Spring Sing Rehearsals Underway; Youth Forum to Feature Jeff Walling

Twenty-five Harding social clubs will participate in the 15th annual Spring Sing March 31 and April 1-2.

According to Dr. John H. Ryan, coordinator of the annual musical production, general themes will include such ideas as Chinamen, clowns, Yankees and Confederates, genies, Santa, tourists and "Painting the Town."

The 15 women's clubs and 10 men's clubs will pair off to perform in 12 acts, with a mixed group from various clubs adding an extra routine.

Four veterans to the Harding stage, selected as hosts and hostesses, will provide group numbers, solos and comedy acts. They are Shelli Miller, Terrance Talley, India Medders and Robert Ritter.

The number of students participating in the annual Spring Sing extravaganza has ranged from 400 to 700, with just under 12,000 in attendance in each of the last three years.

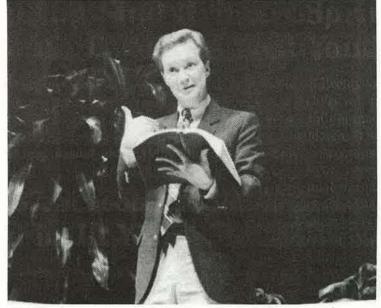

In addition to Dr. Ryan, four faculty and staff members, one student and one local music teacher will assist in the production. Steve Holder, music teacher at Rose Bud, is director of hosts and hostesses; Bob Ritchie is technical director and stage manager; Warren Casey directs the jazz band; David Woodroof overseas the sound production; Dr. Morris Ellis serves as an advisor, assisting with technical matters; and senior Greg Atkinson is in charge of lighting.

Tickets are $5 each for the Thursday, March 31, performance at 7 p.m. and $6 each for the Friday and Saturday performances. Evening performances Friday, April 1, and Saturday, April 2, are at 7:00. The Saturday matinee is at 3 p.m.

(A ticket order blank is available on page 12 of this Bulletin.)

Jeff Walling, minister for the Mission Viejo Church of Christ in California, will be the speaker for Harding's 24th annual Youth Forum April 1-2. His three presentations will center around the theme, "The Fight is On."

The first lesson, "It Has Been Declared: War," will be Friday, April 1, at 2:30 p.m. Saturday's schedule includes two presentations by Walling at 9 a.m. and 12:45 p.m. The topics are "Feuding in the Foxholes?" and "Victory through Surrender."

Walling has been involved in gospel preaching for 13 years. His dynamic style has made him a favorite among youth speakers and his current yearly schedule includes lectures all across the country for churches, teen programs and colleges.

The weekend will also be filled with music as Harding's Belles and Beaux,

A Cappella Chorus, Chorale, Concert Band and Time of Day perform.

Visiting students and parents will have opportunity to meet administrators and faculty members or to visit the Admissions Services Office and the Student Financial Services Office.

More than 3,500 guests are expected to attend Youth Forum, 1988.

faculty has three Macs for administrative use. Writing students can write and edit all writing projects on screen using a simple word processing program.

"Harding students have a powerful tool in the Macintosh system of word processing. It has opened doors of opportunity and will continue to be a great asset to our writing program," said Betty Ulrey, associate professor of English and communication.

From logos to blueprints, designs can be prepared by students for real-world situations as they get hands-on experience with the Macintosh system. The art department uses the central lab in the Ganus Building for classroom use and a two-station satellite lab in the art center.

Home economics majors will be able to develop interior design skills as more software is created in this area.

Karen Roseberry, Director of Public Relations and Personnel at Ashley Memorial Hospital in Crossett, Ark., was one of the first communication majors to benefit from the desktop publishing capabilities of the Macintosh system.

"Because I could show items that I had created on the Mac, I was able to demonstrate my journalistic abilities as well as to showcase my graphic design skills. At the job interview, I had tangible evidence of my capabilities. I could show the employer, not just tell him, that I could do the work. And, I got the job," Roseberry said.

The system's near-typeset quality reproduction enables communication majors to prepare camera-ready newsletters, brochures, bulletins and pamphlets for class projects. Broadcasting students make use of the Mac's word processing capabilities as they prepare news copy for daily campus radio and television broadcasts.

So, when someone talks about the mouse problem at Harding, it's not the result of sloppy housekeeping. It's just tangible evidence of Harding's commitment to providing a first-rate, marketable education through its investment in advanced computer resources for faculty and students.

A Letter From the President

David B. Burks

The beginning of a new semester is always a special and exciting time. Added excitement was present this year as students and faculty were greeted with fourteen inches of snow and fourteen degree weather for the first day of classes. But given this record snowfall, a new piece of history was made at Harding in the cancellation of classes for the first day. Students seemed to love the opportunity to enjoy the beautiful campus. God's handiwork is truly beautiful!

But while the temperature was cold outside, hearts were warmed as relationships were renewed when students returned to the campus and new relationships were begun. We are encouraged by the fact that enrollment is up again this spring semester, and we are grateful for the opportunity to work with these young people who are here to learn more about God.

As Jesus has high expectations for each of us, the faculty and staff have high expectations for this coming semester. We are planning a number of special chapel programs to help emphasize spiritual growth on the part of our student body. Other special events are being planned to help students sharpen their ministry skills so that they can be effective ambassadors for Jesus Christ. We also have high expectations for our students academically so that they may achieve significant progress as they explore new avenues and consider new alternatives from a Christian perspective.

We continue to be very grateful for your support of our work. I am especially grateful for the many contributions made by individuals to assist us in making possible a distinctive and uniquely Christian higher education experience for over 3,000 young people this year. Your encouragement to us in this special way is very much appreciated. May 1988 be a rich and rewarding year for you. Please continue to remember Harding in your prayers and come visit us whenever you can.

Finley Begins Semester as Registrar

Ron Finley was appointed Registrar of Harding University, effective Jan. 4 with the beginning of the spring semester. He has worked as an Assistant Registrar since he joined the staff in 1978.

"Ron has the knowledge, skills and experience for the position," said Dr. Neale Pryor, academic vice president, in making the announcement. "We have confidence in his ability to handle this major administrative responsibility."

A native of DeQueen, Finley holds the bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of Arkansas of Fayetteville. He was Guidance Counselor at Fairview High School in Camden six years before joining the Harding staff. He has served as a coach in the Searcy baseball program.

Commissioned as an Army Officer after receiving his master's degree, he served two years on active duty, most of which was in West Germany. He remained in the Army Reserve another 10 years and attained the rank of major.

Finley was a football official for 10 years. Before coming to Searcy he was a member of the Lions Club and was president of the Ouachita County chapter of the American Cancer Society.

Finley has three sons, Jon, 17, Ben, 12, and Stephanie, nine. The family resides in Ranchette Village.

The new administrator assumed the duties of Virgil Beckett, Registrar since 1958, who will continue in an advisory capacity through the spring semester.

Memphis Dean Addresses Winter Graduates

C. Philip Slate, Dean of the Harding Graduate School of Religion in Memphis, addressed 120 graduating seniors at commencement exercises Dec. 18.

President David B. Burks presented diplomas to 43 graduates for the Bachelor of Arts, 54 the Bachelor of Business Administration, 12 the Bachelor of Science, two the Bachelor of Science in Nursing and one each the Bachelor of Science in Medical Technology and Bachelor of Fine Arts.

In the graduate division, three received the Master of Education, two the Master of Science and two the Master of Science in Education.

Marvin Mathis shares his joy with friends at graduation time. He was one of 120 to receive degrees in December commencement exercises.

"Meet the President" Receptions Hosted by Parents and Friends

Chapters of Alumni, Parents and Friends of Harding are hosting "Meet the President" dinners and receptions this year in 15 major metropolitan areas across the Midsouth.

Six such events were held in the fall, with nine planned for this semester. The makeup of the audience has consisted of alumni, parents of students and alumni, prospective students and their families and other friends of the university.

Locations for the fall semester and their organizers have been...

In Dallas, Wayne Ard and Brant Bryan.

In Ft. Worth, Mary Ann Cooper Felts, Cathy Cole Sewell and Lisa Partain Jennings.

In Nashville, Jim and

Cindy Gurchiek, James and Merrill McCreary, Alan Bryan, David and Kathy Hardin, John and Terry Parrish and Jim and Barbie Lanier.

In Tulsa/Broken Arrow, David and Donita House, Walter and Billie Buchanan and Mr. and Mrs. Ray Wilburn.

