INAUGURATION DAY!

Dr. David Burks Inaugurated As Fourth Harding President

President David B. Burks

A convocation representing 80 colleges and universities and witnessed by more than 2,700 people brought inaugural activities to a climax Friday, September 18, as Dr. David B. Burks officially became Harding's fourth president.

Hosted by James H. Cone, Jr., chairman of the Board of Trustees, and presided over by Jim Bill McInteer, secretary of the Board, the processional was accompanied by the Harding University Band under the direction of Warren Casey. The opening fanfare, the processional and the recessional were premier performances, written for the occasion by Dr. William W. Hollaway, chairman of the Department of Music.

A mass chorus which combined the Academy Chorus, the A Cappella Chorus and the University Chorale sang Aaron Copland's "Sing Ye Praises to Our King" and Sergei Rachmaninoff's "Glory Be to God," directed by Dr. Cliff Ganus III and Dr. Kenneth Davis, Jr., respectively. Accompanied by the University Band, the chorus ended its performance with "America, the Beautiful" under Casey's direction.

A number of participants representing various constituencies extended greetings to Dr. David Burks in his role as president. Included were Mike Allen, Student Association president, representing the student body; Phil Dixon, president of the Alumni Association, representing the alumni; Bill Harris, chairman of the President's Development Council, representing the Development Council, Associated Women for Harding and other support groups; and Don England, professor of chemistry, representing the faculty.

Representing Churches of Christ and Christian education was Gary Elliott, president of Columbia Christian College. Ray Thornton, president of the University of Arkansas, represented Arkansas colleges and universities.

Leah Burks: From 'Country Girl' to First Lady

"He is married to the former Leah Gentry of Alhambra, Ill.," for the most part summarizes all of the information released about David Burks' wife in the numerous articles printed regarding the new president of Harding.

As far as Leah herself is concerned, that's enough said, because the quiet but competent lady has been content with her role as "wife of David" for the past 22 years, and "mother of Bryan, Stephen and Marleah" in appropriate progression.

But when the real Leah Gentry Burks stands up, what appears is a talented, capable brunette who is fiercely dedicated to Christian education, to Harding University, and, most of all, to serving God. Her agenda, especially in recent years, would exhaust anyone, but in the words of Garrison Keillor, she claims, "I'm a shy person," and goes her way without regard for personal attention.

Like many other persons, perhaps even all others, her present role is not exactly what she had in mind for her life. "I married an accountant and assumed I'd move to a city somewhere, probably Dallas," she explains. "I never envisioned myself in Searcy, Arkansas, and certainly never dreamed that David would be president."

Somehow, there was another plan.

That she is a Harding alumna is itself a bit of a story. Leah was reared on a farm where her parents, Mr. and Mrs.

by Alice Ann Kellar

Milburn Gentry, still reside. The family included a brother, Lloyd, four years her senior.

During a fishing trip to North Arkansas, fellow campers talked to the Gentry family about Harding and convinced Lloyd that he should attend. He did, graduating in 1961. "By that time," Leah smiles, "I had no other thought than to attend Harding."

And by the time she graduated in 1965 with a degree in English, she had served twice as president and once as secretary of Zeta Rho in her four years as a member of the club; she had been elected queen of Beta Phi Kappa (David's club); she had served in the Student Association cabinet, sung in the Chorale and played in the band.

In addition, she had been a member of several organizations, including Bijitsu art club, Bison Boosters and Student National Education Association.

Also, during her senior year she had become engaged to David Burks. They were married on August 7 following their graduation and moved to Austin, Texas, where David entered the University of Texas.

When the couple moved back to Searcy for David to join the faculty, Leah was busy at home with Bryan, now a junior at the university. In the ensuing years, Stephen, 16, and Marleah, 14, have joined the family and Leah's activities increased as the children's involvements broadened.

As is the tendency around Searcy and especially the Harding campus, the daily pace is a conglomerate of church, family, school and social scheduling. As well as keeping the family going through all this, Leah used her training in English and art to teach several years in the Bradford and Central schools in White County and also at Harding Academy. She has retired from teaching now.

Since May of 1986 when the announcement of David's selection was made, the pace has quickened and intensified to an even greater degree as she has overseen the building of a house, moved in before the construction was actually all done, and anticipated her duties and role as Harding's First Lady.

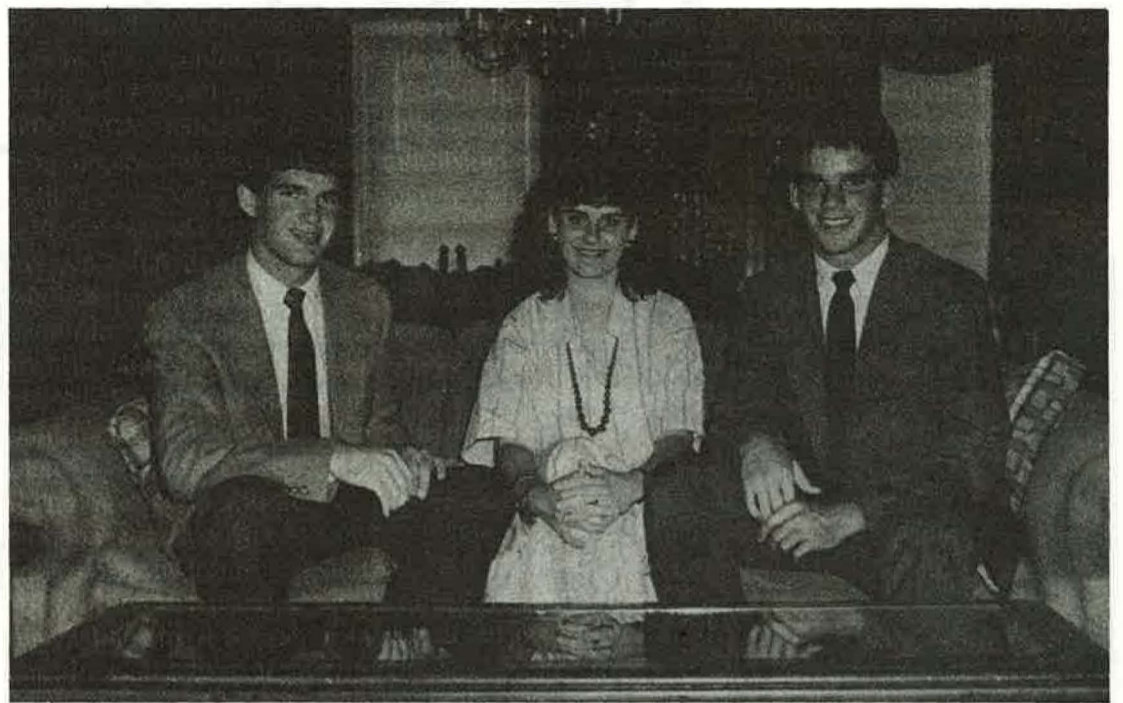

The house, a two-story brick at the edge of Harding Park, has consumed much of the family's time and energy. But the finished product reflects their penchant to Harding, as the structure is designed to accommodate large groups in a comfortable setting.

She's looking forward to developing the goals her husband has set for the university. Too, she's making plans for enjoying the house with friends — in both small and large groups.

"I feel sure my lifestyle is going to change drastically, though," Leah says of the days ahead. For one thing, she doesn't expect to find time to sew, a talent the entire family has relied on. "I'll just have to hit more sales," she grins.

She feels there will be more pressure for David; so she allows for more attention to supporting him. "That will be easy, though, for I'm content in supporting my family." The children's activities will continue to be foremost in her priorities, and she has declared that from that perspective, Harding stands in second place.

She'll earnestly seek occasions for family time. She not only likes to cook, she's been successful in introducing a broad area of foods to the family. "David was a meat and potatoes man when we married," she reveals, "but now he eats almost all foods," noting that nutrition is important in her decisions for menus. Then she winces as she admits to one of the demons that plague most females, "I fight a constant battle with the calories."

