a check for the then-unbelievable sum of $8,500. What she thought was a mere rock turned out to be a 27-carat diamond, the third largest ever found in North America.

The two brothers had so much fun collaborating on Amazing Arkansas that another publishing project may be in the offing, but neither will disclose the nature of their next book.

In the meantime, Ken's own publishing career is taking off. He recently completed work with actor George Lindsey on his autobiography, which will be published in the spring of 1995. Ken is also co-author of two TV-theme cookbooks — Mary Ann's Gilligan's Island Cookbook and The Beverly Hillbillies Cookbook.

His long-standing love for small-town America as portrayed on television in "The Andy Griffith Show" also prompted Ken to write two Mayberry books, The Andy Griffith Show Book and Aunt Bee's Mayberry Cookbook. The latter book is Ken's most popular, having sold more than 800,000 copies. "Baby boomers grew up with 'The Andy Griffith Show,' and Aunt Bee was just like a member of a viewer's family. Apparently, many of the show's loyal fans now have Aunt Bee's cookbook," he said.

"George Lindsey is the first actor of the television series to release an autobiography," Ken continued. "In it he gives a humorous look at the behind-the-scenes activities of the cast. We submitted more than 150 photographs to the publisher for inclusion in the book. We hope it is as popular as the cookbook has been."

Ken and Terry are not sure if Amazing Arkansas has found its way into the White House, although a friend of President Clinton has said he would give a copy to him. Terry is sure the president will like it, with the possible exception of one obscure fact: Number 38 — Bill and Hillary Clinton honeymooned in Acapulco and were accompanied by her parents and two brothers. ■

Alumnus has gone*

FROM MUSIC DIRECTOR TO MISSIONARY

By Phillip Tucker

To generations of Harding students, he's known as "Uncle Bud." To hundreds of people in Eastern Europe, he's known as the man who first taught them about Jesus.

Dr. Kenneth Davis Jr. needs no introduction for most alumni. After all, he's a Harding institution. From 1953 until his retirement in 1988, he directed the celebrated A Cappella Chorus and endeared himself to thousands of students in the process. In fact, the name of the A Cappella Chorus was retired when he did, in his honor.

His résumé is, indeed, impressive. During his 35 years at the University, Dr. Davis directed choruses in 49 states and many European countries. A decorated Marine captain in World War II, he started Harding's Belles & Beaux performing troupe as a USO entertainment project and traveled with it to the Orient, the Caribbean and Europe. He also co-directed the University's annual music camp at Camp Tahkodah, and directed the Recording Chorus, which specialized in recording music in foreign languages for missionaries.

Although Dr. Davis is a Dallas native, he attended Harding from elementary school at the Academy in 1931 until his junior year of college in 1941. He received his bachelor's degree from North Texas State University in 1942, his master's from Westminster Choir College in 1950, and his doctor of music degree from the University of Indiana in 1966. He even sang tenor with the famed Westminster Choir.

Topping off his respected career, "Uncle Bud" received the student-nominated Distinguished Teacher Award in 1973 and 1977, and the Petit Jean yearbook was dedicated to him twice — in 1973 and 1980. Finally, last October he received

Ready to Learn. Dr. Ken Davis poses with a group of Romanian boys who have studied with him.

Harding's highest honor, the Distinguished Alumnus Award. So after all those years of dedicated hard work, one might expect Dr. Davis to take it easy in retirement — vacationing, sleeping in, tending to his garden, walking in the park.

Think again. As no surprise to those who know him, Dr. Davis is spending his retirement the way he has spent the rest of his life — in service to others.

Since 1991 Dr. Davis and his wife and companion of 43 years, Betty, have concentrated much of their efforts on mission work in Romania. In 1991 they made two trips to Bucharest, Romania's capital city of nearly 2 million people, and helped start the church there. They then helped start the church in Brasov, a city of about 300,000, where they stayed from April 1992 until December 1993. This year they did the same in Timisoara, another city of 300,000 in the western part of the country near the Hungarian border.

