Art & Science Come Together

FROM THE PRESIDENT

Sharing struggles in the faith aids in the building of servant leadership

HE 1998 LECTURESHIP THEME, "Focusing on Things That Count," has served as a marvelous backdrop for campus life during the

It seems only fitting at a Christian school that we spend more time emphasizing what is truly important in the eternal scheme of things and less on what is temporal, and chapel is one of the avenues through which we show this emphasis.

Speakers have focused us on the eternal as well as the things that matter most in this life. They have shared personal experiences and struggles they have had in staying the course and have relived for us traumatic events that changed their lives.

The chapel committee designed a week titled "Struggles with the Faith." Five Christians were invited to share with our students struggles from the heart.

Nabil Jan, an Iraqi national who was imprisoned and tortured by his own government during the Gulf War, took the stage on Monday. Jan shared with our students his disbelief in God prior to this experience, and then allowed us to walk with him through his miraculous escape from Iraq with his family and ultimate arrival in Athens where they found the church and became Christians.

Today, Jan's family lives in Searcy where he translates Bible materials for the lost of the Middle East. Unable to return to Iraq where he fears execution, he is one of the few to have ever escaped from Saddam Hussein's prisons.

One of our own, Michael Arnold stood behind the Benson podium less than a year after an accident that almost claimed his life. Arnold, a sophomore from Texas, fell 18 feet at a parking garage in Little Rock, Ark., during his freshman year. The tragic accident led his surgeons to give him only a 10 percent chance of living prior to the delicate brain surgery which took place soon after. Arnold told us that when he awoke from his surgery, the surgeons were standing around his bed in tears. The way God worked through him during the dark hours of this tragedy is as amazing as his recovery.

Lonnie Johnson was drafted in 1994 by the Buffalo Bills to play their key tight-end position. He had played for the Florida State Seminoles and led their team in receptions.

Raised in the church, he made the decision at an early age to follow Christ's example in everything he did. Since playing for Buffalo, he has converted one teammate and is known as a Christian role model both on and off the field. Johnson's ultimate ambition is to preach the gospel full time, which he hopes to do when his NFL career ends.

His story inspired our students tremendously. His determination to focus on things which matter despite the diversions of fame is a shining example of the power of Christ working within God's children.

Jonesboro, Ark., was relatively unknown to the world before the Westside Middle School shootings a year ago. Lynette Thetford, however, was well known to everyone at Westside. Thetford was one of the teachers shot on that unforgettable spring morning. She lay helplessly on the ground as she watched students die. As a Christian, a mother of three and an elder's wife, she could have questioned God's direction for her life after this tragedy. She told us of her desire to respond as Christ would, to forgive the boys who murdered, and to use this traumatic event as a blessing for the kingdom.

Her example to the future teachers in our student body was worth more than any class they'll ever take. Her servant lifestyle and attitude is what Christianity

Our alumni are often in the local news for various reasons, but seldom make national headlines. When they do, it is generally because of some moral or spiritual conviction that has led them to take a stand.

Jerry Mitchell, an alumnus who has been featured previously in this magazine, addressed our students on Friday of this week. His career and Christian principles led to the reopening of the Medgar Evers civil rights case in Jackson, Miss. As a result, Byron De La Beckwith was convicted of Evers' racially-motivated murder and is serving the rest of his life in prison. The movie "Ghosts of Mississippi" is based on the reopening of this case.

Mitchell reminded us that although it took some 30 years to bring this man to justice, God was working on his timetable for a reason. He told us that although we may want these things done at our pace, God is not slow in fulfilling His judgement.

What a powerful story was told by a man who once sat where the students were. If we focus on what truly counts in life, God will use us to do some wonderful things for the kingdom and our fellow man.

Servant leadership is what Harding is all about. We want nothing more than students who will become servants in their field, whether that field is education, like Thetford, or journalism, as was Mitchell's, or an athletic career, as was so well shown through Johnson's story. Or they may take their seat in an office somewhere and translate material to send to the lost, like Jan, with no one ever knowing who the translator was, but coming to Christ thanks in part to a man God kept alive for His use.

My prayer is that you will use the struggles in your life to give glory to God as an example of the victorious power we can have over Satan when we dedicate ourselves to the task of servanthood. HI

Students provide relief after tornadoes strike local communities

More than 30 tornadoes ripped through Arkansas on the evening of Jan. 21, killing eight and destroying many homes and businesses. Massive damage occurred in the Beebe, McRae and Center Hill communities, all within an 18-mile radius of the campus.

Within hours volunteers began pouring into the affected communities to provide relief. Harding students were no exception. It took only minutes Jan. 25 to recruit more than 1,100 students for the clean-up efforts.

During chapel, President David Burks mentioned the need for help, followed by Student Association President Chad Gardner who told students that classes would be excused for those who volunteered. Less than 30 minutes later, students reassembled in Benson Auditorium and divided into three groups, going to Beebe, McRae and Center Hill.

"The SA had an emergency meeting to work out plans for the relief effort," said Gardner. "We didn't know how many would show up and volunteer, but we prayed about it and knew God would take care of the numbers. We were overwhelmed with how many students volunteered."

Students and faculty members helped salvage items at the heavily damaged Beebe Public Schools, at an apartment complex and post office in McRae, and at several homes in the Center Hill area. Working together the faculty and student volunteers inspired each other, as well as storm victims, with their servant-like spirit.

Endowment honors Spurrier's memory

AN ENDOWMENT FOR SPECIAL library projects was created by the estate of former Library Director Suzanne Spurrier after her death Dec. 23, 1998, following an 18month struggle with cancer.