Sitting amid unpacked boxes while construction workers saw and pound in the background, the first lady recalled the past two decades, thought of her future in the inevitable fishbowl she's now living in, drew a long, deep breath and sighed.

"It's all going to be okay," she said convincingly, "if I can just ever locate the boxes my clothes are in."

Burks Inaugurated...

Inc., David Glass represented Arkansas businessmen, and Governor Bill Clinton represented the state government.

An exchange of the seal from former president, Clifton L. Ganus, Jr., to Dr. Burks and the challenge with executive authority by Chairman Cone marked the official beginning of Burks' tenure as president of Harding University.

In his response, President Burks addressed the theme of his administration — "Integrating Faith, Learning and Living." He stressed service with quality as the mission of Harding University, suggesting that "this motto is really an extension of the historic mission which Harding has always had."

He acknowledged with gratitude the heritage of Harding University — the great men who preceded him in office and the "struggles, determination and perseverance that brought Harding to the present."

President Burks declared that "faith and learning should be the heart of living, with Christian scholarship in every field, Christian ethics in conduct, lasting relationships, physical fitness and good citizenship within a global perspective."

Emphasis at Harding should be on "quality, not quantity" and on "people, not things," Dr. Burks summarized.

Dean Priest, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, led the audience in the singing of "Faith of Our Fathers" and the Alma Mater. The invocation and scripture reading were led by Neale Pryor, vice president for academic affairs. Jimmy Allen, professor of Bible, led the benediction.

Inaugural activities concluded with a luncheon for invited guests at Ganus Athletic Center.

In conjunction with inaugural ceremonies, various academic departments in the university conducted seminars, panels, lectures, art shows, video festivals, and recitals for faculty and guests during inaugural week.

Dr. James F. Carr, Jr., assistant to the president, served as chairman of the presidential inauguration. General coordinators were Dr. Maribeth Downing, associate dean of students, and Dr. Priest.

More than 70 faculty, staff and alumni served on 14 committees in conjunction with the inauguration of President Burks.

Board Chairman James Cone Issues Presidential Challenge

Those of you who have followed the work of the trustees over the past year and one-half are aware of our study, search, and finally, our choice when the decision was made as to who would lead Harding University into the twenty-first century.

As trustees, we entered into this process prayerfully and with understanding of the magnitude of the responsibility we shared and the task before us.

Article six of the charter of this University invests the governance of Harding to the trustees. Article eight, sections one, two and three provide for the selection of the president by the trustees, and outline his authority.

Article three, section one of the by-laws further describes the duties and the responsibilities of the president. We, the trustees, have to the best of our abilities, fulfilled this charge to this point in time.

Many of you have heard me say that Dr. David Burks is the right choice for this special time in the history of Harding University.

Dr. Burks is a faithful Christian, active in the work of the church and dedicated to the principles of New Testament Christianity. He is a husband, a father, a distinguished teacher and scholar, a very capable administrator and a leader in civic, religious and educational endeavors.

His philosophy of life is one of service to others. We believe Dr. Burks is the kind of person to whom the founders of Harding University and the charter would have us invest the future leadership of this institution.

Dr. Burks, you have publicly, and in private discussions with the trustees, indicated your willingness to accept this charge of leadership and responsibility for the future direction of Harding University.

Our work with you from the start of our discussions until today has demonstrated that you are fully capable, with the help of God, to fulfill this responsibility.

Therefore, as chairman of the Board of Trustees of Harding University, and on behalf of all the trustees, I formally and officially charge you with this position of leadership and invest upon you the title: President of Harding University, this 18th day of September, 1987.

May God bless you in this good work.

Burks Addresses Theme of New Administration

Following is the text of President David B. Burks' inaugural address, "Integrating Faith and Learning."

Today, we are assembled to officially mark the beginning of a new chapter in the history of Harding University. In so doing, I want to describe our rich tradition of educating for eternity, present a reaffirmation of our mission, and share a dream with you about our future.

Educating for Eternity

Harding began as a senior institution of higher education in 1924 in Morrilton, Arkansas. The school was named for James A. Harding, in many ways, the most brilliant and dynamic leader of the second generation of the restoration movement in the nineteenth century. James A. Harding and David Lipscomb, another early pioneer in Christian education, were responsible for starting a new type of college, the Nashville Bible School, in 1891. Its stated aim was, "To teach the Christian religion as presented in the Bible in its purity and fullness; and in teaching this, to prepare Christians for usefulness in whatever sphere they are called upon to labor." It was not their design to teach only professional preachers but rather to integrate faith and learning for all students. James A. Harding and David Lipscomb were to profoundly influence Christian education as we know it today.

Brother J. N. Armstrong, Harding's inspirational president from 1924 until 1936, expressed our purpose with the following language:

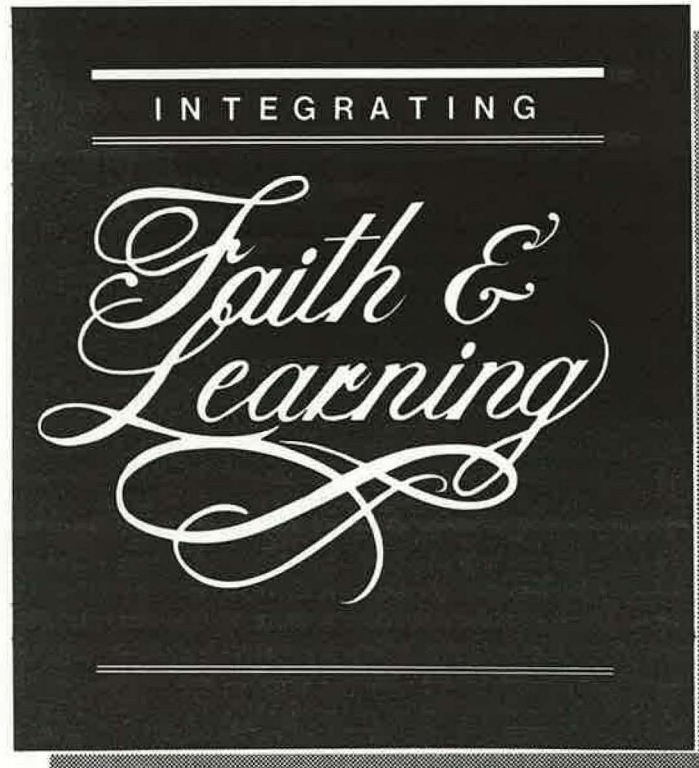

The real and lasting advancement of every community, nation, and people lies in the consciences of its people. So in our work, our chief aim is to send every boy and girl home at night with a tenderer conscience, a greater respect for right and duty. To teach a boy how to live a hundred years and train him to be an intellectual giant without this conscience culture is to curse the world and him.

We are indebted to J. N. Armstrong and others on the faculty at that time for the establishment of so many of the traditions we build on today.

"By integration, we mean a blending together of Christian faith-building simultaneous with all learning processes."

Dr. Benson assumed the presidency in 1936. He took steps immediately to strengthen Harding while still maintaining the noble objectives and high ideals that had been set previously. President Benson and his faculty were men and women of faith, singleness of purpose, frugal, visionary and prayerful. They viewed their work as unto the Lord. We are indebted to President Emeritus Benson for his leadership over a long period of time. I was privileged to serve as SA president during his final year as president. Dr. Benson took part in our processional today; he will be 89 next Saturday.

Dr. Clifton L. Ganus Jr., now our first chancellor, assumed the presidency in 1965. I have been privileged to work with him as a teacher and colleague for the past 20 years. In preparation for these activities today, I enjoyed reading his inaugural address given 22 years ago today. In it he announced an ambitious $10,000,000 ten year campaign to provide funds needed for expected growth. Such growth took place and even more. Because of his leadership, we have excellent facilities for strong academic programs. More importantly, during this period of tremendous growth for the university, he continued to emphasize spiritual values. Harding's influence was extended significantly.