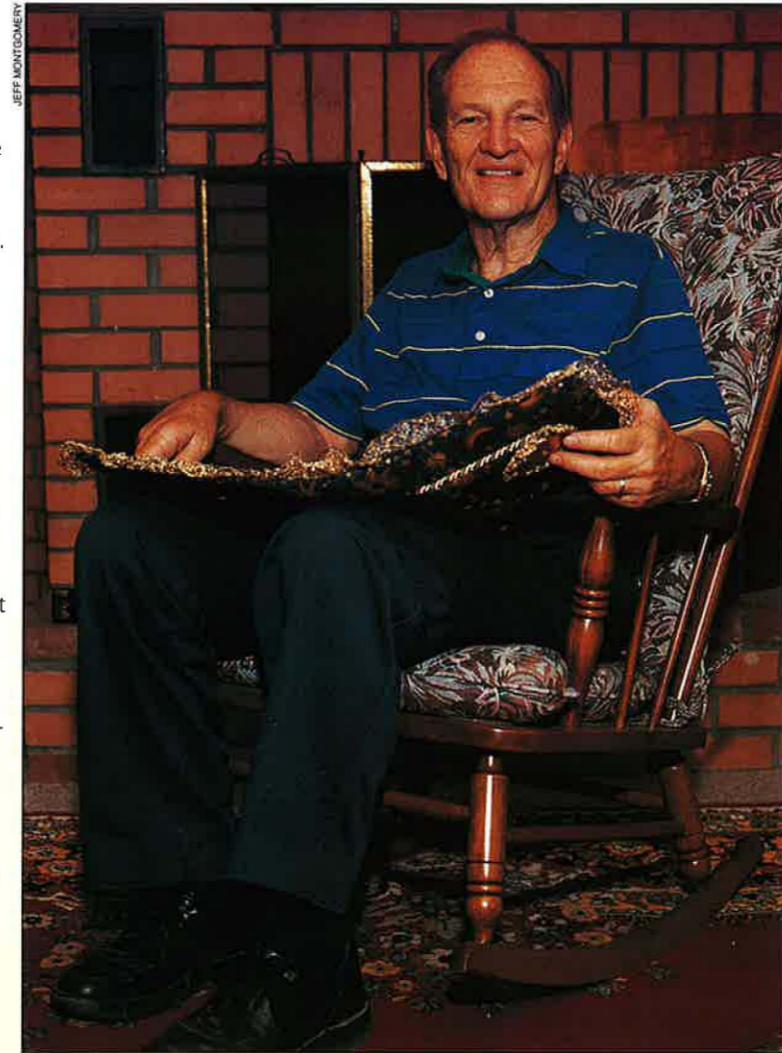

In each case the Davises, along with other couples working as a team, placed a newspaper ad that offered free Bible studies taught in English. Although the opportunity to learn English was a drawing factor for many, Dr. Davis said there was never a shortage of students interested in learning God's Word.

The message of salvation is new to most people in Romania, having been under communist rule until recent years. Bible stories had been passed down by grandparents who still remembered a time when they could study freely. Those seeds planted by thoughtful grandparents now spark an immediate interest in God's Word among many of today's Romanians, who are "as hungry as they can be for the Gospel," Dr. Davis said.

Professing Christianity rather than the state religion sometimes brings on difficulties in the lives of Romanians by peers and the government, but Dr. Davis said the people "are much happier now, as a whole, than while under communism. They now feel that there's hope down the line. Being under communism for so long, the people do not fully understand capitalism, but they're trying. And the friendliness and outgoing nature of the Romanian Christians is making a tremendous difference in lives."

The last Eastern European campaign with which Dr. Davis took part involved 205 American Christians in a massive effort in Donetsk, Ukraine, in June. For 10 days the workers, led by Harding Associate Professor of Bible Dr. Eddie Cloer, studied the Bible with an average of 2,435 people per day in 11 different campaign sites around the city. As one of the largest campaign efforts ever undertaken by the church, 1,545 souls were saved. Those in Dr. Davis' group taught about 40 students for four or five hours each day.

Always modest, Dr. Davis is emphatic in reminding that he and Betty have not been alone in spreading the Gospel overseas. In Bucharest, Brasov and Timisoara, they have been joined by long-time friends Gerald and Ann Nichols of Springfield, Mo., and Hilton and Wanda Terry, who have spent much of their lives in Eastern Europe.

And true to his Harding roots, he is also quick to name other members of the Harding family with whom he has served in Romania and the Ukraine on different occasions — people like Neale ('56) and Treva ('86) Pryor, Emmett ('46) and Nita Smith, Claudia Petty ('47), Karen Winter ('86), Debra Daughety Nesbitt, Mark Waters ('90), Phil ('86) and Rebecca ('89) Jackson, Bill and Barbara ('59) McDonough, Eddie ('88) and Ann Tate ('88) Neal, and Bubba Cook ('93), who has traveled to Romania numerous times to lead the "Let's Start Talking" program. Dale McAnulty ('56) and his wife, Imogene, who are other family friends of the Davises, have been serving in Bucharest full time since 1991.