A 1971 alumna, Spurrier received a master's from the Univer-

Virginia and a master of library science degree from Indiana University. She worked at the

sity of West

University library for 23 years, serving as director since 1990.

Instrumental in computerizing the library facilities, she was a member of both the American and Arkansas Associations of University Librarians and the Arkansas Association of University Women. She founded SISTERS, a sharingoriented computer network for women, and was a Bible class teacher, Hospice volunteer, member of College Church of Christ, member of Associated Women for Harding and an officer in Harding Business Women. She was honored by the University in 1993 with a Distinguished Service Award.

Playing to two sold-out performances in Benson

stories of the evening.

Through her activities as well as her position as director of the library, Spurrier made a difference in the lives of many. She was wellknown on campus for her kindness, generosity and sense of humor.

The daughter of the late William and Golda Price Spurrier of Zanesville, Ohio, she is survived by a sister and brother-in-law, Grace and Butch Steil of Sutherlin, Va., and two nephews, Bill Steil of Danville, Ark., and Dana Steil of Cabot, Ark.

"Grand lady" of art department dies at 86

ELIZABETH MASON, LONG-TIME professor of art and former chair of the department, died Feb. 9 in Searcy at the age of 86.

Mason served as department chair from the time she joined the faculty in 1946 until 1978. After retiring as chair, she continued to teach full time for five years. Completing 37 years of service, she officially finished her teaching responsibilities in 1983.

During her years of service, she oversaw the growth of the department from a single faculty member in its original space in Godden Hall to its own two-story facility, constructed in 1969. It was primarily Mason's leadership that resulted in the design and successful completion of the Stephens Art Center. When the center was expanded last year, one of its two new galleries was named in her honor.

The Chattanooga, Tenn., native earned her bachelor's degree in science from Abilene Christian University in 1934 and obtained a master's degree in art education from George Peabody College in 1940. After teaching high school art for several years in Texas, she and her husband, the late Perry Mason, were persuaded to come to Harding by then-president George S. Benson.

Her love of painting was widely known. She even resorted on occasion to painting on cardboard when she couldn't afford canvas. Her passion for art, coupled with concern for her students, drew Mason much respect from colleagues and students.

Upon her retirement, she stated, "My greatest work of art, I would hope, are the many students I have worked with and whose lives I have touched in some way, hopefully for the good."

Mason is survived by a son, Perry Mason Jr., (B.S.'59) of Lubbock, Texas, and Molly Noble (B.A.'70) of Searcy.

She established a scholarship fund prior to her death to honor both her father and her husband. The Brewer-Mason Memorial Scholarship Fund is designed to benefit Harding Academy, where her husband served as superintendent. Memorials may be made to the fund in her honor, as well. Gifts may be sent to the Harding University Advancement Office, Box 12238, Searcy, AR 72149.

Choral groups unite to sing during the annual Christian College Choral Festival hosted by Harding Jan. 8-9.

American Studies Institute tours Dallas businesses

VISITING ONE OF THE LARGEST financial trade centers of the Southwest, the American Studies annual trip gave students the opportunity to tour businesses, review history and even play a little football at Texas Stadium.

In February the students, along with Dr. Bob Reely and other School of Business faculty, got an inside look at Dallas businesses including the Dallas Country Club, E Systems, Electronic Data Systems, Health Care Corp. and Texas Instruments. Visiting the businesses allowed students to see how major corporations operate, and may give them an edge when seeking employment opportunities. "Sometimes these trips can serve as recruiting tools for the businesses," Reely said.

But the trip did not only concentrate on business; the students explored Dallas history - especially the impact President Kennedy's assassination made on the Dallas economy. The group toured the JFK Memorial and the Book Depository, learning more about the events of Nov. 22, 1963.

Students also learned about the impact of professional athletics on the Dallas economy by visiting Texas Stadium, home of the Dallas Cowboys.

Staying with members of the Saturn Road Church of Christ, students were able to learn from area Christian professionals about the world of business. "It was a good experience for the students to stay with these Christian business professionals and learn more about what will be expected of them once they enter the job market," Reely said.

Construction begins on new student housing

FOLLOWING APPROVAL FROM THE board of trustees in October 1998, construction has begun on additional student apartments, and another residence hall will be started this summer.

Twenty apartment units for married students are being built on Benton Street adjacent to the Harding Village Apartments that were built in 1995. Construction on the units, housed in three separate buildings, began in January and will be completed by August. The two-story structures will be consistent in style with the other apartments in the complex.

Additional housing for women was also approved, and construction on a new apartment-style dorm will begin in June. The building should be ready for occupancy at the start of the fall 2000 semester.

The women's residence hall will consist of 50 full-size apartments in three different styles of two-, three-, and four-bedroom floor plans. The building is similar in concept to Searcy Hall, a women's apartment-style dorm built in 1996.

"The major difference will be that this new complex will contain larger apartments with full-size kitchens and not the economy kitchens built in Searcy Hall," said President David Burks.

Burks said the smallest twobedroom unit in the new complex will have 1,000 square feet of living space.

Funding for the structure has already been secured through a bond issue in conjunction with the city of Searcy. The dormitory will be built along Park Street across from Stephens Hall

In addition to the housing facilities, a renovation project on the Ganus Building started during Spring Break. The interior overhaul of the building will make room for the department of history, which will join the department of foreign languages as the occupants of the building. The department of communication, which formerly occupied the facility, is now located in the new Reynolds Center.

The only exterior work to the Ganus Building will be on the south of the building where a new entrance will be created. Completion is expected by August.

Annual symposium set for talented students

THE UNIVERSITY'S HONORS SYMPOsium will conduct two sessions this summer on the theme "What in the World Do You Mean?," featuring a series of seminars ranging from music to medical ethics.

