Campaigns demonstrate students' enthusiasm for sharing

In approximately six weeks more than 500 Harding students and faculty members will venture to six continents to participate in campaigns for Christ. Twenty different countries will feel the impact of these students' enthusiasm for sharing Jesus Christ with others.

The students themselves will also be changed because summer campaigns for many of these students is one of the most rewarding experiences of their college years.

During 1995 more than 600 Harding students will have at least one campaign experience, and some will have two. For decades, participation in campaigns has been one of the distinguishing characteristics that sets Harding apart from most other schools. Harding is not only the leader in the number of students participating, but also is the leader in the breadth and scope of campaign activities.

During the summer Harding students will be found in fishing villages in Scotland, at the edge of the Outback in Australia, in hamlets in England, on the metropolitan streets of Germany, in African villages, in the impoverished areas of Honduras and in Nigerian hospitals. Wherever they are, their goal will always be the same: meeting the spiritual and physical needs of mankind.

Many colleges and universities talk about developing leadership, but leadership flows naturally out of a concern for others. Our real mission is that of developing Christian servants, people who really care about others and who show that concern for other individuals. Our efforts involve developing servants who will be great volunteers wherever they are in this world.

The Harding experience is very special to me. I came to the school as a student more than 30 years ago, and Harding changed my life. Harding continues to change the lives of students who enroll today. It is important to me that we remain true to our mission of fusing together faith, learning and living in such a way that individuals are challenged to be the best they can possibly become. We must also challenge them to make a difference in the world where we live. That to me is the Harding perspective. HB

Haynie, Kindall co-author Civil War article

Dr. Paul Haynie, associate professor of history, and former student Marty Kindall co-authored an article titled "Who Claudius" that was published in the February issue of the Journal of Mississippi History. The article is the account of their discovery of an 1863 Civil War letter and the research leading to the full identity of the letter's author, Claudius.

Pecks review educational proposals in D.C.

Dr. Jeanine Peck, professor of education, and Dr. Richard Peck, associate professor of education, were among the 93 individuals selected to review proposals for the Secretary's Fund for Innovation in Education in Washington, D.C., Aug. 1-5, 1994.

Spring enrollment exceeds last year's by 89 students

SPRING SEMESTER REGISTRATION set a new record when 3,669 students enrolled in January, exceeding last spring's enrollment by 89 students.

Approximately 3,300 students returned from the fall semester after a winter graduating class of 195 received their degrees on Dec. 17. The student population represents more than 30 foreign nations and 48 states, with only Hawaii and North Dakota not represented.

Included in the enrollment total are 144 students new to Harding this semester, 207 students enrolled at the Graduate School of Religion in Memphis, and 20 students in the Harding School of Biblical Studies.

Admissions officials report that the record spring enrollment is expected to be followed by yet another record fall enrollment. Applications for the fall semester are running nearly 9 percent ahead of figures at this time last year, and an 11 percent increase has been reported in the number of students already accepted.

Dr. Randall McLeod selected as new School of Business dean

DR. RANDALL MCLEOD, associate professor of business, was named dean of the School of Business in February.

The selection came after a six-month review of candidates by a search committee appointed by President David Burks. McLeod was the unanimous choice of the committee after interviewing candidates both on and off campus.

Regina Spirit Award Recipients. Faith Ort and Danny Mathews.

Two seniors honored as Christian servants

THE 1995 SENIOR CLASS has honored two of its fellow classmates with the Regina Spirit Award, given each year to two students who reflect Christian ideals and servanthood in their daily lives.

Faith Ort of Vancouver, Wash., and Danny Mathews of Woodlands, Texas, each received the honor, having been selected from a list of individuals nominated by Regina women's social club.

Ort has participated in summer medical mission campaigns to Nigeria, worked with spring break campaigns, and has taken advantage of chances to serve others both on campus and in the community. She is a Bible and nursing major.

Mathews has participated in campaigns to Hungary and Russia, serves as devotional director of his social club, and has taught Bible classes for young people at area congregations. A math and Bible major, Mathews is a member of two academic honor societies at Harding, Alpha Chi and Phi Eta Sigma.

The awards, which were presented in a special chapel ceremony Feb. 16, have been a tradition of the Regina social club for more than 30 years.

The search committee was chaired by Pat Bell of Little Rock, Ark., the chairman of Harding's Board of Trustees. Serving with Bell were Dr. Neale Pryor, vice president for academic affairs; Dr. Carl Mitchell, dean of the College of Bible and Religion; Barbara Statom, assistant dean of the School of Business; and Dr. David Perkins, director of the accounting program.

McLeod had served since August 1994 as acting dean following the resignation of Dr. David Tucker. McLeod is the director of Harding's Center for Professional Sales.

The new dean holds both undergraduate and graduate degrees from the University of Memphis, receiving the B.A. in 1971 and the J.D. in 1974. McLeod has been a member of the Harding faculty since 1988, having previously taught legal courses in the School of Business at the University of Memphis. He has management experience in the insurance industry and has served as a business consultant in contract negotiations and labor relations.

He is a member of the Sales and Marketing Executives Association, the American Marketing Association, the American Management Association, and the Society for the Advancement of Management.

Dallas businesses welcome American Studies students

FORTY STUDENTS TRAVELED to Dallas Feb. 22-24 as part of the 1995 American Studies Tour, planned each year by the University's American Studies Institute (ASI). During their three-day stay in the metroplex, the students met several business leaders and toured successful companies.

The first day for members of the ASI Distinguished Student Honors Program began with a breakfast meeting and morning seminar with four businessmen. The three-hour seminar provided students one-on-one access to the director of human resources for E Systems, the president of the health-care firm Lifeline Inc., the executive vice president of National Medical Enterprises, and the chairman of the board of Dal-Tile Corp. A meeting was held later in the day with executives of the Dallas Mavericks at Reunion Arena.

A day of touring in Arlington took students to a General Motors assembly plant, where they witnessed the assembly of four different types of automobiles, and to Texas Instruments, where executives of the semiconductor plant briefed them and provided a tour.

Some historical and recreational points of interest were also visited by the group, including the assassination site and memorial of John F. Kennedy, the baseball museum at the new Ballpark at Arlington facility, and the Planet Hollywood restaurant.

Joining the students was faculty sponsor Dr. Bob Reely, who coordinated the tour and serves as associate executive director of the American Studies Institute.