In St. Louis, Steve Awtrey, Glenn and Margaret Rhubard Greenville and Mr. and Mrs. Will Hanes.

In Springfield, Bill and Frances Prater Chism and Eddie and Judy Miller.

In Atlanta, Steve and Dedra Oliver Hunter, Clark and Susan Collins Miller and Charles and Susan Turner Dismuke.

In Birmingham, Pat and Mary Bell, Gary and Karen Chamblee, Dave and Mary

Driskell, Leon and Peggy Sizemore and Swaid and Lynne Swaid.

In Memphis, Randy and Tricia Hester Lillard, Richard and Cathy Whaley, Tim and Tammie Hacker and Kenny and Donna Harris.

In Kansas City, Mark and Kerri McEuen Trotter, Jim and Sandy Trotter and Mr. and Mrs. James Trotter.

Four meetings — in San Antonio, Little Rock, Shreveport and Houston will be scheduled later in the semester.

Fall pre-game receptions at away in-state football games were hosted in Conway by Jim Bob and Matilda Baker; in Arkadelphia by Tommy and Martha Bush; and in Magnolia by Jim, Albert and Delena Duke.

SPRING ENROLLMENT IS UP!

A 14-inch snowfall in Searcy wreaked havoc with spring registration schedules in early January, but by registration deadline a total of 2,702 students had enrolled for classes. The total is 55 more than had registered for the spring semester last spring.

"We are pleased that the number has increased," Finley said, "because we graduated 120 seniors in December."

Applications for the fall are being received and admissions services personnel have encouraged high school students to complete their applications as soon as possible.

The spring semester will be completed with graduation May 10. A week's recess is scheduled for March 7-14.

Alumnus Promoted to President

Jack W. McNutt, an alumnus of the class of 1956, became president and chief executive officer of Murphy Oil Company in El Dorado Jan. 1. He replaced Robert J. Sweeney, who retired after 15 years in that capacity.

McNutt has worked for the company as an executive for 30 years. He had been an executive vice president for the last five years.

The 1986 Distinguished Alumnus, McNutt began work with Murphy Oil Corporation in 1957 when he graduated from Columbia University Graduate School of Business in New York. He worked in London, England, from 1969 to 1981 with Murphy Eastern.

Jack McNutt

A member of Harding's President's Council and Business Advisory Board, McNutt is married to the former Jerry Chesshir ('55).

Their daughter, Marsha, received a B.S. degree in 1987 and is enrolled in a graduate program in biochemistry at Texas A&M.

Davenport Added; Tullos Returns

Kathy Davenport, a 1977 Harding alumna, was added to the nursing faculty for the spring semester, and Dan Tullos, assistant professor of communication, returned from doctoral studies.

Davenport completed the master's degree in nursing at the University of Central Arkansas in December. Her husband, Dennis, is a graduate assistant to Coach Phil Watkins in women's basketball.

Tullos has been on leave to complete his doctorate in Communication Disorders at Pennsylvania State University.

Computer Programming Teams Compete in Regional Contest

Harding's computer programming team won first place among 22 teams in the undergraduate division of a contest at Lafayette, La. in November, with schools competing from Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Texas. A second team placed fifth in the undergraduate division.

Harding's top team ranked fifth overall among the 46 teams from 30 colleges and universities competing. The second team finished 14th overall.

Members of the winning team included Ron Pacheco, captain, of Flippin, Ark.; Jeremy Green of Richardson, Texas; Alex Fagen of Oskaloosa, Iowa; and Raymond Waldrop of Bartlesville, Okla. Scott Ragsdale of the math and computer science faculty was the sponsor. The team solved three problems in just over 11 hours to claim the victory.

The other teams' members, John Matthews, captain, of La Puente, Calif.; Chris Oliver of Fruitland Park, Fla.; Scott Burleson of Lawrenceville, Ga.; and Richard Rardin of Flint, Mich., completed two problems in seven hours, forty minutes. Dr. Travis Thompson was the faculty sponsor. Winners were determined by the number of problems solved.

Harding teams had been represented in the regional competition five years and the 1987 ratings were the best achieved since competition began.

Steve Baber, an associate professor of math and computer science at Harding who had advised the team prior to the event, said, "We are very excited and proud of this accomplishment. We were one of the smallest schools participating, so this speaks well for our students."

Baber explained that team members gain an advantage from the experience. He also said the experience would be helpful to the students who plan to apply for graduate study. "Team members are looked at very favorably by graduate schools. This will be a feather in their cap," he

The undergraduate division included a team from Arkansas Tech which solved two problems in just under seven hours to take third place. Among other schools represented were the University of Arkansas, Tulane, Oral Roberts, Northeast Louisiana and Angelo State University.

Teams competing with graduate students included Texas Tech, which placed first by solving four problems in 11 hours, 35 minutes, Rice University, University of Texas at Arlington, and Oklahoma State University, among

Memorial Gifts To Harding Aid Students

Memorial gifts to Harding at the death of a friend or relative continue to be a good way to express sympathy and help provide Christian education for Harding students.

Usually the funds received as memorial gifts are used in the school's general fund. However, donors may request their gifts to go to a specific fund.

Harding's Development Office has a special memorial gift packet available to assist individuals in making memorial gifts.

The packet contains an expression of sympathy that is mailed directly to the bereaved family. It also contains a card and reply envelope that are sent to Harding with the donor's memorial gift.

Once the gift is received by Harding, the Development Office sends an acknowledgement of the gift to the family of the deceased individual.

Last year more than $40,000 was contributed to Harding as the result of memorial gifts.

Memorial gift packets may be obtained by writing the Development Office, Box 941, Harding University, Searcy, AR 72143. Individuals will be sent three packets of materials.

Christian Stewardship And Estate Planning

by William Tucker Director of Deferred Giving

THE CHRISTIAN AND HIS ESTATE: THE DEFERRED PAYMENT GIFT ANNUITY

Consider these benefits —

- Guaranteed life income at retirement
- Income tax savings now

Satisfaction of making a significant gift to Harding

Do these benefits sound attractive? The deferred payment gift annuity is an excellent charitable estate planning tool and produces each of these benefits.

In brief, under the deferred payment gift annuity, the donor makes a gift of cash or property to Harding in exchange for a written promise from Harding to begin paying the donor (or the donor and his/her spouse), at retirement (or other date of the donor's choice) a specific amount of money in periodic installments for the rest of the donor's

Generally, the donor who -

- Has sufficient current income from employment or other sources;
- Would like to make a sizeable gift now;
- Would like to reduce his current income taxes; and
- Would like to receive guaranteed retirement income for life will find the deferred payment gift annuity to be an attractive estate planning tool. Consider this example: Mr. and Mrs. Donor are 55 and 53 years of age, respectively. They have sufficient income and adequate assets to take care of an emergency. Among their assets is a $10,000 certificate of deposit presently earning 6.5 percent or $650 per year. They do not need this income now, but when Mr. Donor retires at age 68, they will need the earnings from this asset to supplement their income.

Mr. Donor dialed Harding's toll-free telephone number and learned from the Development Office that he could give the $10,000 Certificate of Deposit to Harding and receive from Harding a contractual promise to pay to Mr. and Mrs. Donor for the rest of their lives an annual income in the amount of $1,160 with the payments to begin when Mr. Donor reaches his 68th birthday. Nearly 10 percent of the annual income would be tax free. Also, Mr. and Mrs. Donor would be entitled to an income tax charitable contribution deduction of $7,457 now, when their income tax will likely be higher than after retirement. This gift could reduce their income tax by as much as $2,088. Considering the tax benefit, the effective rate of the annuity could be as high as 15 percent, an 8.5 percent increase in their income from this asset. (The investment amount was selected for illustration. The principle applies to larger amounts as well.)

In summary, the Deferred Payment Gift Annuity would enable Mr. and Mrs. Donor to:

- Make a significant gift to Harding now;
- Provide guaranteed retirement income for life:
- Obtain an income tax charitable deduction in a high income year; and
- Defer income to years when they will need it, and when it will generally be taxed at lower rates.

This excellent retirement tool is not for everyone. The tax and financial consequences of charitable gifts depend upon the giver's unique circumstances. For more information about the deferred payment gift annuity or other estate planning tools, please call toll free at 1-800-632-4751 in Arkansas or 1-800-643-3792 outside of Arkansas. We would be delighted to assist, without cost, in estate planning.

Barnes Coordinates AWH

Barbara Barnes, associate professor of health, physical education and recreation and director of women's intramural athletics at Harding University, was appointed in September to serve as liaison for the university's national organization of Associated Women for Harding (AWH).

