POURING THE FOUNDATION — Workmen pour the cement into the wooden forms of the new men's dormitory. The $975,000 structure is scheduled for completion in September, 1971.

Construction Begins On New Dormitory

Construction has begun on a new $975,000 men's dormitory on the Harding campus.

According to Lott Tucker, vice-president for finance, the Nabholz Construction Company of Conway, Ark., was the low bidder on the project which is expected to be completed in September, 1971.

Construction on the dormitory began August 10. The structure will be similar to the newest men's residence hall and will house 210 students. The site of the proposed dormitory is the old Harding Academy athletic field on the east side of the campus.

The new dormitory will be the third air-conditioned housing facility on the campus. When completed the structure will be the third dormitory built on the Harding campus in the last four years. The newest men's dormitory presently being used was completed in 1967 and the new women's dormitory was finished in 1968.

The facilities represent a $2,574,000 investment during the college's Decade of Development. Funds for the residence now under construction were made available through a loan from the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Senior Day, Homecoming Scheduled for October 17

Harding's annual Senior Day activities for high school seniors and their sponsors have been scheduled for October 17.

The calendar of events released by Eddie Campbell, Dean of Men and director of the program, includes a faculty-student reception, a musical concert and Homecoming Day activities.

The program for the visiting seniors will begin at 8 a.m. with registration in the American Heritage Center. At 9:00 Harding students, faculty and administrators will host a reception for the seniors in the Trophy Room of the American Heritage Center.

Following the reception the seniors and their sponsors will be entertained in the Heritage Auditorium by Harding's musical groups. The Harding Band, the A Cappella Chorus, Belles and Beaux and the Chorale will present a variety-filled program.

President Clifton L. Ganus will welcome the students at 11:30 and give a brief history of the school and its recent achievements. Following President Ganus' remarks Harding students will conduct a devotional.

At noon the visitors will be the guests of the college for lunch in the Heritage Cafeteria.

The afternoon festivities begin at 1:15 p.m. with Harding's annual homecoming parade. The football game between the Bisons and the Arkansas A&M Weevils begins at 2:30 at Alumni Field.

Campbell urged seniors to make arrangements privately to stay with friends in the dormitories.

"The Bond of Peace"

A PONDERING MOMENT — Dr. Winfred Wright and student Alice Landrum ponder over one of the many problems and questions that arise during counseling and registration. Complete enrollment figures were unavailable at press time, but unofficial totals indicated a near-record enrollment for the fall semester.

'Service with the Feminine Touch'

'Harding Helpers' Aid School's Growth

When a chapter of Associated Women for Harding was organized on the Searcy campus in 1965, eager members were unaware of exactly how to begin in aiding the school. After almost six years of operation eleven other chapters have been formed, the members have provided more than $50,000 in equipment for several departments, the general operating fund of the college has been swelled through dues, and the college has gained unmeasured benefit in advertising, public relations and good will.