Open to academically talented high school students who have completed their junior year, the symposium seeks to challenge, encourage and enlighten the participants during the two-week experience.

Sessions are scheduled for July 9-23 and July 23 through Aug. 6. A record number attended last year, requiring this summer's program to be capped at an enrollment of 100 students to better facilitate the sessions.

Students accepted into the symposium attend classes with outstanding professors, engage in a community service project, and enjoy recreational activities - all while earning three hours of University credit.

Admission to the symposium is through application with consideration given to grade point averages, national standardized test scores and reference letters. Symposium scholarships are available for participants.

Students from 40 states and six countries have participated in the program during its first four years.

For more information, contact Dr. Jeff Hopper, professor of music and director of the symposium, at (501) 279-4478 or e-mail him at hopper@harding.edu.

University continues Merit Scholar attraction

HARDING CONTINUES TO RANK among the nation's top 100 colleges in attracting Merit Scholars, according to a listing of all colleges and universities released in December by the National Merit Scholarship Corp.

Twenty freshmen Merit Scholars enrolled for the 1998 fall semester bringing to more than 60 the total number of scholars attending the University.

Only three schools in Arkansas had Merit Scholars in their freshman classes. In addition to Harding, the University of Arkansas enrolled 31, and Hendrix College had 21.

Among colleges and universities associated with the churches of Christ, Harding again led all schools. Abilene Christian University enrolled 10 while Pepperdine University enrolled three and Lipscomb University, Freed-Hardeman University and Oklahoma Christian University had one each.

Approximately 1.2 million students entered the annual competition by taking a qualifying test in October 1997. Through a series of qualifying steps in early 1998, more than 14,300 of the students were named finalists in the competition. Only finalists were considered for Merit Scholarship designation and only 8,959 were chosen for the Merit Scholar awards.

A board member since 1993, Dr. Henry Farrar addresses the December graduates.

Lady Bisons finish conference action in third place

FIVE LADY BISON SENIORS LEFT THE women's basketball program with an enviable legacy. During their four years, the team earned an 85-29 record, two trips to the national tournament, and two more trips to post-season play.

A 19-8 record this year fell short of expectations. A 9-5 Lone Star Conference record and third-place finish is commendable, and except for a fateful nine days in February, the Lady Bisons could have finished higher. Beginning Feb. 4 when they dropped an overtime game to Southeastern Oklahoma State University and continuing the next week with one- and twopoint losses, hopes of a conference championship became the reality of a third-place finish.

Third place meant a playoff game on the road against Abilene Christian University, the LSC South champions, instead of a home game against a lower seeded team. ACU ended the Lady Bison season by a 72-61 margin.

Senior center Molly McPherson was the second leading scorer (20.4 ppg) in the conference and was named Player of the Week three times. She scored 20 or more points 16 times and had 30- and 31-point games.

Other seniors playing their final games included Emily Prysock, who set the school assist record and started every game in her four-year career while averaging over 30 minutes per game, and Stephanie Barron, a two-year starter who hit full stride midway through the year and scored a career high 28 points against Northeastern State University. Barron was named Player of the Week for her efforts.

Susan Reiss was the inside workhorse who kept the team in most games with her rebounding, and Karie Fager, the "sixth man," proved that dedication and hard work pay off. A walk-on as a freshman, she earned a scholarship and came into every game to provide inside help.

Rachel Raglin, a junior, was the fifth starter and was among the top scorers and assist leaders. Sophomore Krista Anderson is heir apparent at point guard. She played well off the bench as did freshman Mindy Napier.

Stephanie Davis, Louisa Duke, Kelli Fager, Jamie Pate and Kristen Shewmake are all returning underclassmen and will be in the hunt for starting positions and playing time next year.

Men's team completes winning season

FINISHING 16-11, THE MEN'S basketball team may have overachieved.

The season started well when the Bisons overcame an 18-point deficit in the last seven minutes against Lyon College to win in overtime. They went on to play five overtime games during the season, winning three. Five of the team's 11 losses were within their

A 6-8 conference record was competitive as evidenced by the two games against Lone Star Conference North champion Northeastern State University. The Bisons lost at home 60-63 on a last-second shot and lost in overtime at NSU by a 67-72 margin.

Seven seniors and all five starters were gone from last year's 14-12 team. Only three regulars, Brent Adams, Levern Floyd and Steve Meadors knew each other. Coach Jeff Morgan had to introduce transfers Chris Hardaway, Lenny Bert and Dwayne Elliott plus freshmen Jason McGinty and Lenard Blocker to the team and to Bison basketball.

Cameron 99-82 to close things out.

Hardaway, cousin of Orlando Magic's Penny Hardaway, led the team in scoring (15 ppg). Bert led in steals (79) while McGinty started 25 games, and Blocker played in all 26 games. Both are possible LSC Newcomer of the Year prospects. Elliott came off the bench to rest both the big men inside.

Last season regular Levern Floyd scored 14.8 points and had 5.1 rebounds per game. The two seniors, Steve Meadors and Brent Adams, played major roles inside. Meadors had game highs of 23 points and 13 rebounds, while Adams' highs were 16 and 13. Adams was Player of the Week when he set a Harding and LSC record with 11 blocked shots against Willliams Baptist College early in the season. Juniors David Duke, Ryan Semanchik and Clint Spencer saw limited playing time.

Young baseball team replacing seven starters

TWENTY NEW FACES ALONG WITH EIGHT RETURNERS MAKE UP the 1999 baseball team.

It is one of the youngest teams in school history as no seniors are playing this year. The squad has eight juniors, 10 sophomores and 10 freshmen.