Reaffirmation of Mission

I want to next address the validity of our historic mission of meeting the needs of students today and in the future. College objectives often change as times change. Ernest L. Boyer, former commissioner of higher education, in his book, College: The Undergraduate Experience in America, stated, "Many undergraduate colleges and universities have lost their sense of mission. They are confused about their mission and how to impart shared values on which the vitality of both higher education and society depends."

To this end, Dr. Ganus appointed a Strategic Planning Committee in January of 1987, to examine our purpose and make plans for the future. As president-elect, I served as chairman of this committee whose membership included all vice presidents and deans. Input was sought from our entire constituency. Our first task was to re-examine our reason for existence. A strong six-point reaffirmation of purpose emerged from this study.

First, the integration of faith, learning and living represents our central reason for existence. This involves developing the whole person through a commitment to the Bible as the word of God. By integration, we do not mean merely a study of the Bible in addition to study in the secular subjects. Rather, we mean a blending together of Christian faith-building simultaneous with all learning processes.

Dr. Don England, who spoke earlier in this program, has described this goal in the following way, "Christian faith building must not be delegated to a special group, such as the Bible Department, or to a certain time of day, such as chapel or evening devotionals. The effective integrator will, himself, first be a good example of what a Christian should be....He will effectively demonstrate what it is to think and act Christianly."

In other words, I must be just as much a Christian in teaching business policy as I am at worship on Sunday morning. I am not a Christian and a professional person. I am a Christian professional. Helping students understand better their ministry, whether as Christian doctors, teachers, nurses, businessmen, or preachers is very much our central task! As Jim Woodroof expresses it, quoting II Corinthians 2:14ff, we are the aroma of Christ!

Secondly, the development of Christian scholarship in every field must be stressed. Our aim is that of stimulating the mind and soul in a way that stresses dependence on God and intellectual excellence. Caring teachers who are dedicated to classroom teaching must be encouraged. A strong liberal arts foundation along with professional skills must both be taught. Education is, after all, for life and work.

I was impressed by the thesis of Allan Bloom's provocative book, The Closing of the American Mind; which suggested that in the name of "openness", American minds have been closed. Too often, he says, relativism in the university has meant that openness is the only moral virtue it respects. The tragedy is that we have forgotten how to look and think. He states that moral truth exists and concluded that the teaching of values in our schools is the only answer to the dilemma we face.

Thirdly, the promotion of Christian ethics is essential in a Christian university. This involves a commitment to continued development of an atmosphere for learning and self-expression that emphasizes integrity and purity of thought.

The relevancy of this goal cannot be questioned today. Hypocrisy, betrayal, and greed unsettle the nation's soul. Clay feet litter the ground. Transgressions run the gamut of human failings from weakness of will, to moral laxity, to hypocrisy, to uncontrolled avarice. Ethics is now at the center of a new national debate.⁶ Only when daily decisions are based on the Biblical principles of doing unto others, doing more and doing right will our values crises be met.

Fourthly, the development of lasting relationships was stressed. We should continue to give strong emphasis to the Biblical model of a lifelong commitment to marriage and the Christian family as described by Dr. Paul Faulkner in his lecture last evening. Relationships are important. Jesus provides the best example for us in terms of the amount of time spent dealing with his disciples as described in the gospels. Jesus cared for people.

I was impressed with another observation made in Boyer's recent book dealing with the isolation that can exist between academic and social life on campus. He said, "Colleges like to think of the campus as community, and yet what is being learned in most residence halls today has little connection to the classrooms; indeed, it may undermine the educational purposes of the college. The idea that a college stands in for parents, in loco parentis, is today a faded memory." Such should not be the case. A Christian education must include the whole campus.

Fifthly, the promotion of physical fitness and health was reaffirmed. We realize that the body is the temple of the holy spirit and lifetime exercise contributes to success and wellness.

"I dream of an absolutely first-rate, premier Christian university!"

Sixthly, the promotion of citizenship within a global perspective was reaffirmed. Harding has historically emphasized a better understanding of our country and the world in which we live. We should continue to emphasize liberty and justice. Harding is becoming an increasingly important center of international learning. The altruistic attitude of service to others must permeate the university.

My Dream

These six statements represent, I believe, a strong and serious reaffirmation of our historic mission. Let me now address the future. The following goals are being considered as plans are being made for the coming decade.

1. Enrichment of spiritual, academic, and social programs. Emphasis on quality and excellence.
2. Significant expansion of student loan and scholarship funds available for an increasing number of students who need our help.
3. Increased resources for both academic and administrative computing to meet the technological imperative.
4. The renovation of several existing buildings.
5. A continuing effort to build a larger endowment which will enable Harding to offer an absolutely first-rate Christian education to more people.

In summary, let me share my dream about Christian education at Harding. It involves a strong deliberate effort by all of us to build a great Christian university in the foothills of the Ozarks, one with students who have a sharpened understanding of their ministry regardless of their choice of a major. A university that stresses Christian scholarship and excellence and rigorous studies with superb teaching by caring faculty members who shower students with attention and service beyond their wildest expectations. A university which provides the best student services in the country, that promotes Christian ethics, that fosters lasting relationships and teaches liberty and freedom. A university where students want to attend because of the value received. In short, I dream of an absolutely first-rate, premier Christian university!

The successful realization of this dream calls for a renewed commitment to our basic reason for existence. It calls for continued sacrifice. It calls for faith. It requires that we put the customer first (student and parents), constantly champion innovation, and believe in people to make it happen. It calls for teamwork, coaching, enthusiasm, prayer, bone-deep beliefs, ownership and commitment. Tom Peters, author of A Passion for Excellence, puts it this way:

When you have a true passion for excellence and you act on it, you will stand straighter. You will look people in the eye. You will see things happen. You will see heroes created, watch ideas unfold and take shape.

You'll walk with a springier step. You'll have something to fight for, to care about, to share, scary as it is, with other people. There will be times when you swing from dedicated to obsessed. We don't pretend that it's easy. It takes real courage to step out and stake your claim. But we think the renewed sense of purpose, of making a difference, of recovered self respect, is well worth the price of admission."

I believe we must have this kind of a passion for Christian education at Harding University. Our founding fathers had this kind of faith. Jesus demonstrated this kind of leadership. It will enable us to chart new directions as we march toward the twenty-first century.

I want to close by telling you that this office, the presidency of my alma mater, is both a great honor and a tremendous responsibility for me. While I am a great believer in planning in faith for the future, I did not make any plans for this position; but I promise that by God's grace, I will make every effort to perform the responsibilities of this office to the best of my ability. I sincerely ask for your prayers and goodwill as together we work to fully integrate faith, learning, and living at Harding University. With God's help, we can provide an absolutely first-rate Christian education for our students.

Harding Food Service Boasts Changes; ARA Begins Contract for 1987-88

Eating has taken on a new flavor on the campus this fall as ARA Dining Services has become the university's campus food service.

Both Pattie Cobb and American Heritage are serving a variety of food choices with a Mexican bar, grille works, deli corner, salad garden, desserts, beverages and cafe features. But there are other choices, too, such as pizza or 'burgers or the gourmet corner.

Eight board plans for dormitory students offer all these choices through use of the Bison Express Card, a student identification card which doubles as a meal ticket. Cafeteria meals have no dollar value assessed; students are debited one meal each time they eat, and they are allowed unlimited second servings.

Seven of the board plans include a declining cash value which allows the Bison Express Card to be used to purchase food items at the College Inn, Gretel's Bake Shop and Itza Pizza Store (to be in service after Christmas holidays). The Bison Express Card also allows students to pay for dinner guests in the dining rooms.

The meal plans range in cost from $640 per semester to $840, the same costs that were approved for traditional cafeteria service for the 1987-88 school year. There are four plans for 16 meals and four for 21 meals, with varying amounts of cash available with each plan.