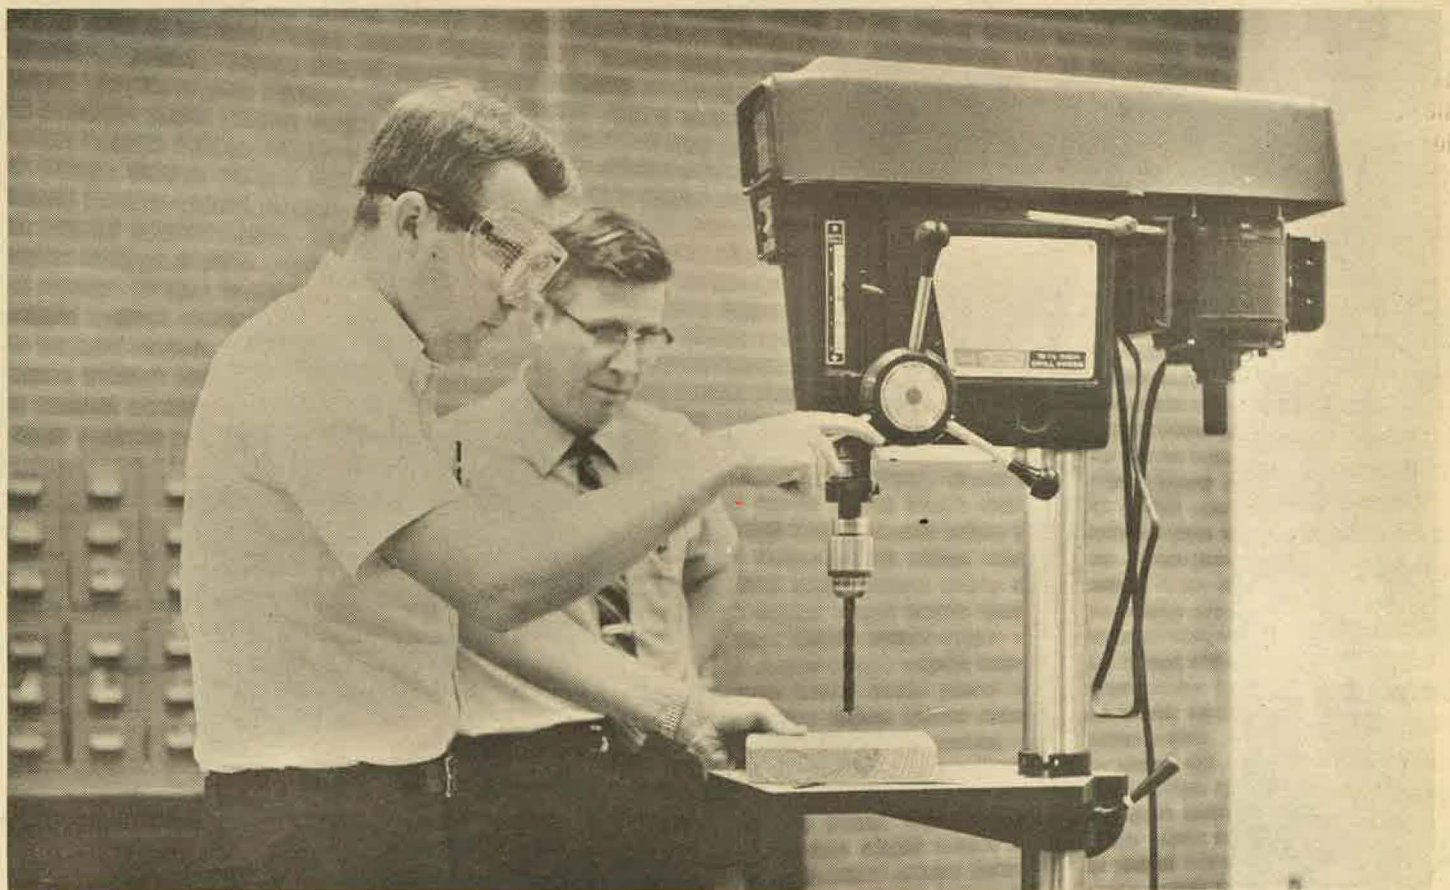

The women have proved the important role they play in sparking more growth for the school and their efforts continue to bring aid to the goal of Harding College.

The various chapters have recently adopted a five-year goal to raise $50,000 toward the furnishing of the proposed new student center.

A recent addition from the group was carpet for the halls of Kendall women's dormitory, but a survey of projects through the years lists a wide variety of assistance to the school. A quick look shows contributions for record listening and recording equipment, furniture, dormitory room furnishings, athletic jackets, landscaping of grounds, costumes for choral groups, redecorating of lounges and probably the most unusual, a human skeleton for the art department.

Currently chapters are located in El Dorado, Fort Smith, Hot Springs, Jacksonville, Little Rock, Magnolia, Newport, Memphis, Tenn., Monroe, La., and Searcy.

Since each group is autonomous, no one is exactly sure how much has been accomplished. Familiarity with a special need has motivated some projects; others have been the result of a suggestion from the administration. On occasions the chapters have pooled efforts, as in the case of providing a refrigerator for the home management house through the collection of Gold Bond stamps.

Currently the group has set a goal to obtain a station wagon for the college, also through collection of trading stamps. "We are trying desperately to reach this goal," Mrs. W. D. Williams, Searcy chapter president, said, "and the chapters would welcome help from any friends of Harding who would send us books of stamps."

Another project of the Searcy president is to form other chapters of AWH in Arkansas and surrounding states or any other place women will volunteer to serve the school. Brochures with additional details may be obtained by writing Mrs. Williams at the college.

The first project in which the group collaborated was the publishing of a cookbook. "Favorite Recipes of Associated Women for Harding" was released in November, 1965, and the volume continues to be a money-maker for the chapters. Books are available from the College Bookstore at a cost of $4.00, including mailing.

Visitors at the annual lectureships last Thanksgiving got a look at some tangible efforts of the members and friends at a Gift Fair, the main project of the Searcy chapter. The Fair has been scheduled to coincide with lectureships again, and thousands of hand-made specialty items will be offered for sale November 24 and 25. Last year the Fair netted $3433 from items of 50c value to the sale of several Harding swings. Other chapters have sponsored fairs in their own communities also.

What the next six years will bring via Associated Women for Harding will be determined only by the ingenuity of the ladies who pursue its course, but the school will continue to appreciate their efforts and will benefit from their support.

AWH chapters have used funds from local projects to defray the expense of various costumes for Harding's traveling ambassadors, the Belles and Beaux.

Mrs. Elizabeth Mason, chairman of Harding's art department, examines the life-size human skeleton purchased for the department by an AWH chapter.

'Apple Tree' Selected For First Production

"The Apple Tree" has been selected by the Speech Department as the first production of the year. The play will be staged in the Little Theatre on Oct. 14-17, 19 and 20.

The 1967 Broadway production is the musical version of three short stories. Only Act I of the three act script will be presented. The humorous Act I parallels closely Mark Twain's account, "The Diary of Adam and Eve."

The role of Adam will be played by Mike Shannon, a junior art major from Hot Springs. Danette Key, a senior music education major from St. Louis, is cast as the gullible Eve. Portraying the role of Eve's tempter, The Snake, will be Phil Reagan. Reagan is a senior speech major from Memphis.

Bob West, instructor in speech, will direct the play and James Huddleston will serve as technical director. Clifton L. Ganus III, assistant professor of music, will assist with the musical arrangements.

H. A. (Buster) Dobbs, minister of the Memorial Church of Christ in Houston, Tex., opened the 1970-71 Bible seminar series October 12-14.

The topic of Dobbs' presentations was "Contemporary Challenges Before Preachers." The seminars consisted of two afternoon lectures with Bible majors. He also spoke in chapel on Tuesday and Wednesday and at the Wednesday evening services of the College Church of Christ.

Dobbs has preached in the Houston area for twenty-two years and was a speaker at Harding's 1969 lectureship.