Entering their second year of competition in the Lone Star Conference North, the Bisons are looking to improve on their 6-18 conference mark from last season. The top two teams in the LSC, Southeastern Oklahoma and Central Oklahoma, are both ranked in the top 10 in NCAA Division II.

The Bisons lost seven starters from last year's team. The hardest hit area was the pitching staff. The Bisons lost four pitchers, including two starters, a middle reliever and a closer. The Bisons are counting on returners Nathanael Watson and Phill Gisel for a lot of innings this season. Jon Neely is the third starter for the Bisons, followed by freshman Jonathan Davis. Returner Troy Wolfe gets a lot of innings in middle relief.

The infield remains the same up the middle, but has changes at the corners. Junior Derek Reaves returns as catcher for the Bisons. He led the league last season in runners caught stealing. At first base, the Bisons have two newcomers, Ben James and Mike Huebner. Johnnie Ross and Eric Chin remain at second and short, respectively, while the new third baseman is Rodney Cloud. The outfield is also the same in the middle with Seth Watson returning in center. Left fielder Matt Wilson is back after a two-year absence. Jonathan Davis plays right field.

Golf team faces stern test in conference

THE GOLF TEAM IS IN A CLASSIC GOOD NEWS/BAD NEWS SITUATION. The good news is that all of coach Nicky Boyd's regulars return, and he has added a new player, freshman Jason Harding, who is certain to break into the top five. Returning lettermen Paul Sobottka, Brent Powell, Jeff Powell, Jared Smith and Andrew Baker complete the playing team. Justo Casal and Jared Lillard are also squad members.

The bad news is that the Lone Star Conference has six schools ranked among the nation's top 20 teams with Cameron heading the list of ranked teams.

The schedule concludes with the LSC tournament April 19-20 at the Tanglewood Country Club course in Pottsboro, Texas.

Tennis teams are young and talented

COACH DAVID ELLIOTT DESCRIBES HIS BISON TEAM AS DEEP IN talent, but young. His only senior, Darren Wade, opens at number one position. Of the remaining seven players, all are freshmen or sophomores except Andrew Garner, a junior, at number three. Igor Tamindzija is number two. Klaus Schmidt is the number four man with Thomas Alm, Seth Bullington, Jeff Johnson and Justin John battling for the other positions.

If the men are young, the Lady Bisons are even younger, with six freshmen and two sophomores in the top eight. Elliott describes his team as improving and potentially a "very good squad." Karla Mueller and Ivette Andrade open at the one and two positions. They are followed by Katherine Jayroe, Sara Kater, Hiroko Okamoto, Erica Aldaz, Beth Bonbrisco and Whitney Price.

According to Elliott, tennis is probably the Lone Star Conference's best sport nationally with many ranked men's and women's teams. The top 20 rankings always contain at least five or six conference schools.

Women's national champion, large men's squad boost track teams

THREE-TIME NATIONAL SPRINT CHAMPION CALISTER UBA LEADS the Lady Bison track team in its quest for the 1999 Lone Star Conference championship.

Uba, a member of Nigeria's 1996 Olympic team, has won both NAIA and NCAA Division II titles in the 50- and 100meter events. She is the defending LSC sprint champion.

Joining Uba at the conference meet is an experienced and talented group of middle and long distance runners. Juniors

> Katie Fant, Diane Grubbs, Kelly Lauterbach and Cheri Scharff; sophomore Tia Tarole and freshmen Britney Copeland and Elizabeth Lucas are expected to tally much needed points in the distance events. Sprinter Meredith Garner and hurdler Erin Elliott are also expected to put points on the board.

On the men's team, coach Bryan Phillips has the largest squad (25) in recent years. The Bisons will be led by distance runners Jerry Maritim and Albert Tabut, Maritim is an All-American in both the steeplechase and cross country. Tabut is the only Bison who qualified for the national NCAA indoor meet.

Calister Uba practices the form that has made her a champion sprinter.

Other distance runners are Scott Penick and David and

Andrew Scharff. Sprinters and relay participants are Richard Ashlock, Zach Beavers, Matthew Dabbs, Khris Downey, Marc Fager, Connor Grimes, Jamael Harris, Shaylon Hart and Francis

High jumpers Grant Chism and Clint Spencer and hurdler Stephen Boyd are competitors in the field events. David High and Fred Strathmann compete for points in the horizontal jumps while Mark Ohrenberger, Dewayne Randle, Lee Shirey, Jason Vines and Archie Walker compete in the shot and discus events. Aaron Shock is the team's lone pole vaulter.

IT'S ROWDY AT THE RHODES

The field house of dreams has become a reality

RIGINALLY A WORLD WAR II airplane hangar, an odd, archshaped building found a new home on campus in 1949, becoming a field house for both collegiate and intramural basketball games. For the next 27 years it was the only gym on campus but took a backseat when, in 1976, a much larger and more modern facility, now named the Clifton L. Ganus Jr. Athletic Center, opened its doors.

But following a major 1997 renovation, the Rhodes Field House has regained the spotlight. It is once again filled with thunderous sounds, now holding nearly 3,000 cheering Bison fans at home basketball games.

The renovation was made possible in large part by a $500,000 gift from Steve and Cindy Clary of Little Rock, Ark. The Clarys were sports fans during their days as students at the University. Steve was a Bison football player, and Cindy rooted from the sidelines as a member of the cheerleading squad.

It seemed only natural to them to assist in the $1.2 million renovation of the field house. The interior of the facility was gutted and dramatically redesigned. A state-ofthe-art facility that maintains its nostalgia has been tremendously received by players, students and other Bison fans.

> Sitting behind the goals on both ends of the courts, students, known as "Rhodes Rowdies," provide Lady Bison volleyball team members Delana Keilers, Misty Fant and Laura Lejarzar celebrate a victory in the friendly confines of Rhodes.

