President Ford Will Keynote Lecture Series

A diversified slate of speakers, including former President Gerald R. Ford, has been announced for the spring American Studies Lecture Series. Opening the series will be Bill Waugh, president of the Casa Bonita Mexican restaurant chain, on Feb. 17. CBS correspondent Richard C. Hottelet will speak on March 17, and Ford's address is scheduled for April 23, according to Harding President Clifton L. Ganus Jr., coordinator of the American Studies Program.

Waugh, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Casa Bonita, Inc., is a native of Norman, Okla. He attended Abilene Christian College in Texas, receiving the B.A. degree in art in 1959. Upon graduation, Waugh joined in the operation of Waugh cleaners, a family enterprise having five Abilene locations.

During 1965, Waugh worked with the Frank J. Reilly Art School in New York.

Waugh made his first venture into the food business in 1967, as he and his brother Tom opened a Taco Bueno restaurant in Abilene. Later, they turned their full attention to developing a Mexican food chain, selling their last dry cleaning facility in 1970.

Now called Casa Bonita, the chain is headquartered in Dallas, comprising 54 restaurants in Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Colorado. The corporation employs more than 2,000 persons, including a management staff of 200.

Waugh is chairman of the board and founder of the Plaza National Bank, which is to open in Dallas this spring. He serves on the board of regents for Pepperdine University in Malibu, Calif. and is chairman of the Dallas fund raising campaign for Heartbeat, a comprehensive Christian outreach toward non-religious Americans. He is also a board member for Christian Services of the Southwest, a social services agency which specializes in caring for homeless children.

Waugh is married to the former Frances Vickrey, a 1965 graduate of Abilene Christian College. They have three children.

Hottelet, a renowned radio and television news correspondent and political observer, has reported on the world's trouble spots for CBS news for more than 35 years.

After receiving a B.A. degree from Brooklyn College in 1937, Hottelet began graduate work at the University of Berlin. He ended his studies to join United Press, reporting on Nazi invasions preceding World War II. He was arrested by the Third Reich on espionage charges in 1941 and spent four months in solitary confinement in Nazi prisons. Following his release, he worked for two years with the Office of War Information in London, Africa and Italy.

Hottelet joined CBS in London in

84 Graduates Receive Degrees

A total of 84 graduates received degrees during fall commencement exercises Dec. 19.

Howard White, president and chief executive officer of Pepperdine University spoke to the graduates on the future of higher education.

Candidates for degrees were recommended by Dr. Joseph Pryor, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, Dr. David Burks, dean of the School of Business and Dr. Bobby Coker, dean of the School of Education. President Clifton L. Ganus Jr. conferred the degrees.

Degrees awarded during the ceremony included the bachelor of arts (55), the bachelor of business administration (14), the bachelor of science (5), the bachelor of science in medical technology (2), the bachelor of social work (2), the master of education (4) and the associate of arts in secretarial science (2).

A total of 540 degrees were awarded to graduates of the University during 1980, according to Registrar Virgil Beckett.

Students Occupy New Academy Facility

January 5 meant more than merely the beginning of a new semester at Harding. It also marked the opening of the new building occupied by the 400 elementary and high school students enrolled there this year.

The 47,000 square foot structure, erected at a cost of more than $1.25 million, was started in the spring of 1979 and fulfills a long awaited dream of the administration, staff and students. For the first time in its history, the Academy has its own complete and separate facilities.

"We are extremely proud of this new building and I am confident it is one of the finest in the state for a school our size," Superintendent Ed Higginbotham said. "We know, however, that brick and mortar do not a school make, and we don't want to maintain the status quo. We want to move forward and upward in every area and we are constantly looking for ways to better the education offered to our students."

He further explained that "... we are committed to a greater emphasis on integrating faith and learning in the classroom. We want to build faith in God, not only in Bible classes and chapel, but in every other part of the curriculum as well. We want to offer a Christian education in the highest sense of the word."

The new school is fully air-conditioned and has 20 classrooms, an auditorium with a seating capacity of 360, a library that is shared by elementary and high school students and a gymnasium that seats 250 spectators.