The other seminars planned for the year are: Jan. 4-6, Jack Paul, Dallas, Tex., "Contemporary Challenges Before College Students"; March 8-10, Joe Barnett, Lubbock, Tex., "Contemporary Challenges Before Congregations"; and April 19-21, Rees Bryant, Lubbock, Tex., "Contemporary Challenges in Missions."

Three Teachers Honored By National Publication

Three Harding College professors have been selected to appear in the 1970 edition of OUTSTANDING EDUCATORS OF AMERICA. Nominated earlier this year, the professors were chosen for the awards publication on the basis of their civic and professional achievements.

Chosen for the honor were Dr. Edward G. Sewell, chairman of the education department; Dr. Evan Ulrey, chairman of the speech department; and Dr. W. D. Williams, chairman of the physical science department.

All three teachers have been recipients of Harding's Distinguished Teacher Award. Sewell was honored in 1967 and Ulrey and Williams received the award in 1969. Sewell obtained his Ph.D. from the University of Texas. Ulrey did his doctoral study at Louisiana State University and Williams received his doctorate from the University of Kentucky.

OUTSTANDING EDUCATORS OF AMERICA is an annual program designed to recognize those who have distinguished themselves by exceptional service, achievements and leadership in education. Each year over 5,000 of the nation's foremost educators are featured in the national publication.

Four Staff Positions Filled

Four new staff appointments were announced by president Clifton L. Ganus at Harding's annual pre-school conference at Camp Tahkodah.

Dr. Jerome Barnes has assumed the duties of director of the Educational Media Center. Dr. Barnes has completed requirements for the Ed.D. degree from North Texas State University.

He has been a member of the Harding faculty for eleven years. He received his B.A. degree in social studies from Harding in 1956 and his M.A.T. degree in 1958.

A 1969 Harding graduate, Louis Butterfield, was named assistant director of the Educational Media Center. He majored in Bible and during the past year has been preaching in Fulton, Miss.

Two June graduates of Harding were selected for staff positions. Dean Bawcom will serve as an admissions counselor and David Crouch was named to direct Harding's news bureau.

Bawcom received his B.S. degree in business administration. He was a member of Harding's three-time Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference championship tennis team. In 1968 he was the AIC singles champion and in 1969 was listed among the Outstanding College Athletes of America.

Bawcom's duties will include interviews with both high school and junior college students concerning Harding's financial aids, available scholarships and academic requirements.

Crouch was the award winning editor of Harding's student newspaper, the Bison, during the 1969-70 academic year. In state-wide competition of the Arkansas College Press Association, he won a first place citation in editorials and a third place in sports feature writing.

The 1969-70 Bison earned honorable mention honors in the general excellence category of the Arkansas College Publications Association judging.

Summer Excursion to Russia Evaluated by Ganus

"The people of Russia have had very little under the Czars in the past and now they have simply changed masters."

This was the evaluation of Harding's president, Dr. Clifton L. Ganus, after his recent 22-day educational tour of Russia and three other Iron Curtain countries.

Accompanied by his wife, Louise, daughter, Debbie, and son, Charles, Ganus traveled by airplane, hyra-foil boat and bus across the communist controlled countries. In addition to viewing the scenic beauties, Ganus was able to talk with those who could speak English.

In comparing the socio-economic standards of the American free enterprise system with those of the U.S.S.R., Harding's chief executive remarked, "Every American citizen should have the opportunity to spend a week behind the Iron Curtain. He would come back much more appreciative of what we have in America, not only because of the material possessions but because of the spiritual freedom and the absence of oppression and the monitoring of every activity of life as well."

Ganus indicated that oppression was something one could sense in the air and see in the faces of the people. "America, with all its problems, offers untold opportunities and privileges to its citizens," commented Ganus.

The economic status of the average Russian family would rank well into the poverty category in the United States. He pointed out that the average income of the Russian people is approximately $110 per month as compared to the approximately $540 average industrial wage in America.

The United States, even with its inflationary prices, would take second place behind the "expensive and inferior" consumer goods of the U.S.S.R. In Moscow chicken is $1.55 per pound; butter is $2 per pound; eggs are ten cents each; oranges are 30 cents each; pork, potatoes and bread are about the same price as in America.

Other expensive items that Ganus listed were luxuries, such as automobiles and washing machines. In describing the expense and ordeal of obtaining an automobile, Ganus said, "The Volga is a small, compact-type car which sells for nearly $6,000. After getting approval, you must wait for five to ten years before receiving your car."

Rent, transportation and medical facilities were found to be inexpensive items in the Russian economy. However, Ganus noted that all three items were subsidized by the government.

Political activity in Russia, other than the major policy decisions made by the top government officials, could best be described as "getting along with the party." "When people think what they are supposed to think, say what they are supposed to say and do what they are supposed to do then there is some degree of freedom," Ganus noted. A new method of removing dissenting voices from the populace is to confine dissenters to mental institutions until they "think correctly," he said.

One of the things meant by "getting along with the party" was voting as one is supposed to vote. Voting is required by law in Russia. Harding's president labelled the recent national elections in Russia as a "farce." "Only one candidate, a communist, was nominated for each office and everyone running was elected, getting over 99 per cent of the votes," he said.