Forum stresses America's principles

STARTED BY CIVITAN Clubs in 1956, the National Leadership Forum is now in its 39th year of re-affirming America's principles and heritage. Harding's campus will host the annual event June 11-16 for the more than 400 high school students expected to attend.

The program is designed to encourage student leadership capabilities, values, and discussions on issues from AIDS to homelessness.

Scheduled to speak at the forum are Cambodian native Dith Pran, whose personal story was featured in the movie "The Killing Fields"; Mississippi Highway Patrol Officer Pete Collins; "Sneak Previews" co-host Michael Medved; lecturer Pat Socia with her message about abstinence titled "Walking the Sexual Freedom Road"; and Arkansas Lt. Gov. Mike Huckabee.

Cost of the forum is $85, which covers the entire week's housing, meals and materials. The seminar fee is paid by the civic club or organization sponsoring each participant. In addition to Civitan and other civic clubs, the forum is also sponsored by Harding's American Studies Institute and Farm Bureaus throughout the South. For more information, write to National Leadership Forum, Harding University, Box 762, Searcy, AR 72149-0001; or call (501) 279-4497.

Carson, Morgan lead education workshop

Delores Carson, professor of education, and Dr. Jan Morgan, assistant professor of education, presented a workshop Dec. 8, 1994, in Little Rock, Ark., at an area dean's symposium on education. The workshop incorporated the latest instructional strategies that will be needed in classrooms of the future.

Dixon selected as officer of state association

Ann Dixon, assistant reference librarian, has been appointed to a one-year term as secretary-treasurer of the resources and technical services division of the Arkansas Library Association.

Pacheco organizes computer contest

Ron Pacheco, assistant professor of mathematics and computer science, organized a five-state regional computer programming contest held on campus Nov. 5, 1994. He served as regional chief judge and wrote the problem set for the contest.

Construction has begun on the new married-student apartments located at the corner of Benton and Park streets. The complex is scheduled for completion in August by the beginning of the fall semester.

Computer society awards two seniors

Seniors Scott Field of Waynesboro, Va., and Harry Garner of Mt. Pleasant, Tenn., have been named recipients of achievement awards by the Arkansas Society for Computer and Information Technology. Field was named Outstanding Recipient, and Garner was named Distinguished Recipient. Both received cash awards at the formal awards ceremony in March.

James attends communication conference

Dr. Mike James, associate professor of communication and chair of the department, was among 75 educators chosen to attend the all-expenses-paid conference of the International Radio-Television Society Feb. 8-12 in New York City. They met with leaders of the broadcasting industry to investigate new communication technologies.

Students join in nationwide "Cows for Croatia" project

STUDENTS AT HARDING and other Christian colleges are coming to the aid of the people of war-torn Croatia through a unique program coordinated by Manna International of Redwood City, Calif.

"Cows for Croatia" is a joint effort by Manna and students to restore the country's dairy industry, which has been critically dismantled during fighting there, particularly in the hard-hit farming communities of Daruvar and Dubrovnik. Colleges participating in the project are competing to raise the most money for the purchase of cows and calves. As each animal is purchased, it is branded with the sponsoring school's insignia and is given a name by the students of that school.

Manna International hopes each college will sponsor at least 20 animals. The cows, at $800 each, and the calves, at $550 each, are being purchased in Europe and delivered to Croatia. The school with the most unusual fund-raising project and the most media coverage will receive a "bonus calf" for its part of the effort.

Since late January the Student Association, under the leadership of President Nathan Mellor, has sponsored numerous "Cows for Croatia" fund-raising events involving the entire campus community. Mellor said that every dollar donated has gone directly to the dairy project, which is "a great mixture of fun and service that the students are being very receptive to."

The college raising the most money for the project will be able to send two students to Croatia for a six-week missions internship this summer with all expenses paid by Manna.

Clubs, churches and other groups may participate in the project as well. For more information about the project, contact the Student Association Office at (501) 279-4323.

December Ceremonies

Dr. Bill Banowsky, president of National Medical Enterprises and former president of Pepperdine University and the University of Oklahoma, addresses the 195 graduates at fall commencement exercises Dec. 17, 1994.

"Leadership's Response to Change" topic of May's annual church leadership seminar

ONE OF THE CHURCH'S hottest topics today will be addressed May 5-6 at the College of Bible and Religion's annual church leadership seminar, "Leadership's Response to Change." It will attempt to distinguish between what can and cannot be changed in the Lord's church.

Six of Harding's Bible professors will address such sub-topics as "Attitudes Toward Change," "Dying for Change vs. Dying from Change," "Jesus and Change," and "The Restoration Movement and Change." Scheduled to speak are Jimmy Allen, Dr. Allan Isom, Dr.

Carl Mitchell, Dr. Duane Warden, Will Ed Warren and Dr. Flavil Yeakley. Warren will also serve as host for the seminar.

The seminar is open to elders, deacons, ministers and others in church leadership roles. Participants will be exposed to the practical and theoretical aspects of leadership.

Cost for the seminar is $10 per individual. Meals and lodging are available on campus for an additional charge. One hour of credit may be earned in the ministry division of the College of Bible and Religion. For additional information call (501) 279-4660.

Urban ministry degree meets needs of today's church

AS CHURCHES OF CHRIST prepare to enter the 21st century, congregations face a world vastly different from the one their forefathers knew. Today most members are found in urban or suburban congregations instead of the rural congregations more prevalent in the early 1900s.

To prepare students for ministries that will be effective in urban settings, Harding's Graduate School of Religion in Memphis, Tenn., has announced a new master of religion degree program in urban ministry that will be available beginning this fall.

"Anyone preparing for ministry today will be meeting people who are different from their own background. This program will tackle that issue, as well as other issues of ministry in urban settings," said Dr. Evertt Huffard, professor of missions.

The 42-hour degree will include courses specifically covering Old Testament theology, hermeneutics, congregational ministry, spiritual leadership, urban ministry and missionary anthropology, among other core degree requirements. The degree will culminate with a practicum in urban ministry, allowing students to synthesize the academics of the degree with their own personal goals for ministry.

UPLIFT and Outreach youth camps set for June

THE MUSIC OF ACAPPELLA, song leader David Slater, and speakers Jeff Walling and Jerome Williams are featured parts of the scheduled line-up for UPLIFT 1995.

UPLIFT, Harding's annual summer Bible camp for young people, guides participants through a daily schedule of challenging Bible classes while allowing ample time for recreation and fellowship.

