Harding head librarian honored by state group

The Arkansas Library Association has chosen Harding head librarian Winnie Bell to receive its Distinguished Service Award for 1987. Selected from the state's public and private libraries, she was honored at the ALA annual awards luncheon November 2 in Fayetteville.

Bell began her library career when she was asked to leave her job at a bank to assume the position of bookkeeper and interlibrary loan clerk at Harding's library.

Her determination and willingness helped her easily adjust to the new job responsibilities. At age 50, Bell was appointed Harding University Library director. Now at age 62, she has become very skilled on the library's new computer equipment.

Her contributions to the field were noted by ALA President Leo Clougherty when he introduced her as woman who "has quietly, but firmly asserted the value of libraries, promoted their excellence, and planned for their future."

"The image of the librarian cannot help be enhanced in the eyes of anyone who observes Mill Winnie Bell's career of accomplishments and service," President David Burks said in congratulating Bell.

The plaque reading "an honored recipient of the Distinguished Service Award for continuing and meritorious service to the Arkansas Library Association and to the field of librarianship," will hang in the Harding library.

She, her mother, Ineta, and sister, Mildred, reside in Searcy.
