FIRM FOUNDATION

Through seven decades, Harding has shone as a light in a world of darkness. Renown for her tradition of excellence, the university, in its 70th year, continued to maintain its academic prestige. Emphasizing faith, learning and living, faculty and students tried to build on the heritage provided by those who had gone before. Harding faced many battles through the years, and now stands as one of the leaders in Christian education with eight consecutive years of record enrollments. Hundreds of men and women have sacrificed to make Harding what it is – an institution of higher learning with an intrinsic focus on the Chief Cornerstone, Jesus Christ.

SOLID GROUND

We are all in the process of growing. It was once said that, if we cease to grow, we cease to live. The Harding environment helped to nurture this growth in many ways. From chapel to Bible classes to the flood relief project, this development was cultivated both in and out of the classroom. Harding is a university with an eternal mission. In accepting its higher calling, it has also accepted the challenge to help make the world we live in a better place. Its foundation for growth has provided a solid footing for an even brighter future.

ENDLESS DEDICATION

Harding is blessed with having teachers who really care about the well-being of their students. Most go out of their way to make sure students get a quality education and, at the same time, grow spiritually. The senior class chose one of these teachers as the recipient of the 1994 Petit Jean dedication.

A Bible major, Monte Cox graduated from Harding in 1981. Along with several other Harding graduates, he and his wife, Beth, and two-month-old daughter, Rachel, moved to western Kenya to minister to the Kalejin tribes. He served as Harding's visiting missionary in 1988-1989 and encouraged students to be more mission oriented. After almost 10 years in Africa, Cox returned to Harding in 1993 as an assistant professor of Bible. This year he was appointed director of Mission Prepare. He and Beth have three children – Rachel, Joel and Sarah.

Because of his endless dedication to service at Harding University, the 1994 Petit Jean is dedicated to Monte Cox in recognition of his many contributions to the student body.

Maybe we didn't come to Harding with this in mind, but whether we knew it or not, our year was to be, in large measure, the foundation for the rest of our lives. How we handled our studies and activities determined the firmness of our character in the future. What we put into our relationships with God and others proved to be the cornerstone upon which our lives were being built. Whether or not this was based on a Christian focus would determine, more than anything else, our pathway in life and ultimately, our destiny.

DAILY LIFE

is never the same routine

Rrring! "Oh no, it can't be 7:00 already," groaned Sam Student as he mashed every button on his alarm clock. Reluctantly, he pulled himself out of bed. Every muscle ached from the club softball game he had played the night before. "Can my life be any more complicated?" Sam sighed as he debated over what to wear. He finally grabbed the cleanest thing he could find and set out across campus. As he walked, he pondered the options of A) actually going to his 8:00 class, or B) getting something for breakfast. After all, which was more important?

After filling up on muffins and cereal, Sam headed to the Benson for chapel. Thirty-five minutes later, he breathed a sigh of relief as Dr. Burks said "dismissed."

He struggled through classes, and then relaxed in the student center with his friends. Before going back to his room, Sam decided to check his mail one more time. Surprisingly, there was a letter from Grandma.