Construction workers were still making the finishing touches and library books remained in boxes, but the opening assembly was held on schedule.

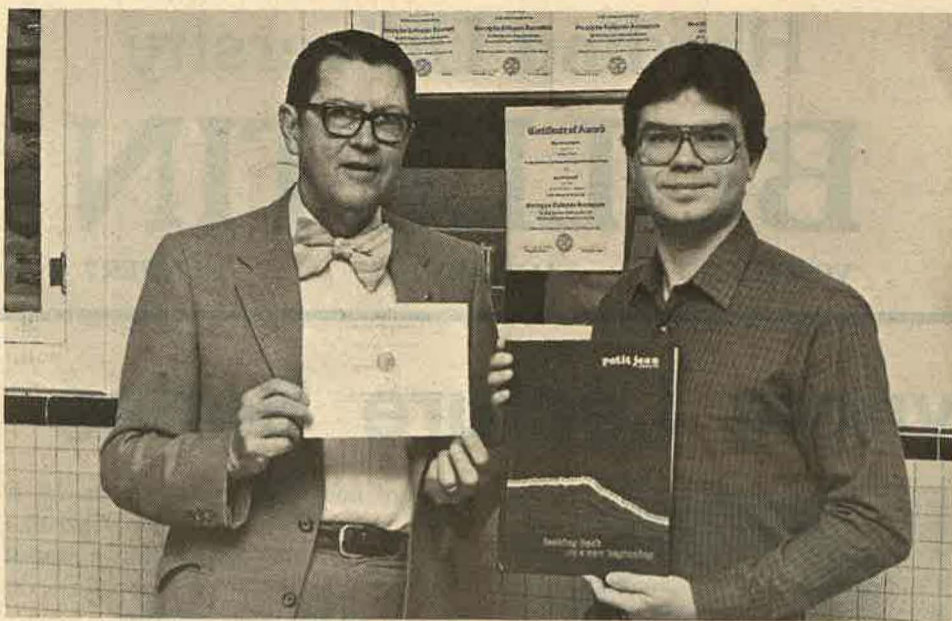

Principal Bill Diles termed the first few days "hectic;" nevertheless, the transition was smoother than might have been expected, he said. The differences in traffic patterns and the unfamiliar routines caused confusion somewhat during the initial days, but within a week the patterns were set rather well, he noted.

The one-story red brick school is located to the east of Alumni Field, on Academy students explore the materials provided in their new library. Approximately 8,500 volumes are contained in the 2,700-square-foot area. For the first time, the elementary's books are shelved in the library.

Petit Jean is All-American For 21st Consecutive Year

The 1980 Petit Jean has been rated All-American, according to Dr. Joseph Pryor, yearbook adviser. The publication received marks of distinction in all five judging categories, including photography, copy, display, coverage and concept.

Of all college and university yearbooks judged by the Associate Collegiate Press, three percent are named All-American. The Petit Jean has received the top rating for 21 consecutive years.

In judging by the Columbia Scholastic Press Association, the Petit Jean received 960 of the possible 1000 points, ranking in the first place division. The book was among the top ten percent in the College-University Printed Yearbook classification, receiving the "medalist" certificate.

A reviewing judge for the CSPA said, "The Petit Jean maintains its tradition as an outstanding example of yearbook journalism. It is a book which students should be extremely proud to own."

The 448-page volume was edited by Charles Murphy of Searcy. The dark green cover bore ivory print and an embossed outline of Petit Jean Mountain. The theme of the publication, the first Harding University yearbook, was "Looking Back on a New Beginning."

The 1981 Petit Jean is now in the making, under editor Melanie McMillen of Monroe, La., who received the B.A. degree in applied psychology in December. Assistant editor is Susan Pryor, a junior journalism major from Searcy. Miss Pryor has been selected to edit the 1982 publication.

Cloer to Speak During Youth Forum April 17-18

Eddie Cloer, assistant professor of Bible at Harding, will speak on "Paths to Perfection" during the 17th Annual Youth Forum April 17-18.

