The Teacher

To you have performed the supreme service. Our eyes have been
Our ears have heard. Have
Your hand to your heart, in your life.
Your hand, to you, is the symbol of death. Such numbered hair shows the conflict of years. The emflint and clash of ideals
Against the ravishments of immortality.
Your warm wear forms bears trace of the hunt of battle, the suppress of all other things.
They are the souls that show you. They
Are yours. Your youth is yours.
You have fought with Divine weapons against the Emissary of man.
Such battles are the fiercest of any.
You have fought for the character of man.
The happiness of man, the peace of man, The love of man, and therefore its soul.
That you have composed is evident in souls rejuvenated. Please lines that you have say that you are.
Do not just find peace in this! Tell us more of the joy of age,
The tranquility of righteousness.
That adorns the path of the faithful.
Tell us something of friends and end. And the peace with God that transcends all.
We would know how to live.
And to see the visions of greater things, always.
You have shown us the holiness of Paul.
The righteous indignation of Him that cast out the money-changers.
The goddess of Him as He blessed little children, The love of Him that came for
That truth in more of things. We would know your peace, your trust.
Your faithful attempt at peace fulfills before your humanity. Your faith-seed is as nothing.
To the mighty antithesis of perhaps unborn generations, he
The mighty antithesis that you have.
Mighty faith of the great earth.
Let your praise be—what more can we say? I
Your good work shall never perish from the earth.