Now in its 12th year, UPLIFT's growth has prompted the camp to be held in two one-week sessions for the second consecutive year. Session 1 will be June 17-22, with Session 2 the following week of June 24-29. Each session is limited to 800 campers, who must be entering eighth through 12th grades. The cost for the week-long camp is $100.

In addition to the UPLIFT sessions, a new camp called "Outreach" is planned for June 11-16. This camp is designed for Christian young people who desire to develop their leadership talents and abilities. Outreach is open only to high school juniors and seniors.

For information about either UPLIFT or Outreach, call the Office of Church Relations at (501) 279-4660.

AWH celebrates 30th anniversary

FEB. 4 MARKED THE 30TH anniversary of the Associated Women for Harding (AWH), the support organization founded at the request of former President George S. Benson in 1965.

With 120 charter members and dues of $12 per year, the organization now has chapters in Searcy, Newport, Jonesboro and Hot Springs, Ark., and in Memphis, Tenn. Dues have never increased.

Through sales of the ever-popular AWH cookbooks and numerous other fund-raising projects, the group provides scholarships each year to deserving Harding students. In 1995 more than 30 students will benefit from the $38,000 raised from last year's AWH "Brick-by-Brick" project, which sold personalized bricks to pave the University's new C.L. Kay Plaza.

Nominations for Distinguished Alumnus sought

THE DISTINGUISHED Alumnus Award is presented each year during the Black and Gold Banquet at Homecoming as recognition of service to the church and to God, a life consistent with Harding's ideals, distinguished professional achievement that has merited the honor and praise of peers and colleagues, and for active support of the University. Your participation is requested by submitting nominations and supporting letters to Harding's Office of Alumni Relations, Box 768, Searcy, AR 72149-0001. The deadline for nominations is June 1.

On-line access available for library holdings

The Brackett Library's on-line catalog is now available for alumni to access. For remote access, first connect to the Internet, then telnet library.harding.edu, and then enter OPAC as username. No password is required. Anyone accessing the catalog can determine available library books and initiate an interlibrary loan request at their local library.

Ryan a presenter at Acoustical Society meeting

Dr. Bill Ryan, associate professor of physical science, attended the 128th annual convention of the Acoustical Society of America in Austin, Texas, Nov. 28-Dec. 2, 1994. He was invited to participate in a session about architectural acoustics and presented his paper "Auditorium Characteristics and A Cappella Music."

Student Lectureships

Senior youth ministry major Kelly Montgomery of Memphis, Tenn., teaches a men's class during the annual Student Lectureship in February. The 1995 Lectureship focused on the parables of Jesus.

Paul Simmons

Lori Hendricks

Thad Hill

Lorne Latiker

Ethan Sheffield

Simmons claims third All-American

SENIOR LINEBACKER/defensive end Paul Simmons is now Harding's most-honored football player, garnering his third consecutive NAIA All-American First Team Award.

Simmons also was listed on the Associated Press and C.M. Frank All-American first teams. The AP and Frank All-Americans are selected from NAIA, NCAA II and NCAA III programs.

Two seniors, Thad Hill (football) and Lorne Latiker (football), and two juniors, Ethan Sheffield (football) and Lori Hendricks (volleyball), were given NAIA All-American honorable mention status. Hendricks is Harding's first volleyball All-American.

NAIA All-American Scholar-Athlete awards went to football seniors Paul Mann and Casey Smith. Both are repeat honorees from last year.

Six Harding athletes have been named to CoSIDA Area VI GTE Academic All-American teams. They are volleyball player Amy Deuel and gridgers Clay Beason, Lee Edwards, Paul Mann, Paul Maple and Paul Simmons.

Over the Crowd. Bridget Benson (23) goes up for two in action against Union University. Benson and Angie Fouts (45) are both AIC Players of the Year.

Lady Bisons capture third in conference

PLAYING 11 GAMES against top-25 teams, the Lady Bison basketball team finished the regular season at 19-13 to claim third place in the AIC.

In games against AIC co-champions Arkansas Tech University and the University of Arkansas at Monticello, the Lady Bisons lost twice to Tech by four points each game and suffered two losses to UAM by one.

The Lady Bisons cracked the NAIA top 25 for four consecutive weeks in January.

Sophomores Angie Fouts and Bridget Benson led the team statistically. Fouts became the school's single-season rebound leader (333) and is only the second player to go over 600 points for a season.

Both Fouts (1,018) and Benson (1,046) are over the career 1,000-point mark in their second year of play, putting them fourth and fifth in Harding career scoring records. Both were named to the All-AIC team.

Seniors Jama Fullerton and Cindy Camp ended their careers with a total of 80 victories in four years. Fullerton is the career leader in assists and three-point shots and is third on the career scoring list with 1,076 points. Camp played in more games than any other Lady Bison and scored more than 900 points in her career.

Men's basketball team eclipses record

THE 1994-95 BISON BASKETBALL TEAM BECAME THE winningest team in school history by posting a 20-9 regular season record. No other Bison cage team had won more than 18 games in a season.

Coach Jeff Morgan's team tied Southern Arkansas University for third place in the Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference with a 10-6 record. The Bisons were almost unbeatable on their home court, finishing the season with an 11-2 record in Ganus Athletic Center.

Highlighting the season was a victory over Birmingham Southern (29-2), ranked fifth in the NAIA, and two wins each over Arkansas Tech University and the University of Central Arkansas. Arkansas Tech was the AIC champion and ranked ninth in the NAIA.

Junior Jason Cooper led the team in scoring with an average of 15.5 points per game. Cooper and Sigmond Donelson, the only senior on the team, were named to the All-AIC team.

Freshman Cliff Miller led the AIC in assists, and junior Brad Daughtry was second. No other Bison appeared among the statistical leaders in the conference.

Tennis teams begin season nationally ranked 13th and 14th

THE LADY BISON TENNIS team began the season ranked 14th in the NAIA, one behind the men's team's ranking of 13th. In its fourth year of existence, the Lady Bison team is seeking its third AIC title, returning the top six players including All-Americans Alicia Rojas and Jessica Ruiz. Newcomers Shauna Hunter and Christina Rodriguez will challenge for the top six positions.

