Enrollment Skyrockets to All-Time High

Enrollment skyrocketed to an all-time high this fall as 3,204 students registered from 48 states and 25 foreign countries. The previous record was 3,084 in the fall of 1980.

The record total represents a 13.4 percent increase over last year's count of 2,823, "one of the greatest percentages of increase of any mid-sized private university in America," said Dr. Jim Carr, vice president for educational services.

Several factors contributed to the growth, according to Jim White, director of admissions. "Our staff worked extra hard," he said. "We spent a lot of time on the phone, and we were persistent. Everyone on the admissions staff kept in close contact with prospective students.

"We also held receptions in various states for alumni, friends, parents and prospective students. We have a full slate scheduled throughout this year in areas where alumni are located." The first was held prior to the Bison football game at Lane College in Jackson, Tenn., Sept. 3.

Another factor in the large enrollment was the increase in scholarship programs for the Jacqueline Mendez, a junior from Panama City, Panama, moves into the newly-renovated Pattie Cobb.

"academically better prepared student," White said.

"There is always a percentage of prospective students who complete admissions requirements, but do not actually enroll," White said, "but even that statistic decreased this fall by 11.6 percent."

"Harding is one of few high demand institutions in the state," Carr said. As a result, the university "will become increasingly more selective for the 1989-90 academic year," he added.

Two additional factors contribute to the need for selectivity. With a smaller-than-average senior class this year, fewer positions will be available for freshmen next fall. Also, the university is slightly over capacity in housing accommodations for students.

White encouraged prospective students to make application early. "We have already received 200 applications for the fall of '89," he said. "We will work particularly on increasing the number of men since we will have a new men's residence hall completed by then," he added.

Included in the record total of students enrolled is also a record number in the freshman class. Of the 3,204 new students at Harding, 1,086 are freshmen and 236 transferred to Harding from other colleges and universities.

In summarizing the aura of excitement on campus, Carr praised the entire university staff for working toward recruiting and retaining students. "Everyone involved with Harding is a recruiter. Harding is its people, and Harding sells itself with a quality academic program, friendly students and staff, and an emphasis on spiritual development."

Freedoms Foundation of Valley Forge, Penn., has recognized two Harding programs with George Washington Honor Medals. The American Studies Program was selected for excellence in the category of Programs and Activities, and the Walton Program in the category of Economic Education.

The American Studies Program promotes an understanding of the concepts which formulate the foundation of American society — freedom, liberty, democracy and family. Two dimensions of the program have been developed to give students a deeper commitment to these words, ideas and values.

The first dimension of the program takes students to locations where they can witness the ongoing processes of life in America and to places important to the nation's history. Last year's tours were to the Wal-Mart headquarters in Bentonville, Ark., and to Washington, D.C. Business leaders, government officials and educators met with the students to answer questions and explain the organization of the institutions which they represent.

The American Studies Lecture Series is the second dimension of the program. This series brings to the campus leaders who present ideas, opinions and viewpoints which are basic to American citizenship. This unique approach has brought speakers of national and international prominence to share their experiences and perspectives with students.

During 1987-88, speakers were Paul Faulkner, Madsen Pirie, Zig Ziglar, Thomas

Sowell, Ken Blanchard and John Naisbitt. Speakers from previous years have included President Gerald Ford, Milton Friedman, Henry Kissinger, Tom Peters, Jeane Kirkpatrick, J. Peter Grace, Gifford Pinchot and Gene Stallings.

The Walton Program is a scholarship program for Central American students, established from a $1.2 million donation to three universities in Arkansas in 1985 by Sam and Helen Walton. The purpose of this program is to recruit students from Central America, allow them to learn about freedom and democracy and to return to apply these principles in their home countries.

In the program, students may select any field of study, but they are all given special opportunities to experience and understand American business and free enterprise. Special courses are designed to meet these objectives, and trips are made to various business and historical sights.

The award-winning program for 1987-88, entitled, "Scholarly Struggle Against Communism," involved the 65 students who are enrolled from seven Central American countries.

The Freedoms Foundation is a nationally acclaimed organization which promotes free enterprise education in the United States. The 1988 National Awards Jury involved 20 judges who evaluated 2,000 entries. Harding's programs were two of 370 selected for awards.

From the President

David Burks

Even after a month, excitement is still in the air as this new year has begun in full force. Our enrollment is at an all-time record high 3,204 in Searcy and 175 in Memphis. This represents an overall increase of 12 percent over last year.

Pattie Cobb Hall has been renovated and is a beautiful residence hall for women. The new dining hall is complete, and we can serve all students in one location once again. What a blessing it is!

Student Impact was a great success again this year in helping students begin on a positive note. The attitude on the part of students is especially good this fall. They are talented, too, with their average ACT score 1.3 points higher this year.

We are especially excited about our spiritual opportunities. About 300 students, here and in Memphis, are majoring in Bible. I believe they are really interested in sharpening their ministry skills as they learn how to serve others.

With all of these blessings comes the challenge of funding a distinctively Christian educational experience for these students. Even after our significant productivity studies last year and related savings, we will need $3 million in unrestricted cash gifts this year to balance our general fund budget. We will need additional gift income to pay for new buildings and the renovation of existing buildings. Students pay about 65 percent of the general fund revenues, but the remaining 35 percent must come from gifts or endowment income. Our increase in tuition and fees this year was the lowest of any of the Christian colleges.

Please know that we very much appreciate your generosity in supporting Harding in the past. We need your help now more than ever to balance the budget. Gift income was down significantly last year, and it must be increased in a substantial way this year to allow us the funds needed to work with these bright and talented young people. Your prayers and gifts are needed. I know that God will bless you for investing in Christian education.

Beckett Retires after 30 Years

by Alice Ann Kellar

Virgil Beckett quietly left his office August 31 and, without fanfare, closed his 30-year association with the registration and academic records area of Harding. His departure was typical of his manner, but his manner was not indicative of his contribution to his job.