"Mrs. Barnes is a diligent worker who is committed to Harding University," said Dr. David Burks, president. "She will promote AWH and provide effective leadership for this vital external constituency."

AWH is a group of women who have four major purposes woven into their organization: to support Harding University in all its needs; to help promote the highest advantages in physical, social, intellectual and spiritual education for every student; to promote a clear understanding of Christian education and to foster a spirit of friendship among the women who are interested in the development of Christian education.

"My primary focus will be to encourage and strengthen existing chapters and to establish new ones where we have a strong concentration of students and alumni," Barbara said. "I want to be able to impress upon these women that we need them. If we get out there and let the women know how they can help, they will."

Among the events in the near future are the sale of memories prints, emphasis on membership at-large and a general meeting of AWH in April.

The 11 x 14 memories prints, a limited edition of a pen-and-ink production of the Bell Tower by Jerry Harris of Shreveport, La., are still available for $25 from AWH. They can be ordered from "Memories," Harding University, Box 1224, Searcy, Ark. 72143.

Membership at-large is available to women who live in areas where there is no AWH chapter. The $12 annual membership fee can benefit the university's operating fund, allowing the member to contribute to Christian education at Harding. The fee can be sent to Barbara Barnes, Harding University, Box 677, Searcy, Ark. 72143.

Barbara Barnes

Each year, the Associated Women's groups have a general meeting on the university campus. The 23rd annual meeting will be April 22, 1988.

"The contagious enthusiasm of the AWH generates support well beyond the financial help members provide the university. One of their greatest avenues of assistance has been their strong, positive influence on prospective students," Dr. Burks said.

The many friendships and the fellowship that result in working together have been by-products of AWH. But the foremost reason for the existence of the organization remains constant — to promote Harding University and serve its needs in advancing Christian education.

Head Librarian Honored With Distinguished Service Award

Head librarian Winnie
Bell has been chosen by the Arkansas Library Association to receive its Distinguished Service Award for 1987. Selected from the state's public and private libraries, she was honored at the ALA annual awards luncheon Nov. 2 in Fayetteville.

Bell began her library career when she was asked to leave her job at a bank to assume the position of bookkeeper and interlibrary loan clerk at Harding's library.

Her determination and willingness helped her easily adjust to the new job responsibilities. At age 50, Bell was appointed Harding University Library director. Now at age 62, she has become very skilled on the library's new computer equipment.

Her contributions to the field were noted by ALA President Leo Clougherty when he introduced her as a woman who "has quietly, but firmly, asserted the value of libraries, promoted their excellence, and planned for their future."

"The image of the librarian cannot help but be enhanced in the eyes of anyone who observes Miss Winnie Bell's career of accomplishments and service," President David Burks said in congratulating Bell.

The plaque reading "an honored recipient of the Distinguished Service Award for continuing and meritorious service to the Arkansas Library Association and to the field of librarianship," will hang in the Harding library.

Campus Notes

Henry Terrill, government documents librarian, presided at the quarterly meeting of the Arkansas Advisory Committee on Documents Services at the Arkansas State Library in Little Rock Dec. 2. Terrill is completing his term as chairman of the committee, which advises the State Library Board on issues affecting the availability of government publications in Arkansas. Terrill will have two additional years as a member of the committee.

Winnie Bell and Shirley Williams (Library) attended the state workshop of the AMIGOS Bibliographic Council in Little Rock Oct. 22. The session provided information concerning the availability of library applications for the microcomputer on a Shareware basis.

Betty Ulrey (English) read a paper, "The Moral Meaning of Piers Plowman," at the Arkansas Philological Association annual meeting in North Little Rock Nov. 13. Dr. Dennis Organ and Alice Jewell, of the English faculty, also attended.

Dr. H. Wade Bedwell (Education) presented a paper on "Attention Deficit Disorders" at the Oklahoma Association for Children and Adults with Learning Disabilities statewide conference in Tulsa, Okla., Nov. 13.

Winnie Bell and Suzanne Spurrier (Library) attended a meeting of the Southwest section of the AMIGOS Bibliographic Council in Dallas Nov. 18-20. Bell also attended a presession workshop on making your own acquisitions software using the Lotus 1-2-3 or dBase III Plus. The main thrust of the fall membership meeting and technical session was "Technology in Transition."

The Arkansas Department of Higher Education has awarded a grant of $12,000 to Harding University. The grant will allow 22 elementary science teachers from White County to attend a summer science workshop to be conducted by Dr. Tony Finley. The workshop will include several educational field trips to enrich the background of science teachers in grades 4-6. This is the third proposal that Dr. Finley has had approvevd through the Department of Higher Education for the improvement of math and science teachers in Arkansas.

Nineteen singers from the Department of Music competed recently in the regional auditions of the National Association of Teachers of Singing (NATS), held on the campus of the University of Arkansas at Little Rock. Dr. Kenneth Davis, Jr., Neva White and Dr. Arthur Shearin accompanied the group. In the competition with singers from Arkansas, Louisiana and Mississippi, ten Harding students reached the semi-final round, and Conrad Ekkens, a voice major, placed third in the sophomore men's division.

History Day: Arkansas will be held on the Harding campus Saturday, April 9, under the auspices of the Department of History and Social Science and its chairman, Dr. Raymond Muncy. This district #3 meeting of the state of Arkansas includes White, Woodruff, Prairie, St. Francis, Monroe and Lee counties. Open to junior high and high school students, the theme is "Frontiers in History: People, Places and Ideas." Participants may write papers, construct displays, put on skits or develop audio-visual programs, and winning entries will compete at the state level in Little Rock April 23. State winners will go to the national competition in Washington, D.C., in June.

Charlene Prock, wife of former Harding head football coach John Prock, was named a Southern Regional winner in the "Tailgate Favorites of Football Families" recipe contest sponsored by the Florida Citrus Growers in December.

Dr. Paul Pollard and Tom Eddins (Bible) attended the joint meeting of the Society of Biblical Literature and the American Academy of Religion in Boston, Mass., Dec. 5-7. The meeting was attended by 5,000 Biblical scholars from throughout the world.

Dr. Louise Bradford (Nursing) co-authored an article which appeared in the December issue of the Journal of Neuroscience Nursing, Entitled "Effects of Alcohol on the Central Nervous System: Implications for the Neuroscience Nurse," the article's other contributor was Elizabeth Kirk, neuroscience clinical nurse specialist for Methodist Hospitals of Memphis.

SCHOOL OF RELIGION

Various Activities and Scholarships Announced

UPLIFT BIBLE CAMP

More than 600 teen-agers will converge on the Harding campus June 19-24 for the annual UPLIFT Bible camp. Campers will attend three Bible classes each day, have a daily morning worship session and an evening evangelistic service.

Mike Cope, minister of the College Church of Christ, will present the opening address. Keynote speakers include Jay Utley, Buddy Bell and Jeff Walling. Rex Boyles will conduct an indepth study in the UPLIFT classes. Special singing will be provided by the Harmony Boys and Acappella.

Encounter classes will be taught by 30 youth ministers, and 40 collegeage students will serve as counselors. All sessions are supervised and are held in air-conditioned buildings.

The basic purpose of UPLIFT is to serve the spiritual needs of the campers, according to Dr. Allan Isom, director. "We try to get the campers away from so many worldly activities and help them discover their spiritual selves," Isom said.

"Parents are seeing UPLIFT as an opportunity to introduce a teen to a Christian college environment. There is no doubt but that many of the campers will elect to attend a Christian college as a result of UPLIFT," Isom added.

Two extra experiences are being offered in conjunction with UPLIFT this year. Special events are being planned before and after the week-long camp for those who desire to arrive early and/or stay late.

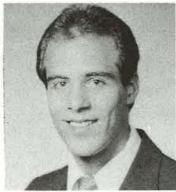

Prior to UPLIFT, youth ministers may bring their group to campus to spend the night on Friday (June 17) and then take a float trip on the Buffalo River on Saturday.

Following UPLIFT, groups may want to go to Magic Springs recreational park on Friday (June 24) for a special youth rally with Rex Boyles and Acappella. Housing will be provided by Harding at no cost, but trip expenses will be the responsibility of the groups who participate.

"Lives have been changed, spiritual purposes clarified and commitment to living as a Christian solidified by many teens who have attended UPLIFT," Isom said. The cost of the week-long camp is $80.

For more information, write Dr. Allan Isom at Harding University, Box 764, Searcy, Ark. 72143.