The Bisons lost a hard-fought battle to Ouachita Baptist University (ranked eighth in the NAIA) for the AIC championship last year, and will be the only conference team to again challenge the Tigers. Missing from the team are Ignacio Ruiz (#1) and Arturo Aguilar (#4), but freshmen Arturo Rodriguez and Guillermo Hernandez have been called to fill the void.

The ambitious schedule includes a number of NCAA Division I teams, highly ranked NAIA teams, and the AIC double round-robin.

Men's track seeks third straight title

WITH SEVEN ALL-CONFERENCE performers returning and a squad of 35 athletes, the men's track team is favored to win its third consecutive title.

Leading the way is sophomore Bryan Rampey, a double winner in the shot and discus last year. Also returning are junior high hurdle champ Clay Beason and sophomore 200-meter winner Jermaine Cuffie. Other All-AIC runners are junior Jonathan Griffin, distances; junior Jess Wiley, hurdles; and senior Jeremy Winters, sprints. The 1993 high jump champion, Sigmoid Donelson, is back after missing the 1994 season.

A distant second to Southern Arkansas University last year, the Lady Bisons have several talented athletes but lack the depth to be serious contenders for first place. All-American high jumper Penny Mayberry, a senior, will do well in several events, and freshmen Ericka Harris and Amy Wiley will give the team points in sprints and hurdles, respectively.

Golf team vying for AIC honors

COACH SCOTT RAGSDALE is ready to take the Harding golf program to the level of the early '80s when the Bisons won four successive AIC titles.

In his third year as coach, Ragsdale's 1994 team challenged perennial power Arkansas Tech for the championship only to drop to second in the final round of play. ATU appears to be the team to beat again in 1995.

During fall competition the Bisons defeated all the AIC opponents on their schedule, including Arkansas Tech, and finished third in the prestigious Missouri Southern Invitational tournament. Sophomore Bruce Johnston was runner-up to the medalist in the Missouri competition.

In addition to Johnston, an All-District performer, Ragsdale will rely heavily on sophomore Brad Williams, the 1994 AIC medalist. Junior James Clark and sophomore Brad Wood also return as regulars and All-District performers from last year.

Baseball team works to improve on '94 winning record

THE BASEBALL TEAM enters the 1995 season hoping to improve on last year's record-setting season. Keys to improving on the 29-22 record involve players successfully changing positions. Some freshmen not only must play, but they must play well.

Mike Anders, a transfer student, is the starting catcher. Joe Daniels went from catcher to second base to replace Jason French, who graduated.

Ryan Rana, a freshman from Newport, Ark., replaced graduated senior Jerry Laird at first base. A highly touted high school left-hander, Jeremy Pharr, is challenging Zach Steed and Scott Waite for the right field position and may earn a spot in the pitching rotation. The other outfielders are senior Wade Wilson and junior Daryl Johnson. Johnson was the AIC's best percentage base stealer with 28 of 31 last year.

Todd Miller at shortstop has recovered from broken bones in both arms from injuries last fall and is a key hitter in the line-up. All-Conference performer Kevin Burton is the third baseman, where he performed well last year. When Burton takes the mound, freshman Ryan Tharp or Anders will play third base. Freshmen Ronnie and Patrick Lightfoot are capable players at second base and shortstop.

On the mound for the Bisons, Tim Lacefield and Justin Florio will have prominent roles with help from Pharr, Charley Moore and transfer Kevin Smith.

The 56-game schedule includes 28 conference games and features contests against highly ranked NAIA teams including Mobile College, Belhaven and Spring Hill College.

The Multi-Media PROFESSOR

by SCOTT MORRIS photography by JEFF MONTGOMERY

THE IMAGE A TYPICAL COLLEGE classroom brings to mind is that of a blackboard and its accompanying chalk residue, the overhead transparencies that at times seem to cause temporary blindness from their intense glare, and a professor firmly rooted behind a lectern.

But at Harding, the use of multi-media technology in the classroom is putting an end to such antiquated perceptions. And the driving force behind the changes is Dr. Gordon Sutherlin, associate professor of education and director of undergraduate teacher education. He is a self-professed computer buff who taught computer science at the high school level before joining the School of Education in 1990.

Sutherlin carries much more to his classes than his roll book. When you catch him heading through the halls to class, he's pushing a four-foot-long, double-decked cart loaded with enough equipment to make even the most ardent computer whiz surge with jealousy.

The cart includes such items as Macintosh and IBM computers, a PC-TV converter, a remote-controlled mouse, an art pad, a digital camera, a compact disc interactive player, a miniature hand scanner and much more. And Sutherlin finds a way to use all of it in his class presentations.

His remote mouse, for example, allows him to meander through the classroom and be more a part of the class. He can change the screen or program the computer to move to the next point of his presentation from anywhere in the room. This, he says, is the feature that has been most impressive to students. When Sutherlin has graphs, notes or charts on the screen, his art pad allows him to highlight or underline points he wants to stress to his students.

Further use of the technology has enabled all educational equipment used by students in the Curriculum Lab and the Writing Lab to be photographed and placed on CD-ROM so that Sutherlin can bring up the items on his computer during class and show students the actual instruments they will soon be using for hands-on training. And with his PC-TV converter, he can take that same image and transfer it to a television monitor. This allows for full, bright color photos and reduces the necessity of a darkened room such presentations once required.

A digital camera, which comes with both macro and wide-angle lenses, enables Sutherlin to put up to 50 pictures on a 2-inch disk. He has used the camera to make pictures of the class or individual students during sessions when he was giving them hands-on lessons with the equipment.

"Doing that has worked great when we review," Sutherlin said. "I can say, 'Do you remember when we were studying this?' And I can then pull up on screen the pictures of them from the day we actually studied what we are reviewing. It provides them an instant visual."

And a variety of software used by Sutherlin further enhances classroom instruction. A laserdisc player with myriad picture possibilities can be used to bring a selected picture onto the television monitor.

"Say a class is studying Jupiter and the teacher asks a student what color the planet is. The child may say blue. Then, using the laserdisc player, the teacher can program the picture of Jupiter to appear, and the student discovers that Jupiter is actually red. It's a very effective instructional tool for the teacher," Sutherlin said.

Whether the software comes in the form of a 12-inch disk of pictures, an interactive storybook, a variety of drawing programs, or through the use of a sound card (which Sutherlin occasionally uses to provide himself with a round of applause after driving home an important point), Sutherlin stresses that the teacher is still the most important tool in the classroom.