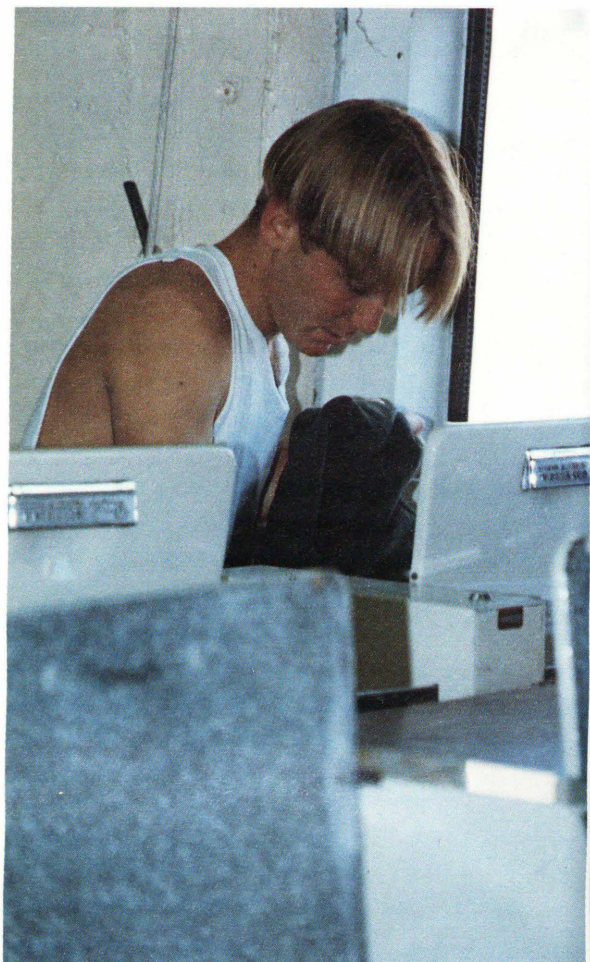

Sam arrived back at his room to find his roommate taking a nap. Great! He couldn't do anything that made noise so, he took a nap himself. They woke up just in time to make it to the cafeteria before it closed.

After finishing another satisfying ARA meal, Sam remembered that he had to make his weekly trip to Wal-Mart. He was running low on BVD's, and it was either shop, or actually do his laundry. It was nearly curfew when he got back. He couldn't help noticing all of the clinging couples.

Sam plopped down on his bed at 10:59 and waved as his R.A. stuck his head in the door. As he prepared for a test, he reminded himself to call that girl he had noticed earlier. Only then could he be content to lie down for another glorious five hours of sleep.

IMPACT

offers a great adventure

As scared freshmen and experienced, yet insecure, transfer students began to arrive on campus and unload their belongings, each was unaware that, together, they were about to embark on "The Great Adventure."

Student Impact led the crusade for all new students as they began making their adjustments to college life. Leah Mangrum and Glen Metheny had been busy planning Impact since being chosen co-directors in December. With the help of the Steering Committee, "everything was very successful and ran smoothly," Metheny said.

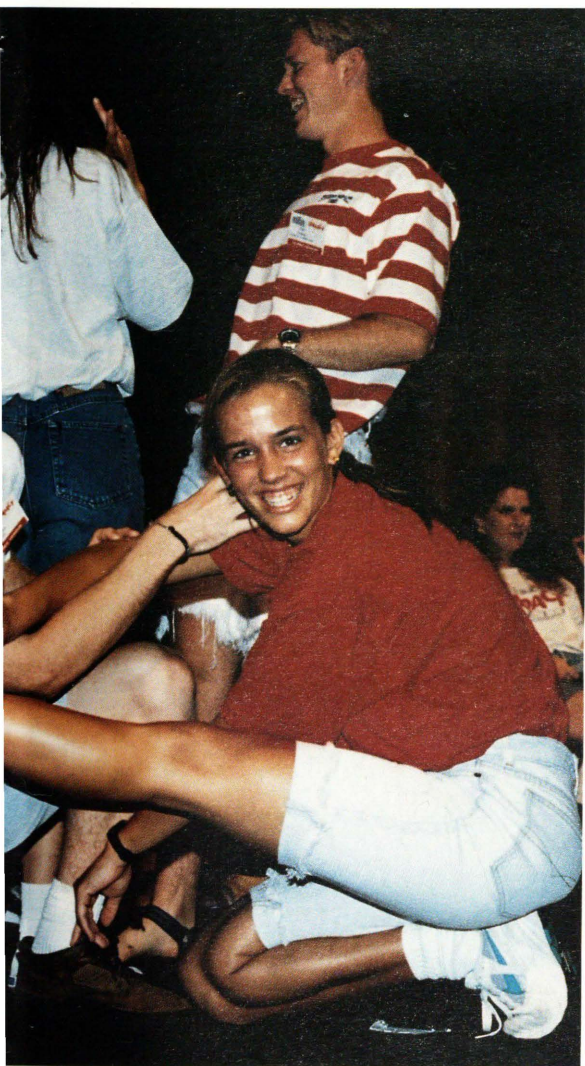

Exotic theme dinners encouraged students to dress up and attend as scurvy pirates, safari hunters and rowdy cowboys. Senior Jessica Pell said her committee put "lots of hard work" into organizing the dinners.

Energy groups led by upperclassmen provided students with vital information on such topics as dating, social clubs, and how to get along with roommates. It also gave students the opportunity to form friendships before classes began.

SA president Rich Little introduced the Leaven Project, which involved students in several service projects – visiting nursing homes and hospitals – where they spent time with the patients singing songs, playing games or just making conversation.