A student may purchase a 21-meal plan with no declining cash value. Other plans include declining cash values which range from $40 to $275 per semester, with ARA contributing bonus cash from $10 to $35.

Harding's new computer access system of dining saves time because there's no cashier tallying up each food item," ARA officials explained, "and it saves money through bonus cash and sales tax savings. It gives students the freedom of not having to carry money everywhere they go."

The Bison Express Card is non-transferrable. All dormitory students are required to eat on campus. But Harding's food services have definitely taken on a new flavor; and at least one student thinks it's "super."

Students have a choice of lines to stand in now, and serving goes much more quickly with the new dining services plan. ARA Food Services began a contract with Harding this fall.

Zig Ziglar

Sales Seminar Features Ziglar

The third annual Sales Seminar, sponsored by the School of Business Small Business Development Center, will feature noted author and motivational speaker Zig Ziglar. Set for Tuesday, October 20, at 7:30 p.m., the topic will be "Secrets of Closing a Sale."

Prior to his present career, Ziglar was a sales champion. He became a full-time public speaker in 1970 and has been featured on a variety of television programs. Coupling humor with enthusiasm, Ziglar's messages have been rated by his peers as "uplifting and inspiring," yet helpful for "personal and professional growth."

The seminar will be split into two sessions, from 7:30 to 8:30 and from 9:00 to 10:00, with a 30-minute break between. Attendees are requested to contact Dr. Bob Reely by noon Friday, October 16, so that plans may be finalized.

The Sales Seminar will be conducted in Benson Auditorium.

Faculty Changes Include Three Professors

Seven additions and 15 promotions in the faculty were announced by President David Burks at the annual Tahkodah conference August 21.

Four of the new additions are full-time and three are visiting lecturers in sales, missions and computer science.

Phil Brown, who holds the MBA, was named an Assistant Professor of Accounting; Mark Elrod, M.A., was named Instructor of Political Science; James Ferguson, Ph.D., Associate Professor of Marketing; and Terri Rine, M.Ed., Instructor of Home Economics.

Visiting lecturers include Jack Kinningham, B.A., Visiting Instructor of Sales; Ken Sinclair, M.A., Visiting Instructor in Missions; and Don Yates, B.A., Visiting Lecturer in Computer Science.

Three faculty members were promoted to the rank of full professor and 11 others received advances beginning with the fall semester.

Dr. Louise Bradford

Dr. Louise Bradford, who joined the nursing faculty in 1975, was named a Professor of Nursing; Dr. Patrick Garner, a member of the communication faculty since 1972, was named a Professor of Speech; and Dr. Arthur Shearin of the music faculty was named a Professor of Music. Shearin joined the faculty in 1972 and returned in 1982 after several years at Freed-Hardeman College.

Others and their departments include the following: Associate Professor - Eddie Cloer, Bible; Charlotte Gibson, Nursing; Franklin

Hayes, Library Science; Dwight Ireland, Psychology; Louise Pace, Social Work; and David Tucker, Economics.

Assistant Professor - Mike James, Communication; and Randy Tribble, Physical Education.

Instructor - Tina Coker Godwin, Sue Huskey and Susan Smith, Nursing; and Deborah Ganus Duke, Math.

Two retiring professors, Dr. Mildred Bell of the Home Economics department and Conard Hays of the Bible department, were designated Professors Emeriti.

Dr. Arthur Shearin

John Keller and Morris Ellis, who recently completed respective doctoral studies in art at the University of Nebraska and fine arts at Texas Tech, and Steve White, who has been studying at the University of Arkansas in Fayetteville, returned from leaves of absence.

During the conference, Burks also recognized Bradford, Tucker and Keller as having completed doctoral degrees in their respective fields during the past year, and Godwin, Huskey and Smith who completed masters degrees in nursing.

New Testament Survey Written for Freshman Bible

Sixteen faculty members in the School of Religion have contributed to a new textbook for freshman Bible Classes.

New Testament Survey is an introduction and survey of the New Testament, edited by Dr. Don Shackelford. Every member of the Bible faculty has written at least one chapter in the textbook.

More than 800 university students will be using the new text which was printed locally by Resource Publications. Dr. Shackelford expects it will become a familiar reference book in churches as well.

The book is available from Harding University Bookstore at a cost of $19.95. All proceeds from its sale will be used for scholarships for Bible majors.

Bruner Named Alumni Director

Tim Bruner, assistant director of alumni relations since 1985, has been named Director of Alumni Relations according to an announcement in August by Floyd Daniel, vice president of university relations.

A 1973 alumnus, Bruner graduated with a degree in political science and journalism. During the eight years prior to his return to Harding, he was director of public relations and assistant to the president at York College.

"I am so pleased that we have a person of Tim's ability to move into this position," said Daniel. "In his two years in the Alumni Office, he has demonstrated his organizational skills and his ability to rapidly develop new programs for alumni.

"Tim has initiated a chapters program for alumni and friends of the institution. He has also developed a student alumni program and a parents' program. He is a multi-talented individual whose expertise is a very important part of Harding's division of university relations."

In addition to his present responsibilities, Bruner will coordinate the annual homecoming activities and the alumni recognition program. He will also develop a Golden Circle to honor graduates of 50 years or more ago.

Ryan Named Plant Director

Dr. William Ryan was named the physical plant engineer for Harding in August. In announcing the appointment, President David Burks also announced an administrative re-organization of the university's physical plant maintenance and service area.

In his new position, Ryan will coordinate and direct the cogeneration power plant, all mechanical and electrical services, construction projects and the maintenance of buildings and grounds.

Enrollment Climbs; First Time Since '80

Fall semester registration reached 2,823 at its official closing date, the first enrollment increase since the peak enrollment of 1980-81. This represents a two percent increase.

Full-time equivalent enrollment was also up by over two percent, with last year's official enrollment being 2,767. In addition, 37 students are enrolled in the School of Biblical Studies and 154 students are enrolled at the Graduate School of Religion, bringing the total Harding University fall enrollment to 3,014.

"I am especially pleased with this increase in enrollment," commented President David Burks. "Significant in the increase was a determined effort by our admissions staff as well as increased retention as a result of the dedicated work of our faculty and staff. We have a wonderful student body to work with this year."

The entire registration process was held in Ganus Athletic Center, and all workers wore yellow caps pinned with an "It's Great Registration had a facelift this year. One of the new aspects was the wearing of bright yellow caps for those involved in registering students.

To Be at Harding" button.

"We were extremely pleased with the smoothness of the operation," James W. Carr, Vice President for Admissions Services, said.

Applications for the fall of 1988 are already being received, and the Admissions Services administrators said the number exceeds those received at this time last year.

Carr encouraged students planning to attend Harding in the fall of 1988 to submit applications as soon as possible. "An Admissions Office interview is not a requirement for entrance, but it is highly encouraged," he added, in requesting preppers to start the application procedure.

Carr also said a new 20-minute video tape is available for individuals or groups. More information concerning use of the tape may be obtained by writing the Admissions Services Office or by phoning 1-800-643-3792 (out of Arkansas) or 1-800-632-4751 (Arkansas).

Future Alumni Group Assists Administrators

The Future Alumni Communications Team is planning special activities to enhance annual events on the campus.

FACT, Future Alumni Communications Team. Student leadership with an understanding of alumni roles.

All of these words and phrases are descriptive of a 15-member group of students who are working with Tim Bruner to promote interaction between students and external constituencies of Harding University.

Bruner, who directs Harding's Alumni and Parent Relations programs, has assembled the 1987-88 FACT edition from qualified student leaders nominated for this purpose by faculty members.

"Because they are not far from graduation, these students can relate to alumni. Service in this communications team provides a pre-professional networking opportunity and helps them to be more aware of alumni roles in an institution's overall program of effectiveness," Bruner explained.