"Other teams in our conference have heard about this gym and the deafening noise created by the fans, and many don't look forward to playing here," said men's

Head Basketball Coach Jeff Morgan. "But we couldn't be happier with the facility's remarkable transformation and the excitement it has created in our fans."

The volume level in the facility during ball games may be the only remaining link to its past. The revving and rumbling engines of war planes may have reverberated the building almost as much as 3,000 screaming fans do today. H

"An obvious leader on the floor" according to coach Brad Francis, senior center Molly McPherson from Greenland, Ark., averaged 20.5 points and 8.4 rebounds per game for the Lady Bisons.

Warming up before the game with Christian Brothers University, the Bisons play on hardwood courts which are turned 180 degrees from the original direction they faced when Rhodes first opened in 1949.

A COMING TOGETHER OF

by TOM BUTERBAUGH, photography by JEFF MONTGOMERY

LANCING THROUGH THE WINDOW INTO the Elizabeth Mason Gallery at the Stevens Art Center, a visitor might have wondered if it had been turned into an aviary. Wrens, chickadees, doves, a meadowlark, a goldfinch, a robin and other perches around the room.

But these 20 birds, realistic enough winged creatures appeared to have flown to safety on their

to cause anyone to take a second look, are actually carvings by a faculty member and it's not one of the art faculty, as might be expected. These magnificent birds are creations of Dr. Don England, distinguished professor of chemistry.

England, whose interest in wood carving goes back to his childhood, considers his hobby a juxtaposition with his scientific vocation. "Art and science have more in common than the differences that appear to separate them. Both are activities that seek the betterment of humanity through the creative process," he stated on a sheet available to visitors of the gallery.

He believes the two subjects have three common denominators: planning, experimentation and serendipidity. He notes that both art and science are systematic disciplines through which you try things to see how they work, and he cites Robert Woodward, who won the 1965 Nobel Prize for his meritorious contributions to the art of chemical synthesis.

Extremely modest about his talents, England said, "I never in my wildest dreams expected to show my work in an art gallery. There are worlds of carvers that are better than I am."

But Don Robinson, chair of the art and design department, encouraged him to have a showing and served as a juror by picking out the pieces for the display.

When England replaced his fishing hobby 20 years ago, he began carving, producing small animals that he described as being the "toy type." He gradually moved into more challenging work but didn't complete the first bird he began 10 years ago.

Without any formal art training, he taught himself by reading books on the subject. The majority of his training has come on the job - by diving in and learning by doing — the experimental phase. He claims, "It's a tribute to my stubborness that I stayed with it."

England loves the songbirds, and many of his models come from birds that he feeds and watches from his den window. He also has a wren box. He photographs many of the birds in his back yard, using them as well as bird books for his inspiration. Thus comes the systematic planning for each carving.

He finds the art of carving something to get lost in. For England, it's a very therapeutic way to put other things behind him. Usually carving late at night at a bench in a studio converted from a bedroom in his home, he often finds himself surprised with the end result. "It's extremely satisfying to let a completely different part of my brain take over," he said.

He doesn't keep up with the time involved to produce each bird. "Keeping up with the time is counterproductive to the reason I do it," he noted.

However, the size of each bird plays a part in determining how long it will take. England begins by cutting out the profile with a band saw. Then he starts the actual carving using Chicago cutlery knives he has fashioned into a variety of carving tools. He often uses basswood, a favored wood for carving.

"My love affair is with the wood, pulling the beauty out of it," he said.

As many as 40 hours later, the detailed carving is completed, and the time comes to add the coloration. This is the part he finds very difficult, intimidating and challenging. As a person who loves wood, he likes to leave as much wood showing naturally as possible, using a burning pen to add details. He then applies the gesso and the acrylic washes - so thin that 10 to 15 layers are necessary.

Striving for authenticity, he has been known to use binoculars and note the coloration of the birds in his back yard, mixing the paint colors as he observes them.

While birds are his carving passion now, England has created several dulcimers over the years. His first was the result of encouragement from Dr. Ed Wilson, a fellow chemistry professor.

Though England has not had musical training, through "brain shifting" he has picked up the ability to play. He took a continuing education course in

Conway, Ark., where he learned to chord. This interest has allowed him to perform with Wilson for several conventions in the

Through all his varied activities, his family remains central to him. This he emphasized through a drawing, also in his show, representing the interests of his two children, his wife, Lynn, as well as his own. Central to the drawing is the Bible, the focal point of the family's life.

Currently he has three carving projects brewing; a cedar waxwing, a pair of eagles (one on the roost, one lighting) and a woodpecker. They should provide therapy for many evenings to come.

While he plans and experiments with his upcoming projects, perhaps it is the serendipity of the process that enthralls him the most.

After all, he's a man that proves that art and science do come together. HI carver Dr. Don England finds some spare time to work on one of his newest creations. England came to Harding in 1960.

1998 was a very special year in the history of Harding as the University began its Diamond Anniversary Celebration, recognizing 75 years of service to the nation.

The Diamond Anniversary actually began more than halfway through the year at the opening of the 1998-99 school term. After more than 18 months of planning, the 75th year festivities began on Aug. 25 with all the academic regalia and splen> dor surrounding the convocation opening the school year for a record enrollment of 4,320.

Dozens of 75th anniversary activities filled the fall calendar. Among those special days was the celebration of Founders' Day on Sept. 28. Family members representing first-generation faculty and students were recognized in an assembly attended by University and Academy students.