Beckett served as Registrar from 1960 to 1987, spanning an era from grades being hand-recorded individually to fully computerized record keeping that included methods and procedures ahead of the times.

Beckett was active in the Arkansas Association of Collegiate Registrars as well as the American Association of Registrars and Admissions Officers. His expertise was recognized among his peers, also, and he was often contacted by them for advice regarding registration procedures.

He and his wife, Wainice, have included extensive travel in their plans, and in early September they left for an excursion "to the Northeast" in their motor home. "We'll be back just whenever we decide we want to," he said, obviously anticipating great enjoyment of his new schedule.

Large Number Hired to Supplement Faculty; Adjunct and Full-Time Positions Filled

The expanded faculty for 1988-89 includes a number of adjunct positions to assist with classes which have been added to the schedule to accommodate a record enrollment. Eight additional full-time teachers have joined the faculty and two others have returned from graduate schools.

In the College of Arts and Sciences are Retta Dean, M.S., adjunct instructor in biology; W. D. White, M.D., adjunct professor of voice; Earl Mansur, B.S., adjunct instructor in radio and TV; Carolyn Priest, B.A., adjunct instructor in reading; Beth Van Rheenen, B.A., adjunct instructor of English; Joyce O'Neal, B.A., adjunct instructor in psychology; Larry Richmond, M.Ed., assistant professor of health, physical education and recreation; Ron Huckeba, M.Ed., assistant professor of health, physical education and recreation and assistant football coach; and James Frank, B.A., associate instructor of health, physical education and recreation and assistant football coach.

Monte Cox, B.A., was added to the College of Bible and Religion as the visiting professor of missions and Lawrence Barr, B.A., will serve as missionary in residence.

In the School of Business, additions include Randy McLeod, J.D., director of the Center for Professional Sales and assistant professor of business; Scott Stovall, M.B.A., assistant professor of accounting; Jim House, B.A., visiting professor of sales; and Jimmy Cone, M.B.A., adjunct professor of business.

School of Education additions are Marilee Coker, M.Ed., adjunct professor of education, and Jan Morgan, M.Ed., instructor of reading.

Dorothea McDowell, M.S., has been added to the School of Nursing as an instructor in nursing.

Both returning faculty members are in the College of Arts and Sciences. They are Randy Maddox, who completed the Ph.D. at the University of Mississippi and is an assistant professor of math, and Tim Baird, who completed the Ph.D. at the University of Missouri at Rolla and is an assistant professor of computer science.

Petit Jean Takes Harding to Hall of Fame; Student Editors Appointed for 1988-89

Harding University is in the Hall of Fame — the Associated Collegiate Press Hall of Fame in Minneapolis, Minn.

Only two colleges and universities in the nation have been inducted into the elite award category. To be eligible, the institution must have had 10 consecutive All-American yearbooks. Harding's Petit Jean was awarded its 28th consecutive All-American rating in the fall of 1987. The other member university is Ball State in Muncie, Ind.

The faculty sponsor for the 1987 Petit Jean was Dr. Joseph E. Pryor, who advised the yearbook staff for more than 40 years.

Jack Shock, an assistant professor of communication who was faculty sponsor for the 1988 Petit Jean, has recently been named by President David Burks as Director of Student Publications. In this role, he is serving as adviser for both the Petit Jean and the Bison student newspaper.

A 1980 graduate of Harding, Shock completed the M.A. degree at the University of Arkansas at Little Rock in 1985. His previous work experience includes an internship with the Associated Collegiate Press in the yearbook critique service. He conducts regular student publications workshops for the University of Alabama, the Carolina Journalism Institute, the University of Missouri and the University of Minnesota.

"We want our students to channel their abilities into either publication or both of them," Shock said. "Mass communication students especially need print media experience because they can enter careers at higher than entry level if they have taken advantage of these opportunities," he added.

Serving as editors of the two student publications are Sharon Bowles of Abilene, Texas, and Greg Taylor of Bartlesville, Okla. The 1989 Petit Jean editor, Sharon is a junior journalism major and a member of Shantih social club. The Bison editor, Greg is a senior journalism major in Chi Sigma Alpha social club.

Assistant editors of the publications are Jennifer Terry, a junior public relations major from Apple Valley, Minn., Petit Jean; and Susan Arnette, a senior public relations major from Salinas, Calif., Bison.

Visiting Missionary Relates Ideas About Work in Foreign Countries

by Angie Mote

What would motivate a 22-year-old man to take his wife, his four-month-old daughter and all his material possessions and leave behind friends and relatives to head for grass huts in the midst of the tropical jungles of Africa? For Monte Cox, a missionary from Eldoret, Kenya, it was inspiration. Cox is the visiting missionary for 1988-89 at Harding.

Cox attended Harding in 1977, majoring in chemistry to prepare for medical school. He admitted that he had never had much interest in mission work. "I thought that missionaries were out of touch," he said. But a visiting lecturer who spoke on lordship and discipleship challenged and inspired his interest in overseas missions.

Cox spent the summer of 1979 working with Wayne Reed, a missionary in Ireland whose example caused him to re-think his ideas about missionaries. He changed his major to Bible and, following graduation in 1981, he and his wife, Beth, joined forces with three other couples who were making plans to begin mission work in Kenya. They set out for their destination in the summer of 1982.

"I went to Kenya thinking it was a backward wilderness of African natives. The adjustment period was very painful and extremely difficult. My daughter, Rachel, got sick on the plane going over. The living situation was difficult, with all four couples living together in the same house for the first six months, and it was hard.

"As we became more familiar with the language and customs, we gradually adjusted to our new environment. I came to believe that happiness in a foreign country is in direct proportion to involvement with the people. If I wasn't involved, I felt like an outsider and wanted to come home," Cox said.

He acknowledged that he had not chosen to live in Kenya because "it was a nice place to raise kids. I was not fleeing America, and I probably would not have gone had it not been for the importance of my work.

"It has been a neat experience for my children, although they don't know it yet. They are very happy. Rachel, now six, has already seen hundreds of baptisms and new churches begun, more than many elderly people have seen," he added.