Cloer, who conducted his first gospel meeting at age 16, has concentrated on speaking to teen-agers since the beginning of his preaching career. His topics for the Forum will be "Purity," "Patience" and "Perseverance."

An eventful Forum weekend has been planned primarily for visiting high school students, according to Ken Qualls, Youth Forum coordinator.

The Youth Forum provides an opportunity for prospective students to get acquainted with Harding's campus and to get a small taste of college life as they enjoy a weekend of spiritually oriented activities.

In conjunction with the Forum, university students will stage one matinee and two evening performances of "Spring Sing '81." Production of the annual variety show involved more than 800 students last year.

Other musical highlights during the weekend will include performances by the Bison Band, the Time of Day trio and the A Cappella Chorus. Making their Harding debut will be the Joyful Noise Singers of the Geyer Springs Church of Christ in Little Rock. The Joyful Noise was formed in 1977 and has sung for weddings, fellowships, youth rallies and soul-winning workshops. The eight-member group sings all types of hymns, specializing in lively spirituals which are popular among church youth groups.

Guided tours of the campus will be offered for visitors, and there will be several opportunities for guests to learn about Harding. A slide show entitled "This is Harding University" will be presented on Friday morning. On Saturday, Harding's department chairmen will answer questions about the University's academic programs during a special faculty-student conference. The Admissions Office will be open throughout the weekend and qualified personnel will be available to provide information about Christian education.

Visitors may purchase meals in the campus cafeterias or snackroom or at a wide variety of nearby restaurants.

January 1944. He was present to cover the invasion of Normandy, as well as other key events during the war. On one occasion he parachuted to safety when his plane was hit by enemy flak.

Assigned to the United Nations in 1960, he witnessed and reported on many historic moments at U.N. headquarters in New York. He has also covered the Geneva conferences on Vietnam, disarmament talks, Pope Paul's travels and the foreign visits of Presidents Truman, Eisenhower, Johnson, Kennedy and Nixon. He has reported on national political conventions, campaigns, elections and various aspects of the civil rights movement.

Hottelet has participated in many CBS News special broadcasts, including "Where We Stand," "Years of Crisis" and "Face the Nation." He anchors news-on-the-hour broadcasts for CBS radio and substitutes as anchorman for "The World Tonight."

Hottelet and his wife, the former Ann Delafield, have two children.

Ford, 38th president of the United States, is a native of Omaha, Neb. He grew up in Grand Rapids, Mich. and graduated from the University of Michigan. Following his graduation, he entered Yale University to pursue a law degree.

Ford received the LL.B. degree in 1941 and briefly practiced law before entering the Navy. He served for four years, two aboard the U.S.S. Monterey aircraft carrier. He was discharged in 1946 and resumed his law practice.

Ford was elected to the U.S. House of Representatives in 1948 and served in the House for 25 years, holding various leadership positions, including Republican Conference chairman, Republican National Convention chairman and Minority Leader.

In 1963 he became a member of the President's Commission investigating the assassination of John F. Kennedy and two years later authored with John R. Stiles the book Portrait of the Assassin.

Ford became vice president in 1973, when Spiro T. Agnew resigned. He succeeded to the presidency upon Nixon's resignation a year later, serving the nation as Chief Executive until January 20, 1977.

In 1979, Ford published a book entitled A Time to Heal, which includes the story of his presidency.

Ford is married to the former Elizabeth Bloomer. They are the parents of four children.

Harding Receives Special Grant From Eastman Kodak Company

Harding University has received a $4,000 special grant through Eastman Kodak Company's Educational Aid Program, it was announced by Clifton L. Ganus, president.

Through a program of nonrecurring special grants Kodak helps institutions of higher learning meet the challenges of an increasingly complex world with new programs and specialized facilities. This year 54 colleges and universities throughout the United States shared a total of $2.48 million in educational grants from the company.

Commenting on Kodak's grant, Ganus said, "The corporate support of Eastman Kodak is extremely important to Harding and other schools in the private sector. These funds will assist us in continuing the high level program we have been able to offer, specifically in our American Studies Program and our General Scholarship Fund."

Through Kodak's program, 181 academic institutions and 26 education organizations are sharing $5 million. The grants are financed from the company's current earnings and funds previously set aside.

