Suicide Specialist
Is Third In Series

Three-Act Comedy Is Directed
by Robert Boyd

Third is a series of tournaments workshop plays was "The Suicide Specialist," a three-act comedy presented in the college auditorium Friday, February 22. Robert H. Boyd, assistant dean of the college, wrote the "Quint" which was second place last year, directed this presentation.

The story concerned a young doc- tor, just recently graduated from medical college, and his efforts to make good in general practice in a big city. No practice came his way, but instead the youth grew larger and larger, and more desperate he became, until he decided to return to medical school and work in the teaching hospitals.

He published an advertisement in the city paper to state that he was a medical specialist who would, for a fee, help people kill them- selves with rain-proof methods.

The advertisement attracted the attention of a middle-aged woman, whose husband had recently died, and to whom he showed her various methods of suicide. She was impressed with his sincerity and invited him to help her end her life.

The Doctor was joined by W. Woodring, loudest girl and Helen Prentice, the world's tallest girl, and the three of them met to discuss methods of suicide.

The Doctor promised, however, to deliver the paper, heralding himself as a Mrs. Mary Baldus was honored to the J. E. Spates Oma NuckoU.