The missionaries in Kenya have experienced some persecution. "I had some personal threats, and there has been governmental pressure on missionaries lately," he stated. The church has been declared officially illegal in Kenya.

In the six years that Cox and the mission team have been in Eldoret, Kenya, they have reaped a great harvest. "The church has grown from zero members to over 1,000 with 35 churches. Other mission efforts have been very jealous of our progress," he added.

In the vast land of Kenya, what do Cox and his colleagues hope to accomplish? "Our ultimate goal is to leave behind a movement that will continue to function without us. We are just catalysts to get the ball rolling, and then they will roll on their own momentum. Our more specific goal is to establish 100 churches that will function independently of us and will include one percent of the population in 10 years," Cox stated.

"Monte and Beth Cox will be in Searcy throughout the year to encourage missionary involvement in the student body at Harding. He is teaching three classes this fall and is helping with a mission outreach group on Monday nights. On Thursday nights, he hosts an informal meeting of about 50 persons concerning African missions.

In addition to Rachel, their children are Joel, 3, and Sarah, 1. When they return to Kenya next summer, they plan to remain at least three more years. "I would like to be back in the United States by the time the kids are junior high school age," he said.

Reflecting back pensively over the six years in Kenya, Cox recalled the close friendships they have formed with the people.

One couple in particular brought back fond memories. "Jackson (the first Christian there) and I have been through thick and thin together. His wife, Euniece, died last year during childbirth. I was with her when she died. I had to tell Jackson, and then I had to tell his six kids. They are the closest African friends that Beth and I have.

"We would spend nights together playing Aggravation. I remember sitting in Jackson's grass hut with mud floors, no electricity, one dim kerosene lamp in the center of the room, laughing and telling jokes, then studying and praying with a group of men. Then when everyone would go home, Jackson and I sometimes talked until 2 or 3 in the morning.

As encouragement and advice to those thinking about entering the mission field, Cox said, "Be sure of your motives. Also be thoughtful of the opportunities. We need to concentrate on receptive places where we can effectively reap a harvest."

"Barriers can be overcome," Cox summarized. "That is mission work to me — sleeping in their huts, eating their food and speaking their language."

As the year progresses, those who are around Monte Cox will gain deeper insights into the life and teachings of Christ through the example and experience of a dedicated young man who was inspired by a missionary to change his life's work. Who knows? That same inspiration may take seed in the heart of one or more students sitting at Cox's feet in Bible classes this year.

Harding Facts...

Exxon Foundation Grant

Harding has received a grant of $8,600 from the Exxon Foundation for study of the impact of recent legislation requiring remediation in mathematics for many entering college freshmen. Dr. Steve Smith, department chairman, said the grant will be administered by Dr. Travis Thompson, associate professor of mathematics and computer science.

The legislation, passed recently as "Act 1052 — The Impact on Higher Education in Arkansas," required college algebra or its equivalent for all degree programs requiring mathematics. The grant became effective in July and will continue through June of 1989.

Special Graduation

Graduation days are always special, but for Dennis and Kathy Davenport, the 1988 summer commencement was doubly special. Both Dennis and Kathy received master's degrees — he at Harding and she at the University of Central Arkansas in Conway.

Kathy completed requirements toward the master of science in nursing in January and joined the Harding School of Nursing faculty. She has also spent some time performing with her three sisters, doing country music concerts as "The Steffin Sisters."

Dennis completed requirements for the Master of Education with an emphasis on Health, Physical Education and Recreation. He is a member of the basketball coaching staff.

Senior Internship

Telia Langston, a senior food merchandising major, spent six weeks this summer in an internship with Southern Living magazine in her hometown of Birmingham, Ala. She is the first Harding student to have received such an assignment with the magazine.

Telia was assigned to the test foods kitchen, which, according to Jeanetta Keller of the magazine's public relations office, was truly a "hands on" job and not one of mere observation.

The intern described the experience as "absolutely wonderful." From the 2,000 recipes received on an average each month, the food editors identified those they wished to be tested. "We cooked all morning," Telia said, "then during the afternoon, the products were tested and rated, and finally the editors selected the ones to be published."

A member of Tri Kappa women's club, Telia is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Buddy Langston of Birmingham. She will graduate in December.

Thompson Selected for Merit Certificate

Linda Thompson, director of the learning assistance center, has been selected to receive a Certificate of Merit from the National Recognition Program for Academic Advising. She is the current chairperson for the group's regional meeting.

Nominees for the award were evaluated on the evidence of effective advising qualities and practices which distinguished them as outstanding academic advisors. Also a developmental education specialist, she completed training at the Kellogg Institute at Appalachian State University in Boone, N.C. She joined the faculty in 1986.

Record Number Accepted

A record 18 alumni were admitted to medical schools for the fall of 1988 out of a total of 25 admitted to professional schools in all areas of health science. This acceptance rate continues the tradition established by Harding: more than 75 percent of its students who apply to medical and professional schools gain admission. The national rate is 57 percent.

Accepted into medical schools were David Adcox, Scott Ballinger, Mark Bettich, Eric Bowen, Kyle Colvett, Scott Corbin, Timothy Costello, Cara Duvall, William Helms, Dennis C. Kelly, Jr., Lisa Neal, Rebecca Plumlee, Kelly Dawn Rogers, Eddie Shields, Jill Stewart, David Stills, Mike Walton and Karen Young.

Dental school enrollments include Evie Green, Joey Adkins, Michael Savage and Sean Prine.

Others were Tom Hobbs, optometry; Janet Taylor and Alan Morphis, pharmacy; and David Foster, veterinary medicine.

University Program in Theater Involves Large Number of Students

Theater is a program which involves a large number of students, though few participate in the degree program. For most students, it is considered an extracurricular activity.

With only 18 students majoring or minoring in theater or theater management, it would seem that little attention would be given to dramatic productions on campus. Such is definitely not the case.