Walter Fallon, Kodak chairman and chief executive officer, said, "The company's concern for the health and well being of higher education is not simplistic. We strive to provide responsible support for institutions, associations, programs and students with identified needs and proven capability. The multiple pressures thrust upon every aspect of higher learning by an inflationary economy, a complex society and erupting technical knowledge are formidable challenges. We recognize the plight of quality education and acknowledge responsibility."

Harding is one of three institutions in Arkansas to receive assistance from Kodak. Others are Arkansas College and the University of Arkansas.

Lodging also may be arranged on or off campus. Dormitory housing may be planned through a friend at Harding or may be assigned at registration. Dormitory guests will need to bring their own sleeping bags and towels.

Team Selected for College Bowl Contests

A College Bowl varsity team has been selected to represent Harding in intercollegiate quiz competition, Dr. Jimmy Carr, assistant to the president, announced.

The eight-member team includes Rick Foster, a senior English major from Memphis; Philip Gould, a senior history and speech major from Searcy; Wade Huffman, a freshman science major from Fayetteville, Ark.; Jeff McKinzie, a senior biology major from Chester, Va.; Joel Ragland, a junior music education major from Cookeville, Tenn.; Jon Sherrod, a senior biology major from Belle Mead, N.J.; Eugene Smith, a senior chemistry and math major from Dallas and Greg York, a senior Bible major from Louisville, Ky.

Faculty advisers are Dr. Fred Jewell of the history department and Drs. Larry Long and Dennis Organ of the English department.

The all-star team was selected during a double-elimination intramural quiz tournament which involved more than 100 students on 27 teams. Competition narrowed to two finalist teams, "IQ-2" and "AGO," who met in a championship match during the chapel period Dec. 11.

McKinzie, Ragland, Smith and York, all members of AGO social club, composed the winning team and became the core varsity players. Foster, Gould, Huffman and Sherrod were selected from eliminated intramural teams, on the basis of their individual speed and accuracy in answering questions during the tournament.

"These players averaged the highest number of toss-up answers," explained Long. "It was very good that the players having the top four averages were from different fields of study. We wanted to balance the team to cover the various disciplines." Knowledge will be most needed in the literary, historical and scientific areas, Long predicted.

According to Long, the team's strength lies in the fact that some of the players are extremely versatile. Smith, for example, a chemistry and math student, also has a musical background.

Harding's first intercollegiate competition will be held Feb. 7 at Texas A & M, headquarters for Region 12. Sixteen teams are expected to meet for the tournament, representing colleges and universities from Arkansas, Texas and Louisiana. Arkansas competitors will be Harding and three branches of the University of Arkansas, including Little Rock, Pine Bluff and Fayetteville.

To prepare for the tournament, Harding's team will study films of last year's College Bowl competition and will practice quick-recall and quick-response drills, Long said.

Fifteen U.S. regions compete in the College Bowl games. Matches are organized and partially funded through scholarships by the Association of College Unions-International. During play, the four-member teams attempt to earn points by answering questions which have been researched by the Reader's Digest editorial staff. Regional winners compete for national honors and $25,000 in awards.

"More than anything else," Long stated, "the competition is a lot of fun; but the further the team goes, the more it becomes an honor for the contestants and for the school."

Summer Workshops Scheduled For Church Leaders, Counselors

Three summer workshops have been announced by Jerry Jones, chairman of the Bible department. A Youth Ministers' Seminar will be held May 11-15, and a Counseling Workshop is scheduled for June 15-17, followed by a Church Leadership Seminar June 18-20.

The Youth Ministers' Seminar is being coordinated by Jones, with the assistance of John Paul Blankenship of Lubbock, Texas, who conducted several "Teaching Teens" classes during Harding's 13-in-1 Bible Workshop last August. The seminar will examine Bible curricula for teens, program planning, budgets, counseling and the spiritual life of the youth minister. Participants in the seminar may earn two hours of college credit.

The Counseling Workshop will be conducted by Dr. Jack Thomas, chairman of the psychology department and director of counseling at Harding. The workshop will provide three days of intensified training in various counseling techniques.

