Footnotes: From Hymn Sings to Hillsong, Part 2 + Leon Sanderson and Steve Maxwell

Bob Turner

Follow this and additional works at: https://scholarworks.harding.edu/hst-footnotes

Recommended Citation
A Few More Footnotes

are valid concerns of Christians, but they are not something that churches can easily "bounce" from one church to another to receive help. These become dependent on private charity as well. In fact, with church charity, things can happen. However, one might wonder why churches think they can take advantage of the government programs or simply become dependent and about creating a sense of dependency. They worry that the poor will either

When many Christians think about government aid for the poor, they worry

In the current case, let's suppose the Trump administration cuts $2 trillion

3. If the government cuts $1, churches respond by spending 5 to 20 cents more. In other words, if government cuts spending by $1, churches

The research says that for every extra dollar the government cuts in

A common belief among more politically conservative Christians is that the cuts in the recent federal budget. I asked a friend (and economist)

Bread for the World

($31.94 per person in 2018, down from $32.28 in 2017). Here are a few

May issue. They report on churches in the Churches of Christ-Christian

The

Bethany and Cana Moore

You'll find:

me know. I think this will be fun.

experience? What would you like to see in your church's worship program? Let heritage of music and where we've been, including interviews with some of my You've possibly cringed while scratching our head, curious how that one made it in.

service has moments of pure wonder and a few moments that leave us of great works is to create new art. So we have modern art galleries. And we also art museum, the great stuff is often older. But the only way to have a collection blends an established tradition of classics with new songs. Like an encyclopedic worship music might be the most defining issue for your church. That makes

I'm going to take a few weeks to discuss worship music. My hunch is that

Hey Friends,

Bread for the World with Jamin Speer

Worship Ministry Survey (Please take it...just a few minutes!)

reported in their worship ministry survey in 2016. They found that the average

For their take on the report

Footnotes: Curated Resources for Ministers

Bob Turner · 1000 Cherry · Memphis, TN 38117 · USA

Copyright © Bob Turner 2019 All rights reserved.