Auditions for a 10-member children's theater group attracted 60 students during the first two weeks of school. The annual Homecoming musical, with a cast of 60 including the chorus, drew 95 for tryouts. Technicals and design for the annual Spring Sing and Homecoming productions require 25 to 30 people.

Then there's a late winter or early spring production, plus a children's theater or other drama production in late spring, some one-act plays directed by students in Play Production class and the community-oriented Searcy Summer Dinner Theater.

Dr. Morris Ellis, associate professor of communication, is director of theater. He holds the Ph.D. in design and acting/directing from Texas Tech University. A 1967 Harding graduate, he was quite active in drama productions during his college days. Robin Miller, who is on leave of absence to complete the Master of Fine Arts at Memphis State University, will teach theater classes and direct the Homecoming musical when he returns in the fall of 1990.

Meanwhile, Ellis is getting the help of Andy Kronenwetter, a graduate assistant in speech education who is directing the new improvisational children's theater group called Piped Pipers. A 10-member touring group, the Pied Pipers will perform primarily in schools and churches.

Kronenwetter gained experience with Piped Pipers while at Ohio Valley College in Parkersburg, W. Va. The troupe "sings songs, tells stories and involves children in the world of make-believe," as Ellis described it. Members use their physical abilities to create scenery, atmosphere and sound effects. There are no props, "just their bodies and brightly-colored costumes," he said.

This is Harding's first formal experience with Pied Pipers. Other Christian colleges which have a troupe include Freed-Hardeman, Faulkner and Abilene Christian.

The major community outreach of Harding's theater program is Searcy Summer Dinner Theater. This program completed its sixth season last summer with three productions — "Murder or Marriage," "Snoopy" and "The Curious Savage."

"We have tried to make the dinner theater a community-thrust program to help draw the campus and community together," Ellis said. Auditions are open to the general public and both students and local citizens participate.

Each production is presented three times — on Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings — with a 140-seat capacity in Hammon Student Center. With the expansion of the American Heritage cafeteria to include private areas at the back, Ellis hopes to expand capacity to 200 people each night for next summer. Other changes are being considered since the program is "growing each summer," Ellis said.

Two campus organizations serve the needs of drama students. Campus Players is the oldest student organization, having been established by Mrs. Woodson Harding Armstrong during Harding's early years. A student who participates in any aspect of theater productions becomes eligible for membership by earning the necessary points. Alpha Psi Omega, a national honor drama fraternity, has membership by invitation.

Students who choose to major in theater may select the broad area major or theater management. Since this area is "where the jobs are," Ellis is encouraging students to look at management. The major requires courses from numerous disciplines — art, accounting, personnel management, marketing, communication, English and drama.

Hurst Climbs to High-Market In Television News Broadcast

by Kay Gowen

By anyone's standards, Greg Hurst is a success story — a "climb to the top of the ladder overnight" kind of success.

Greg apparently did not lie around the house in Dallas, Texas, to be a television news anchor when he grew up. In fact, he was in the fall of 1977 without the slightest idea of what major to pursue. He registered with the masses — as an undecided.

For two years, he concentrated on general education requirements and evaluated a variety of interests. When he settled on broadcast journalism, he said, "I knew I would enjoy it and that I could devote the next two years entirely to my major."

Following graduation, Greg became the weekend news anchor for the ABC affiliate in Little Rock, Ark. His work there involved a variety of activities — scanning the state and national wire services, researching stories, editing other reporters' copy, writing lead-ins to the stories, and reporting during the late afternoon. He did everything from shooting videotape to helping with production and writing. I just don't think my career could have progressed so fast.

Greg received the Governor's Award for Excellence in Broadcast Journalism for a story about cancer. However, he believes his five-part series on the environment was his best story. "I was most proud of that series and all the work that went into it."

In January, 1987, having already turned down jobs with CBS, "Tonight," CNN and other major television markets, Greg moved to San Diego, Calif. He now co-anchors the weeknight 6:30 edition of KFMB-TV's News Eight, the broadcast network's highest ranked 25th in the nation.

Greg looks back to Harding as the place where his career began. The hands-on training and experience he received are what he values most. "You don't find too many colleges the size of Harding University and television stations run by students. In my field, hands-on experience really what counts." He also remembers his senior year internship at a CBS affiliate in Little Rock as being very helpful.

Greg has appreciated another aspect of Harding: "My liberal arts background has come in handy. Being familiar with different disciplines really helps me relate to the wide variety of assignments I have to cover. I've interviewed everyone from farmers to politicians, felons to homemakers. Harding gave me a complete, well-rounded education that I need to do my job."

Last year, Greg also "anchored" the Harding video that the university is producing to provide general information and assist students in fund raising.

Greg Hurst — a success story by anyone's definition.

"The Curious Savage" is staged in Hammon Student Center as one of three presentations of the 1988 Searcy Summer Dinner Theater.

Mass Communication Majors Soar to Top In Growth Category During Last Three Years

Communication is the fastest growing discipline at Harding, according to Dr. Dean Priest, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences. The number of declared majors went from 154 in 1985 to 207 last fall.

Parallel with this growth has been the need to upgrade facilities. The university has just completed renovation of the west side of the first floor of the Ganus building which now houses the computer graphics lab, a new darkroom and an editing/control room for video production. "These additions will supplement the facilities in use since 1974 in the TV studio in the Bible building," said Dr. John Ryan, chairman of the department.

Harding has four majors: advertising, print journalism, public relations and radio/TV. Every student majoring in a mass communication area is required to take a core of courses common to all areas. Other courses focus on a specific major.

Radio/TV majors complete a practicum in each area of their major. Campus station TV19 and KHCA radio provide opportunities for apprentice experience in preparation for the job market.

TV19 is aired locally a minimum of two hours each weeknight during the school year after working assignments have been completed in the fall. Students audition for eight director positions and four anchors, with scholarships ranging from $300 to $700 per semester.

KHCA, a carrier current station, airs from 6:30 to 8:45 a.m. and from 4 p.m. to midnight. Its news information and recorded music are available anywhere on campus at 560 on the radio dial. Students fill seven director positions, with accompanying scholarships.