SCHOLARSHIP

Greg Stevenson

Gregory Stevenson has been named recipient of a Bible scholarship for the spring semester from a fund established in memory of Courtland and Stella Pegan.

The scholarship trust fund was established from a contribution in the Pegans' honor by their daughter and her husband, Shirley and H. Glenn Boyd, in November, 1985. Greg is the first recipient of funds from the trust's annual interest.

Greg is a senior Bible major. A native of Effingham, Ill., he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Stevenson and a member of Knights social club.

SINGING CAMP

Keith Lancaster, member of the contemporary gospel singing group Acappella, has announced a new location for their annual song directing camp for this summer. Formerly held in Murray, Ky., the third annual camp will be hosted by Harding University July 10-16, 1988.

Lancaster, who directs the camp, uses the week to train individuals in song directing and quartet singing. Other Acappella members and teachers work with campers as well.

Campers will be housed in air-conditioned residence halls and training sessions will be conducted in Harding's air-conditioned facilities. Campers will have use of university facilities for sports activities during free time.

Dr. Allan Isom, assistant dean of the School of Religion, will serve as Harding's representative to host the program. All inquiries about the camp itself should be directed to Keith Lancaster, P. O. Box 15, Paris, Tenn. 38242.

MOVE

The School of Religion has initiated Mission Opportunities in Vocational Evangelism (MOVE) to encourage non-Bible graduates to secure jobs where the church is weak or unknown and help evangelize the area.

More than 20 faculty representatives have joined hands to promote MOVE through classes, clubs and personal contacts with students and to identify those students who are interested in the program.

Harding's part in MOVE is to promote the idea to students and to encourage churches to participate through active recruitment of interested students. "We hope that someone in the congregation where help is needed will serve as a liaison between the church and student to help arrange employment," said Dr. Allan Isom, assistant dean of the School of Religion.

"One of the possible methods of creating interest in a particular location will be to conduct a campaign in that area so that interested students can be familiar with the church and the area which they are considering for employment," Isom added.

Meetings to chart the course for the program began in October.

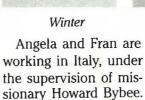

SCHOLARSHIPS

Three recent graduates have been selected to receive scholarship loans from the Student Missionary Loan/Grant Fund for Single Women. They are Karen Winter, Angela Kays and Fran Coon.

The fund, established in 1981 by James S. McDonald, Jr., and his wife, N. Virginia, makes loans available to single women entering mission work. Under the provisions of the fund, the loan becomes a grant from the trust fund after two years in the chosen mission work.

Karen is working with Duane Morgan and others in Irian Jaya. Theirs is a team effort to reach into remote areas of that primitive part of the world.

13-IN-1 SUMMER WORKSHOP

The 13-in-1 workshop, which is conducted every other year during the summer, will be Aug. 1-4 this year, according to Eddie Cloer, coordinator.

The 13-in-1 concept involves 13 different "mini-workshops" conducted simultaneously over a four-day period. Concentrated training is provided by Christian teachers, leaders and preachers who are recognized for their expertise in the areas they are teaching.

Special assemblies for all participants will be conducted Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday at 8:00 a.m. and Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. Dr. Neale Pryor, vice president for academic affairs and acting dean of the School of Religion, will deliver the morning chapel address each day and the closing lesson on Wednesday evening.

The following workshops are planned

Walking with God
The Bible Study Forum
Expository Preaching
Building a Dynamic Youth Ministry
Mental Health
How to Teach the Text
Building Better Families
HSBS Workshop
Evangelism
Teaching Pre-Schoolers
Teaching Primary and Intermediate Students
Christian Retirement

A Blend of Techno

Technology and tradition. If Harding's English Department were to phrase a theme for its current work, this would be it. While continuing its commitment to serving the University through traditional courses in writing and literature, the department is being transformed in how it does its work.

The most dramatic development in that transformation is the introduction of computer technology, which may revolutionize the teaching of writing at Harding and elsewhere. Last summer the Writing Center, a tutorial laboratory, was remodeled and equipped with five Macintosh computers and three Apple IIe's. Another 20 Macintoshes are available in the graphics lab in the Communication Department.

Already the Writing Center is used for some specialized composition classes. And networking of the Macintosh computers has also permitted their use for drills for students needing tutorial help with grammar.

"The Macintoshes allowed us to assist far more students than we would have been able to do with personal tutors," said Dr. Dennis Organ, chairman. "And it's an ideal machine for composition because it's easy to use and makes revision almost painless."

Although the faculty are still experimenting with how to use the computers in instruction, they recognize revision and multiple drafts as cornerstones of contemporary theories of teaching writing, theories that regard writing more as a process than as a finished product. When papers can be reorganized with the touch of a few keys and students need not labor with physical rewriting, it's easy to see how computers are a boon to composition.

To keep abreast of developments in composition, the English faculty participated in three training sessions last year totaling about 16 hours. Instructors for the workshops were Dr. Larry Long, director of the Writing Center, and Dr. Rod Brewer, whose doctoral work is in composition.

Organ said, "Through these workshops I've asked a lot of time from the faculty to help us improve our teaching. In addition, I'm excited that most of them have voluntarily spent many more hours learning to use the computers and exploring their possibilities for instruction."

Although new technology is stimulating, tradition remains strong in any English program, mainly because the study of language and literature are as old as higher education itself. At Harding, the tradition is seen in two thrusts — the general education curriculum and the curriculum for English majors.

Brenneman

Some people go through life with everything neatly planned and organized, leaving no room for what might be called chance or providence. Others stumble along blindly, planning nothing, waiting for just the right moment before they do anything at all.

Ellen Brenneman has managed to accomplish a unique blend of these two routes. A 1978 graduate of Harding, Ellen is a writer for Hallmark Cards, Inc.

Though she made plans for her life, at least about where to attend college, Ellen arrived at Harding without any clear ideas about what she wanted to do, one of the 12 percent who are in the "undecided" category regarding their college major.

"I ended up at the English table at freshman registration by chance. It was empty, so that's where they were sending the undecideds. That's where I met the English department members and ended up in English classes, without really thinking about it. Later, I asked my profs about my major because I wasn't really sure what I wanted to do. I'll always remember the answer I was given: 'You're in the right field. There's no question.' Deep down, I knew it was true," Ellen reminisced.

As an English major, she was a three-time winner in the annual Creative Writing Contest. In 1974, as a freshman, she won the hymn lyrics division; in 1975, she repeated that feat; and in 1978, as a senior, she won the poetry division.

Following her graduation from Harding, Ellen went to Texas Tech University and completed the master of arts in linguistics. She then took a job at Memphis State University where one of her responsibilities was teaching remedial short story to

During one of her more frustrating sessions with an athlete in the Writing Lab, Ellen decided to go upstairs where she could be "closer to God and pray for guidance. Or deliverance." "By coincidence," she said, "I got on the same elevator as the Hallmark recruiter. who wasn't even supposed to be in that building. When I heard why he was there, I pretended to be a student and signed up for an interview."

Ellen has worked for Hallmark for three years, writing for their expression products which includes mugs, plaques, puzzles, key chains, T-shirts and party favors, in addition to cards. She attributes much of her success as a writer to her professors' encouragement "to be creative and not be afraid of what other people would think."

"I owe a lot to my Harding background," she said, "because the Harding English department helped foster an innocent, open appreciation of things — which you really need for true creativity — rather than a cynical approach to art, which is what one might expect at some big universities. One really great writer, Barry Lopez, recently spoke to us and made the point that a truly creative person needs to approach every subject with a childlike wonder and reverence. That's one thing that the climate and experience of Harding helped me develop and keep. I'll always be glad of that," she added.

"Two things in particular about the climate and experience of Harding helped me be able to do this job. One was the Harding atmosphere where it was OK to pursue your own dream regardless of where it was going to take you materially and prestige-wise.... The other thing was the freshness and innocence with which a Harding student, by nature, views the world and all that is in it. Sometimes it's a big shock when a Harding graduate hits the real world, but armed with an open, guileless outlook, you really can get through life with your idealism intact - if you only work at it and believe enough.... And Harding does foster belief in all that is good, in all that can be," Ellen said.

Her writing ranges from silly to serious as she writes verses for cards for all occasions. Among her favorites: "Help! I'm suffering from a split personality! (Illustration of a banana split) Half of me is bananas about you, and the other half is nuts about you!"

"Dad, when I was a kid, I always looked to you for support and encouragement. And now that I'm grown up, I just want you to know... I still do."