"The Great Adventure" did not end with Student Impact week. It was only a taste of the greater journey that students made as they began the first year of their stay at Harding.

PLEDGE WEEK

helps build relationships

Pledge Week is generally among the most memorable events of a new student's college life. After weeks of mixers and lots of visiting, new students decide on a club and then wait... until bids are distributed and some group has chosen... them.

The women's bid delivery process took a new direction this year, with resident assistants handing out the bids in each dorm. Bids invited each recipient to attend a reception.

Stacey Hefley, president of Zeta Rho, initiated the changes in the bid process. "I hope the new process continues next year because it seemed to really work," she said. Freshman Marcie Gonzalez said, "I thought that it was a good idea for the people who didn't get their first choice, because it was more private."

On Monday night, clubs held their acceptance meetings, during which pledges were told what was expected from them. Pledges were seen scrambling for signatures, minor dates and merits throughout the week.

Thursday was perhaps the strangest day as upperclass creativity could be seen in the numerous, odd and crazy costumes that the pledges wore. Faculty members sighed as they taught classes to squires in cardboard armor, hillbillies, babies, toga-clad men and human traffic signals.

The week ended with informal induction on Friday night in which pledges were expected to rely on each other, bond together and account for their activities during the week. As curfew approached, yells of joy could be heard all over campus as older members presented new members with club jerseys, and Pledge Week finally drew to a close.

CHAPEL

provides daily renewal

More than 3,500 students came to Harding this year, and although they attended different classes, belonged to different social clubs, and lived in different dorms, there was one thing they all had in common – nine o'clock chapel.

The basis for Harding's motto – "educating for eternity" – could be found in the daily chapel devotionals. Numerous programs and announcements were an integral part of chapel, but the time spent in worship to God served as the backbone of the chapel programs. "Chapel was a wonderful way to set the focus for the day, and even the week," remarked Christy Coonts, a senior from Harrison, Ark.

Student Association officers took advantage of chapel time to share their goals with the student body. "We want to focus this year on service," said David Rubio, vice president. Projects included the St. Louis flood relief trip, raising money to purchase mobile medical units in Ghana, and the freshman class food drive for Bosnia. Students were also made aware of opportunities to serve, including International Campaigns and campus ministry projects. These projects reminded students of "a bigger world out there" that needed their help and the message of Christ.

Chapel also provided a time for fellowship with other Christians. For many, it was the only time each day that they could see their friends.

Most importantly, chapel gave students a chance to seek God first in the morning, and to focus on Him for the rest of the day.

SPECIAL EVENTS

provide a change of pace

An important feature at Harding has long been special programs and events designed to bring students together as a social entity. One of the events returning students eagerly anticipated was the performance of their classmates with hypnotist Gil Eagles during Student Impact.

A highlight of this year was the return of Restless Heart, a country music group. Other singing groups, some well known and others not so well known, but all entertaining, broke the monotony of a routine day.