Both the radio and TV programs are fully produced by students, with supervision and instruction from Mike James, assistant professor of communication. Louis Butterfield, an assistant professor of communication on leave for doctoral study, will serve as co-director of TV19 and advisor for KHCA when he returns in the fall.

Students experience all aspects of television production as part of the TV19 reporting and technical crews, aired from campus on weeknights during the school year.

The computer graphics lab enhances the training of students majoring in advertising, public relations and print journalism. The 20 Macintosh Plus personal computers allow students to do page makeup, design and layout for advertising typography and writing/editing for journalism classes. A laser printer produces camera-ready type and art, and light tables are available for pasteup work. Future plans include full production of the Bison and Petit Jean typography, according to Jack Shock, instructor in communication and director of student publications.

Public relations majors take a cross-section of courses from all mass communication areas. Advertising includes a strong emphasis on art and management. Radio/TV and journalism focus within their own curriculums.

Training for Communication Disorders Careers Ranked Among the Best at Undergraduate Level

Harding's undergraduate program in speech language pathology is considered by many graduate schools to be "one of the best in the nation," according to Dr. Dan Tullos, associate professor of communication.

"This reputation is based on the quality of training our students take into graduate programs in major educational institutions throughout the United States," Tullos said. Recent graduates have gone into master's programs at Memphis State University, Baylor, the University of Mississippi, Vanderbilt, Penn State, Michigan State University and the University of Arkansas Medical Sciences.

The communication disorders program exists to provide an educational program for students in speech language pathology, audiology and deaf education. An outgrowth of this basic purpose is to provide clinical services in speech pathology and audiology to university students and to the community at large.

Two tracks are available to students in the program. The educational track, selected by a large percentage of majors, leads to teacher certification.

Although students in this track generally go on to graduate schools, some elect careers in public and private education.

The graduate preparatory track, which attracts a smaller number of majors, leads directly into master's programs and ultimately into careers in speech and educational clinics. A minor in psychology or a related field is required.

The speech and hearing clinic at Harding is directed by Tullos, who completed a doctorate in communication disorders at Pennsylvania State University last December. He is assisted by Rebecca Weaver, an assistant professor of communication. Both are certified speech/language pathologists.

Under their leadership, students gain practical training and experience through clinical services and instruction for the 50 clients who are enrolled in the program. Each student in the program takes 200 hours of supervised clinical instruction. Clients from the community range from six months to 45 years of age.

Of the 32 students who have declared majors in communication disorders, 19 are involved in clinical instruction. The others must complete the introductory course in speech-language pathology before they can participate in the clinical service.

This fall, the speech language program added a new dimension. With the growing number of international students on campus, a non-credit course is being offered in English diction. "We noticed in our basic speech classes, which every student is required to take, that the foreign students were having difficulty with the pronunciation of many English words," Weaver said, "so we decided to offer this class to help them to be better prepared." About 25 students are expected in the first class.

Mittie Parks, a senior communication disorders major from Scranton, Ark., works with Bonnie Garner of Searcy during her supervised clinical instruction for the degree program.

Cooper and Shewmaker To Speak in Lecture Series

The American Studies Lecture Series for fall will feature a fitness expert and a business executive in November. Dr. Kenneth Cooper, leader of the international physical fitness movement, will speak Nov. 7, and Jack Shewmaker, former president and chief operating officer of Wal-Mart, Inc., will speak Nov. 29.

Cooper has led the pursuit for good health through his writing and research, which has included the publication of eight books during the last 20 years. He founded The Aerobics Center in Dallas, Texas, in 1970 when he left the United States Air Force.

During his 13 years in the military service, Dr. Cooper, a flight surgeon, developed the Aerobics Point System which is currently being utilized by the United States Air Force, Army, Navy, Secret Service, several foreign military organizations, many U.S. corporations and more than 500 universities and public schools.

In 1982, The London Times named Dr. Cooper, among 74 people in the world, as "The Greatest" of the last 20 years and noted, "The drop in deaths from heart disease in America by 14 percent in the 1970's is commonly credited to Dr. Cooper, as is the jogging boom which put more than 25 million Americans on the roads by the end of the decade."

Cooper's eight books, six of which deal specifically with aerobics, have sold more than 17 million copies in 39 languages and Braille.

Shewmaker, who announced his semi-retirement from Wal-Mart in February, serves the company as a consultant and member of the Board of Directors.

His retailing career with

Wal-Mart began in 1970 when he became district manager in charge of new store openings. He served as vice president of security; vice president of store operations; executive vice president of store operations, personnel and merchandise; president and chief operating officer; and vice chairman and chief financial officer during the ensuing 18 years.

Prior to joining Wal-Mart, he performed assignments as store manager, district manager and corporate training director for Coast to Coast Stores in Minneapolis, Minn., and Kroger Family Center, Division of Kroger Stores, in Cincinnati, Ohio.

The Buffalo, Mo., native is a member of the Board of Directors for Lowe's Company and for Students in Free Enterprise, Inc. He is a member of the Board of Trustees at Drury College in Springfield, Mo., and of the National Advisory Board for Georgia Institute of Technology in Atlanta, Ga.

Shewmaker is the owner/operator of Jac's Ranch, one of northwest Arkansas' largest cattle operations dealing in registered Angus and Polled Hereford breeding stock. His ranch has produced several champions and has gained considerable recognition since its inception in 1983.

In 1981, Shewmaker was named the Discount Retailer of the Year. In 1985, Mass Market Retailer magazine honored him as Retailer of the Year. He was also awarded an Honorary Doctorate degree by Southwest Baptist University in 1985.

Cooper's lecture will be Monday, Nov. 7, at 7:30 p.m. Shewmaker will speak in the series at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday, Nov. 29. Both addresses will be in Benson Auditorium.