FACT students meet with the University Relations staff each month to determine ways to help bridge the gap between the past, the present and the future. Included in their plans is involvement in activities of alumni, parents and other off-campus constituencies during special events on the Harding campus. They plan to represent the university to the Development Council, alumni chapters and other guests during Parents Weekend, Homecoming and Spring Sing.

Eventually they hope to actively involve alumni in the classroom to allow students to see "in person" a type of what they may be 10, 20, or 30 years in the future. They want to be involved in expressing appreciation to those who contribute financially to the program of education which they enjoy.

FACT members include Joel Reed, a senior economics major from New Haven, Ind.; Paul Maynard, a graduate student in accounting from Kasota, Minn.; Greg Fraley, a junior marketing major from Scottsdale, Ariz.; Greg Oden, a senior pre-med major from Brandon, Miss.; and Te Howard, a junior physical education major from Clyde, Texas.

Others are Ryan Blickenstaff, a senior accounting major from Boise, Idaho; John Scott, a senior general science major from Kingsport, Tenn.; John Griffith, a junior accounting/youth ministry major from Forrest City, Ark.; Andrea Lively, a junior mass communication major from Birmingham, Ala.; and Celia Morgan, a junior dietetics major from Little Rock, Ark.

Rounding out the 15-member team are junior music education major, Alice Gill, from Allenville, Ky.; senior accounting major, Buffey Manning, from Memphis, Tenn.; senior elementary education major, Kim Griffin, from Searcy; senior math major, Sonia Finn, from Maryland Heights, Mo.; and junior elementary education/English major, Shannon Tungate, from Mesquite, Texas.

INAUGURATION DAY!

The two-hour-plus ceremony to inaugurate Dr. David B. Burks as president of Harding University captured the essence of the institution's history and influence while restating its commitment for the future. The inaugural program on Sept. 18, 1987, was attended by more than 2,700 guests and participants.

Visitors from 80 colleges, universities and learned societies participated in the academic procession. Governor Bill Clinton addressed the audience as a representative of state government. The president of the University of Arkansas, Ray Thornton, represented higher education in Arkansas.

(Pictured, clockwise from the top) Special guests, band members and chorus members contribute to the special occasion. Dr. Burks responds to the applause of the large audience. Olivia Smythe extends congratulations to Dr. Burks on behalf of New York University. Former president, Clifton L. Ganus, Jr., embraces Dr. Burks and extends his best wishes. Three presidential symbols — the seal, the medallion and the mace, were a part of the ceremony. David Glass, president of Wal-Mart, Inc., extends his greetings to Dr. Burks.

A Memorable Time ...

Inaugural week was filled with special events, culminating in the inaugural ceremonies on Friday, Sept. 18. Among the activities of the week were a concert by the Memphis Symphony Chamber Orchestra and a lecture by Abilene Christian University professor Paul Faulkner.

Hard work is just one of many aspects of the annual Student Impact orientation program. Volunteers do everything from carrying luggage to washing windows.

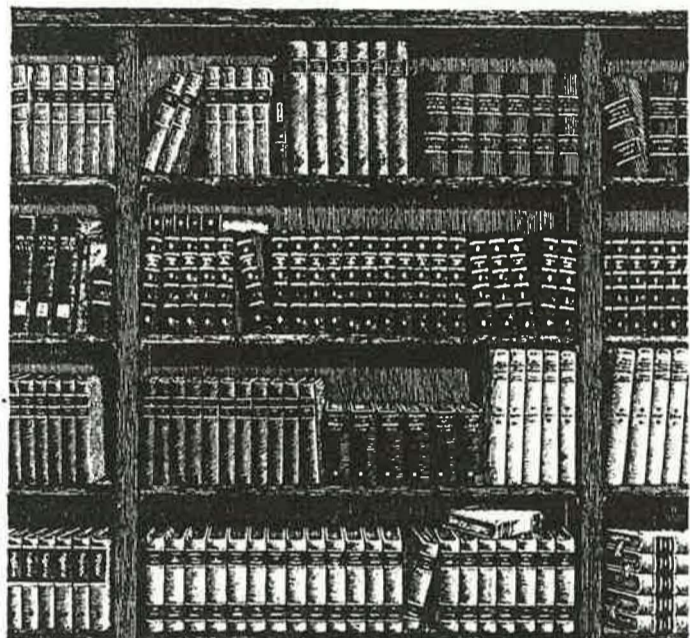

Student Impact Termed Successful Again

More than 600 incoming freshmen and transfers and their parents arrived at Harding the week before registration for a special welcoming ceremony called Student Impact, designed to initiate Harding's fall semester. This was the second year for the program.

Co-directors Karen Sullivan of Marshalltown, Iowa, and John Scott of Kingsport, Tenn., led the activities with a corps of 100 upperclassmen on hand to greet the newcomers, bombard them with cookies, soft drinks, windshield cleaning and assistance with unloading vehicles. The students also received a special Student Impact t-shirt.

Student Impact was termed last year by one administrator as "the most positive influence that's happened around here in a while." The full four-day program was designed to assist new students toward getting adjusted to the Harding campus and college life. A special program for parents was also on the agenda with sessions designed to answer their questions and concerns.

The program, which began on Friday, August 21, included a tea for parents, a faculty variety show, a water fight on the front lawn, a barbecue dinner, a David Slater concert, an Acappella program and many other events.

Tax Reform Act Addressed Regarding Year-End Giving

Year-end tax planning is always important, but especially so in 1987. Because this is a transitional year under the Tax Reform Act of 1986, tax savings from charitable gifts, (for example, gifts to Harding), may never be greater.

In a nutshell, most individuals will save taxes by taking as many deductions as possible in 1987 and, where possible, postponing income until next year. That's because most taxpayers will be in a higher tax bracket this year than next.

Postponed income will be taxable in lower brackets. Deductions taken this year will be worth more because tax brackets are higher. Caution must be observed. These are general rules and may not be best in all situations. In all cases advisors should be consulted.

Beginning in 1988 the only two brackets will be 15 percent and 28 percent. It is estimated that 80 percent of all taxpayers will fall into the lower 15 percent bracket in 1988.

Charitable Gifts

Of all the income tax deductions, the charitable deduction is the easiest to plan wisely because its timing is within the taxpayer's control. Generally, charitable gifts made by itemizers this year will generate larger tax savings than gifts made next year. This year, the top tax bracket will be 38.5 percent. In 1988 the top bracket will be 28 percent, a drop of 10.5 percent.

The reason for making a gift to Harding is, of course, that the donor believes in its work and goals. Having decided to contribute, however, good stewardship demands that each person obtain maximum tax savings. Often, the tax savings enables donors to make a larger gift than initially imagined.

The law continues to recognize and encourage the generosity of Americans by allowing income, gift and estate tax charitable deductions. The charitable contribution deduction is alive and well for itemizers.

In addition to considering when to give, it is also important to consider what to give. The most common gift to Harding is cash. Cash can be easily given and the

Christian Stewardship And Estate Planning

by William Tucker
Director of Deferred Giving

Flexible, adaptable, comprehensive and revocable are words which describe a valuable estate planning tool, the living trust. This useful instrument can be skillfully drafted to provide:

1. Income for you and your spouse during your life;
2. Increased size of your estate during your life;
3. Care for your spouse or loved ones after your death;
4. Professional financial management of your assets during your life and after your death;
5. Assets from your will or insurance policies;
6. Avoidance of probate costs; and
7. Distribution of remaining assets (corpus or principal); after the income trust purpose is complete.

Perhaps this useful document can best be explained with an example.

Mr. A is 60 years old. His health is good but he is concerned about the management of his assets if he should become disabled. He is also very concerned for his wife's welfare if he should die before she dies.

He has always managed the business affairs of the family. The family income has been provided through his work while Mrs. A has worked in the home. Their three children are married, have children of their own and are financially independent. Mr. and Mrs. A love the Lord and have a keen desire to dedicate a major part of their estate to church work after they are gone. They would like to make a substantial gift to Harding now but are hesitant because they might need it for an emergency later. They have $80,000 in savings and are living comfortably with Mr. A's income.