A very special foreign dignitary came to campus to help celebrate the anniversary. An October presentation by Mikhail Gorbachev, former president of the Soviet Union, filled the Benson Auditorium to standing room only. More than 4,300 people heard Gorbachev explain that "a new world is in the making."

Special events were not the only part of the 75th anniversary celebration. Against the Grain, a compilation of essays by 24 authors, was published and released in September. The book provides an in-depth look at Harding's unique philosophy of education — academic excellence with a spiritual

The Diamond Anniversary was the primary focus in 1998, but there were a number of other events and achievements that added to the year's celebration.

Students Make Their Mark

PERHAPS THE BIGGEST student celebration of 1998 came in April as more than 700 students celebrated the 25th anniversary of Spring Sing. Approximately 12,000 campus visitors attended the four performances of the student-produced musical presentation. The students honored Dr. Jack Ryan, who has worked as Spring Sing producer with the show

Not to be outdone by their School of Business peers, the University's chapter of the Society for the Advancement of Management won a national title at the annual conference in Wash-

Joining in the celebration, the computer programming team achieved a feat no other computer team from the University has ever attained — a first-place finish that secured an automatic invitation to the international programming finals. The team won the undergraduate student division of the Mid-Central region. The international event was held in Atlanta, and the team finished ninth among American teams competing at the international level, and placed 29th overall. Twenty-four American teams qualified for the finals, including Stanford University and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

However, the most meaningful celebration may have come at an inner city carnival in Little Rock involving more than 300 students. Perhaps the shared celebration of collecting toys and gifts for more than 200 children whose parents are incarcerated in Arkansas prisons and jails tops the list. Certainly the enthusiasm of approximately 600 students participating in summer evangelistic campaigns was reason to celebrate.

Grand Openings

NEW FACILITIES ON THE CAMPUS were also reason for celebration. The $6.1 million Donald W. Reynolds Center for Music and Communication was dedicated Nov. 7 with more than 800 faculty, students and alumni attending. The 53,715square-foot facility became the second largest academic building on campus. Curriculum Expansion ENHANCING ITS ROLL as a national leader in private higher education, the University added two master's level programs to its curriculum during 1998. An MBA program in the School of Business was initiated in the fall with 18 students enrolling. The degree program offers four academic tracks suited to the student's academic and professional background.

The School of Nursing began offering its master of science in nursing degree with six students enrolling. The two-track program requires 39 hours for completion. Many of the classes are held in the evenings, providing a flexible schedule for the students.

Sandy Berryman works with Toni Winter Spears as she completes her clinical requirements at White County Medical Center.

At the undergraduate level the department of kinesiology, responding to the need for more professionals in health and fitness, added bachelor of science degrees in athletic training and exercise science. The degrees are a combination of kinesiology, chemistry, biology and mathematics courses. Careers for physical fitness specialists, exercise physiologists and managers of corporate health centers are in demand.

Individual Achievements

NEW ACADEMIC CREDENTIALS, peer recognition and promotions are always reasons for celebration, and 1998 certainly had its share of recognition for individual members of the Harding family.

Four faculty members were all smiles after completing course work and dissertations for their Ph.D. degrees. Scot Crenshaw, assistant professor of Bible, received his doctoral degree from Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth, Texas. Jerry Bowling, assistant professor of Bible, earned his doctorate from Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in New Orleans. Alice Jewell, professor of English, and Jim Behel, associate professor of computer information systems, received their doctorates from the University of Arkansas in Fayetteville. Seventy-three percent of the full-time faculty now have doctorate or terminal degrees.

Wal-Mart executive Paul Carter was elected chairman of the board of trustees at the governing body's semi-annual meeting in November. Carter, executive vice president of Wal-Mart and president of Wal-Mart Realty, began serving a two-year term as head of the 24-member board. Two members were added in 1998 to the board of trustees. Bob Diles, president of Central Arkansas Christian School in North Little Rock, Ark., and Harold Redd, minister of the Midtown Church of Christ in Memphis, Tenn., joined the trustees at the fall Administratively, Dr. Tony Finley succeeded Dr. Bobby Coker as dean of the School of Education following Coker's retirement in June. Dr. Larry Long, distinguished professor of English, was appointed as dean of the Honors College.

Lott R. Tucker Sr., chief financial officer, completed a 47-year career in the University's financial operation. He was succeeded by Buddy Rowan, who was named vice president for finance on July 1. Tucker continues to serve in a part-time role as senior vice president. Todd Sheldon was also appointed July 1 to the newly created position of director of finance.

Four faculty members, Kay Gowen, Dr. Ed Higginbotham, Dr. Tom Howard and Dr. Jack Shock, received Distinguished Teacher Awards for 1998. Howard became only the eighth professor to receive the award three times, earning him the title "Distinguished Professor."

Other notable faculty recognition includes the following:

- Dr. Jim Johnston, associate professor of education, received a $5,000 grant from the Corporation of Public Broadcasting to use laser disc technology for the enhancement of education through technology.
- Dr. Beth Wilson, chair of the family and consumer sciences department, was named Professional of the Year by the Arkansas Association of Family and Consumer Sciences.

- Dr. Arthur Shearin, chair of the music department, was elected to a two-year term as president of the Arkansas Association of Schools of Music.
- Don Meredith, head librarian at the Graduate School of Religion, was named the Graduate School's Alumnus of the Year.
- Dr. Don Diffine, professor of economics, was appointed by Arkansas Governor Mike Huckabee to serve on the nine-member Governor's Council of Economic Advisors.
- Dr. Edmond Wilson, professor of chemistry, was chosen Member of the Year from the Central Arkansas section of the American Chemical Society.