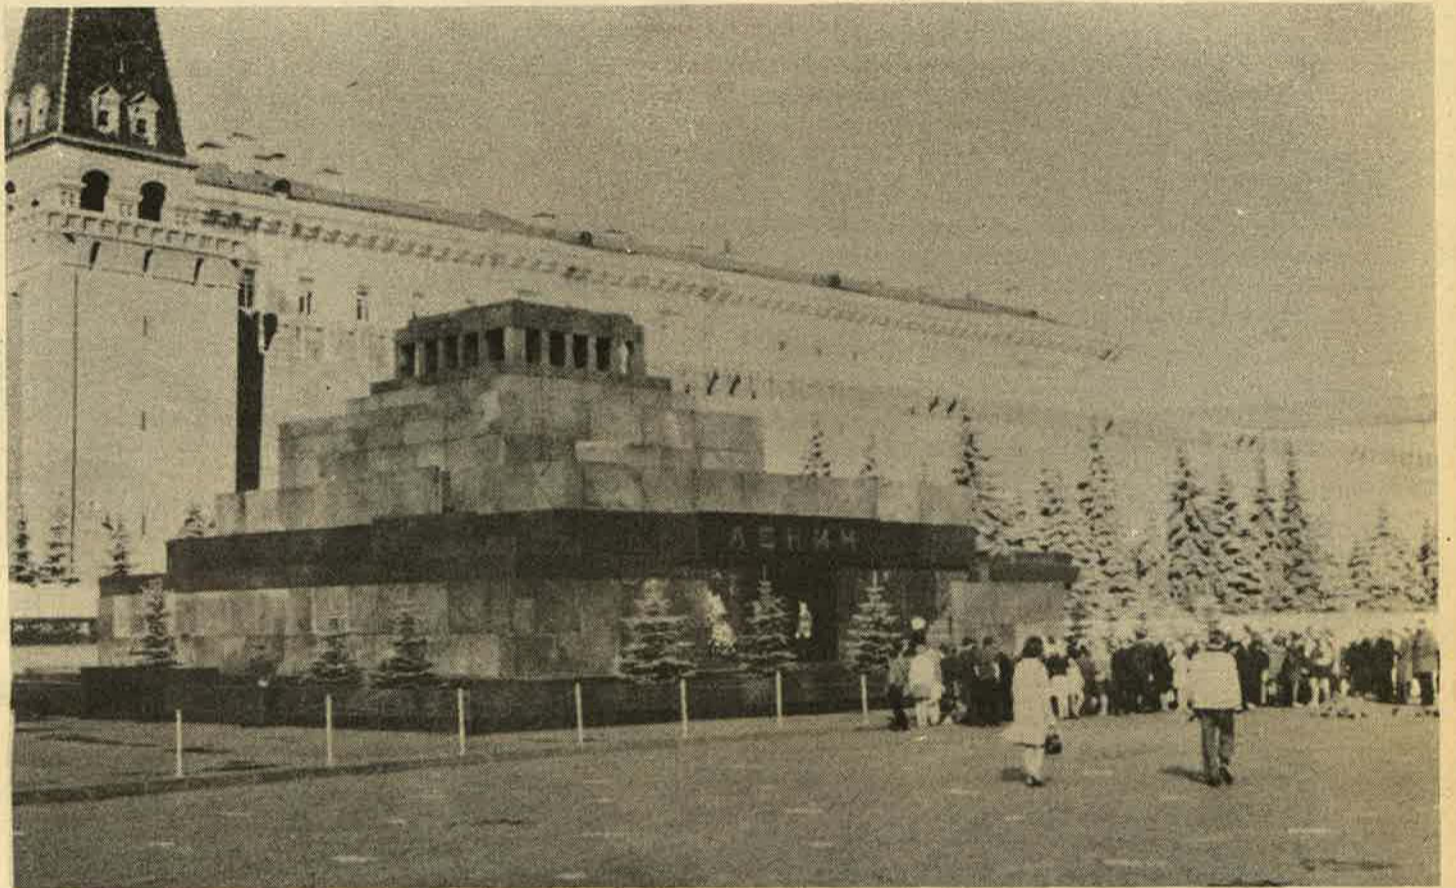

Ganus related how the voters are registered, handed a ballot with one name on it extolling the virtues of the candidate and his qualifications for office. They drop the ballot in a box, feeling proud that they have voted for the people's choice. They do not have a place to register a negative vote. They may fold the ballot and put it in their pocket and not vote, but this is unwise as there is no secrecy. The Russian people live in constant fear of the "knock on the door" and ultimate confinement.

By controlling the military, police, educational system, transportation, communications and the government, six per cent of the people can rule the more than 242 million people in Russia. Government control has a stifling effect on the Russian people. Awareness of activities outside the Iron Curtain perimeter and even in Russia itself is almost nonexistent. News of world events filters down to the people through the government controlled television and newspapers.

Ganus concluded that the sights he witnessed at the Berlin wall are typical of the oppression endured by those behind the Iron Curtain. He called the 40-mile, heavily lighted, heavily patrolled wall and barbed wire barricade the most depressing sight of the entire trip, concluding "It is a great testimony to the inadequacy of the communist system — a case of frustration and futility."

The tomb of Lenin stands as a memorial to the dominance of Communism.

Sears Spends Vacation in Desert

Five weeks of camping and study in the hot, dry, sandy desert of the Western United States does not sound appealing to many, but Dr. Jack Wood Sears spent his summer vacation in just such a location.

From June 22 to August 1 through a grant from the National Science Foundation, the chairman of Harding's biology department was able to attend the Institute in Desert Biology held at Arizona State University. During the five-week study he visited deserts in four states representing the four types of American deserts. Two weeks of desert camping for field trips were included in the curriculum.