"Education is a social activity — we'll never get away from the teacher. The armed services have tried not using teachers, and it was not successful. There still needs to be that social interaction with a teacher. But technology will give teachers more time to teach, therefore enabling students to learn more," he emphasized.

Sutherlin presents his education students with a wide variety of equipment knowing that they soon will be expected to use similar equipment in their classrooms once they become schoolteachers.

"I'm just preparing students for technology in the classroom, although I admit that I present a wider range of equipment than they may end up using right away. They may teach at a school that has only one piece of this equipment, but at least they'll know how to use it. I guarantee that schools will have more of it in the future," Sutherlin said.

Students have been amazed with the technology Sutherlin features in his classes, but some have expressed doubts that schools will have such equipment for their classrooms.

"They're realizing, though, that more and more school classrooms are being equipped, and there is now a demand for teachers with technology experience. Many schools that have such equipment are wasting their resources because they have no one experienced in operating it," Sutherlin said.

The School of Education's equipment has been purchased over the past three years, and more is added each year. The school has used all of its equipment funds to enhance the development of technology in education.

"It's hard to stay current because it takes money, but we're fortunate to have the latest in equipment. There are larger public universities that don't have the equipment we're using, and they have been pretty impressed with what we have here at Harding," Sutherlin said.

Although Sutherlin received his doctorate in instructional design and technology, he did not learn to use the equipment via his educational process. Attendance at academic meetings and many hours of self-taught education have given him the expertise he now possesses. In fact, that expertise has enabled him to conduct workshops and share Harding's equipment on local, state and national levels.

"There's really no place to go and learn it because some of this equipment didn't even exist a year ago," Sutherlin said.

While all the technology of a multi-media classroom can sometimes dazzle an audience of students, Sutherlin strives to stress the practicality of the equipment.

"These are tools they will soon be using in their classrooms on a daily basis. Learning to use them," he said, "is going to allow them to save time and to do a better teaching job, which should be the goal of all effective teachers." ■

and DON SHACKELFORD

HARDING'S THREE INTERNATIONAL STUDIES programs offer some of the most exciting learning and travel opportunities available to our students — and while the attraction is broad, each program offers its own strengths.

Harding University in Florence, Italy (HUF), the oldest of the international programs, appeals especially to students interested in the fine arts. Harding University in England (HUE), offered in London, has a distinctive appeal to those interested in history, music and British literature. But it is the particular spiritual orientation of Harding University in Greece (HUG), which meets in the Athens suburb of Glyfada, that draws students anxious to study their Christian history in person.

HUG's first class of 31 students participated in the program last fall. Although the program offered plenty of opportunities for fun in the sun on beautiful Greek islands, drinking cappuccino in sun-splashed outdoor cafés, studying Greek mythology and philosophy, seeing soccer matches at the Olympic Stadium, and "shopping

'til you drop" in the marvelous shops and bazaars on two continents, many of the students' experiences were indicative of the spiritual emphasis of the program. In fact, several students chose HUG primarily because of the opportunity to visit the Holy Lands, where they could "walk in the steps of Jesus."

As part of an eight-day trip to Israel, the students spent three days in Jerusalem visiting such sites as the Mount of Olives, the Garden of Gethsemane, the Kidron Valley, and the West (Wailing) Wall of the Temple. A devotional on the Mount of Olives made passages from the Gospels particularly meaningful.

A visit to Bethlehem, Peter's house in Capernaum, the Sea of Galilee, the Jordan River, the Mount of the Beatitudes and the Dead Sea brought to life these places the students had only read about. Studying the Scriptures at the actual places where Jesus walked and talked when He was on earth was a sobering experience.

During a 10-day trip to Turkey and northern Greece, the group took a ship to the island of Samos and disembarked at Kusadasi, Turkey, for a tour of the Seven Churches of Asia. The books of Acts and Ephesians, particularly Paul's missionary journeys, came alive among the ancient ruins of Ephesus and the sites of the other Sea of Galilee. On a replica of an ancient fishing boat like the kind Peter may have used, HUG students watch a fisherman cast his net.

Surveying the Site. Before the backdrop of the Jordan mountain range in Qumran, Israel, the HUG group views the caves where the Dead Sea Scrolls were found.

Opulent Splendor. In Istanbul, Turkey, HUG students enter the main gate of the Sultan's Palace.

Walking Where Paul Walked. Students trek through ancient Corinth's main street that runs past the agora, or marketplace.

churches. And Revelation 2 and 3 became more powerful when standing on the sites of the cities of Laodicea, Sardis, Pergamum, Thyatira, Philadelphia and Smyrna. Visiting these ancient ruins helped the students understand the Scriptures explored in their HUG courses "The Bible and Archaeology" and "Paul."

While in Turkey, the students also took the opportunity to visit ancient Troy and the modern Moslem city of Istanbul, where waking up to the call for morning prayers blaring from colorful minarets gave them real perspective on world religions. Paul's missionary journeys were featured in northern Greece at sites like Thessalonica, Philippi and Berea, and as we traced Paul's steps to Athens and Mars Hill, his sermon in Acts 17 took on personal significance for all of us.

HUG students also took a four-day cruise aboard the World Renaissance. The luxury cruise ship stopped at such major Greek islands as Santorini and Mykonos. Each island has its own spectacular beauty and attraction, but Crete, Rhodes and Patmos have biblical connections. Our daily devotionals on the observation deck and seeing the cave on Patmos where John supposedly wrote the book of Revelation were blessings that will not soon be forgotten.

The concluding pleasure of the HUG program was our opportunity to work and worship with the International Church of Christ in Athens. Christians from 17 different nationalities worship with that church. Our students and faculty preached there regularly, led singing, taught Bible classes, and were an encouragement to the missionaries. Worshiping with the International Church gave new meaning to passages like Colossians 3:11, where Paul wrote, "There is neither Greek nor Jew . . . for Christ is all and in all." To be a part of that congregation was a blessing.

All the international programs have their appeal, but HUG is the program of choice among students desiring spiritual development and insight. Living on the beach of the Aegean Sea, attending Mozart concerts at the Herodes Atticus Theater, and visiting the Greek Parliament and Delphi are only added incentives for a semester in Greece. ❏

Dr. Tom Howard, professor and chairman of the department of history and social sciences, served in the fall of 1994 as the first faculty member of Harding's new international studies program in Greece. Dr. Howard, on the faculty since 1972, is a two-time recipient of the student-nominated Distinguished Teacher Award.