Two Harding deans, Dr. David Burks of the School of Business and Dr. Bobby Coker of the School of Education, will direct the Church Leadership Seminar. The program, designed to strengthen leadership skills of present and future church leaders, will include sessions on motivating others, setting meaningful goal-oriented objectives, making effective decisions and involving others in the work and activities of the church.

Further information on the workshops may be obtained by writing Bible Department, Box 939, Harding University, Searcy, Ark. 72143.

ON THE COVER: Bison co-captain Ricky Treadway (44) rolls in a lay-up against Hendrix College. A senior from North Little Rock, Treadway has scored 925 career points and is well on his way to becoming the 13th player in Bison history to score 1000 points in his career.

the southeast corner of the university complex. It was the first move for the Academy since 1951, when the elementary and high schools were combined in the concrete block structure formerly known as the Industrial Arts building. Previously, grades 1-6 met in the Training School building located where Kendall women's dorm now stands. The high school met for classes in Godden Hall.

The Academy shared the building with the art department and Harding Press. The art department moved in 1969 to the newly constructed Stevens Art Center.

An anonymous gift of $500,000 sparked the drive for the Academy. Organization of an Academy Alumni Association was launched, and through a phonothon 450 alumni pledged an additional $110,000.

Open house and a formal dedication of the building are being planned for February.

In addition to Higginbotham and Diles, the Academy is staffed by Lewis "Tony" Finley, elementary principal, and 28 faculty members, including Claudette Alexander, Betty Alston, Linda Arnold, Bill R. Barden, Patricia Brant, Diane Brown, James R. Brown, Ruth Browning, Glenave Curtis, Bruce Davenport, Tony Felker, Mildred Groover, Anita Hamilton,

Camp Fund Started In Memory of Miller

A memorial fund in the name of Harry Miller, Searcy Parks and Recreation director until his death in a traffic accident in September, has been established to be used to send orphaned and homeless children to Camp Wyldewood summer camp each year.

Miller and his wife, Denise, kept foster children in their home for several years. Miller was known for his interest in the development and welfare of all youths. The Millers were members of Wyldewood's Development Council.

Planners hope to get at least $12,000 by May 15 so that it may be used beginning with the 1981 camp session.

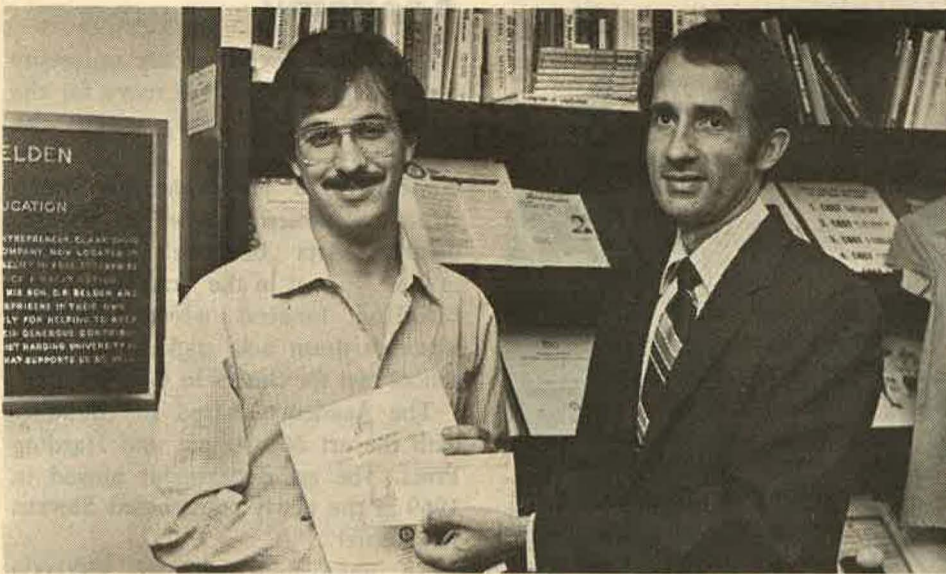

The money will be used to pay all fees for one session at the camp, which operates a year-round program three miles north of Searcy.