Deserts in the continental United States cover more than 500,000 square miles. They exemplify the typical rain-shadow effect created by high mountains lying across the path of moisture carrying winds. Such areas receive less than ten inches of rain per year.

"What impressed me most about the desert was the amount of life that can be found there," said Sears. "More fascinating was the way desert life is able to adapt to the environment."

He explained that severe heat and lack of water are the greatest challenge to survival in the desert. Although the desert animals are able to obtain much of their water from their food, the real secret to their survival is the conservation of water within their own bodies.

"This is why desert animals stay in burrows or other shaded areas during the heat of the day. Underground they are cooler and away from the low humidity of the surface," Sears noted. The low humidity allows the sun's rays to readily penetrate the atmosphere and cause the extremely hot temperatures.

Sears said that a noted authority on desert life pointed out that if a man were to cross a desert in the daytime heat, instead of following the example of the animals, he could not carry enough water with him to replace the water that would be lost from the body to the heat of the desert.

Another factor that impressed the biologists about the desert environment was the temperature extremes. During the day the temperature reached nearly 120 degrees, while at night the temperature dropped to the 70's. In higher regions, although the daytime heat was just as severe, the nightly temperature often fell to 50 degrees.

Desert climates are characterized by extremely rapid heat loss by both radiation and convection to the clear sky above, resulting in chilly nights, frequent heavy dews and even an occasional light frost.

Sears also visited and studied in Death Valley, the lowest point in the Western Hemisphere. Death Valley is 282 feet below sea level and lies between the majestic Black Mountains on one side and the 11,000 foot Telescope Peak on the other side. Noting that in the valley the heat continues day and night he commented, "Death Valley comes close to deserving its name."

In a commentary on the problems of the 70's Sears remarked that some of the rugged plants that had survived the harsh living conditions of Death Valley had recently been killed. Smog from Los Angeles and other California coastal cities had done what the desert heat and dryness was unable to do.

In previous biological institutes Sears had visited and studied animal and plant life in the Rocky Mountains and the rain forests of Puerto Rico.

ALUMNI CORNER . . . From the President

NEW SCHOOL YEAR OFF TO GOOD START

The Harding campus came alive September 7 with more than 1900 students. I am glad to see them. There is nothing more dead than a college campus without students and nothing more alive than the campus teeming with young people, happy, energetic, enthusiastic, optimistic and even a little noisy. For some it was a return to Harding from a summer of work in this country or abroad. For others this was to be their first year at Harding. Some were greeting friends, while others were meeting and making new friends.

There is always a little sadness as parents say good-bye to that son or daughter they have brought to college for the first time. Many tears have been shed in secret by parents and by children, but it is not long until the young people adjust to the change, find new friends and get caught up in the activities of college life and homesickness leaves. There is so much expectation, so much to learn, so much to experience, so much to grow and so many hopes are bound up in this new year. May God grant that it may be the very best for everyone.

Classes have started and things are beginning to settle down into an orderly kind of routine. Our classrooms and two chapel services are full. It will take some hard work to improve on last year, but that is what we all are determined to do. The addition to the library is progressing rapidly and construction on the new men's dormitory has started. Now, if we only had the money for the new coliseum and the new student center! We need them both so badly. With God's blessing, alumni support and the hard work of our president and the development council, we will have them both someday. Have you made your contribution or pledge this year? There is no better time than now.

There are two special days for alumni this fall. The first is October 17, which is homecoming and senior day. Plan to be here and bring a prospective student with you. The football game should be a good one and the fellowship will be fine.

The second date is November 23-26, the fall lectureship. Alumni and friends from across the nation will be gathering here for the spiritual feast and the stimulation to greater Christian living. Why not make your plans to be here at that time?

Achievement Follows Educator's Goals

Few men are able to set specific goals for their lives and then come close to attaining them. Dr. Nyal Royse, Director of Harding's Graduate Studies in Searcy, is one of those few men.

"It has been my plan in life to work as a minister of the church until approximately forty-five years of age. At that time I would make a change and enter Christian education and help train many other young persons to take my place," he said.

From that time back in the early 1940's when he first began to make these plans, Royse has come a long way toward preparing himself and fulfilling his goal.

Royse, an associate professor of education, had well prepared himself academically for the job during the years that he had also worked as a preacher. During that time he attended eleven colleges and universities for a total of over 400 credit hours. Last year he reached one pinnacle in his academic climb when he was awarded the Ed.D. degree from Memphis State University.

Part of his academic preparation was to aid him in his preaching career. His B.A. and M.A. from Pepperdine College were in religion. His M.Ed. later from the University of Portland, however, was to help prepare him for the time when he would teach.

In his tenure as a preacher, Royse made sure that he was well prepared for that field also. During this time, he made five trips to the Bible Lands, two of them all-summer expeditions retracing the journeys of the Apostle Paul. These helped whet his interest in archaeology and later he was able to present a paper on "Hittitology" at the 1965 Pepperdine lectureship.

In addition to this publication, Royse has also written Pioneers On Worship, "Bible Pathways" (Sunday School Literature), History of Hendricks County Indiana, Readings in Educational Psychology, and A Study of Harding College Faculty and Students.

In his early years of preaching, Royse had neither the time nor funds for research or travel. He was busy working at any job he could find. During this period of his life he worked as a metallurgist, steel roller, coal miner, and a chef on a railroad. He was able to teach in both elementary and secondary schools and some years later was dean of Columbia Christian College.