FIRE & ICE

For alumni Teresa Purcell and Scott Rushton, making movie magic is all in a day's work.

IT'S A COLD WINTER DAY IN SUBURBAN CHICAGO IN 1990, and Teresa Purcell is unwrapping 40 pounds of individually wrapped licorice caramels.

It's her job.

Teresa and her husband, Bill, are working on the set of the movie "Home Alone," the blockbuster hit about a boy named Kevin who finds himself alone at Christmas protecting his house from two bungling burglars. Their company, Down and Dirty Special Effects, is handling all the film's now-famous pranks and effects.

As professionals of their craft, they are skilled at creating the physical special effects that bring realism to a movie — explosions, bullet hits, weather elements and mechanical gags, such as breakaway furniture, people flying through the air, elevator doors opening on cue, and cars operating themselves. And in "Home Alone" they have the added task of bringing realism to the booby traps set by young Kevin to deter his persistent foes.

The upcoming scene calls for one of the burglars to try entering the house (which, actually, is entirely constructed in an abandoned high school), and as he heads up the basement stairs, he finds his shoes, socks and feet stuck in thick tar covering the steps. Using real tar is out of the question, so Teresa substitutes the caramels — meticulously melted into a dark, gooey paste. The scene is saved.

Maybe it saved the movie, too. After all, "Home Alone" went on to become the highest-grossing comedy film of all time. But the Purcells have worked together on more than 20 other feature and made-for-television movies since their marriage in 1986, including dirty' — you have to work off the top of your head to compromise or redo what you'd already planned to do. That's where the name comes from."

Bill, Teresa and their company moved in early February to Bon Aqua, Tenn., just west of Nashville, leaving their home of several years in Heber Springs, Ark. There they have joined up with Teresa's brother, Scott Rushton, who became the third member of the company's staff five years ago during the filming of "Home Alone." The move allows the threesome to finally work together as a team year-round and is opening some additional doors of opportunity for the company. However, as Teresa explained, the nature of their business allows them the freedom to live just about anywhere.

"We deal on the telephone and with fax machines," she said, "and we're often flown to interviews for film jobs, so it doesn't really matter where we live. We can usually be on location anywhere in half a day if we need to be. We live a gypsy lifestyle much of the time anyway, so returning home here gets us away from the craziness of it all."

A movie career, of sorts, has always been Teresa's dream. Having grown up in Searcy, the daughter of Harding Biology Professor Bill Rushton, she took lead roles in campus drama productions while at Harding and was a member of Campus Players and Alpha Psi Omega honorary drama fraternity. After graduating in 1972 with a bachelor's degree in speech, she taught school for a year in Arizona, but her interest in theater and film soon took her out of the classroom.

Being from a small town and not wanting to tackle the big-city glitz of Los Angeles, Teresa compromised and moved to

"Born on the Fourth of July," "Colors," "Passenger 57," "The Chase" and Disney's "Heavyweights," which hit theaters in February.

The Purcells also have worked with countless celebrities and other famous notables (their favorites include John Goodman and Ron Howard), and they have lots of interesting tales to tell. Like the one about Bill's arguments with egocentric director Oliver Stone: "Even if you offered us a million dollars, we wouldn't work with him again!" Or lunch with Sylvester Stallone:

"It's like eating with a wrestler. He's always posing." Or their experience with British director Ken Russell: "Everyone had to play 'God Save the Queen' on kazoos the first day on the set."

Because of these incidents and many others, Bill and Teresa expect the unusual in a business where nothing is usual. Take the name of their company for starters: "Down and Dirty." Its logo features circus lettering, a bomb with a fuse, and a globe, each symbolizing the chaos of the business.

"We really work in a circus atmosphere," Teresa explained. "Everyone with trucks and equipment pulls up to some random, pre-arranged point, and they pile out and start setting up their gear — just like a circus. The bomb in the logo is there because we specialize in pyrotechnics, and the globe means we'll work anywhere."

"There's a lot of prep time in our business, but no matter how well you're prepared, some days you'll get to the set and someone's changed his mind about something in a scene. All of a sudden you're 'down and

Dallas, which had become a movie production center in its own right in the early '70s. She jumped into the local cultural scene, acting in community theater, handling stage props for Dallas' ballet and opera companies, and working with the city's Broadway Series, which allowed her to rub elbows with legends like Betty Davis, Yul Brenner and Carol Channing.

She also found herself working with the wardrobe and set crews on several feature and made-for-television films. It was while working in Dallas as a set dresser on the film "Robocop" that Teresa met Bill in 1986.

A licensed pyrotechnist, Bill had been hired to coordinate the big explosions and plentiful bullet hits in "Robocop," a dark, futuristic sci-fi thriller. It was not exactly a romantic setting for love to bloom, but Bill and Teresa were married when "Robocop" finished production several months later.

Bill is a native Californian who began working in 1965 in the major film studios' "prop shops," the forerunner to today's special effects crews. He cut his teeth at Paramount Pictures and Fox Studios, working on the sets of TV shows like "Lost in Space," "Batman," "Green Acres," "Bonanza" and "Little House on the Prairie," as well as films like "Dr. Doolittle," "Planet of the Apes" and "True Grit."

As Bill's career in special effects took off, his credits grew to include other big films like "M.A.S.H.," "Star Trek II," "Red Dawn" and "Rambo." After breaking away from the studios and free-lancing for several years, Bill decided to start his own company.

He left California behind him and joined Teresa in Dallas when they married, having grown tired of life so near the action in Hollywood. But the two soon decided to leave city life altogether and retreat to the country in Heber Springs to build their successful business.

Now that they are in Tennessee, they no longer are separated from Scott, who is the company's "first man," Bill's direct assistant. Scott is also a Harding alumnus, graduating in 1986 with a business degree, and his wife, the former Freda Nelson, is a 1978 alumna of the School of Education.

The intact team now stands ready to transport its "traveling toolbox" — a 14-foot truck and a trailer loaded with supplies and props — to film locations anywhere around the world. And as Bill explained, whenever a film's production manager or producer hires them to handle its special effects, their job is simple: "to take a movie director's vision and make it happen."

When the Purcells are offered a film job, they first receive a script and break it down scene by scene to identify the stunts, gags and elements they will be responsible for staging. They then develop a budget, make a financial deal with the studio, and agree to be on location at an appointed time.