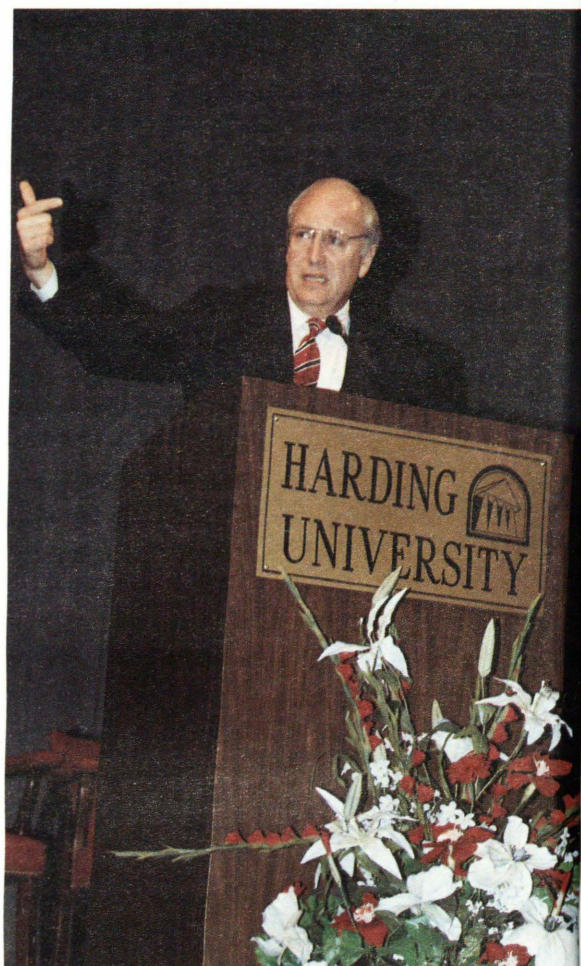

Special programs intended to educate students included a number of American Studies Institute speakers. Former Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto of India and Dick Cheney, former Secretary of Defense, were two of the more notable speakers to come. "The American Studies Institute tries to bring in leaders who will address contemporary issues and challenge students to be leaders," said Laura Rice, president. Michael Medved, author of the bestseller Hollywood vs. America and George Walthum, a communications expert, each contributed to the tradition of excellence and entertainment. "Michael Medved was an exceptional speaker because he had a message that everyone – students, faculty and the community could relate to," Rice said.

On the fun side, some scientific "toys" amused anyone willing to try them. A human velcro wall and orbitron had been on campus previously. This year, the Alpha Experience, a black box that moved to simulate race cars, roller coasters and other fast vehicles portrayed on a screen, provided a way to "escape" for a few minutes.

Although the regular class routine kept us busy, most found a spare moment to enjoy some outside entertainment.

HOMECOMING

rekindles old friendships

Homecoming... the mere thought of the term conjures up special meaning – reunions, special events, reminiscing, hugging, laughing, confessing, eating, sharing, worshipping, watching a football game, singing the alma mater, honoring special people, reaching milestones...

The campus was flooded with visitors October 28-30 as alumni, friends and relatives came "Back Home to Harding" to be a part of the great Homecoming tradition. The schedule was packed with activities for students, past and present, to get them into the spirit of the occasion.

Induction into the Golden Circle (comprising alumni who graduated 50 or more years ago), presentation of the Homecoming queen in chapel, the Black and Gold banquet (for alumni of all ages), the Homecoming musical, class and club reunions, the football game... all the usual traditions were experienced.

Unique to this year's festivities was an atmospheric surprise, a rare occurrence at Harding, especially in October... snow! A cold front passing through Friday forced the temperatures down and the steady afternoon rains turned to snow. Extremely cold winds on Saturday forced all but about 200 fans to vacate the stands during the football game. The team fought the cold to pull out a victory over Arkansas Tech.

Families and friends worshipped and ate lunch together Sunday before parting to return to numerous destinations, full of joy that only special times with special people could provide.

SPIRITUAL LIFE

encompasses the campus

To talk about spiritual life at Harding is to talk about what sets it apart from other schools. It's what makes it a light in a dark world and a place of tremendous meaning to people dedicated to God.

Harding is a place where most of us stretch and grow among people who have the same goals we have. It is a place with a heritage of spiritual strength and student leaders who help keep the focus of building a firm foundation in Christ.

Serving in spiritual leadership roles on behalf of the Student Association were Nick Fouts and Lori Tucker. In preparation for the spring student lectureship, they worked with the spiritual life committee to set the theme, speakers and topics for individual sessions. "Learning to serve God and others has been the committee's main goal for the year," Fouts said. In reference to assisting with women's spiritual needs, Tucker said, "Everyone has different needs, experiences and goals, but because we have the common interest of serving Christ, we are all very much alike."

There were many service organizations and programs on campus that existed to give students a chance to serve and learn to more closely imitate Christ, but they were not what defined spiritual life at Harding.

Harding's spiritual atmosphere comes not from chapel or Bible classes. It comes from inside the students, faculty and staff members. It radiates from the relationships we have with God, and it shows in the ways we relate to others. Harding is special because of the sense of spirituality that pervades the campus. Spiritual life is what makes Harding unique.

work behind the scenes

Anyone who ventured out of the dorms and onto campus was aware of a certain number of students whose names were synonymous with leadership, people assigned to tasks and committees to keep students aware of spiritual and social happenings. At the same time, there were those who worked in the wings, out of the spotlight, with diligence, without a title or an office or a nameplate, referred to as quiet leaders.