Mr. A plans to retire at 65. After his retirement Mr. and Mrs. A's income will be from social security, an IRA, a vested retirement plan and interest from savings.

In conference with their attorney, Mr. and Mrs. A have planned their estate. Three documents were drafted, a last will and testament for Mr. and Mrs. A and a revocable trust. A trustee was selected and the $80,000 transferred to the trust.

The trust agreement provides that during Mr. A's life all of the trust income as well as the trust principal is available to Mr. and Mrs. A to spend or accumulate at their discretion. If Mr. A dies before Mrs. A, the trustee is instructed to invest the corpus and use as much of the income and principal as necessary to provide for Mrs. A's needs for the rest of her life.

In his last will and testament, Mr. A left all his assets to the trust. The beneficiary of his life insurance policies is also the trust. As a part of the trust, all of these assets are available for Mrs. A's benefit during the remainder of her life.

In keeping with their desire to dedicate a major part of their estate to the Lord's work, Mr. and Mrs. A instructed the trustee that upon the death of the survivor of Mr. and Mrs. A, the principal and the accumulated income is to be distributed as follows:

- (1) one-third divided equally among their children,
- (2) one-third to XYZ orphans home, and
- (3) one-third to Harding University.

The combination of the will and trust satisfied Mr. and Mrs. A's concerns. If Mr. A should become disabled, their assets will be professionally managed by the trustee. If Mr. A dies before Mrs. A, Mrs. A's financial needs will be taken care of by the trustee for the rest of her life. After the demise of both Mr. and Mrs. A their estate is to be given to their children and the Lord's work.

Finally, they have experienced the joy of a major gift to perpetuate the Lord's work coupled with the peace of knowing that all of their assets are available to them if an emergency arises.

Are any of the above objectives of interest to you? The revocable living trust is an extremely useful tool in planning one's estate.

gifts conveniently supported through canceled checks and receipts.

Many people find that assets other than cash also make practical gifts to Harding. Stocks (including mutual funds) and other publicly traded securities often make excellent gifts.

When securities have increased in value, as they have in 1987, and when they have been owned at least six months, the contributor can save by giving those securities rather than selling the securities and giving the proceeds.

Here's why: A charitable income tax deduction is allowed for the full fair market value of the securities given — not their original cost. Since no sale occurs, the giver owes no income tax on the normally taxable gain. Special caution should be taken by a few high-income taxpayers before making a gift of long-term appreciated property. A portion of the increase in value of the gift property may be subject to the alternative minimum tax.

Campus Notes

Sharen Crockett, associate professor of home economics and director of the Child Development Lab, has been chosen as a participant in a seven-week training program for early childhood providers. The project was made possible by a High/Scope Educational Research Foundation Grant by the Ypsilanti, Mich. foundation.

The High/Scope project will prepare early childhood specialists and supervisors to train classroom teachers and other care givers in the High/Scope Preschool Curriculum, and will develop permanent in-state training resources for outreach training for early childhood programs.

Dr. Paul Pollard, associate professor of Bible and Greek, has had articles accepted for publication recently in Restoration Quarterly and 20th Century Adult Bible Study Series.

"The 'Faith of Christ' in Recent Discussion" and The Psychology of Biblical Interpretation book review are appearing in Restoration Quarterly. "How God Saves Sinners" and "Justification by Faith" are Pollard's contributions in 20th Century literature.

Pollard also wrote the chapter on "Romans" in

New Testament Survey, a new textbook edited by Dr. Don Shackelford.

Dr. Bob Reely, director of the School of Business Center for Management Excellence, presented a conferee research paper at a Christian Scholars Conference at Pepperdine University recently. The four-day conference addressed the subject of ethics and how they can be better applied to one's profession, as well as how they can be exemplified and taught to students in the classroom.

Dr. Marvin Robertson, professor of Business Law, and David Allen, assistant professor of accounting, also attended the conference.

Linda R. Thompson, director of the Program for Academic Success (PASS) project, has attained certification as a Developmental Education Specialist through the Kellogg Institute for Training and Certification of Developmental Educators, Appalachian State University. She is one of less than 300 professionals in the field to have attained this level.

Mrs. Thompson developed Harding's PASS program last fall. The PASS project is designed to upgrade students' skills in reading, writing, math and studying.

Dr. Don Diffine, professor of Economics, has published a 32-page commemorative booklet entitled, "Good Business is Good Business: Check it out — That's the Wal-Mart Way." Designed around the theme, "What's Good for People is Good for Business," the nine-chapter booklet is a 25th anniversary salute which Dr. Diffine developed for the Department of Public Affairs at Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., Bentonville, Ark.

According to Diffine, this publication is a "human interest narrative about Wal-Mart Associates — people who have not only committed the Golden Rule to memory but, as servant leaders, have also committed it to life. The result of their partnership at Wal-Mart has been an economic horn-of-plenty that has blessed people in so many walks of life for a quarter of a century."

Dr. Louise Bradford, associate professor of Nursing, presented a one-day Nursing Board Review Course in Albuquerque, N.M., on June 3 for the American Journal of Nursing Company. The course reviews nursing and prepares students for the NCLEX-RN exam that leads to RN licensure. She also held a half-day workshop on Stress Management for Health Department and Home Health nurses at Fairfield Bay on June 19.

David Tucker, associate professor of Economics, attended a White House briefing on Central America June 19, following a two and one-half week trip to Central America to recruit students for the Walton Scholarship Program.

Jeanine Peck, associate professor of Education, was the speaker at a community outreach program sponsored by the North Penn Church of Christ in Lansdale, Pa., on May 17. Her topic was "What Parents Can Do at Home to Prepare their Pre-School Children for Success in School."

Four members of the Home Economics faculty, together with the recently retired chairman of the department, have been designated Certified Home Economists (C.H.E.) of the American Home Economics Association. They are Beth Wilson, department chairman; Sharen Crockett, Lynn England, Loleta Higginbotham; and the retired chairman, Dr. Mildred Bell.

The professors were certified as charter members, having met the requirements of accreditation, certification and code of ethics as experienced, active members of AHEA.

To maintain certification, home economists will complete 75 approved professional development units every three years. These include attendance of approved meetings, completion of advanced courses, participation in workshops and seminars, and presentation of research, among others.

Dr. Cathleen Shultz, Nursing, and Elissa Miller, associate professor of nursing, have been named to co-chair a committee to administer a $1,100 grant from the Arkansas Department of Health for a rape prevention/services program in Searcy and White County.

The pair wrote the proposal, one of eight which was approved for the grant.

Plans include the conducting of rape crisis seminars; providing inservice education programs on rape for emergency room personnel and law enforcement officials; printing and distributing public information about rape prevention, care of a rape victim and working with different types of rape victims; and, ultimately, the construction of a foundation for Rape Crisis Services beyond the scope of the grant.

Other Harding personnel on the committee are Janine Rector, health services nurse; Mary Shock, social work director; and Tina Godwin, Dr. Lynn Clayton and Susan Smith of the nursing faculty.

Year-End Giving ...

A gift of other types of appreciated securities, such as closely held stock, mortgages and leases, yield unique and beneficial tax advantages for the donor.

Many assets other than cash and securities make excellent gifts. Jewelry, antiques, works of art, collections, automobiles, patents, copyrights, life insurance and a house or farm with a retained life estate. The specific deductions allowed for these gifts vary according to the type of property and the use that Harding makes of the property.

A corporation can give and deduct up to 10 percent of its net income to Harding. Also, please remember that many employers match the gifts made by their employees.

In summary, the charitable deduction is the easiest deduction to use in tax planning because its timing is entirely within your control. If you expect lower tax rates next year, gifts in 1987 may generate greater savings than the same gifts made next year. A gift of appreciated stock or other securities may allow one to give more than giving cash. Gifts made on or before December 31 are deductible this year.