Bill's role as special effects coordinator makes him responsible for all decisions made by the film's effects department. He decides how all the effects will be done, attends the production meetings, and spends a great deal of time working with city fire marshals and other officials to obtain special legal permission for any effects, such as big explosions, that could violate city codes.

Scott assists him in physically engineering the effects so that they come off flawlessly.

Teresa, as effects production coordinator, is Bill's right arm in the business. She is responsible for ordering supplies and keeping inventory, handling paperwork like purchase orders and check requests, writing letters to city officials, hiring extra crew when necessary, and working with film accounting departments to make sure they stay on or under budget.

Sometimes the Purcells get pulled into the movie action themselves. Teresa had a cameo as a bag lady in "The Chase," which starred Charlie Sheen, but her scene ended up on the cutting room floor. Bill, however, can be seen in action as a police officer in "Home Alone," chasing actor Macauley Culkin across an ice rink crowded with skaters. He even got to take a fall.

"Working on films is rewarding but very demanding because it literally requires all your time," Teresa said. "Everything else in your life is just put on hold. We usually work 12 to 14 hours a day, six days a week, so there's of surprise "problems," Teresa said, and "Home Alone" was no exception. When an unexpected change of weather melted the snow in Winnetka, the posh suburb of Chicago where exterior shots of "Kevin's" house were filmed, Bill and his crew of 25 had to create the snow — an unexpected expense to the studio of more than $150,000.

During five weeks of exterior shooting, Bill and his crew went into "down and dirty" mode to obtain more than 360 tons of snow-cone ice from a local ice company, all of which had to be carried in bags into the neighborhood. It would have been cheaper to rent an ice grinder and make the snow themselves, but the neighborhood's strict noise ordinances would not permit it. The "snow" was placed strategically where cameras would get close-ups, and foam and batting were used in the distance. Snow seen falling outside the house was no problem; they used 4,000 pounds of instant potato flakes.

And the scene on the ice rink? Bill's crew created the ice rink with a fire hose — and then it snowed 14 inches the night before shooting the scene. Bill found himself running around town in 17-degree weather, purchasing snow blowers at outrageous prices to keep the heavy precipitation off the ice. The result of a 12-hour day on the ice rink, including the filming of his cameo appearance, was a sequence that lasted only seconds. Ironically, Bill had turned down the "Home Alone" job three times because winter work in Chicago did not sound very appealing.

Too bad you can't make snow from caramels. ❄️

Let it Snow. The Purcells create a snow storm using commercial potato flakes on the set of "Home Alone."

just enough time to go 'home' — wherever that may be — sleep, and get back to work. Unless we have problems to deal with — then we don't go home!"

University celebrates banner year in giving

Nearly $23 million breaks all records

by PHILLIP TUCKER

IN 1994 HARDING'S MANY FRIENDS affirmed their belief in the University's uniquely Christian mission with gifts totaling $22,987,152.

By far the biggest year in gifts ever, 1994 brought an increase of 156 percent over last year's record-breaking total of $8,980,179. A significant portion of those gifts represented a tremendous boost to the current five-year "Dream Continues" Campaign, which began in 1993. The Campaign now stands at 73.9 percent of its $52 million goal in gifts and pledges.

A breakdown of 1994's gift total included $2.2 million for the annual operating fund, which is used to make up the $2.3 million difference between actual student costs and what students pay for tuition and fees; $5.2 million in capital fund gifts, most of which was for the new McInteer Bible and World Missions Center; and $13.8 million in endowment and deferred gifts, and $1.7 million in restricted gifts, all of which are earmarked for specific purposes and are not for general use by the University.

A total of 6,128 alumni, businesses, foundations, churches and other friends blessed Harding with gifts in 1994, and 1,136 of them had never given before — the largest number of new donors in four years. Alumni giving continued to be strong, as 33.3 percent of Harding's family of loyal alumni gave gifts of $2.9 million, and Harding's ever-supportive board of trustees and members of the President's Council contributed $2.1 million.

With a $6.2 million gift from the Carl and Lura Moore Estate, gifts from estates had its best year ever, with a 244 percent increase over 1993 figures. Foundation gifts also were the largest ever at $4.3 million, including major gifts from the J.E. and L.E. Mabee Foundation ($2 million), and the Harvey and Bernice Jones Foundation ($1 million).

Giving from churches has steadily increased during the past five years, and 1994 was no exception. More than 130 congregations gave $182,773, most of them specifically supporting scholarships and general operational expenses for programs like the marriage and family therapy program, the School of Biblical Studies, and the Graduate School of Religion in Memphis, Tenn. The Graduate School enjoyed a record year, as a wave of support following 1993's administration building fire brought gifts totaling $613,780.

Gifts from businesses were up 57 percent from the previous year to $748,389, thanks in part to support for the Searcy Fund Drive, which obtained five-year gifts and pledges totaling $1.3 million from Searcy businesses and individuals. Corporate matching gifts reached $205,227. ■

What is the endowment fund?

THE $6.2 MILLION GIFT FROM THE CARL and Lura Moore Estate in 1994 — the largest single gift in Harding's 71-year history — went entirely into the University's Endowment Fund, increasing it to about $30 million. Considering annuity and life income assets that have not yet matured, Harding's endowment assets total about $44.9 million.

But the actual endowment funds are never to be touched, so why increase the fund?

An increase in the Endowment Fund is beneficial because of the interest income generated from it.

This income is used to fund general operational expenses, scholarships, maintenance, shortfalls in the Annual Fund, unexpected needs, and so on. A larger endowment fund means smaller increases in tuition, room and board, as well as funding for programs that may not be adequately funded.

The Endowment Fund assures stability for Harding's future. President David Burks hopes to see the fund increase to $75 million by 1999, the year of Harding's 75th anniversary. ■

Alumni support is crucial

HARDING'S ALUMNI CONTINUE TO BE the most supportive and dependable of the University's friends. Last year 5,084 alumni generously gave a record $2.9 million, a 142 percent increase over 1993's gifts.

Total giving was up, but the percentage of alumni donors decreased from 39.3 to 33.3 percent. (Alumni percentage is calculated based on Alumni Association membership, which includes all graduates and non-graduate donors with current addresses.) When compared to the national average of 21.4 percent, based on alumni giving at all U.S. institutions, Harding's alumni donor percentage is high, but when compared to the 32.9 percent average at all other private, liberal arts colleges, Harding's percentage is a little better than average.