The time spent as a chef helped him in years to come. While performing the many weddings that came his way, he was often disappointed with the quality of wedding cakes that were usually provided. Having experiences as a chef, Royse felt that he could do a better job.

When the time came for each of his four daughters to be married, the cakes that he created for the occasion were, to say the least, masterpieces. They were valued at between $600 and $1,000.

Baking has continued to be a hobby and each year his cakes give an extra special touch to many weddings of Harding students.

Another of his hobbies is collecting rare books. He has a total collection of 3,000 volumes—many of them first editions and autographed copies. Royse also lays brick and flagstone. This hobby has resulted in the fireplace and patio at his own home.

MISSION / PREPARE Ends Second Year; Council Will Meet to Evaluate Program

Harding's MISSION/PREPARE Advisory and Development Council on World Missions will meet November 23 at 9 a.m. in the Heritage Room of the American Heritage Center.

The special meeting has been called for the council to discuss mission efforts being carried on throughout the world. Those who will speak at the meeting will be Maurice Hall, John Waddey, Jim Waldron, Haskell Ches-shir and Alton Howard.

Members of the council will analyze the MISSION/PREPARE program and plan the training series for the coming year. The council will also receive the year-end report on the program's second year of mission work.

During the 1969-70 school year Harding students and faculty members worked in weekend campaigns and conducted campaigns during spring and summer vacations. The training program involved mission work in eleven countries on four continents.

The weekend campaigns involved 143 workers who set up 300 home Bible studies and 340 correspondence courses. One hundred workers taught 320 Bible studies during the students' spring vacation in March.

MISSION/PREPARE participants traveled to ten foreign countries during the summer months to work in campaigns. The sixty-two workers visited churches in Japan, India, Peru, Germany, Austria, the Netherlands, France, Belgium and Switzerland.

Faculty members participating in the overseas summer campaigns were Dr. Joe Hacker, Dr. Kenneth Davis, Bob Helsten, Clifton L. Ganus III, Keith Robinson, Dr. Winfred Wright and Dr. Dorothy Wright.

Enrollment in the five missions courses taught at Harding reached 210 for the academic year. Seven students were enrolled in the MISSION/PREPARE internship program. Three students did their intern study in Germany, two in Italy and one each in Pakistan and Peru.

The Medicine and Missions Seminar and the World Evangelism Seminar drew more than 235 to the campus for discussions of mission work.

Commenting on the second year of the MISSION/PREPARE program Dr. Joe Hacker, chairman of the Bible department, noted, "We are succeeding in our three goals, motivating, training and getting more workers into the mission field."

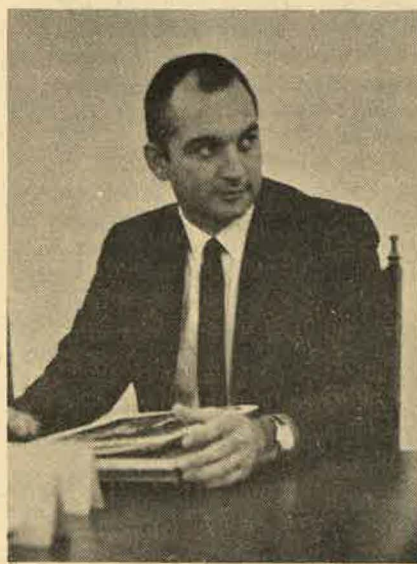

Youngest Board Member Relates Business Success

By Gene Ellmore

Seated on a couch in his office at the Gibson Discount Center in Longview, Texas, Richard Gibson commented on the philosophy of life that has contributed to his success as a young Christian businessman: "I enjoy life. Not one thing particularly above another, I just enjoy every day. I have always been contented. I never worry about the future as such."

Richard Gibson, the youngest member serving on the Harding College Board of Trustees, is an outstanding young businessman, serving as manager of five discount department stores. A dedicated member of the church of Christ, he maintains a strong interest in the benevolent and evangelistic aspects of the church. He is a graduate of a Christian college, a devoted husband, and father of two daughters and a son. The older daughter attends the Longview Public Schools.

A Texan by birth, Gibson grew up in Dallas, graduating from high school in 1955. The following fall he enrolled at Abilene Christian College, graduating in 1959. Upon graduation from college he began working for his father, H. R. Gibson, at the Gibson Discount Center in Dallas. Before assuming management of the store in Longview, he managed a store in Big Spring, Texas.

It is refreshing in the midst of today's affluent society to find a young businessman who is not bent on chasing a "fast buck," nor sitting in his office working at a job he hates just waiting for the time he can retire. Gibson recalled reading a psychology research test conducted to ascertain the greatest area of enjoyment in life. "Ninety-four per cent of all the people interviewed," he said "stated that their greatest enjoyment in life was in expectation of the future — a vacation, a new car, a new house or retirement." He commented that the result of the study indicates their attitude toward life. "They expect these things, they get them and then they look for something else. They are not happy with today's situation."

Gibson has a wholesome outlook on life. He says of himself, "I am just a small-town boy at heart." But he possesses a loving concern for the welfare of others.