"Some friends are close because they accept us as we are... others, because they see in us all that we can become." One thinking-of-you card which she wrote "helps express how I sometimes feel, remembering college days, old times and friends I knew along the way:

Within our hearts
we carry thoughts
of special friends we've met,

Memories of happy times, of days we won't forget...

Within our hearts those memories will always keep them near,

For thoughts can reach across the miles... and make them disappear."

Ellen Brenneman's college background and what she refers to as "chance" have given her the opportunity to "work closely in the corporate elevator with people from various departments, go to meetings and lunch, attend conventions and conferences, meet famous people, use computers, telephones, etc."

By chance, she became an English major. By chance, she got the job with Hallmark. But it was not by chance that she was told at Harding, "There's no question; you're in the right field."

"I'll always remember that, because the guidance and direction I received helped me to be sure about following my own path and taking the road less traveled," she said. "Since college, there have been few times in life that there's 'no question' about, but I'll always remember that."

I like to think that God sends us special friends to share our lives... very special people we can be ourselves with, talk with, laugh with, hope with, and believe with... Special friends like you.

English Deg Writing Act

Writing Across the Curriculum (WAI that has spread rapidly among educations in recent months, is a natural for University.

Harding and WAC share the same cellence in education, primarily throuteacher-student involvement in learni WAC focuses on writing as learning, natural for the English department to in the movement.

The WAC movement at Harding was Dr. Larry Long and Dr. Rod Brewer participation in the Conference on Coposition and Communication in January Their enthusiasm about the WAC moto two summer workshops designed faculty awareness and potential use of the wareness.

y and Tradition

Dr. Dennis Organ, chairman of the English department (second from right), and Dr. Larry Long, professor of English (right), work with Dr. Fred Jewell, professor of history (not pictured), to prepare students for competition in the annual College Bowl.

As a department that provides every student with three or four general education courses, English is largely a "service" area. Harding's teachers remain committed to the value of a firm grounding not only in basic writing skills, which are thoroughly practical, but also in the Western world's great literature, which reflects the universal, essential issues of life man has always faced.

Of the freshman writing courses, Organ said, "If you give students strong communication skills, you give them something that can really make a difference in all their academic life and in how well they do in their careers."

The curriculum for English majors, though it is adjusted periodically to accommodate vocational needs of students, remains based in the great body of British and American literature and in advanced composition study.

"We believe that's the best preparation for our students who are going to graduate school or into high school teaching," Organ said. "We often hear from former majors that their colleagues in graduate schools lack the broad overview of literature that they got at Harding. An in-depth knowledge of Ezra Pound or Chinese mythology may be wonderful, but not if you don't know 'My Last Duchess' or 'Richard Cory' or 'King Lear.' "

In recent years, the department's alumni have won assistantships and fellowships at some of the nation's most prestigious universities, including Vanderbilt, Texas, Virginia, California at Riverside, California at Irvine, Pittsburgh and North Carolina.

An increasing number of majors do not opt for academic careers, but study English as preparation for law school or technical writing jobs. Dr. Jim Henderson, dean of the School of Business, said that he could find corporate jobs for many English majors if they added just a few basic business courses, because employers more than ever are looking for people who can use language well. A recent business recruiter on campus surprised interviewees by asking them to write an essay. Henderson believes that kind of employer concern will continue.

With a renewed demand for broad communication skills in the workplace and in the nation's elementary and secondary classrooms, the future of English in higher education could scarcely be brighter. Harding's program, which combines the newest technology with traditional values, is answering the challenge.

Broad Educational Background Prepares for Library Science

Although teaching and writing are the most popular profesions of English majors, Rick Foster decided to use his "broad educational background" from Harding to get into library school. He completed the baccalaureate degree in English in 1981 at Harding and the master of science in library science in 1985 at the University of North Carolina.

Rick now works in the Government Publications Department of the Chicago Public Library, developing the library's collection of state and local government documents and assisting at the reference desk. Following the traditional route, he attended a meeting of the American Library Association to interview for jobs and was called when an opening came at the Chicago Public

In his first position, he worked in the Interlibrary Loan Center, ocating books to fill interlibrary loan requests from branch libraries. Last summer, he transferred into the government documents position because he had experience in that area while in graduate school at UNC.

The Chicago Public Library is one of the largest public libraries in the United States. "Our collection of federal documents is probably the best in the state," Rick said. "This depository has been in existence for more than 100 years. It includes Federal, state and city documents, though our city documents are not extensive," he added.

"Most of our inquiries for government documents come from aw firms needing information from a House report or information-seekers who need statistics. The government has numerous statistical publications. I learn something new every day concerning what is available through government documents," he said.

"My liberal arts background has been quite beneficial because it pays to know a little bit about everything when you work in a library," Rick commented.

"I got my degree in English, planning to teach. After I did my student teaching, I had doubts as to whether teaching was really what I wanted to do, but I still tried to get a teaching job and there were no openings. I decided to return home (to Memphis) and work. I spent two years in the Memphis Public Library before I completed application and acceptance into graduate school in library science.

"Two important things helped me at Harding. The principles which my parents had taught me were strengthened, as was my desire to read great literary works. I am in a book club now with many who were college English majors."

What about the future? "I believe I want to stay in public libraries, but I am not eliminating the possibility of working in another type of library. I would like to move to a new place in a year or so," he said.

academic affairs. "The faculty just needs to be educated on how we can implement the concepts in more classes."

Dr. Raymond Muncy, chairman of the history department, reports, "People are reading the textbook who never read before. That's because they know they'll be asked to write a brief, informal ex planation of one of the topics found in the reading." He has found that those who do well on the short writing assignments are the ones who do well on major exams. "Learning and writing seem naturally to go together," he said.

Improved facilities at the Writing Center have contributed to the WAC movement at Harding. With the addition of five Macintosh and three Apple IIe units, the Center is serving more students who need help with writing problems, according to Long and Brewer.

All the components for a successful WAC program are in place at Harding - supportive administrators, leadership within the English department, interest from teachers in other disciplines and an effective Writing Center. Add to that Harding's commitment to excellence in education, and the WAC concept appears to have found a home at Harding University.

Students use the Writing Lab to work on writing problems and to improve their writing skills. The Lab is located in the American Studies Building, third floor, in the English department.

ELDERHOSTEL ScheduledFor Two Summer Sessions

Harding University will be one of 850 institutions to host ELDERHOSTEL again this summer. A liberal arts experience for older adults, ELDERHOSTEL provides opportunity for people 60 and over to explore new areas of knowledge.

More than 100,000 "students" have participated in the international program during each of the last three years. Based on the premise that older people are vital, independent and intellectually curious, ELDER-HOSTEL programs offer useful, up-to-date courses for those who like the idea of a learning vacation. Of primary interest is the concept of learning without examinations, grades or homework.

Two sessions will be hosted by Harding — June 19-25 and July 3-9. During the first one-week session, guests will be offered three classes: Woodcarving, The Civil War: The Soldier's Life, and Remarkable Photography: Picture Perfect. These will be taught by Harding faculty members Don England and Bill Rushton, Virgil Lawyer and Mike James.

The second session, July 3-9, will feature Ozark

Mountain Basketry, New Testament Survey and Geological Memorabilia. These classes will be taught by Faye Doran, Neale Pryor and Bill Rushton.

Guests for ELDERHOSTEL are housed in Harding's American Heritage Center and served in the Heritage Cafeteria. For more information, write to Dr. Jimmy Carr, coordinator, at Box 1224, Station A, Searcy, Ark. 72143.

Robert Fredrich of Wuawatosa, Wis., was one of more than 70 participants in Harding's ELDERHOSTEL classes last summer.

Alumnus Reminisces with Long-Admired Hero

By Marc Muncy, D.D.S.

He doesn't know why he did it. He doesn't even remember doing it. He was only three years old. He does, however, remember eating the small fragments his mother broke from the large piece of candy he purchased with the nickel. It was 1919. An uncle he had never met returned from the "war to end all wars," and with that nickel bribed his nephew, Elwin, to tell him his name. Instead of saying, "Elwin," he replied, "Preacher."

He had given himself a good name, and it stuck like glue. Sixty-nine years later, through college, an illustrious major league pitching career, the operation of a grocery business, a brief stint in public relations and seven years of retirement, he is still known as "Preacher" — Preacher Roe.