An increase in the alumni giving percentage is one of Harding's goals over the next few years, and current students are now calling alumni in an attempt to do so. This is important because many foundations look to how well alumni support their schools as a basis for making their own gifts. The strong support now received from Harding's alumni is already a tremendous reflection on the school, and the University is eager to encourage continuance of that crucial support. □

1994: a major year for major gifts

SEVEN OF THE 10 LARGEST GIFTS IN 1994 were estate or foundation gifts. The largest was a $6.2 million gift from the Carl and Lura Moore Estate, which went to the Endowment Fund.

Several major gifts funded construction and programs of the new Jim Bill McInteer Bible and World Missions Center. A $2 million gift from the J.E. and L.E. Mabee Foundation was issued as a challenge grant toward construction of the building, and Harding met the challenge by the given deadline. The Harvey and Bernice Jones Foundation paid $1 million of a $2 million pledge toward the new marriage and family therapy clinic, and a $600,000 gift from the Charles and Nadine Baum Estate helped fund the building's video services center.

A gift from the Sam Walton Family Foundation ensured continued funding for Harding's Walton Scholarship Program. The program was established in 1985 by Sam Walton, the late founder of Wal-Mart Stores, to give qualified Central American young people the opportunity to attend college in the United States. Sixty-three Walton scholars are enrolled at Harding this year, and more than 175 students have benefited from the program since its inception.

A similar program was begun in 1994 by Jack Stephens, a Little Rock, Ark., investment banker. His $5 million gift established an endowment fund to support the University's new Stephens Center for Community Development. The center will assist the statewide Cities in Schools of Arkansas program and support Harding's Stephens Scholars Program, which provides funding assistance for first-generation college students from the state's Delta region. H

Two receive prestigious Milken Educator Awards

At least two School of Education alumni were singled out in 1994 as outstanding educators, each receiving the prestigious Milken Family Foundation National Educator Award.

Cecil Boothe (BA'70) of Conway, Ark., and Collett Branch Cross (BS'72) of New Albany, Miss., both received the honor, which is presented annually to 150 educators nationwide along with a financial award of $25,000 each. The Milken Award program is designed to give public recognition to K-12 teachers and principals who make exemplary contributions to excellence in education. Recipients never know they are being considered for the award.

Boothe, Cross and the other recipients from around the country will travel to Los Angeles next month for the 1995 Milken Family Foundation National Education Conference, three days of workshops, discussion sessions and presentations by nationally recognized educators. The conference will end in a gala ceremony honoring the recipients and presenting them with their cash awards.

Boothe was noted for his commitment to his students, teachers and community as principal of Conway's

Cecil Boothe

Jim Stone Elementary School. He is also president of the Arkansas Association of Educational Administrators. Boothe and his wife, the former Millie Jo Cannon ('66), have three children: Lacy, Jennifer and Scott.

Cross, who is principal of Ford Elementary School, was described as an inspiration to students and teachers to be their best, and for being "a catalyst for positive and meaningful change." She holds an M.Ed. degree in counseling and educational psychology from the University of Mississippi, where she now is working toward her doctorate in educational leadership.

The Milken Family Foundation was established in 1982 as a private philanthropic in-

Jim Grady '81, '88

ALUMNI PROFILE

Grady's paintings hang from California to Japan

Featured on the cover of this issue of Harding magazine is "Bell Tower" by alumnus Jim Grady of Bedford, Texas. The painting centers on one of the University's most historic symbols; however, like much of his work, it also focuses on the beauty of nature and is inspired by his love for the outdoors.

Influenced by the Impressionists in his use of color, Grady enjoys working in most media, particularly watercolor, oil and pastel. He has received numerous awards for his work and has been represented by several galleries and art consulting firms around the country.

Grady is frequently commissioned for specific projects, and his work hangs in the permanent collections of such corporations as Kaiser Permanente and Prudential, as well as in major hospitals and hotels. He recently completed work for a four-star hotel in Japan.

Having received his bachelor's degree in art in 1981, Grady then returned for his master's degree in education in 1988. After leaving Harding he owned a frame shop in Searcy and then worked for a corporate custom frame shop in San Diego. He now manages the Deck the Walls frame shop and gallery near Dallas. Many of his paintings are displayed and sold at the gallery.

He and his wife, Teresa, married since 1983, have four children: Ben, 9; Lydia, 6; Daniel, 4; and Elise, 10 months.

Grady said he has many fond memories of Harding, particularly from the art department. "Our art trips to Chicago and Tulsa, Okla., were memorable because I got to know my teachers and the other students so much better. The first time I ever had Greek food was with Mrs. [Elizabeth] Mason, who was department chairman then, on one of those trips," he said. "Then when I returned for graduate work, I was able to work closely with Don Robinson. The experience was more personal, very encouraging, and it really bolstered my confidence as an artist." ■

FOCUS ON THE FUTURE

by PHIL DIXON, director of planned gifts

Estate planning for scholarships

ON OCT. 16, 1986, MRS. JEWELL PHILLIPS SIGNED documents that have now fulfilled her long-time dream.

Jewell was from the small northwest Arkansas community of Pea Ridge. Although she and her husband, Silas, married when she was very young, it was many years later before Silas became a Christian.

Jewell, by nature a very outgoing person, was always very willing to share her faith with others. Although she and Silas were never blessed with children of their own, Jewell's love for children led her to teach them in Sunday School for many years.

After Silas' death her love of people brought her into yet another area of service — volunteer work at a local hospital. While she never got over the loss of Silas, service to others gave her the focus she needed. During this time Jewell was also considering the stewardship of her material possessions.

Jewell had always been very interested in the preaching of God's Word. Therefore, she was thankful for the suggestion of a preacher/elder that she discuss her concerns and desires with someone from Harding. Her contacting the University's planned gifts director opened up new possibilities to her.

After prayerful consideration she established the Silas and Jewell Phillips Endowed Scholarship Fund of Preaching, which was funded through her will after her death last August. By working with Harding on her estate plan, she gave God the glory for her blessings while also honoring the memory of her beloved Silas. She found peace in knowing Harding would help fulfill her desire to spread the Gospel.

Many different estate planning possibilities are available through our planned gifts area. If you would like to learn more about scholarship funds or other gift possibilities, please write or call the director of planned gifts, Harding University, Box 2238, Searcy, AR 72149-0001; 1-800-477-4312. All inquiries are kept confidential and will be answered without obligation. ■