Dr. Davis eagerly hopes to recruit more workers for mission efforts in Romania. "The most important thing I can say is that people who retire and are in good health make wonderful missionaries," he said. "We have several full-time missionaries in Bucharest and Brasov, but we badly need some in Timisoara, Oradea, Marghita and Iasi. It's fine to go and stay two months, but it's much better to stay two, three or four years. What a wonderful opportunity it is for retired people to go there, get the church started, and serve as the nucleus of that church, nourishing it and helping it mature as a family!"

Now that Dr. and Mrs. Davis are home for a while, they are taking some time to visit with their four sons and grandchildren, who are scattered from Colorado to Korea. They also were able to take short pleasure trips to Turkey, Hungary and Austria during their travels through Eastern Europe.

When Uncle Bud left Harding in 1988, friends and former students attributed to him words like "compassionate," "irreplaceable," "man of strict morals," "endearing," "universally liked and enjoyed," and "encourager." Others said he had influenced their relationship with God more than any other person.

It must be true that some things never change. ■

THE LANGUAGE OF CHANGE

Harding's computer science program comes of age

Jonathan Swift, one of the greatest satirists in world literature, once wrote, "There is nothing in this world constant but inconstancy." As Christians we hold to the promise that God is constant, but in day-to-day living, we find that the philosopher is basically on the mark.

Change is inevitable, and nowhere is this more true than in technologically intensive professions like computer science. The half-life of a computer science education has been estimated at five years. Much of what we are studying today did not exist 10 years ago — and we are keenly aware of the fact that much of what we're doing today will be obsolete in another 10 years.

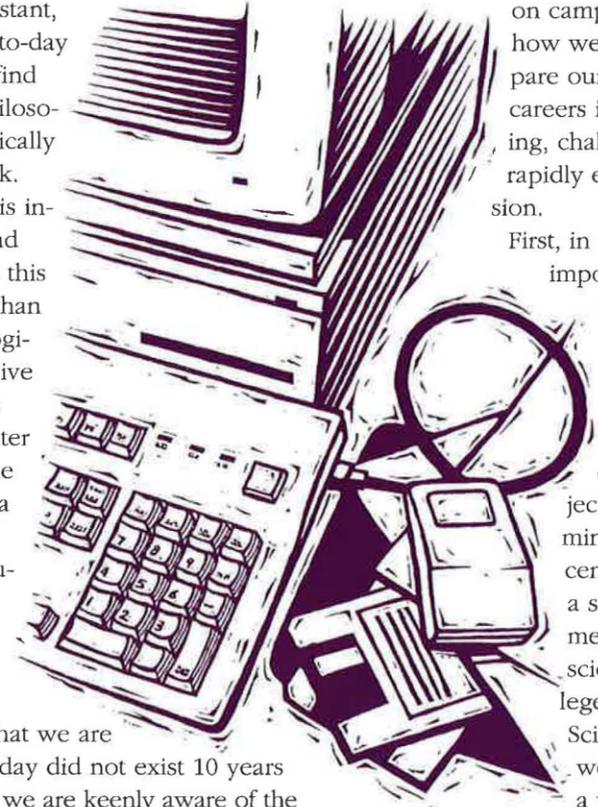

Of course, change can be either good or bad. Most technological changes hold tremendous opportunities in both directions. The key is how we deal with them. We have been blessed at Harding with a concerned administration and body of faculty and staff members who have been willing to adapt to and facilitate change, rather than react to and ignore it. As a result, several changes are now taking place on campus relative to how we teach and prepare our students for careers in this fascinating, challenging and rapidly evolving profession.

First, in recognizing the importance of the computing program and its growth potential as forecasted in governmental projections, the administration recently established a separate department of computer science in the College of Arts and Sciences. While we have enjoyed a wonderful program as part of the department of mathematics for 15 years, we believe that computer science at Harding has matured as a discipline, and that it is time for it to stand on its own.

Our students and faculty have demonstrated on several fronts that they can excel when compared to other schools that made a similar move a few years ago. For example, Harding student programming teams have not only placed but have won state programming competitions in recent years against much larger universities.

We are very excited about our new department, about the increased opportunities it will give us to showcase our students, and about the added flexibility we will have in dealing with change.

A second major change has involved revamping the computer science curriculum. In April the faculty approved major revisions, foremost being the addition of a new degree plan — the bachelor of arts degree in computer science. The degree is very similar to our bachelor of science degree in terms of the required computing courses, but the new degree allows a student to choose a minor in a field of his or her own interest rather than the large mathematics component found in the B.S. program. The new program has proven to be very popular among current students in the short time since it was enacted.