Don O. Berryhill, Wyldewood's development director, said, "Because of Harry's great interest in children, and his keen interest in orphaned children, some people in Searcy felt this would be a good thing, a good way to remember Harry."

Mrs. Miller commented, "I think this is something Harry would have liked to be a part of. He'd be happy that something like this was happening."

Contributions may be sent to the Harry Miller Jr. Memorial Endowment, Camp Wyldewood, Searcy, Ark. 72143.

CAMPUS NOTES

Scott Johnson, winner of the Students in Free Enterprise Essay Contest, is presented an Economic Enlightenment Certificate and a $100 savings bond by Dr. Don Diffine, director of the Belden Center for Private Enterprise Education, which sponsored the competition.

Johnson Writes Winning Essay In Private Enterprise Contest

Scott Johnson of Lubbock, Texas was awarded first place in the fifth annual Students in Free Enterprise Essay Contest sponsored by the Harding University Belden Center for Private Enterprise Education.

Johnson, a junior art major, entered in the contest an allegorical fairy tale entitled "The Wonderful Machine." The essay described free enterprise as a unique machine which was "efficient, self-adjusting and increasingly complex" but which decreased in efficiency when it received repairs and "attention from outside sources."

"The essay was unlike any other entered in the contest," stated Dr. Don Diffine, director of the Belden Center. "It won the contest because it best exemplified this year's theme, 'Why I Believe that Freedom and Free Enterprise are Inseparable.'"

Runner-up in the competition was Thomas Tabor, a junior business major from Tucker, Ga.

The winning essays were selected from among 40 entries written by students of Diffine, David Tucker (economics) and Marvin Robertson (business). Four judges, members of the local Council for Realistic Economic Education (CREED), named Johnson first place winner, and Diffine presented to him an Economic Enlightenment Certificate and a $100 savings bond. Tabor was awarded a similar certificate and a $50 savings bond.

Who's Who Lists 47 Harding Seniors

Forty-seven seniors have been included in the 1981 edition of Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges, a directory of the country's most outstanding campus leaders.

Christian Awareness Seminar To Feature 'Humanism' Feb. 28

The third annual Christian Awareness Seminar will be held in the Benson Auditorium on the Harding campus Feb. 28, under the sponsorship of the American Citizenship Education Program of Searcy.

"Humanism" will serve as the overall theme of the seminar. Speakers and their topics are Dr. Tim La Haye of San Diego, Calif., "The Battle for the Mind of Man;" Bob Larson, former rock entertainer, "Humanism, Drugs and Hard Rock;"

Dr. Bert Thompson of Cookeville, Tenn., "Humanism, Education and Evolution;" Marilyn Kreitling of Searcy, "Humanism, Textbooks and Values Clarification" and Phyllis Schlafly of Washington, D.C., "Humanism, Politics and Government."

"Through this program, we are trying to educate Christian-principled people concerning the problem of humanism," said Marilyn Kreitling, director of the ACEP. "We think that both adults and students can benefit from the quality program which we have been able to arrange. All concerned individuals need to be aware of the problems, of how they affect us and of what we can do to help."

On Friday evening, Feb. 27, a concert by Up With People, a popular patriotic singing group, will be presented in the Benson Auditorium.

Registration for the Christian Awareness Seminar is $8 per person for non-students. There is no registration fee for students. Tickets for the Up With People concert will be $4 and $6 for adults, $3 and $5 for students. Tickets for the seminar and concerts are available from the American Citizenship Education Program, 10 Jenny Lynne Drive, Searcy, Ark. 72143.

Members of the executive board of ACEP are Kreitling, Ben Berry, Jim Citty, Bill Harris, Gary Ulrich and Jim Woodell.

Bales Retires, Plans to Continue Writing

by Alice Ann Kellar

For J. D. Bales, retirement means a change of pace — a quickened change of pace at that. The professor of Christian Doctrine, who has been associated with Harding since 1933 and a member of the faculty for the last 35 years, is no longer a classroom teacher. He retired with the conclusion of the fall semester, his last class being Dec. 12.