Christian Stewardship And Estate Planning

by William Tucker, attorney
Director of Deferred Giving

PROBATE ASSETS V. NON-PROBATE ASSETS

Assets which pass to a beneficiary through a will are probate assets. Assets which pass to another without regard to a will are non-probate assets. The following example demonstrates that probate and non-probate assets must be thoughtfully coordinated in order to accomplish the testator's goals.

Several weeks ago, at the request of a Christian widow, I was privileged to review her last will and testament. Her will contained a clear expression of her testamentary intent. First, she gave all of her tangible personal property (i.e., furniture, clothing, automobile and articles of sentimental value) to her children in approximately equal shares. Second, she left a specific amount of money to each of her three children. Third, she bequeathed the remainder of her estate to Harding University. After reviewing her will, which had been written by her attorney several years ago, we determined that it still accurately expressed her intent.

Satisfied with her will, I then asked if I could review the assets which made up her estate. I learned that she had three primary types of assets: (1) real estate, (2) tangible personal property and (3) certificates of deposit and money market accounts.

Her real estate was composed of a residential lot and house. This home was originally purchased jointly with her husband about 40 years ago. Her husband died 10 years ago and the title to the property is now in her name alone.

Her tangible personal property was made up of household furniture and appliances, jewelry and clothing, an automobile, an antique tractor, a riding lawn mower and several other farm implements which she had kept after her husband's death.

Her certificates of deposits and money market accounts were all deposited in her hometown savings and loan association. Before her husband's death, these accounts were held in their joint names. Since his death, the accounts have been held in her name alone.

About one year ago, she received a phone call from her savings and loan bank advising her that the limits of her deposit insurance was $100,000. Since her accounts were substantially greater than $100,000, the bank recommended that she add her children's names to the accounts and thereby protect her bank deposits in excess of $100,000 against the "remote possibility of bank failure." She certainly wanted the additional protection, so she took their advice and added her children's names to all of her accounts, thus creating joint ownership with rights of survivorship.

The advice of the savings and loan bank was made in good faith, but the advice destroyed the plan for the distribution of assets set out in her will. By creating the joint accounts, the bank deposits became "non-probate" assets. Joint accounts pass directly to the survivor without any consideration of the terms of the last will and testament of the deceased. When this was explained to her, she declared that it was not her desire for her children to receive these accounts, but it was her desire for the accounts to pass according to the estate plan set out in her last will and testament.

The ownership of each asset must be carefully considered and coordinated with the last will and testament in order to carry out the testator's wishes. A carefully drawn last will and testament may be nullified unless the ownership of each asset is carefully coordinated with the estate plan.

YEAR-END GIVING

It is hard to believe, but it is true, 1988 will be history in about two and one-half months. The latter months of each year are a popular time for making gifts. The baseline reason for giving to Harding is to support the cause for which she stands. If you itemize deductions, a secondary reason for giving to Harding is tax benefits. The charitable contribution deduction is still one of the attractive benefits of charitable contributions.

May of the benefits and deductions that were available before tax reform are now history. After tax reform, charitable giving remains one of the most easily controlled ways for givers to reduce taxable income. To improve your tax picture for 1988 and strengthen this ministry, please consider a year-end gift to Harding.

Your charitable gifts can take many forms such as: cash, appreciated securities and real estate.

The most common and most convenient form of gift is cash. A record of cash gifts can be easily maintained through cancelled checks and receipts.

Stocks, mutual funds and bonds often make excellent gifts. Generally, it is advisable to give an asset that has increased in value rather than sell the asset, pay the capital gains tax and give the net proceeds. By giving rather than selling the appreciated asset, the donor avoids the capital gains tax. In addition, a charitable income tax deduction is allowed for the full value of the asset, not for its original cost.

Perhaps you would like to make a gift but do not wish to give up the income which the asset is producing. It is possible to give the asset and receive an income through a charitable gift annuity or charitable remainder trust. These life income plans can actually increase your income, decrease your income tax and decrease or eliminate your estate tax.

In order to reduce your 1988 income taxes, charitable gifts must be made on or before December 31, 1988.

Estate planning and contributions involve serious stewardship considerations. It is important to select the gift opportunity that best suits your circumstances. If we can assist you with those considerations, please call us toll free at 1-800-632-4751, or 1-800-643-3792 if you live outside of Arkansas. If you wish to make a gift without consultation, please mail it to Harding University, Box 941, Searcy, Ark. 72143.

Men's Basketball Outlook for 87-88 Appears 'Cautiously Optimistic'

by Ken Bissell

Preseason polls, as coaches well know, are as legitimate as readings from crystal balls. Bison men's basketball coach Jess Bucy discards any notions that his 1988-89 squad is a shoo-in for the Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference title despite what some prognosticators might say.

Though no preseason polls have been released, the Bisons will undoubtedly be considered as one of the picks for the AIC title based on returning talent. That was the case last year when Harding made the top three before the first jump ball was tossed. The Bisons struggled, however, to a 13-15 record.

"I don't put a lot of stock in those preseason polls. We proved last year that they don't mean a whole lot. We may have the best team before the season starts, but a lot of things can happen during the year," Bucy said.

Four starters and 10 lettermen return for Bucy as he enters his 20th season at the Bison helm. That, and the fact that seven of the veterans were a part of the 1987 team that won the NAIA District 17 title, adds up to an exciting year for the Black and Gold.

"We should be improved in several areas, but the big key is our maturity. Last year we had only one senior, Tim Smallwood; the rest were very young. Several of our players were immediately a part of a successful team as freshmen in '87, but we had three outstanding seniors who were excellent leaders. Suddenly our sophomores and juniors were forced to become leaders last year. They've matured and have been in the fire," he said.

Heading the list are a pair of All-AIC junior candidates who started as newcomers two years ago. Little Rock's Rolando Garcia and Brinkley, Ark., native, Corey Camper could be one of the best combinations in the conference, according to Bucy.

Garcia, an agile 6-8 postman, started slowly but ended with a flurry to average 14.7 points and 7.3 rebounds a game. Camper, a strong and court-smart 6-3 guard, led the Bisons in scoring as a freshman and repeated his success with a 14.2-point average last year.

