Ludene Slatton resigns position

Ludene Slatton (BA '51), assistant registrar since 1953, has resigned her position with the College, effective Aug. 16, to accept a teaching assistantship in English at the University of Arkansas.

A native of Arkansas, Ludene entered Harding as a freshman in June 1946 after three years of secretarial work in Washington, D. C. She majored in English, working in the Registrar's Office throughout her college career. She was a member of the A Cappella Chorus, MEA social club, and Future Teachers of America and was elected to Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges.

Following graduation Ludene taught high school English in Arbyrd, Mo., during the 1951-52 school year, but she returned to Harding in June to resume work in the Registrar's Office. She assumed her present title in February, 1954.

"After 11 years at Harding, I have come to feel like one of the family," she says. "I will always cherish many happy memories of dear friends made and of pleasant events. Wherever I go my thoughts will always be toward the best interests of my Alma Mater."

Plans underway on pay-for-a-day

A new Pay-For-A-Day Plan is being adopted at Harding as a means to raise funds to cover operational expenses. A brochure explaining the plan is being prepared, and each alumnus is asked to examine it carefully.

Through this plan a person selects some day as his day and pays Harding the balance needed above tuition, fees, and other income to operate the college for one day. This amount has been figured at $180 for the coming year. Special consideration will be shown the donor on "his" day.

Credit for first suggesting use of the plan by a Christian college goes to Joe Spaulding (BA'40), assistant professor of history at Harding. He made the suggestion while on the faculty at Central Christian College, Bartlesville, Okla.

Alumni can assist in two ways. A number will be able to take a day and become members of the Pay-For-A-Day Plan. All alumni should be able to submit names of other persons who would be prospective members for this plan. The success of the program depends to a large extent upon the assistance that alumni give.

Since tuition and fees that students pay cover less than 60 per cent of operational expenses, the balance must come from endowment, auxiliary enterprises, and gifts.

Funds from these sources enable Harding to maintain an educational program of high quality without increasing tuition to the point where many young people who want Christian education would be unable to afford it.

Most of the funds from the new plan will be used to raise teachers' salaries, which now rank in the bottom quartile among schools in the North Central Association.

Price to emcee '33 chapel hour

Activities Alumni Day, May 28, will center around the 25-year class of '33. E. C. Price, Little Rock, will emcee the chapel program which members of the class will conduct.

Records show 57 members of the '33 class, 18 of which received degrees. Price has contacted all the class members and hopes a good many of them will be present to take part in the 25-year reunion.

In addition to the '33 class the classes of '28, '38, '43, '48, and '53 will hold reunions Alumni Day. All the reunion classes will meet together for a joint luncheon at Roberson's Rendezvous at noon. Last year 72 persons attended this luncheon, representing each of the five-year classes.

Reunion Luncheon

Members of five-year classes who plan to attend the Reunion Luncheon, Alumni Day, May 28, should make reservations through the Alumni Office. Price per plate will be $1.25. Husbands or wives who are not members of the classes are invited.

President's Corner

By Dr. Joseph E. Pryor (BA, BS '37)

As I sit down to write this final column as president of the Alumni Association, I am filled with mingled emotions. I deeply appreciate the trust that you have placed in me by electing me for three terms and I have sincerely endeavored to discharge the duties that were mine. It has been a pleasure to work in behalf of our Alma Mater, to meet with various chapters, and to write this column and other communiques. However, I am eagerly looking forward to being a past president and supporting the president you elect in leading the Association to greater activity and service.

During these six years there have been three executive secretaries of our Association — Catherine Root, Josephine Connell, and Buford Tucker. To each of these fine people I express my appreciation for the excellent job that each did, and each has made a real contribution to the development of our Association. During a year when we were without an executive secretary, Jerry Chesshir McNutt served as office secretary and did yeoman service. The advice and counsel of Cliff Ganus and Edwin Hughes, the two immediate past presidents, has been very helpful. In getting out the Bulletin Mary Ann Whitaker Harris and Herman West merit my gratitude as editor and printer, respectively. To numerous people who have served in various capacities — secretary, member of the executive committee, a class agent, a chapter officer, member of a special committee — I express my gratitude.

Likewise, I want to express to George S. Benson my genuine appreciation for the leadership he has given Harding College. Dr. Benson has worked tirelessly and endlessly to raise funds to provide buildings and facilities, endowment, and funds for salaries and other operational expenses. He has succeeded in a remarkable way, but the job of financing a college is a continuing operation. He has also given valuable leadership in other ways. To those great men and women, some of whom have finished their earthly labors, who through the years have unselfishly taught at Harding College, I am eternally grateful. I am also grateful for the large number of men and women at Harding who are dedicated to the ideals of the institution and who are striving to accomplish the goals of our Alma Mater. I am also grateful for the students — their idealism, enthusiasm, and possibilities.

The greatest joy I have received as president has been to experience the loyalty that many of you have sustained to your Alma Mater. This has been evidenced in constructive criticism and suggestions as well as in services and financial assistance. To those who have contributed to Alumni Field, the Alumni Fund, the living endowment, and other projects I express my sincere thanks. At the same time I urge you to support our Alma Mater each year through the Alumni Fund and the Pay-For-A-Day Plan.

Recently I attended a meeting for faculty advisors of pre-medical students at which representatives of several medical and dental schools spoke. More than one speaker contrasted the average student body today with the average student in 1946 when the classes were composed largely of men who had served in World War II. Whereas most of the students in 1946 were mature, serious-minded, hard-working, and thorough, they

From here and there . . .

Everett and Nelle Felke ('44) Lindsey stopped by the office several weeks ago. This was the first visit for Nelle since she was in school. They are living in a suburb of Chicago.