He became a member of the church of Christ at the age of 13 in Dallas, Tex. He presently attends at Alpine and Glover Streets in Longview. He was involved in the campaign for Christ which was conducted in Longview in 1968. More recently he participated in the Journey to Eternity series aired on a Longview television station. Basically a family man, he sustains a great interest in children. He is vitally interested in the Children's Care Program conducted by the Southern Hills church of Christ in Shreveport, La. Of family life he said: "I don't enjoy traveling. I would rather stay home with my family. I go out to play some golf once in a while to get the details of business off my mind, but otherwise I just like to stay at home."

Of his golfing ability Gibson said, "I am just a hacker," but hanging on the wall of his office is a uniquely carved trophy awarded to him and his partner, a college schoolmate, upon winning the Palorama Partnership Tournament. He enjoys participating in other activity sports: basketball, baseball, tennis and badminton.

Gibson and his wife Elaine met during their college days and were married in 1960. They are the parents of three children: Deborah Camille, 8 years; Glen Allen, 5 years; and Arlene Michelle, 6 months.

His concern for the welfare of others is projected also into Christian education. As a graduate of a Christian college, Gibson knows the great role that Christian education plays in one's life. On a number of occasions he has assisted worthy students in continuing or competing their education who would otherwise have had to drop out of college.

Aware of Gibson's outstanding qualities of calm, positive deliberation and his great interest in Christian education, President Ganus invited him to serve as a member of the Harding College Board of Trustees.

Of his membership on the Board, Gibson said: "I am somewhat young, but I accepted because I realized if I associated with the other board members for ten or fifteen years that I might learn substantially from them and be able to render a greater service to the college in the future as a result of it. Christian education is worthy of the greatest interest and best preparation we can render to it," he concluded.

Victorious Bisons Open '70 Campaign

After two rugged weeks of two-a-day football workouts, coach John Prock's Harding Bisons have won two consecutive hard-fought contests.