Degrees Awarded to 127 In Summer Commencement

Degrees were awarded to 127 graduates in commencement ceremonies Friday, August 14, in Benson Auditorium. Dr. David Burks awarded the diplomas in his first time to preside at a graduation since he became president in May.

Mike Cope, minister of the College Church of Christ in Searcy, addressed the graduates. Cope, who recently completed his first book entitled Living in Two Worlds, is managing editor of Twentieth Century Christian magazine. He is a 1978 graduate of Harding who was a pulpit minister at Wilmington, N.C., before coming to Searcy in 1984.

From the College of Arts and Sciences, 27 candidates received the Bachelor of Arts, 13 received the Bachelor of Science, four received the Bachelor of Social Work and one the Bachelor of Music Education degree.

The School of Business had one recipient of the Associate of Arts, six who received the Bachelor of Arts, 35 recipients of the Bachelor of Business Administration and eight who received the Master of Science in Accounting.

The Bachelor of Science in Nursing went to six candidates from the School of Nursing.

In the School of Education, eight received the Bachelor of Arts, nine the Master of Education and six the Master of Science in Education degrees.

Twenty-two of the degree candidates graduated with honors.

Women's Basketball Outlook Shows Signs of Improvement

Improvement will be the watchword for the Harding Lady Bisons as they enter the 1987-88 basketball season. Head coach Phil Watkins welcomes back three starters and seven lettermen from last season's 5-19 campaign, and those numbers stir up an optimistic mood in the Lady Bison camp.

"Our goal is to improve each game, so that by the season we can compete with any team in the AIC," Watkins, who enters his fourth season, said. "Last year we played our best against the best teams in the conference, but we lost some games that we should have won. We've got to be consistent if we hope to be competitive."

All three returning starters have earned veteran status since they are seniors. Teri Loven, a 5-7 guard from Clinton, Ark., led the Lady Bisons in scoring and rebounding with 14.4 points and 6.6 rebounds a game. Loven also topped the team's individual game production in both categories with 31 points against Arkansas Baptist and 15 rebounds against Arkansas College.

Lending support will be Stephanie Smith, a 5-11 senior postman from Brookhaven, Miss., and Shawn Bradford, a 5-4 point guard from Bee Branch, Ark. Smith finished third on the team in scoring with 11.0 points an outing last season and was the field goal percentage leader, hitting 49 percent of her shots.

Bradford, known for her outstanding ball handling skills, averaged 8.9 points and dished out 55 assists, second to Loven's 62.

Newcomers could have an immediate impact, according to Watkins. Freshman Tomi Gragwall of Lebanon, Tenn., brings outstanding height and senior transfer Cidi Godush of Arkansas State University-Beebe should help as well.

Harding senior Jack Moore hangs on to Tarleton State kick returner Boo Jones (83) in the Bisons' 21-14 win over the Texans. Thus far, the Bisons are 2-1 on the season.

"Last year was a dream season for us, but we've got to put it behind us now and concentrate on this one."

Athletics

Bucy Evaluates Season for Men's Basketball

It's an unfamiliar position for the Harding Bison basketball team, but one that many others would love to be in.

As defending champions of the NAIA District 17 and a competitor in the NAIA National Championship, the Bisons must deal with the pressure of repeating last year's success. For the Black and Gold, it was their first ever district title and trip to the national tournament in Kansas City, Mo. And as sports history has proven many times over, winning back-to-back championship trophies is often next to impossible.

"Last year was a dream season for us, but we've got to put it behind us now and concentrate on this one," said head coach Jess Bucy, who enters his 19th year at the Harding helm. "We're a marked team now, and everyone is going to be gunning for us. That will make it even harder."

Ten lettermen, including three starters, return for Bucy from last winter's 18-14 squad that finished fourth in the Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference and played the spoiler's role by defeating league champion and nationally ranked University of Central Arkansas in the district tourney semifinals. The Bisons whipped Southern Arkansas University 67-54 in the title game before losing to national runner-up West Virginia State in the NAIA tournament's first round.

Bucy is more optimistic than usual at this time of year with the return of so many experienced men, but he says his team still has some hurdles to clear before it can reach the caliber to contend for any championship titles.

"We've normally been blessed with outstanding senior leaders, and we've got a good one in Tim Smallwood, but we've got to get some leadership from our younger players too. Senior leadership played such a vital role in our success last year."

Smallwood, a 5-9 point guard from Tulsa, will try to fill the leadership shoes that veterans Shannon Hughes and Marvin Mathis wore in 1986-87. Hughes reaped All-AIC laurels while Mathis was regarded as one of the finer forwards in the league.

"Tim matured so much last year, but he has more responsibility as the only senior," said Bucy. "Not only will he be responsible for bringing the ball up the court for us, but he'll have to be the coach on the floor. We'll be looking at him for help from the outside, especially in the three-point range."

Smallwood proved himself as a long bomber in the upset over UCA. He connected on seven of nine three-point shots in the first half and totaled 27 points on the night.

"It was just a great shooting exhibition, pure and simple," the coach said of Smallwood's performance against the Bears. "I haven't seen that kind of shooting out of very many players.

He was phenomenal."

Smallwood, who averaged 9.2 points a game, will receive ample support from sophomore regulars Corey Camper of Brinkley, Ark., and Rolando Garcia of Little Rock.

Camper also had a strong impact on the UCA contest when he hit a rainbow 23-foot jumpshot with five seconds left for the game winner. A bonafide blue-chipper out of high school, he led the team in scoring with a 13.7-point average and was named All-AIC honorable mention.

"I've seen very few freshmen who are as poised under pressure as Corey was last year," Bucy said. "It may have been his first season at the college level, but he played like he had been around for a couple of years."

Garcia, a slender 6-8 postman from Little Rock, Ark., came on slowly but finished with a bang to average 10.5 points an outing and a team-leading 7.3 rebounds a game.

Garcia played perhaps his two best games against Southern Arkansas in the district tourney finals and West Virginia State in the NAIA tournament. He scored 17 points and pulled down 16 rebounds against the Muleriders and totaled 21 points in the 98-76 loss to WVSU.

"Rolando's stronger and better this year. He worked on weights and that should keep him from getting pushed around inside. He's already one of the better postmen in the league," said Bucy.

The coach will look to a bevy of talented sophomores and juniors to fill the two remaining starting slots. St. Louis, Mo. natives Barry Thames (6-2 junior) and David James (6-3 sophomore) saw extensive duty off the bench and will be called upon for more responsibility. Both have outstanding defensive skills.

Sophomore Curtis Washington, a teammate of Camper's at Brinkley, can fill the point guard spot and has a fine touch from the three-point range. Junior Carl Collins of Harrison, Ark., and sophomore Sean French of Belleville, Ill., are strong forwards who will add depth inside. Junior Greg Stevenson of Effingham, Ill., and sophomore Reid Hayward of North Little Rock, Ark., also should see playing time at guard.

Newcomers could make an impact as well. Bucy has big plans for 6-6 junior college transfer Chad Bradley of DeSoto, Mo., and freshmen Lyn Cotter (6-7) of Viola, Ark., and Harding Academy sharpshooting guard Michael Wood. Wood has an accurate eye from the three-point range.

Volleyball Team Begins Season

The Lady Bison volleyball team's first step this fall was a positive one when it captured the Harding Invitational Volleyball Tournament Sept. 5. The Lady Bisons breezed through the bracket undefeated while competing against Freed Hardeman College, Henderson State University, Hendrix College and the University of Arkansas at Pine Bluff.

Coach Karyl Bailey, who has guided the Lady Bisons since their inception five seasons ago, says this year's squad may be the best yet.

"We should definitely be more competitive in the conference," Bailey said. "For the first time we have the size to compete with the other teams."

The size that Bailey referred to comes in five girls who stand 5-10 or taller.

For the Lady Bisons to compete for the Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference title, Bailey says they must develop more consistency while improving defensively. Harding will probably be considered a darkhouse in the conference race, he said.