But for one whose name has long been synonymous with the pen and publications, his retirement will simply shift toward more writing, an area in which he feels he can reach more people.

He has reached untold numbers of persons all over the world, and he continues to receive requests for information. "I've considered getting a map of the world. I'd call it 'My Classroom' and I'd pinpoint each place that I get a phone call or letter from someone wanting information.

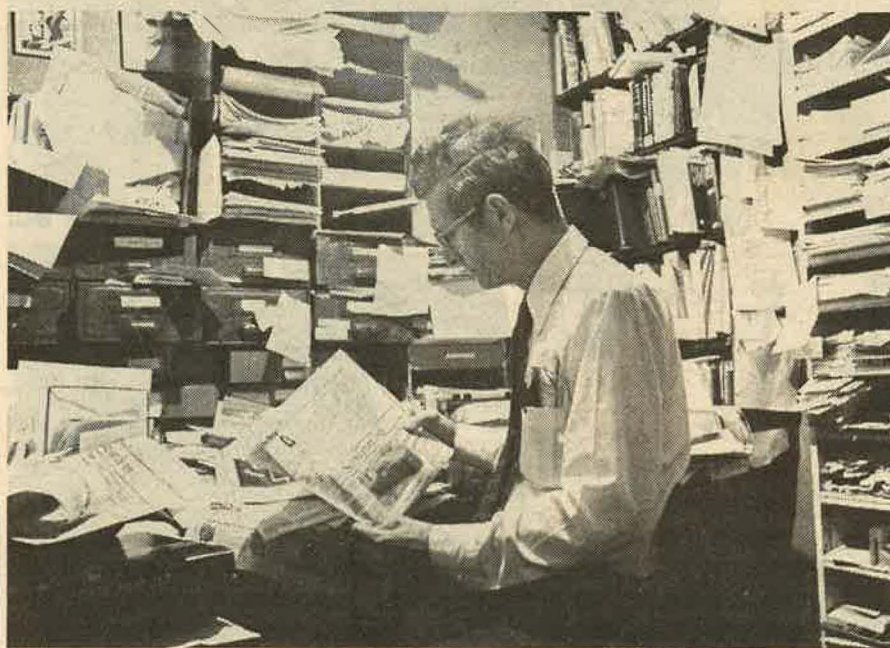

"Just yesterday I received a call from a man who is preparing for a debate. I can save him lots of material-gathering time. Of course, he'll have to digest it for himself."

In 1934 Bales wrote his first article. Having worked on the Hudson River in New York one summer, he talked to a lady about the church. "If the church is so great," she inquired, "why isn't it up here?" He wrote an article under that title and it was published in the Gospel Advocate.

It was after the tragic death of his Christian parents in a train-car crash when he was 11 years old that he decided to fight evil. At that early age, he became interested in "why I believe," and from that standpoint he found vigor to fight Communism.

"Communists are the largest organized body of atheists in the world," he explained. "I believe in the Great Commission to go into all the world and teach, to fight disbelief."

So he gathered material on the Sitting at a desk piled high with papers and books, J. D. Bales examines some recently acquired information, mentally filing it away for future use.

subject. And material he has. His office suite of four rooms is lined with books. So is the hallway. His house is the same.

Does he know where everything is? "Well, no," he confesses. "Sometimes I can't find something I received in the mail that morning. But I'd say I could find ten per cent, so I'm ahead of most folks even at that."

Bales entered Harding when the school was still in Morrilton, graduating in 1937. Following his graduation, he travelled as a missionary to South Africa, via Canada. In Ontario he met his wife, the former Mary Smart.

The two celebrated their 40th wedding anniversary last summer, with their six children, Lt. Col. James David Bales Jr., a physician in the Army stationed at Ft. Lewis, Wash.; Mary Ethel Gale, a teacher in New York; Mark Bales, a teacher in McCrory, Ark.; Barbara Gibson, a housewife in Illinois; Jonathan Bales, a student in Nashville, Tenn., where he is also employed, and Robin Kirk, recently married and residing in Tulsa, Okla. The Baleses also have six grandchildren.