Celebrating Generosity

A RECORD NUMBER of donors in 1998 helped Harding celebrate by contributing a near-record $16.4 million. More than 9,100 donors contributed in 1998, an increase of 44 percent over the previous year. The $16.4 million in gifts was the second best in the school's history, topped only by $22.9 million in 1994. For the ninth consecutive year alumni gifts topped the $1 million mark, surpassing $2.8 million.

The highlight of the year came Nov. 6 with the announcement by Bob and Sandy Brackett of Vero Beach, Fla., of a $12 million commitment to endow Brackett Library. It is the largest single gift in the school's history. The gift endowing the library continually updates its technology and equipment and helps maintain the equipment as well as the facility itself. Librarians' salaries and book purchases are also a part of the endowment fund's use.

The campus celebrated the conclusion of one five-year campaign, the Dream Continues Campaign, and immediately launched the Diamond Campaign. The Dream Continues raised $63.2 million on a $58.5 million goal. The Diamond Campaign, the most ambitious fund-raising project in school history, seeks to raise $100 million.

Exciting Athletic Events

INTERCOLLEGIATE ATHLETICS brings excitement to the campus, and 1998 was not an exception to the rule. Bison sports created an enthusiasm in the student body that at times was contagious.

The Lady Bison basketball team earned a berth in the Lone Star Conference championship game in the school's first year of eligibility in the conference. The team lost to Abilene Christian University, but finished the season at 16-12 overall and 11-2 on its home court.

- ▶ The Bison football team compiled a 7-4 record on the gridiron and finished third in the Lone Star Conference North Division.
- Lady Bison cross country runners narrowly missed capturing the conference championship, finishing two points behind Angelo State University 52-50. Two weeks later the team placed ahead of Angelo State in the NCAA Division II regional meet and barely missed qualifying for the national meet.
- One of the most exciting developments in Bison athletics was the inaugural season of the women's soccer team. Playing in one of NCAA Division II's toughest conferences, the team posts a respectable 6-9-1 record. Soccer was a very popular spectator sport on the campus. III

nding one chapter in

Harding's history on a high note and starting another on an upswing, 1998 advancement results set several significant standards in the University's fund-raising division.

On the strength of the highly successful "Dream Continues" Campaign, in which more than $63 million was pledged or given toward a $58.2 million goal, the University launched a record-setting $100 million goal for the five-year period from July 1, 1998, to June 30, 2003.

The response from donors in 1998 has provided encouragement sufficient for setting such an ambitious goal. Total gifts of nearly $16.5 million made 1998 the second highest year in development gift income

The President's Council saw its membership increase by nearly 200 to more than 600 families who support the scholarship fund with gifts of $1,000 and more per year. Total giving from the advisory body, chaired by Mark Wallis of Dallas, increased by more than $1 million from '97 to '98.

Also significant was the increase in alumni donors. 1998's tally of 6,845 alumni contributors is a school record, with no other year even topping the 6,000 mark. The alumni giving percentage, a statistic which is helpful in securing foundation support, finished at 30 percent, the highest it has been in five years. A student-manned phonathon was instrumental in boosting alumni response.

Further, a record number of faculty and staff members made contributions, with 74 percent of the employees giving a total of $210,182 in 1998, compared to less than $190,000 in '97.

Another encouraging record statistic was the $245,874 in gifts generated through corporate matching funds. Many alumni, parents and friends are employed by companies which match their donations, usually up to a certain amount. The '98 figure compares to $191,697 the year before.

An obvious record was established with foundation grants. The $7.85 million awarded in 1998 more than doubled the second best year, 1997, when $3.5 million was received. The most significant grant funding came from the Donald W. Reynolds Foundation, the Mabee Foundation and the Kresge Foundation.

With the momentum continuing, the new campaign, "Honoring Our Commitment," has enjoyed a charged start over its first six months. By Dec. 31, nearly $28 million had already been pledged or given.

Particularly encouraging has been the increase in gifts to the scholarship fund, considered the University's priority target in the new campaign. In the six months of this fiscal year, $1.45 million was given for scholarships — the highest total since 1993 and $100,000 higher than this time a year ago.

The campaign seeks to raise $13.8 million over five years for scholarships; more than $5 million had been pledged by Dec. 31. Capital fund gifts and pledges totaled $1.7 million, the endowment fund $15.2 million, and the restricted gift program $5.6 million at the school's mid-term mark.

With an endowment goal of $62.5 million, and most of that aimed at scholarships, the campaign is squarely focused on securing support for the University's purpose for existence — its students.

In fact, probably the most difficult aspect of communication for the advancement program is that the goal is often couched in financial terms, yet the real objective is to help more students each year with the best possible Christian education experience.

Each student is important, thus, each gift is important. And as you, the donor, are a channel of the Lord's blessing to this ministry, you are important. You are making a difference.

The pages that follow reflect a shared ministry, giving spirits and cheerful hearts. We devote this space to say thank you to those who invest in Harding and the future of these young people. Further, we hope that it will serve as a form of encouragement for more alumni, parents and friends to join hands with this group in supporting our more than 4,300 students. HI

Alumni share that special feeling

by MARKA BENNETT, alumni association president

T'S HAPPENED MORE THAN ONCE to me meeting someone and feeling as though we've met before, searching through our experiences to find what we have in common, and then, excitedly discovering that our connections go all the way back to Harding.

Recently, I met a woman who had just placed membership at the congregation I attend. She looked so familiar to me, as though I had met her before, but she was fairly sure she had never met me. As our conversation continued, our connections suddenly unfolded — her sister and I were friends during our Harding days! That led to other connectors and, soon, we felt as though we had been best friends for years - all because of Harding.

Other people notice it too. Last year, my husband and I were talking to a woman whose daughter had chosen Harding over her own alma mater. The woman said one of the strong factors in that decision was the fact that Harding alumni seem to be drawn to each other in some special way.