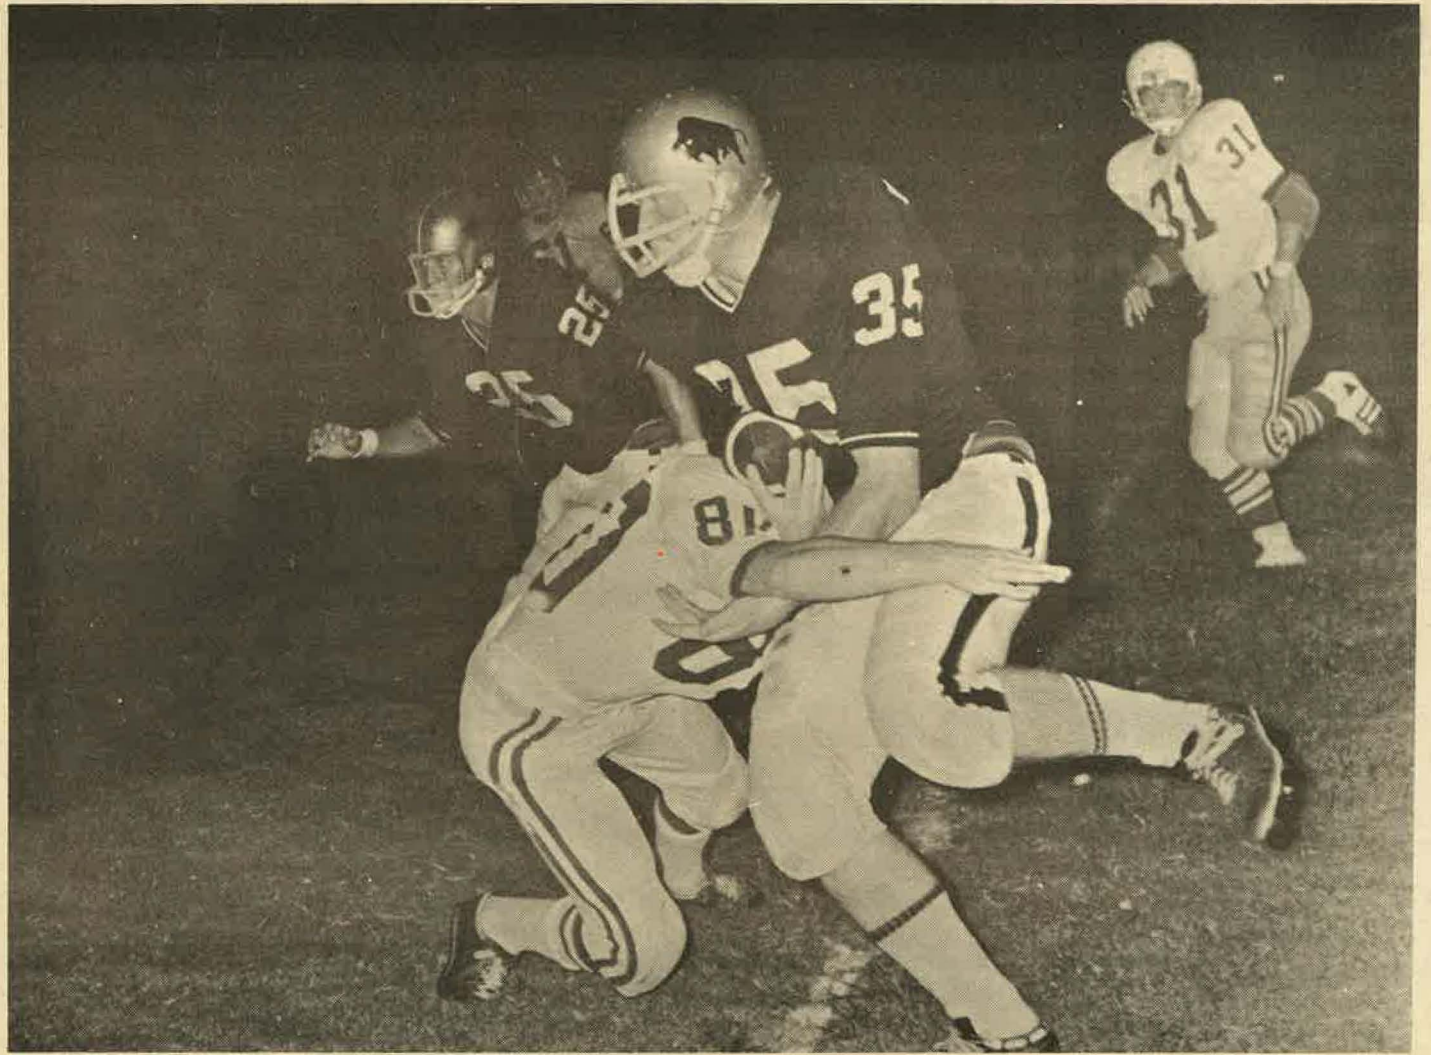

Opening at home, the Bisons used an air-tight defense to dismantle the Southwestern College (Ka.) Mound-builders 18-0.

A week later, a touchdown pass in the final minute of play lifted the Bisons over Millsaps College 13-12. Sophomore quarterback Terry Welch connected with fullback Charles Caffey with only 36 seconds left in the game to put the victory away.

The Bisons are averaging 266 yards per game offensively with the passing attack carrying 189.5 yards of that total. Seniors Vance Cox at center, Mike Watson at tackle and John Manning at tight end have set the pace as Bison quarterbacks have completed 35 of 59 passes for 380 yards and three touchdowns.

Prock is enjoying a pleasant dilemma of having two top notch quarterbacks. Senior Tommy Lewey has connected on 15 of 27 for 163 yards and Welch has hit 18 of 26 for 185 yards.

Split end Ronnie Peacock, last year's Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference pass catching leader, is currently setting the league pace with 17 receptions for 190 yards and two touchdowns.

Captain Charles Caffey bulls his way through defenders in Harding's opening win over Southwestern College of Winfield, Kan.

Cage Outlook Questionable

Lack of height, a shortage of experienced depth and graduation of two top scorers combine to produce a "questionable" outlook for Harding College's 1970-71 basketball season.

In coach Jess Bucy's first year at the helm, the Bisons overcame tremendous odds to finish with a 10-14 mark overall, missing the playoff of Division B by a single game.

Six lettermen return for the Bisons along with a pair of junior college transfers and four freshmen candidates.

Heading the list of returnees is junior guard Bill Chism, a 6-2 former all-stater from Gideon, Mo. A classy operator outside, Chism carried a 13.9 scoring average last season. Charlie Boaz, a 5-8 hustler, developed rapidly last year and is expected to improve Bison scoring potential with his driving, all-or-nothing brand of play.

Top hands returning inside are 6-6 sophomore Joe Mathias, and forward Dana Zartman (6-2) both of whom started for the Bisons a year ago. Mathias ranked high in conference rebounding, averaging 7.7 caroms per game. Zartman, a senior, averaged 10.9 after transferring from Ohio Valley College last year.

Other lettermen counted on for heavy duty are 6-5 forward Greg Franz, a senior forward, and 6-0 guard Larry Rodenbeck, a speedy sharpshooter.

Prospects include a highly regarded pair of junior college transfers, Lester Busby (6-4) of Ohio Valley and Carlton Holt (6-2) from Southwestern College (Tex.). Both are natives of Indianapolis, Ind.

Freshmen candidates vying for varsity positions include Jamie Cowley (5-9) of Henrietta, Tex., Lester Davidson (6-2) of Corning, Fred Dixon (6-4 3/4) of Howard County, and Emmett Sawyer (6-5 3/4) of Buffalo, Mo.

Cliff Clark

Former Trackster Wins California Race

Cliff Clark, former Bison track All-American and now chief of personal affairs at Castle AFB, Calif., won the Fresno, Calif., ten-mile run August 23 in the time of 54 minutes and 12 seconds, more than four minutes ahead of the nearest competitor.

This is the fastest time over the distance for Clark, who has been returning to shape after a foot injury sidelined him for a couple of months. "I think I am back to the point I was before I hurt my foot," commented Clark. "I am running 70 miles a week now and will increase that to 100 miles this fall."

Clark, who placed 19th in the 1969 meet, is aiming for the Amateur Athletic Union Cross Country Championships which are scheduled to be held in November.

Lloyd's Harriers Seek To Regain Cross Country Title

Five lettermen, including the second and third place winners in last year's conference meet, will lead the Harding cross country team as coach Ted Lloyd's squad seeks to regain the top rung in the Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference.

The Bisons finished second in 1969 after winning the cross country title for six consecutive years.

Two sophomores, Tim Geary of Merced, Calif., and John Ratliff of York, Neb., offer experienced leadership for the team. The duo finished 76th and 70th in the NAIA national meet last year.

Lloyd resumes cross country duties after a year's leave of absence to coach for the AAU in Panama. Counted on for valuable points are junior Bill Slicer of Kennett, Mo., Rick Johnson of Oxnard, Calif., and Dave Embry of Indianapolis.

Junior college transfers and freshmen will be counted on to supply the team with depth.