Bud Tucker ('59), who is a student at the University of Kansas, was a visitor on the campus with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Buford Tucker (Assoc.), over the spring holidays.

Mrs. J. W. O'Banion, mother of Marguerite (BA'42), Mildred O'Banion Sharp ('43), and Maxine O'Banion Cox (BA'46), has returned home after spending six weeks in a Jonesboro Hospital. Her condition has improved.

Charles (BA'47) and Norma Stephens ('49) Dolye were on campus recently, and Charles spoke on mission work in chapel. They have just returned from ten years of mission work in Japan.

stated there is a tendency for the students in 1958 to be somewhat immature, self-centered, and looking for the "short-cuts" and "easy ways out."

Now and then I hear about certain critics who are very vocal about the good ole days of 1946 at Harding. The middle and later forties were great years, but so are the middle and later fifties. There is quite a difference in the student body in some respects, but they represent two quite different eras. The students of 1946 knew first-hand about the depression and many of the men had been refined by the "fires" of World War II. Some had been case-hardened, too. The students in 1958 are products of the post-war era characterized by high salaries, easy employment, and "luxurious" living accompanied by moral decay. In some respects I think our present student body is superior to the student body of 1946, or the period 1933-37 when I was a student at Harding, but they naturally reflect, to some extent anyway, the influence of the age in which they live.

Today, as never before, I believe there is a tremendous role for the Christian college. It is my conviction that Christianity and scholarship are harmonious; in other words, that genuine spiritual training and rigorous intellectual development can and should go hand in hand. I know it is easy to stress one at the expense of the other, but the challenge of our time demands that we give each its proper emphasis. Moses was schooled in all the wisdom of the great Egyptian culture of his day and Paul had sat at the feet of the great Gamaliel and was conversant with the philosophical systems of the world; but each had his heart filled with the eternal truths of God. Our world sadly needs more men of the stature of Moses and Paul — both in heart and in mind.

Although there is room for improvement in both these areas at Harding — and always will be — I believe that Harding is making a definite contribution as a Christian college and is making progress in these areas. This has been my conviction during the 14 years I have taught at Harding and is the reason I hope to spend many more years at our beloved Alma Mater, the Lord willing. I believe Harding College has a bright future as a truly great Christian college.

McInteer speaks for spring meeting

Jim Bill McInteer (BA'42), Nashville, Tenn., was speaker for the spring meeting at the College church during March. Morning services were held in the College Auditorium during regular chapel period.

The gospel was presented eloquently and forcefully, yet each lesson was characterized by its simplicity and exaltation of Christ and His way of life.

In commenting on the meeting, Jim Bill said, "It was one of the most joyful experiences that I have had." Mrs. McInteer (Betty Bergner, BA '43) and their two children, Marilyn and Mark, were present for the latter part of the meeting.

Jim Bill is a very versatile and busy man. He preaches regularly for the West End Church in Nashville. He holds about five meetings each year and helps annually in about five schools for training Bible school teachers and church leaders.

He is probably most widely known as business manager of the 20th Century Christian. During the 10 years he has served in this capacity the subscription list has grown from 3,000 to 38,000. Recently, he was appointed to the editorial council of the Christian Family Book Club and in addition will serve as secretary-treasurer of this organization.

In the literary field, Jim Bill has written "Tiny Tots Bible Reader," an excellent Bible-story book for small children already in its second edition. "What Does the Bible Teach About Placing Membership?" "How Shall the Young Secure Their Hearts?" and "A House Under Construction" are three tracts he has published. The later tract has been prepared from a sermon televised over the Herald of Truth television program. He is currently compiling material for workbooks on Romans and II Timothy.

Mayor Ben West of Nashville recently appointed Jim Bill chairman of the censorship board of the City of Nashville, the committee that has the responsibility of ridding the city of as much scandalous literature and as many pornographic publications as possible.

He is also a member of the board of trustees of Harding College, having served for several years. In his spare time, he manages some farms in southern Kentucky.

During his college days, Jim Bill participated widely in student activities, preached frequently, and made an excellent academic record, being elected to membership in the Alpha Honor Society. He was a member of the A Cappella Chorus, male quartet, and Campus Players and participated in sports.

Two memories for which Jim Bill is grateful are that he has never missed a Lord's day worship service as far back as he can remember and since becoming a Christian in 1934 he recalls only one day that he has missed reading the Bible.

His wife, who was his classmate and college sweetheart, is dedicated to being a Christian wife and mother. She teaches in the Bible school at West End.

The fellowship was established to assist secondary mathematics and science teachers in advancing their studies.

Bob, who is in his fifth year of public school teaching, was active in intramural sports while at Harding. He was named to several all-star baseball and softball teams.

Response to a request for pictures of alumni children to go in the office Baby Book has been good. However, there are still a good many blank pages which we would like filled before Alumni Day, May 28.

Committee adopts class agent plan

After careful consideration, the Alumni Executive Committee has approved a class agent method for alumni solicitation. Used extensively by colleges and universities, the agents serve as direct contacts between the colleges and their alumni and do much to develop a closer understanding. A stronger bond of fellowship between Harding and her alumni is the goal.

Since 1951, the alumni participation percentage has ranged from 7.3% to 17%. That means that never has more than one out of six contributed to the Alumni Fund. The Alumni Office accepts the responsibility for this condition but is now trying to improve the situation. Harding alumni are loyal and will respond when they know the need. Through the class agents, alumni will be kept informed of current conditions and of future plans.

Class agents will notify Alumni of other important happenings and dates, like Lectureship Week at Thanksgiving, College Day for high school seniors, and Bible School Teachers Training Program.

The following people will serve as class agents for next year.