"You won't find two players who want to win more than Rolando and Corey," said Bucy. "They were two of the most poised freshmen I've ever seen, and they're getting better. Both are very unselfish and team oriented, which make them ideal floor leaders."

They will receive help from junior guard David James of St. Louis, Mo., and senior forwards Carl Collins of Valley Springs, Ark., and Chad Bradley of DeSoto, Mo.

James proved to be one of the AIC's top defensive specialists last year and started every game. Collins and Bradley each stand 6-7 and shared time at the inside forward spot.

Bucy and assistant coach Nicky Boyd can look to Junior guard Corey Camper has paced the Bison scorers in his first two seasons.

their bench for support if the starting five falter.

Senior Barry Thames of St. Louis, juniors Curtis Washington of Brinkley and Reid Hayward of Fayetteville, Ark., and sophomore Michael Wood of Judsonia, Ark., saw considerable action at guard last year. Thames specializes in defense, while Washington and Wood are three-point threats. Hayward, a walkon, is the crowd favorite on the team.

Redshirt freshman Lyn Cotter of Gepp, Ark., and junior letterman Sean French of Bellevue, Neb., will spell Collins and Bradley at forward. French could also support Garcia at postman. The third Collins brother, freshman David, has a soft touch and may be the surprise of the Bison camp.

The Bisons open a strong nonconference schedule November 14 at Union University in Jackson, Tenn. The slate includes the tough Southern Illinois University Tournament in Edwardsville, Ill., Nov. 25-26. Harding opens AIC play Jan. 5 at Hendrix College in Conway.

Lady Bisons Look to a Rebuilding Season in Basketball

At least three new faces will appear in the starting lineup of the Lady Bison basketball team this fall, but head coach Phil Watkins says the squad may be stronger than ever.

Eight lettermen return from last year's 7-17 team that reached the NAIA District 17 postseason tournament for the first time. Watkins says the team will be greatly enhanced with the arrival of three proven junior college players.

"We feel very good about our recruiting. We were needing immediate help and we think the girls we signed will be able to step in and play," said Watkins, who has been with the program through its five-year history.

Two years ago Watkins looked to North Arkansas Community College for prime time talent, and he landed Shawn Bradford and Teri Loven, a pair of hot shooting guards. Stephany Smith transferred about the same time from Copian-Lincoln Junior College, immediately stepping with her two new teammates into the

Lady Bison starting five. All three graduated, leaving the void for Watkins to fill.

Watkins again looked to NACC and found guards Carrie White and Gina Hudson and forward Shannon Tate. According to Watkins, the NACC trio may make the Lady Bisons even more competitive.

"Carrie is one of the most talented athletes I've ever seen. Gina may be the best defensive player we've ever recruited, and Shannon is extremely versatile. She's the best basketball player, male or female, I've ever seen at shooting with either hand."

White, a native of Valley Springs, Ark., was voted Arkansas' Outstanding Female Athlete her senior year in high school. She ranks as one of the most intelligent athletes at the school with a 3.81 grade point. Hudson, also very intelligent, earned honors at Flippin, Ark. Tate, a native of Paragould, Ark., will likely start at forward.

Watkins says the other two starting slots are up for grabs, but several returnees are making their presence known. "Just about every player has improved since last year. Our team speed has taken a big jump, which should make us a better team," he said.

Guard Lorie Hoofman of Judsonia, Ark., and forwards Syrena Burch of Madison, Tenn., and Julie Roddy of Bradford, Ark., started at different times last year. Roddy suffered a severe knee injury late in the year which kept her out of the lineup, but Watkins says she has recovered and is near full speed.

Perhaps the most improved lady Bison will have to sit out the fall semester to retain her academic eligibility. Postman Tomi Cragwall of Lebanon, Tenn., has added strength and speed and could be one of the dominant players in the conference with her 6-3 frame, Watkins says. She will return to the Lady Bisons in the spring.

Guards Andrea Grimes of Brentwood, Tenn., Sharla Hastings of Rosston, Ark.,

Kara Hutchinson of Quincy, Fla., and Lisa Kirk of Springdale, Ark., saw limited action last year. All four will provide depth and could see playing time if they improve their shooting skills.

Three other newcomers could also make an impact on the team. Tracey Harrell, who walked on after sitting out of action last year, will likely back up Cragwall and Tate at the post and forward spots. Two highly regarded freshmen, Stephanie Williamson of Birmingham, Ala. and Brenda Hawk of Houston, complete the roster. Watkins expects big things from Williamson, who was Alabama's Class 6A Player of the Year and led her team to the state title her junior year.

"We have a lot of unanswered questions before the season that we hope will be answered by the first of the year," Watkins said. "If our three junior college girls come through, we'll be a contender. We have the talent; we just have to make it work."

Dr. Joe to Fulfill Childhood Dream As a Medical Doctor in 'Carousel'

by Alice Ann Kellar

As a boy, Joseph Pryor wanted to be a medical doctor. He never made it.

Instead, he pursued other paths that included teaching at Harding for more than 40 years, serving as academic dean, vice president, Petit lean advisor and numerous other assignments.

But in his final year of teaching at the university, he is getting the opportunity to portray a physician, even if it is only for one scene in the upcoming Homecoming production of "Carousel."

"The closing scene of 'Carousel' called for the town doctor to deliver the baccalaureate address," Arthur Shearin, one of the directors, said. "We thought it fitting that Dr. Joe play that role and we are pleased he agreed to do it."

Dr. Joe's appearance on stage will not be his first, although it has been quite a number of years since he was active in Harding productions. In the early years, however, he produced and directed the college's drama efforts. "During that time," Pryor said, "it was usually necessary that I play one of the roles. We didn't have a great number to choose from in those days."

Pryor has been cast as Dr. Seldon, whose lines include a charge to the spring graduating class. "I really didn't know if I could learn a long part, but I told the directors that I was pretty good at ad libbing," he said.