Like many Harding students, I remember gazing through the glass cover of the wooden case mounted on a wall in Rhodes Fieldhouse; you remember the one — it contained an old Brooklyn Dodgers uniform and cap. It also contained an old baseball glove and a few pertinent statements about the donor, a Harding alumnus — Preacher Roe.

Thirty-five years separated his arrival to the school that stood "midst hill and plain" and the birth of my collegiate career. We had little in common. To him, Harding was a school consisting of a few buildings and 600 students whose president was Dr. Benson. To me, Harding was many buildings, 2,500 students, Dr. Ganus and a history professor who brought home the bacon.

Nevertheless, Preacher was my hero. I never saw him play, but he was my hero. I was barely a year old when he pitched his last major league game. By the time I was old enough to recognize who the Dodgers were, the team had already moved to Los Angeles. It didn't matter; he was still my hero.

I have never thrown a curve. My fast ball, if clocked, might accelerate to 25 miles per hour, but I doubt it. No, we had nothing in common...except one thing — Harding.

If I close my eyes, I can almost see Preacher on the mound at Ebbet's Field. I can hear the sounds of baseball, of thousands (maybe millions) of Dodgers fans celebrating Preacher's victory over the Yankees in a 1949 World Series game. Had I been there I would have been so proud. I would have told the stranger sitting next to me that Preacher and I had attended the same small college in Arkansas.

That's the great thing about the Harding family. You see, I never saw Preacher pitch in person, never saw him on TV, never heard about him on the radio, but day after day I saw his uniform, cap and glove displayed on a wall at my school, and that made Preacher and me...well...family.

I always knew our paths would cross. Harding people seem to have ways of running into one another. With the help of a mutual friend for whom we are thankful, my wife and I recently had an audience with Ol' Preach. It was an experience we'll never forget and one we will always treasure.

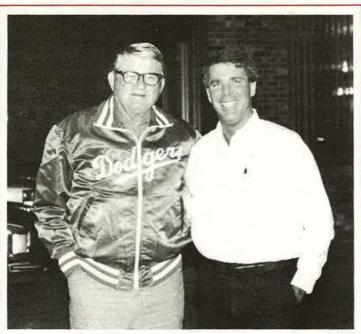

I knew who he was the minute he stepped into the coffee shop. He looked the way he was supposed to look — like a mountain — powerful, with a full head of slightly-grayed hair. There was a spring in his step and a youthful expression that clear, but his eyes really told the stories, as did his hands as he arranged and rearranged the items on the table that separated us. He was articulate, as a man of breeding and sophistication, and not as one from the same mold as "Sam Malone."

The air about us seemed ringing with the names of Duke Snider, Jackie Robinson, Roy Campanella and Pee-Wee Reese; of Carl Furillo and Clem Labine, of Gil Hodges and Carl Erskine. He recalled how he used the change-up to get the best of Stan the Man and of how, in his last season, he helped another, younger Dodgers left-hander, named Koufax.

He was not a name-dropper; instead he spoke of legends in the same way that you and I would talk of John and Mary and Sally and Mike. I knew the hands on my watch were moving, but to my mind, time stood still. I could have stayed there with him all night.

He was a team player, and he recalled only the good things about his teammates. You see, when one speaks evil of another, he sets himself on a higher plane. Good team players understand this and don't practice it. He has maintained close ties with his made him look as though he could still blow that spit-ball right toward your temple and down into the strike zone. I was impressed that he looked so much younger than his nearly 72 years, and even if he hadn't been wearing the bright blue and white Dodgers jacket, I would have known that he was Preacher Roe.

He was generous with his time and gracious, although I knew in my heart that I was just another fan asking the same worn-out questions. His voice was old teammates over the years. He enjoys his opportunities to spend time with those with whom he once worked and played.

His face was drawn in sadness, however, as he recounted a story about a fellow player who once let him down. When Preacher bid farewell to this player and left Brooklyn for good, he took a dollar bill and tore it into two even pieces. He told his friend to keep one half and remember it so that if they ever met again they could restore the value of the dollar by putting the two halves together and thus cover the expense of a cup of coffee or a soft drink. Years later the two friends were reunited. Preacher pulled out his half; the friend had forgotten about the entire plan and had misplaced the other half. It wasn't the lost value of the dollar that hurt Preacher; it was the lost value of a friendship. It wounded him deeply.

He was a man of principle and virtue. Even though Roger Kahn's 1972 classic best-seller had restored his name to stardom, he was quick to denounce the author's use of too many four-letter expletives. I consoled him by saying that people who talk that way may write that way and hardly notice doing either. He would not be consoled, but he said with great pride that the 13 Dodgers highlighted in The Boys of Summer refused to consent to the movie sequel until the author deleted all profanity from the script. "Now that's a movie you can show to your Sunday school class," he stated, beaming.

The time had come to leave. While my wife, Tina, settled up at the cash register, Preacher and I walked to the parking lot. "Mind if I get a couple of pictures?," I asked. "Not at all," he said as he zipped the front of his jacket so the word "Dodgers" would not appear hyphenated in the photograph.

By this time Tina had joined us and prepared to assume the role of photographer. I moved over next to Preacher and posed with a smile. I felt something gently pressed against the opposite side of my back — he had put his arm around me — and as the bulb flashed and the shutter clicked, we stood there as two old friends, arms around each other, but only one of us silently praying that the snapshot would turn out good.

Major league baseball will never again be as good as it was when Preacher ruled the mound. Free agency, drug testing, designated hitting and playing indoors have forever altered the rich tradition of America's favorite summertime sport. I'm so happy that I was able to receive - first-hand - descriptions of the game and its players from someone who stood in the limelight when the light shone its brightest.

A few days after my meeting with Elwin Charles Roe, I sent him a card with a brief note of thanks. I expressed my gratitude for the time and memories he had so liberally shared with Tina and me; and, just in case we happen to run into each other again, I enclosed his half of my one-dollar bill.

Bison Squads Warm Up for Conference Competition

Facing stealthy nonconference schedules, the Bison and Lady Bison basketball teams recorded impressive victories as warm-ups to the tough Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference round-robin slate.

The defending NAIA District 17 champion Bisons closed out their non-league play with a deceiving 5-4 record, including a fifth place finish in the extremely competitive Evangel College Invitational Tournament in Springfield, Mo. Head coach Jess Bucy's team lost three of its first four battles before closing with a 4-1 record in the final five games.

Meanwhile, the Lady Bisons split with two nonconference foes and lost twice to another highly regarded opponent to go 2-5 before conference play began.

The Bisons opened league competition Jan. 9 at home against Hendrix College.
The Lady Bisons tipped off their AIC slate Jan. 11 at University of the Ozarks.

For the Bisons, it was a case of rediscovering the winning groove that sent them on an 8-2 run in the final 10 games of the 1986-87 season. Of the four losses to non-conference opponents, two were decided in the closing seconds and one was to a nationally-ranked team.

After opening with a 74-71 home win over Evangel College, the Black and Gold lost a heartbreaker to defending NAIA District 16 champion School of the Ozarks, 86-85. That was followed by a 62-58 last-second loss to Missouri Southern and a 90-75 defeat by McKendree College in the first round of the Evangel Tournament. Against Missouri Southern, the Bisons were without the services of top scorer Rolando Garcia. McKendree, which went on to win the Thanksgiving holiday tournament, is currently among the NAIA's top 10 teams and averages better than 100 points a game.

The Bisons bounced back to whip Greenville College 97-54 and AIC competitor Henderson State 70-69 in the tourney's consolation bracket final. A feisty Philander Smith College team sneaked into Ganus Athletic Center and came away with a 70-67 win before the Bisons enjoyed revenge in an 81-67 win over Missouri Southern and an 82-74 victory over School of the Ozarks, both in front of vocal home crowds.

Garcia, the slender 6-8 sophomore from Little Rock, Ark., tops the team in scoring and rebounds, with 16,8 and 8.9 averages. Just behind him is fellow sophomore Corey Camper of Brinkley, Ark., with a 15.8-point scoring average. The lone senior on the team, point guard Tim Smallwood of Tulsa, Okla., has been effective from the three-point range, hitting 22 of 41 shots for 54 percent.

Like the Bisons, the Lady Bisons didn't find the welcome mat in Point Lookout, Mo., when they faced School of the Ozarks and lost by a point, 68-67. Union University, which entered the game ranked third in NAIA Division I, handed the Lady Bisons a 71-46 loss. The Lady Bisons also tasted sweet revenge with a 69-65 win over School of the Ozarks at home. Harding's ladies made a game of it in a home rematch with Union, but the result was a 70-63 loss.