"We should be anywhere from the middle of the pack to the top, depending on how strong the other teams in the conference are. If we improve and slip up on a few teams, we could be right up there."

Carr Answers Questions About Harding; Time of Day Releases New Recording

Dr. James W. Carr recently joined the administration of Harding University as vice president for educational services and associate professor of marketing. Prior to coming to Harding, Dr. Carr had been serving as regional director with the ACT Program in the Florida office.

QUESTION: You have visited on hundreds of college campuses. Have you found a feature that makes Harding different?

ANSWER: Harding is special for many reasons, but I believe the unique feature of Harding to be its Christian emphasis combined with academic excellence. I have been to many campuses that may stress one of Harding's two special features, but the number who stress and achieve both is small.

QUESTION: From your perspective with ACT, how does Harding's student body compare with others in student achievement?

ANSWER: In this year's freshman class, we may have as many as 10 National Merit Scholars at Harding. The average ACT score of Harding freshmen is 20, and we will have 30 to 40 freshmen who have ACT composite scores over 30. For an institution that limits its freshman class to about 750 students, that is truly outstanding. We are not trying to become as selective as an Ivy League institution or a Seven Sister institution but as our pool of prospective students continues to grow, we will be forced to become increasingly more selective.

"Taking Our Time," the latest tape by The Time of Day, is now available through the university's Office of Admissions Services.

The latest cassette is the ninth tape produced by the group. The tape contains many favorites from the Time of Day's repertoire.

Members of the group this year are Lorin

Bristow of Alexandria, La., Jeff Cash of Gresham, Ore., Ted Morris of Cosby, Mo., and Jeff Wingfield of North Little Rock, Ark.

The Time of Day will be performing for a variety of groups throughout the nation. Persons interested in hosting a Time of Day performance should contact Chris Dell in the Office of Admissions Services at the address below. Dates are still available for the fall semester.

To order "Taking Our Time," send $7 per tape to Chris Dell, Associate Director of Admissions Services, Time of Day, Box 762, Harding University, Searcy, AR 72143.

The cost of the tape includes $1 for postage and handling.

Dinners Planned With President

Ten dinner meetings with President David B. Burks as a special guest have been scheduled for alumni, friends, prospective students, parents and anyone else in the Harding family during the 1987-88 school year, with the first set for Oct. 27 in Dallas. Burks will present a campus report, share his visions for Harding and tell of plans for Harding at each of the meetings. A new 20-minute video about Harding will also be shown.

In addition to the Oct. 27 kickoff at 7 p.m. at Dallas Christian High School in Mesquite, the dinners have been planned for Ft. Worth on Nov. 5, Atlanta on Nov. 17 and Tulsa on Dec. 5.

In Ft. Worth, the group will meet at Wyatt's Cafeteria in the Northeast Mall in Hurst at 7 p.m. and in Atlanta the dinner will be at the Greater Atlanta Christian School cafeteria on Indian Trail Road at 7 p.m. The Tulsa gathering will be at the Broken Arrow Church of Christ at 7 o'clock.

Tullos Researches Non-Verbal Communication Methods

Have you ever stopped to really think about the difficulties facing handicapped people? Not just the obvious ones. After all, you know when they're confined to a wheelchair they can't walk. But some of those cannot talk either. And they may not have enough dexterity to type or write.

For a variety of reasons — accidents, birth defects, disease — there are approximately 1.5 million non-speaking people in the United States today. In the past, these people would have been confined to a somewhat isolated environment to live out their days in silence; there

University, is combining technological advances with research to develop methods of communication other than verbal.

As part of his research for his dissertation, Tullos spending 10 weeks this summer in the speech clinic at Harding, comparing alpha-numeric and pictographic keyboards for symbolic retrieval.

Sound too technical? OK. Let's say that you have 45 pictures to choose from and you want to ask, "how much does it cost?" Different people choose different symbols, but it would be understandable for this question to include a question communicate verbally for them what it has stored, allowing a physically handicapped individual to communicate entire sentences with two or three key presses.

Although this sounds limited, too, 87 different screen combinations can combine symbols and themes to make the possibilities of what can be stored almost limitless.

The equipment for this "augmentative" communication is expensive, whether a keyboard system similar to a typewriter; the light reflector system which picks up a signal from a reflector on the communicator's head; the arm board system which moves up, down, left, right, etc., according to where the arm is placed, or the joy stick system of movement.

In fact, Tullos' research involves approximately $20,000 worth of equipment which was donated for his use in this project by Prentke-Romich Company of Wooster, Ohio. The TOUCH TALKER and LIGHT TALKER with MINSPEAK software are considered to be among the most advanced communications aids on the market today for non-speaking people.

Seventy-five Harding summer school students agreed to use the equipment to test their communicability as part of Tullos' was little or no interaction with people; there was limited or no ability to communicate.

Technology and research are rapidly closing the gap between speaking and non-speaking people. Harding University assistant professor Dan Tullos, on leave to complete his doctorate in Communication Disorders at Pennsylvania State mark (for how much?) and a dollar bill (for does it cost?).

This and other frequently-used statements, such as "My name is John Doe," are programmed into the computer and translated by a synthesized voice device into spoken words. The communicator can then press only the pictures required and the machine will com-research. All participants programmed and stored a set of 32 sentences which Tullos immediately tested their ability to remember. One week later, the same money test was repeated.

For comparison, three different keyboards were used in the research; a pictograph, an alphabet/number keyboard and a combination of the two. Tullos is attempting to determine whether pictures are better reminders of what is stored in the computer than the alphabet and numbers.

Augmentative communication is a relatively new field of research. Its emphasis began in Canada in the early 70's. In the initial stages, a picture board was used.

In late 1984, Prentke-Romich developed the TOUCH TALKER based on a concept by linguist Bruce Baker of Pittsburgh. Its entrance into communication escalated the research and coincided with the publication of a scholarly research journal called Augmentative Alternative Communications, founded in 1985.

"We are still in the pioneering stage in augmentative communication," Tullos commented, "but we are getting good information from normal college students which we hope to use later with the physically handicapped." Already Tullos has helped to train handicapped young people to use switches to operate toys at Penn State's Speech and Hearing Clinic.

Tullos returned to Penn State this fall to complete his dissertation. He will be back at his teaching post at Harding in January. After his return, the University Speech and Hearing Clinic will begin offering augmentative communication services.

Harding's Speech and Hearing Clinic has provided a variety of services in speech and language therapy including consultant work with the local Head Start program. Tullos is a licensed speech pathologist in Arkansas and he holds a national certification to practice as well.

"We believe that eventually we can work with handicapped children as early as eighteen months of age to determine their needs and help them begin to use the simpler models to learn communication skills," Tullos said.

Maybe you had not stopped to think about all the difficulties facing the handicapped. Fortunately for them, Dan Tullos and others like him have — and what they are doing about it is making a real difference.

Some Gifts Mean 'Double Dollars'

Double your dollar!

Three hundred fifty-four individuals did just exactly that in 1986 with gifts to Harding.

The donors took advantage of corporate matching gift programs. As a result Harding received an "extra" $156,941.

During the last five years the university has received more than $780,000 from corporate matching gifts.

More than 1,000 United States corporations have matching gift programs which will match the contributions of their employees to charitable organizations.

Most companies match on a one for one basis. However some corporations will match on a two for one ratio and some on a three for one ratio.

An estimated 1,100 alumni and friends work for matching gift companies. Only 32 per cent took advantage of this unique opportunity in 1986 to have their gifts matched.

To qualify, an employee must apply for the company's matching gift. Forms which must be completed to obtain the matching gift can usually be picked up at the employer's personnel office.

Harding cannot apply for the matching gift. The donor must complete the necessary forms and initiate the process through which gifts are matched.

The University has available a list of matching gift companies. To obtain a copy write the office of University Relations, Station A, Box 941, Searcy, Ark. 72143.