Students also continue to enjoy the option of the computer information systems degree in the School of Business. This degree program consists of the School of Business core curriculum as well as a solid component of computing courses. The proliferation of computer systems applications has generated a great variety of job possibilities in many different types of organizations. Students now enjoy increased flexibility in choosing a computing major that meets their needs.

Dr. Tim Baird, associate professor of computer science, joined the Harding faculty in 1981 and is chairman of the newly formed department of computer science. A 1979 Harding graduate, Dr. Baird went on to receive his master's and doctoral degrees at the University of Missouri at Rolla. Upon returning to Harding from educational leave in 1988, he held the only doctoral degree in artificial intelligence in Arkansas. He and his wife, Debbie, have three sons, Steven, Danny and David.

As part of the curriculum change, several of our courses have been updated to bring them in line with recent advances in the industry. Most fundamental among these changes is Harding's move away from the Pascal language toward the C programming language as our primary curriculum teaching tool. Evidence suggests this will give our students a competitive edge in the job market.

In addition, important new courses in object-oriented programming and programming for graphical user interfaces have been created, and we have increased emphasis on the Unix operating system, on data communications, and on personal computers and the Windows operating environment. The installation of Harding's new campus-wide fiber optic network, to be completed next year, will allow computer science students much more hands-on access to this technology, and with direct access to the University's computer system from their dormitory rooms, they soon can enjoy convenient, flexible working hours for class programming projects.

While much of this will sound like Greek to the casual reader, we are confident that those in the industry will recognize that we are on track with these changes. Harding is extremely fortunate to have a talented faculty who is ready, willing and able to learn and master these new technologies themselves and, in return, bring them into the classroom. Beyond that, they are able to separate and identify for the students those fundamental concepts that underlie the technology and, while external details come and go, remain essentially the same. And that, I believe, is truly the secret to our dealing with constant change. ■

Starr heads Whitewater investigation

Kenneth W. Starr ('68) has been appointed independent counsel to replace special counsel Robert Fiske in the Whitewater investigation involving President and Mrs. Bill Clinton. He now makes his home in suburban Washington.

Starr attended Harding in 1964 and 1965 for four semesters. A Republican now, he was, ironically, a member of the Young Democrats campus organization. He was also a columnist for the Bison and a member of the Student Association.

He transferred to George Washington University, where he received his baccalaureate degree. He obtained a master's degree from Brown University and his law degree from Duke University.

Starr then served as a law clerk to Chief Justice Warren E. Burger before joining the Washington office of a Los Angeles law firm. His career in private practice was interrupted in 1981 when his mentor, newly appointed Attorney General William French Smith, asked Starr to serve as his top aide in the Reagan administration.

In 1983 President Reagan appointed Starr to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit. After six years on the bench, he stepped down to become solicitor general for the Bush administration — the president's chief lawyer before the Supreme Court.

Kenneth Starr

Despite his Republican background, Starr was on Attorney General Janet Reno's short list of candidates in January for special Whitewater counsel, but she eventually selected Fiske.

In addition, Starr served as a neutral arbiter late last year between the Senate Ethics Committee and Sen. Bob Packwood (R-Ore).

He reviewed Packwood's diaries for the committee's investigation into sexual harassment charges against the senator. III

FOCUS ON THE FUTURE

Charitable remainder trust benefits students

By PHIL DIXON, DIRECTOR OF PLANNED GIFTS
AS WAS ANNOUNCED BY HARDING IN MAY OF this year, the University received a gift of $600,000 from a charitable remainder trust established by the late "Charlie" and Nadine Baum of Fayetteville, Ark. Harding has honored this couple by establishing a scholarship fund in their names and also by naming our new campus video production facility "The Charlie and Nadine Baum Video Services Center."

Even before Mr. and Mrs. Baum established their charitable remainder trust, they had a strong interest in young people and their need for a college education. This was evidenced by their having provided scholarship funds for many years to various educational institutions in Arkansas. They were especially concerned about students who might have difficulty qualifying for financial assistance and scholarship awards.

Through Mr. Baum's long association with Wal-Mart, the couple felt very fortunate to be in a position to help students obtain a college education. When they began considering their estate plan, it only seemed natural to them to leave some type of "legacy" to help assure that deserving young people would be able to receive financial assistance in attending college.

The type of trust Mr. and Mrs. Baum established allows the donor to avoid capital gains taxes on the sale of appreciated assets. It also allows low-yielding assets to be replaced with investments that increase cash flow and diversify the portfolio.