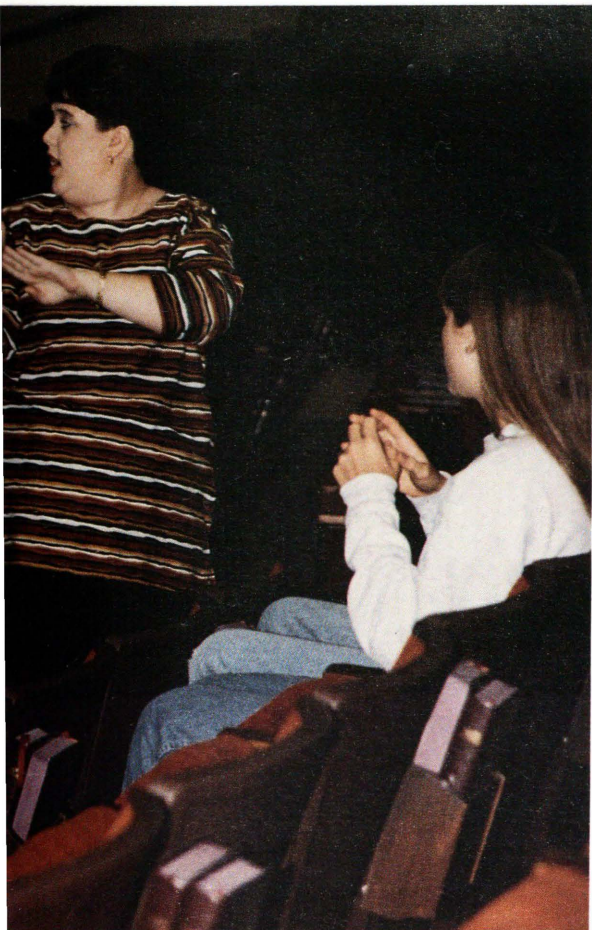

Johnna Jones, a senior from Temple, Texas, has worked at His House, a benevolence ministry of the College Church of Christ, on Wednesday nights since her freshman year. Jones said a friend in her club encouraged her to go. "It's a small job to do, but it's so wonderful that just one hour a week can make such a big impact."

Nathan Randolph, a senior from Santa Fe, N. M., was drifting in search of a church home. Nathan wanted to be involved and know he was making a difference. One of his friends told him that a church in Griffithville was losing its preacher, and asked if he would like to preach there. "I was overjoyed to get to preach," Randolph said.

Clint Delaplane, a senior from Canyon County, Calif., works with Harding's international students. His committee arranges various activities and transportation. "Many international students are getting involved. And it seems like giving people a ride to Wal-Mart isn't really significant, but now I see how important all the small things are. They really matter."

Quiet leadership – often unnoticed and therefore unappreciated – made a difference at Harding as servanthood became a way of life for those involved.

brings cultural understanding

Harding University in Florence (HUF) offered the chance to experience interaction between ideas and their physical results – results which span millennia from the ruins of Ancient Greece to modern day haute-couture in Milan. In the 16th century villa which houses the program, the new idea of a foreign language became real because simple communication demanded it. Vocabulary lists no longer stopped with a test; in the street markets, these words determined the extent of expression.

Similarly, the new ideas of art which students encountered made more sense with first-hand experiences. Michelangelo's David was seen not as a six-inch photograph but rather experienced as a 13-foot marble block of genius. Likewise, cathedrals were lifted from books into real life where students felt the presence as bell towers rang out over the city.

Religious growth dominated the HUF experience for many. "Visiting the place where Paul's letters were written and sent gave a better understanding of the people's conditions and brought the Scriptures' meaning into a new light," said Danny Moore. The groups attended worship services with the Italian congregation. "Following along in English and hearing the Italian, I felt the universal bond we all have in Christ, despite our differences," said Lee Hankins.

Students also had blocks of free travel during which they faced new ideas regarding customs, currency, dress, language, transportation and food. "The introduction to new cultures not only helped me better understand Europe, but it also helped me come to understand myself and my own culture better," said Christine Creasy. "The ideas which I faced are a very active part of who I am now."

SPRING SING

‘just keeps getting better’

One constant in Harding’s structure of activities is the annual Youth Forum/Spring Sing weekend. More than 1800 prospective students from 30 states officially registered with admissions during the special weekend, designed to help them learn about Harding.