Many years ago, an older friend at church commented that graduates from Harding had "something extra" that made them different from other college graduates he had seen.

Last year at my daughter's club's motherdaughter brunch, one of the mothers told me that she was so thankful her girls had chosen Harding for this same reason — Harding alumni have special feelings for each other that go beyond the norm. She had noticed this quality in graduates who came to their East Coast city; even if they were years apart in age, they still had common links. She assured me that she did not share those kind of strong ties to her state college or to the friends she made during her college years.

What is this something extra — the special feelings we Harding folks have? It's more than shared professors, similar experiences and living in the same dorms. I think it is the deep spiritual tie that binds us together.

For me, as a student in the early 70s, it was the lily pond devotionals, vespers and daily chapel that built on the spiritual foundation laid by my parents and kept me reminded of my faith; it was dear friends who cared deeply about me and my soul; it was people who loved me no matter what; it was loving, Christian professors who believed in me and what I could become; and it was a deep, abiding love for God that ruled our school.

Every time I visit the campus, see an old friend, or discover another Harding connection, there it is again - that special feeling, that something extra. If you haven't been on campus in a while, visit Harding's Web page or e-mail Brett Watson, our alumni relations director, to be added to the Harding Digest. Call an old friend from your Harding days. Be friendly to that visitor at church, and you may discover you have a Harding connection.

And be ready for that special feeling. HI

Education alumni take top state awards

ucation were singled out for their respective contributions to Arkansas' education system.

Sherry Jo Tipps of Conway was named Arkansas' 1999 Teacher of the Year in a ceremony at the State Capitol in Little Rock Nov. 13, 1998. Just days later, David Bangs of Vilonia was named the recipient of the state's Assistant Principal of the Year Award.

Tipps, who after three years at Harding transferred to the University of Ohio, still considers herself a product of the University's Teacher Education Program.

A 22-year teaching veteran, she moved back to Arkansas in

WO ALUMNI FROM 1987 and began teachthe School of Ed- ing in Conway in 1990. For the past four years, she has taught history, civics and geography to eighth graders at Carl Stuart Middle School.

Sherry Jo Tipps

Through a program she started called the Ignition Arkansas Project, she makes history come alive by means of actors and historians who make presentations in class. She also developed the Conway Urban Walk, a unique teaching tool in which students go from one location to another in downtown Conway learning both city and state history at each check point.

Bangs, a 1980 alumnus, was named the state's Assistant Principal of the Year by the Arkansas Association of Secondary School Principals. It's a job he's held at Vilonia Junior and Senior High School since 1995, although he's worked in the Vilonia schools for the past 18 years.

The award, sponsored by McDonald's Corp., was a surprise.

"I've only been the assistant principal for four years, and there's a three-year minimum service period required before a person even becomes eligible to receive the award," Bangs said. "Needless to say, I'm honored."

In addition to his role as assistant principal, Bangs serves as the school's athletic director overseeing 14 coaches. He also takes on other responsibilities that many tend to shy away from, including overseeing student insurance, organizing the busing program for sixth through ninth graders, and handling disciplinary problems and detention halls. He also serves on the state's Executive Board of Secondary Principals.

Bangs was noted for improving his school's learning environment, due in part to his ability to handle discipline problems in a fair and consistent manner.

"It's not easy to be consistent, especially in a disciplinary mode," Bangs said. "I just try to make the situation advantageous to all parties involved - the students, parents and teachers."

The love for students and the dedication that both Tipps and Bangs possess is evident, as both affectionately refer to their students as "my kids." Neither takes full credit for their successes. Perhaps that's why they're recognized as some of Arkansas' finest. IH

FOCUS FUTURE

Gifts that give joy in the morning

by ROWAN MCLEOD, director of planned gifts

OST OF US HAVE EXPERIENCED "buyer's remorse." A smooth-talking salesperson rushes us into a decision we are unprepared to make. The usual pattern involves the purchase of a car or something else of value. At first we try our best to be happy with our choice. But, invariably, the next morning we awake to the inescapable realization that we made a poor decision. We are angry at the salesperson ... and with ourselves for letting it happen. We suffer from "buyer's remorse."

There is also something known as "donor's remorse." Perhaps an overzealous development officer talks us into making a gift we later regret. It's not exactly what we wanted to do, and we feel badly about it the next morning. Our remorse is compounded when the asset is significant, and we are locked into an irrevocable agreement.

The planned giving staff at Harding is committed to helping our donors create "remorseless" gift arrangements. We want satisfied donors. Our goal is "joy in the morning."

In order to accomplish this goal, we follow these steps:

1. Discover what our donors want to accomplish with the stewardship of their gifts. 2. Present various options to help our donors discover the plan that will not only accomplish their objectives, but do it in a better way than they thought possible. 3. Take all the time needed to explore and answer every question and concern. 4. Endeavor to protect our donors from making gifts that would place them in financial jeopardy.

5. If other professionals such as financial planners, insurance advisors or CPAs need to be consulted during the planning process, we help to orchestrate this consultation and even accompany our donors to these appointments, should they desire.

Most importantly, we encourage every donor to review his or her gift plan with independent counsel prior to signing an irrevocable document.

Again, instead of "donor's remorse," we want "joy in the morning."

If you have been thinking of making a planned gift to Harding, perhaps now is the time to contact me. We will patiently guide you through the process and zealously guard your confidences. And, of course, there is no charge for our services.

Also, if you would like a complimentary copy of our "Guide to Creative Planned Giving Arrangement," please call (800) 477-4312 or write: Harding University, Box 12238, Searcy, AR 72149. HI