Bales finds no trauma in leaving the classroom nor does he fear at least the issue of retirement. He's glad to be free from giving grades, a chore he never enjoyed. But he has no regrets. "Many of my friends have made well, lots more money than I. But I've had a rich life. I've thoroughly enjoyed my teaching and I believe I've had students who loved me. Many have not agreed with me, but I believe they respect me."

Paraphrasing a Harvard professor who said he would have paid to be able to teach, Bales declared, "Life can be rich indeed when one is supported to do what he wants to do."

Harding Plates Meet Inflation

"Souvenir plates have become victims of runaway inflation," according to Floyd Daniel, vice president for development.

Since 1970, Harding has sent a commemorative plate to each donor who contributed $100 or more to Harding during the calendar year. A continuing decline in the purchasing power of the dollar, along with ever increasing costs for plates, postage and labor, has made it necessary for Harding to increase the minimum gift from the $100 gift level to $200 in order to receive a plate for 1981.

Although inflation has increased significantly over the last ten years, the $100 gift level has been held as long as possible. According to the federal government's Consumer-Price Index, it now takes $219.00 to purchase the same goods and services that $100 would purchase in 1970.

"Harding regrets having to take this step, but we feel that our friends and supporters will understand," Daniel said.

Gardner Brothers Make Basketball a Family Affair

by Stan Green

One of the most unusual 1-2 combinations in Arkansas athletic circles can be found at Harding University, where the Gardner brothers — one playing and one coaching — are making their mark on Arkansas basketball.

Charles, the athlete, is currently one of the high scorers in the highly competitive Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference, with a scoring average of 16.4 points per game. Butch, on the coaching side, is in his second year as a full-time assistant for the Bison cage teams.

In such a situation one might expect some unusual and perhaps awkward circumstances, but the Gardners have handled the situation without a ripple.

At 6-6, Charles stepped into a starting role for Coach Jess Bucy's Bisons in January of the 1979-80 season and finished the season with a 19.2 scoring average, which happened to be second in the league. He also averaged 10.3 rebounds per game and was recognized as an All-AIC honorable mention selection.

Only a junior, Charles is leading the Bisons in scoring this season, when Harding is optimistic about moving into the first division of the ever-tough AIC.

"We really feel like we have a good shot at it this year," the former high school all-stater said. "We've been waiting a long time."

As a coach, when Butch speaks players usually listen, brother or not. The 6-4 assistant was a three-time NAIA All-America basketball selection as a collegian. During his four years of competition, he scored 2,255 points and averaged 21.0 points for 107 collegiate games. He was a four-time All-AIC honoree and is still active as a member of the powerful Carder Buick AAU basketball team.

When questioned about looking at the game from the bench, he said, "It's an adjustment, there's no doubt about that. You have to be more objective and try to see what actually is happening on the floor."

As to their player-coach relationship, it seems to be working out fine for both individuals.

"At first it was a funny kind of feeling," Charles said. "But you've got to be all business when you're on the floor for practice or a game. I respect Butch's knowledge of the game and he's helped me out a lot."

"He's played with me so much that he knows when I'm having trouble or something. He gives me tips during the game, and it works out real good because he knows what I can do best."

For Butch, the coach, he says he hasn't adjusted to the situation completely. "I can see where it could be kind of sticky, all right, but so far it's been a pleasure. Charles has a good attitude, works hard in practice and the games, and that's all any coach can ask."

"I try to work with him just like I do with the other players. I don't think he expects anything special, and so far it's worked out fine for both of us."

Harding, rated as a darkhorse contender in most of the preseason polls, is relying heavily on the "Gardner Connection." The next few weeks will prove just how valuable it can be for the Bisons.

Bison head coach Jess Bucy perhaps sums it up best when he says, "For my money, I'd like to have both of them in uniform!"

Harding University admits students of any race, color, and national or ethnic origin. Also, as required by Title IX of the Educational Amendments of 1972, Harding University does not discriminate on the basis of sex or handicap in its educational program or activities or employment except where necessitated by specific religious tenets held by the institution and its controlling body.