Highlighting Youth Forum events, Jeff Walling, minister of the Mission Viejo, Calif., Church of Christ, was the featured speaker. Evening devotionals and dorm living rounded out the visitors’ exposure to college life at Harding.

Almost 900 costumed performers, plus technicians, musicians and ushers were involved in the ’93 edition of the main entertainment attraction of the weekend. More than 8,000 tickets were sold for the three performances of Spring Sing.

The performance featured musical numbers by hostesses Kaci Bolls from Murray, Ken., and Shannan Horner from Dexter, Mo., and hosts Chuck Roe from Springtown, Texas, and Lee Langdon from Tabernacle, N.J.

I’m Steel Standin’, representing Chi Omega Pi, Pi Kappa Epsilon, TNT and Zeta Rho, won the sweepstakes award for club performances.

Evidence of a successful show came from audience feedback. Every year, Dr. John Ryan, producer, said he hears, “This has got to be the best Spring Sing we’ve ever had.” This time, he said, he heard that constantly.

GRADUATION

brings new perspective

As freshmen struggled through the confusion of registration for college, the only graduation on their minds was the one they had just accomplished. And, at that very moment, they often wished to go back to high school where life was familiar and maybe even easy.

But all too soon, four years (or perhaps five or six) had gone by and graduation from college was a reality. Registration lines had been endured, courses had been passed or even mastered, chapel had reached the point where it was actually appreciated, social clubs had come to be less encompassing, life experiences had brought new maturity, and many relationships had been formed, some of which were to last a lifetime.

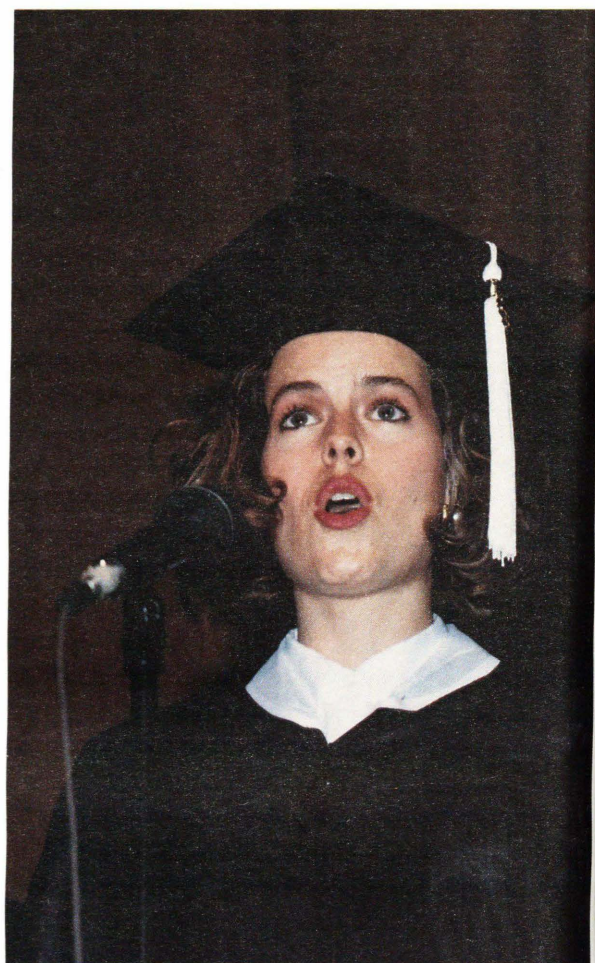

Ceremonies attracted parents, grandparents, aunts, uncles, brothers, sisters, cousins, friends, youth ministers, preachers – everyone who wanted to witness this special event as scores of graduates marched, in academic regalia, across the stage to receive their hard-earned diplomas.

"Christian education is the best way to prepare for life in the 'real world,'" Alabama football coach Gene Stallings told the May, 1993, graduates. "You need to be people of integrity as you begin your work in the marketplace today, and remember that there is nothing wrong with being great in goodness," he said.

Hugs, smiles, laughter, tears and photographic poses attested to the importance of the ceremonies as 725 graduates packed their bags to move from the residence halls for the last time and left Harding to find their places as professionals in the "real world."

hile some schools claim to have found strength in numbers, Harding's strength has always been in the character of its people. Students working together created a unity on which our university was based. Administrators, faculty and staff brought years of experience, wisdom and perspective to the mixture. It was that foundation that made Harding a unique body of people instead of a loosely associated group of individuals. Our diversity added to our strength as each person used his or her talents to work toward the completion of another successful year.