The second win of the season came against Philander Smith, an 89-73 victory. Losses to Arkansas Baptist College (79-74) and Philander Smith (79-72) closed out the Lady Bisons' non-conference schedule.

Individually, three seniors have stepped to the forefront, Clinton, Ark., forward Teri Loven paces both the scoring and rebound categories with 14.9 and 7.1 averages per game. Point guard Shawn Bradford of Bee Branch, Ark., ranks second in scoring with a 12.1-point average, and forward Stephany Smith of Brookhaven, Miss., is third with 11.2 points a game.

Swimming and Diving Teams Headed for Winning Season

Optimism runs high for the Waterbuffalo swimming and diving team as it enters the second half of the season.

Head coach Jack Boustead says this year's squad may have the best shot in several years at challenging for the Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference title.

"Their potential for the whole season surpasses that of the last four years," said Boustead. "To this point, without exception, the returning swimmers have improved their times from this same time last season, and our younger swimmers are consistently improving their times as well."

Individual times have highlighted the team's performances thus far in the schedule. Led by outstanding freshman Brian Gainey and a pack of experienced lettermen from a year ago, the Buffaloes finished second in a strong six-team meet at John Brown University in early December.

Gainey, a Baton Rouge, La., native, has established a school record in his short college career and has challenged several others while anchoring three strong relay teams.

Gainey's record came in the 200-yard backstroke event. His time of 2:07.61 shattered the mark set by Alan Fitzgerald in 1984. Boustead feels confident that the talented freshman will qualify for the NAIA National meet in early March, before the season concludes.

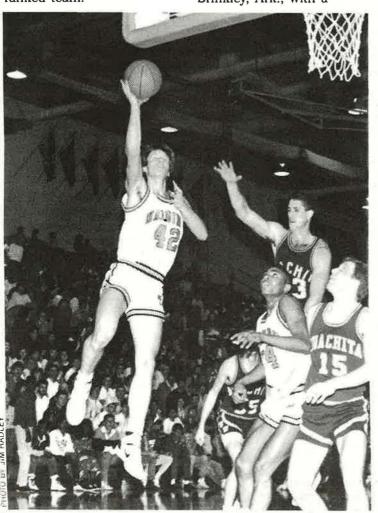

"Brian's one of the most talented freshmen we've had," the coach commented. "You never know what might happen, but barring any problems I feel he could qualify in both the 100 and 200 backstroke events."

Three returnees and one other freshman have also made their mark in the water this season. Senior team captain Gary Ashley of Bonita, Calif., and juniors Rusty McAlister of Elizabethtown, Ky., and Paul Killingsworth of Forrest City, Ark., have performed well, as has freshman Kirk Woltman of Kansas City, Mo. All four earned high places in both the John Brown meet and the Delta State University Invitational meet in Cleveland, Miss.

Boustead added that the Buffaloes could enjoy some depth in the diving events this spring. Strong showings by freshmen Joel Armstrong of Vancouver, Wash., Dave Park of Salt Lake City, Utah, and Gary Haycraft of Forrest City, Ark., have beefed up the diving arsenal. Newcomers expected to lend help in the spring are freshmen Patrick Bingham of Vicksburg, Miss. and Corey Hutson of Jacksonville, Ark. Bingham was a member of the Bison football team last fall.

"We're hoping with some hard work and improvement that we can close the gap between Henderson State (defending AIC champion) and us," Boustead said.

Chad Bradley goes in for a layup in the Bisons' 88-74 loss to Ouachita Tigers in Ganus Athletic Center Jan. 15.

Successful Coach Returns to College Alma Mater

By Greg Taylor
It's the dream of every coach to return to his alma mater and direct the team on which he once played. For Larry Richmond, Harding's
new head football coach, that dream has become a reality.

Richmond, 36, who played for the Bisons from 1970 to 1973, was named by President David B. Burks on Dec. 31 to direct the University's football program. He becomes only the third head football coach at the school since Harding resumed intercollegiate play in 1959.

"It's a dream come true for me," said Richmond, who enjoyed great success as a head coach at the high school level. "I'm excited about the challenges and the opportunities of the job. The prospects of the team and the school make it easy to be very optimistic about the future."

A standout defensive end and linebacker who earned All-Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference honors in 1973, Richmond has directed teams to three consecutive state championships while serving as head coach at Dallas Christian Schools in Mesquite, Texas. The state titles came in the very competitive Texas Association of Private Schools. Over that three-year span, Richmond's teams were 33-3.

"We were very fortunate at Dallas Christian to have some outstanding athletes over that period," he said. "I can't take credit for our success there. The kids were outstanding and knew how to win."

Richmond isn't a stranger to the Searcy area. After attending Harding for five years, he served four seasons as an assistant coach at Harding Academy under present head coach Bill Barden. The Wildcats were 40-3 and won two state titles while Richmond served on the coaching staff.

"This is still like home to me and my family," he said. "We were here for nine years, and we loved this country when we were here." He and his wife, the former Cindy O'Neal of Tyler, Texas, have an eightyear-old son, Rusty.

From Harding Academy, Richmond went to Ouachita Christian Academy in West Monroe, La., to start the football program there. In two seasons, his teams were 8-12. From 1980 to 1983, he was head coach and athletic director at Riverfield Academy in Rayville, La. After starting slowly with a 4-5 record, his teams recorded marks of 6-4 and 9-3, with the last squad reaching the semifinals of the state playoffs.

In 1983 he was named head coach at Dallas Christian, where he compiled a 47-11 record. In all, his teams were 74-35.

His Harding staff will include some familiar faces to Bison fans. Randy Tribble and Ronnie Huckeba, assistant coaches for the past several seasons, will remain with the Bisons. Scott Ragsdale, a volunteer coach in 1986 who devoted his full attention to the classroom last season, will join the staff as well. Richmond will serve as offensive coordinator and quarterback coach and will call the offensive plays. Tribble will serve as defensive coordinator and secondary coach, while Huckeba will coach the defensive front seven and Ragsdale will instruct the offensive backs.

The new head coach hopes to incorporate some of the successful strategies he used at Dallas Christian into the Bisons' game plan. His team led the Dallas metroplex in total offense and scoring, averaging better than 400 yards and 37 points a game last season.

"You can't be successful and not throw the ball," Richmond said. "We have some outstanding specialty players returning who can help us accomplish what we want to do on offense. It Defensively, the Bisons will continue to use the same alignment that made them the top defensive team in the AIC last fall.

will be exciting to watch."

them the top defensive team in the AIC last fall. "We feel that we have a lot of tradition on defense and we hope it will continue to carry over."

As with any change in power, there will be adjustments. But, says Richmond, the players need not worry about changing positions right now.

"I have just one rule at this point — that the men on my team concentrate on being Christian gentlemen," he said.

An emphasis will be placed on recruiting talent in the area surrounding the college, but Richmond plans to use his contacts around the country to find the best prospects. An immediate need for linemen is a high priority on the recruiting list

"What we're looking for is the good student first. With the limitations that we face at this level, you have to seek out the best players. I think our program has the potential to draw not only good football players, but fine students as well."

It will be summer before his family will join him in Searcy, but Richmond won't let that slow him down. Hitting the recruiting trail, getting to know his present players and establishing his place in the Harding family will keep the new head football coach very busy.

Prock Retires as Head Football Coach; To Continue Teaching Physical Education

The year was 1959. A stout, young coach from Oklahoma walked onto the Harding campus with big dreams and great ambitions of seeing a fledgling football program grow into one of the most respected in the region.

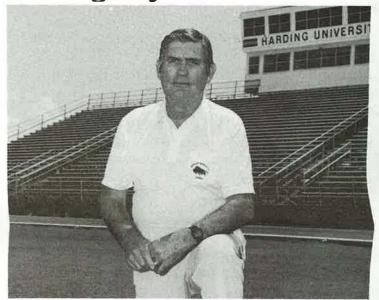

John Prock's name is synonymous with Harding football. From the program's humble beginnings 28 years ago to a fierce competitor in the tough Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference, Prock has been with it every step of the way.

The 58-year-old head foot-ball coach hung up his cleats following his 24th season as head coach of the Bisons. His retirement will only affect his football responsibilities, as he will remain a member of the school's faculty in the department of health, physical education and recreation.

"I've been very fortunate to be able to coach at one school for 28 years. Not many coaches can claim that achievement or have that opportunity. I am extremely pleased that I'll continue to be a part of the Harding family," Prock said.