Anyone who knows Joe Pryor has absolutely no doubts about his success.

A cast of about 60, including the Clam Bake chorus of 30 voices, will present the Rodgers and Hammerstein musical at 8:15 p.m. on Friday, Nov. 4, and 7:30 p.m. on Sat., Nov. 5, in Benson Auditorium.

Leading roles, announced last spring, will be played by Conrad Ekkens of Freeland, Mich., as Billy Bigelow; Shelli Miller Meador of Springfield, Mo., as Julie Jordan; Robert Ritter of Bonner Springs, Kan., as Enoch Snow; India Medders of Calhoun, Ga., as Carrier Pepperidge; and Laura Beth Henderson of Searcy as Nettie Fowler.

Director Morris Ellis and the technical crew have finished the sets, and the costumes, most of which are being stitched by the students, are almost completed.

An orchestra of 30 musicians, under the direction of Shearin, began rehearsing at the start of the semester.

The remaining cast, selected following auditions in early September, includes Marisa Thomas of Irving, Texas, as Mrs. Mullins; Scott Miller of Springfield, Mo., as Jigger; Greg Hargett of Ventura, Calif., as David Bascombe; Scott Stewart of Mabelvale, Ark., as the Heavenly Friend; Eric French of Ulysses, Kan., as the Starkeeper; Wes Stine of Spokane, Wash., as the Captain; Jeff Dunn of Jasper, Texas, and David White of Searcy as Policemen; Neil Floyd of Virginia Beach, Va., as the Principal; and Jennifer Noland of Tinton Falls, N.J., as Louise. Chuck Roe of Springtown, Texas, Karen Mayfield of Calhoun, Ga., and others to be announced will be Snow Children.

Dr. Joe Pryor, who has often been seen in academic regalia during his tenure at Harding, will address graduates as Dr. Seldon in the Homecoming musical, "Carousel."

Richmond Adopts '12th Man' For Bison Home Contests

Fans who attend Bison home football games this fall may see 11 men in black and gold sprint down the field on a seemingly suicidal mission. They're just excited about their jobs.

They are part of the Bisons' "12th Man" kickoff squad, a special team idea cut from the same mold as Texas A&M's popular group. Consisting of walkons who were selected from tryouts last spring, the squad made its debut in fine fashion in the Bisons' 21-16 win over Missouri-Rolla.

"What we're trying to do is incorporate some kind of enthusiasm in the student body, and what better way than to bring the student body onto the field," said Bison head coach Larry Richmond. "The idea isn't original, since Texas A&M has a similar team, but it's still unique because of the athletes who make up the 12th Man."

Richmond devised the idea after being named head coach last December. He invited all men on campus to the tryout, with more than 30 prospects showing up for the audition. Coaches sent the athletes through a series of tests, including time sprints, before the squad was selected.

The team members are Jay Barber, a senior from Bald Knob, Ark.; Randy Barnes, a senior from Searcy; Daniel Bristow, a senior from Big Spring, Texas; David Dobson, a junior from Dresden, Tenn.; Lance Duncan, a senior from Clinton, Ark.; Greg Fraley, a senior from Scottsdale, Ariz.; Brandon Morgan, a senior from Benton, Ky.; Lance Riddick, a senior from Sarasota, Fla.; Luke Shows, a senior from Augusta, Ga.; Shayne Wallis, a junior from Bald Knob; and Scott White, a sophomore from Bismarck, Ill. Freshman Pete Daniell of Cave City, Ky., rounds out the team as the Bisons' placekicker.

Richmond, who jokingly has said he is "searching for a kicker who can kick it out of the end zone so I can sleep at night," considers the team to be a very serious part of the Bison squad.

"Naturally, they have to bring down the kick returner, preferably behind the 20-yard line. But the whole idea behind the 12th Man is to make the student body feel that a part of them is on the field. They have 11 representatives out there who are not on scholarship and are putting themselves out on a limb to help our team," he added.

Several of the 12th Men are former high school gridiron starters. A few are former Bisons, but all are true football fans who see the squad as an opportunity.

"Just the uniqueness of the team made it appealing to me," said Duncan, who lettered as a freshman for the Bisons. "I've always enjoyed football. I could also see the excitement go across the campus when the announcement for the tryouts was made. I knew I wanted to be a part of it."

Richmond is also borrowing another Aggie tradition. At the close of each game, the Bisons gather in front of the Harding crowd and lead them in the first verse of the alma mater.

"We're hoping that these traditions will take hold and increase school spirit," Richmond said.

Campus Notes

Dr. Mike Plummer (Biology) attended the combined annual meetings of the American Society of Ichthyologists and Herpetologists in Ann Arbor, Mich., June 24-29. He was co-author of "Spermatogenic Cycle of Rough Green Snakes, Opheodrys aestivus," which was presented at the meeting. Plummer also attended the 10th international conference on Biotelemetry in Fayetteville July 31-Aug. 4.

Dr. David Tucker (Economics) attended the biannual convention of the Mont Pelerin Society, an international society of individuals dedicated to liberty and free market thinking. Participants in the conference, which was held in Tokyo, Japan, attended by invitation only. Tucker also served as a consultant to the Social Security Administration on their disability insurance program in Baltimore in July. He addressed the Economic Education Workshop Aug. 10 in Fayetteville on the topic, "The Deficit in the Federal Budget: Is a Tax Increase the Answer?"

Jeanine Peck (Education) assisted with two pre-school reading workshops for Arkansas teachers in August. The workshops were entitled, "Teaching Research Skills" and "Teaching Comprehension Skills and Word Attack Skills."

George Oliver (Business) conducted the educational track, "Strategic Management Simulation," for the National Short-hand Reporters Association in Minneapolis, Minn., in July. This is Harding's second offering to the 30,000-member organization.

Winnie Bell and Suzanne Spurrier (Library) attended the national meeting of the American Library Association in New Orleans in July. They participated in discussions, viewed exhibits and evaluated the library service and circulation system currently in use by the Harding library.