In his 24 seasons, Prock compiled a 114-123-7 record, including a 6-4 mark in 1987. At the end of the just-completed season, Prock ranked sixth among active NAIA head coaches in number of wins.

Included in his career were two Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference titles, in 1972 and 1975. His 1972 team ended with a 10-1 record and a victory over Langston University in the Cowboy Bowl in Lawton, Coach John Prock, head coach for the Bison football team for 24 years, retired from coaching following a 6-4 season in '87. He will continue to teach in the physical education department.

Okla. The 1975 squad finished with a 7-5 record and competed against Abilene Christian University in the San Jacinto Bowl in Pasadena, Texas.

Prock was voted NAIA District 17 "Coach of the Year" in 1969, 1972 and 1976, and was named NAIA Area V "Coach of the Year" in 1976.

The Hollis, Okla., native, who played guard at Southwestern Oklahoma State before entering the coaching profession, said he regarded his relationships with his players as the most rewarding benefit of his long career.

"When you get to where I am, kids are more important than ball games," Prock said. "As a coach I have to expect that most people evaluate my success by my win-loss record, but I found out long ago that that's not all there is to coaching.

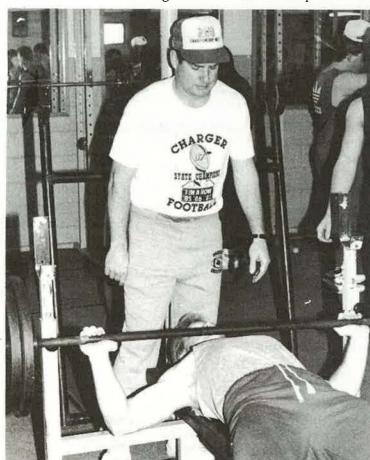

"Relationships with the players and getting them prepared for life is important."

"He helped me grow up in the time I've been here," said offensive guard John Collins, who came to Harding as a walk-on and ended his career by earning All-AIC honors.

Prock will continue to work with students.

"Now my goal is to be the best teacher I can be at Harding University. I expect to have a full load of teaching next year and hope to continue supervising the teachers," he said. Prock has served as a supervisor for students serving as practice teachers for a number of years.

During his tenure as head coach, Prock tutored nine players who earned All-American honors and 86 who received All-Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference and NAIA District 17 recognition. Three of his players were awarded Academic All-American status and 23 were named NAIA All-American Honorable Mention.

Sports Notes

A member of the Bison cross country squad who finished among the top 20 individuals at the Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference championship meet was inadvertently omitted from a story in the December issue of the Bulletin.

Sophomore Marty Koonce of Little Rock, Ark., finished 16th in the meet, completing the five-mile course in 26:32. As a team, the Bisons captured their 17th consecutive AIC title.

Two senior athletes, Jack Moore and Sean Prine, have been honored for their accomplishments in the classroom.

Moore, a wide receiver on the Bison football squad, was named to the second team of the prestigious GTE/College Sports Information Directors of America (CoSIDA) College Division Academic All-America team. A 5-11, 177-pound native of Huntsville, Ala., Moore has compiled a 3.82 grade point average through seven semesters of study while pursuing a chemistry/premedicine degree. He was nominated for the national ballot after being named to the CoSIDA District 6 team. Also named to the District 6 squad was junior linebacker Brooks Davis of Bartlesville, Okla.

A four-year starter, Moore caught 28 passes for 304 yards and two touchdowns in 1987 to increase his career totals to 79 receptions for 988 yards and seven touchdowns. He received his team's Outstanding Receiver Award in 1985 and 1986, and was All-Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference Honorable Mention following his junior and senior seasons.

Prine, a member of the Bison/cross country team, was named to the NAIA Academic All-America squad. A 5-9, 140-pound native of Greenville, Miss., Prine has compiled a 3.79 grade point average with dual majors in biology and chemistry.

One of only two seniors on the Bison team, Prine placed 19th in the Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference championship meet, and went on to finish 184th at the NAIA National Championship in Kenosha, Wis.

Fighting wintry conditions, the Bison and Lady Bison cross country teams competed in the NAIA National Championship meet Nov. 21 in Kenosha, Wis.

The Bisons finished 21st in the field, with senior Jon Partlow pacing the effort. Partlow was 42nd in the large individual field, running the eight-kilometer race in 25:49

"Jon probably ran the best race of his career," Coach Ted Lloyd said. "We had too much between our third and fourth place runners. If everyone had run his race like Jon, we would have improved our team place as much as 10 spots."

Rich Lockhart, who captured individual honors at the Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference meet, was 59th in the individual competition. Other Bisons and their finishes included Jon Murray, 85th; Mark LaValley, 155th; Kenny Edwards, 176th; Marty Koonce, 183rd, and Sean Prine, 184th.

In the women's competition, the Lady Bisons also struggled in the cold air to place 19th as a team. Sophomore Melynda Davis paced the Lady Bisons with a 50th place finish, running the five-kilometer course in 18:49.

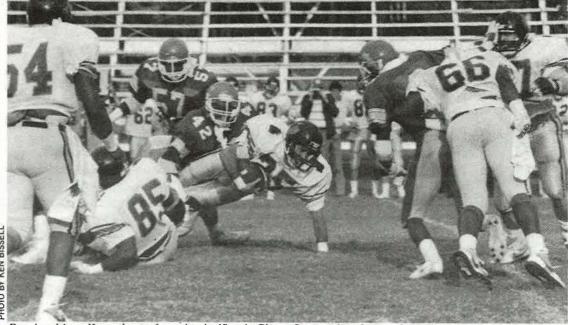

Other Lady Bisons were Tracy Parks, 94th; Cheryl Bednosky, 109th; Beverly Gardner, 117th; Sherry Pollard, 144th; Teresa Durham, 163rd, and Jodie Murray, 164th.

Harding's men accumulated 517 points. Adams State of Colorado captured the top three individual places to win the men's team competition. The Lady Bisons totaled 508 points, with Simon Frazier, British Columbia, winning the women's team competition.

Faculty Athletic Representative Dr. Joseph E. Pryor has been elected president of the Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference for the 1987-88 year.

Pryor, who serves the school as professor of physical science, has served as faculty representative for the school since it resumed intercollegiate athletics in 1958. This is his third term as AIC President, having served in the capacity in 1967-68 and 1977-78.

The AIC Faculty Representative Committee is the governing board of the conference. Each member institution is represented on the committee.

Football Team Completes 1987 Season With Most Successful Record in 10 Years

Wrapping up its most successful season in 10 years, the Bison football team ended its campaign with a respectable 6-4 record and a top 25 ranking in the final National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics (NAIA) Division I poll.

The Bisons, picked to finish last in the seven-team Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference in a pre-season poll of coaches and media, barely missed out in a berth in the NAIA playoffs when they lost an emotional 21-3 heartbreaker to Central Arkansas in the final week of the season. UCA entered the game ranked second in the country while the Bisons were ranked 17th at the time.

In the final poll taken after the regular season concluded, Harding was ranked 22nd and was one of four AIC teams among the top to say the least," said former head coach John Prock, who retired at the end of the season after 24 years as the Bison head mentor. "We started off the year with the top defense in the conference and no one knocked us from that position. Our offense was consistently one of the best in the conference, too. With a few breaks here and there, we could have easily gone undefeated.

"It was an exciting year,

On paper, the Bisons dropped four games, but the scoreboard indicated otherwise. A 27-0 season-opening win over Evangel College was forfeited after Harding officials discovered an ineligible player was used. Counting the Evangel victory, the Bisons' seven wins were the most since the 1975 team went 7-5.

"We never let the forfeit bother us," Prock said. "We knew we had won the game. It probably hurt our playoff chances, but the players knew that we beat them."

At the conclusion of the season, six Bisons were named to the All-AIC team, with two of the six receiving All-American Honorable Mention recognition.

Noseguard Kenneth Forte of Little Rock, Ark.; free safety Mickey Adkison of Tulsa, Okla.: and wide receiver Mike Alexander of Duncan, Okla., were named to the conference's first team. Earning second team status were offensive guard John Collins of Uniontown, Ohio; defensive end Steve Dudley of St. Petersburg, Fla.; and linebacker Brooks Davis of Bartlesville, Okla. All are seniors except Alexander, who is a sophomore, and Davis, a junior.

Forte and Adkison were named honorable mention in All-American balloting. They were among 11 AIC players recognized by the NAIA All-American committee.