SENIORS

stand prepared for the future

Reflecting back on four or five years of college brought a lot of things into perspective for graduating seniors. Friendships, job concerns and spiritual growth were most commonly noted.

"I'm really glad to be graduating," said Jennie Baker, an elementary education major from Florence, Ala. "I'm going to miss all of my friends, though. It'll be hard leaving people who have been with me through the best and worst of times."

"I'm in the process now of looking for a job," said Glen Metheny, an accounting major from Kennett, Mo. "I feel apprehensive about leaving school, but I know that, with the education I've gotten here, and with God on my side, everything will work out fine."

Kristi Jones, a Spanish major from Sulphur Springs, Texas, expressed appreciation for Harding's emphasis on spiritual values. "It isn't perfect, but the rules, events and people make it easier to stay focused on God. I'm really going to miss it."

Harding students show support for African missions by making a . . .

“RUN FOR THEIR LIVES”

“Run for their Lives,” a two-mile race to raise money for a mobile clinic in Ghana, Africa, focused students’ attention on Mission Emphasis Week during the fall. Developed by Monte Cox, director of missions, and members of the Uganda mission team, the event raised $1300 from students, faculty and other supporters.

Junior Shannon Smith participated in the run and won the women’s division. “It was something I enjoyed doing,” Smith said. “But more than that, I knew it was for a good cause.”

Senior Jeff Conner also participated and said, “I don’t expect to ever be able to go to Ghana, so I thought this would be a great way to do something from here. I’m also good friends with Mark Moore [a member of the Uganda team] and I thought, if he could give up his whole way of life to go to Africa, I could surely give up two miles.”

Cox said he chose the Uganda team to help with Mission Emphasis Week because “they’re good, creative people. We wanted creativity on this project so that the students wouldn’t consider this just another boring mission project.”

The team also had insights about missions on campus because all of them had attended Harding and the group had returned to campus during the fall to prepare and train for their departure to Uganda in March. When Cox coordinated his efforts with theirs, they were able to develop the “Run for their Lives” idea.

Eighty participants started the race from the Benson stage during chapel and crossed the finish line in front of the auditorium after students had been dismissed for the day. Backed by hundreds of financial and emotional supporters, these runners literally “ran for the lives” of thousands of needy people in Ghana.

Senior art shows provide a way for art majors to show their. . .

CREATIVE GENIUS

Classes are valuable and textbooks are important, but experience is a superior teaching tool. For art majors at Harding, the experience of putting together an exhibit is the capstone of the college experience.

Every year, senior art majors select the week they will display their artwork for viewing at Stevens Art Gallery. The student chooses a title for his show and decides which pieces will be displayed. Paintings, sculpture, graphic designs, pottery—a wide variety of art is displayed and offered for sale by the artist.

Usually, the exhibit week begins with a reception given by the artist for his or her closest friends and family. This event officially opens the exhibit. After one week of display and evaluation by fellow art majors and faculty, the exhibit ends and the artist is assigned a grade.

Because grading art is such a subjective concept, many artists find it difficult to accept the evaluation of their work. Kelly McBride, an art education graduate student said, "I don't create art for other people to see. I create for myself and I'm very self-critical. By having an exhibit, I learned that it's OK if people do or don't like my art."

In reference to the art curriculum at Harding, McBride said, "When I first got here, I didn't want to take basic design or drawing and be so structured. But when I sat down to draw something recently, I discovered I couldn't have done it without the basic art skills I was required to develop first."

It takes most students years to produce the works for their exhibits, but when they have finished, the show reflects both the efforts and personality of the artist. Amy Parish, a senior art major, said, "The show was more about me than it was about my classwork."

By switching places for the day, Ashby and Burks. . .

GAIN NEW PERSPECTIVES

Oh, to be president of Harding University! Though only a dream for most students, on Friday, October 15, it became reality for Kim Ashby.

Ashby roared onto the Benson stage in a white limousine and surrounded by black-clad bodyguards. Through the rest of chapel, Ashby assumed the role of president by reading announcements and showing a promo of Dr. Burks helping her do TV-19's weather newscast. Meanwhile, Burks sat in Ashby's seat and chatted with her friends.

The Student Association granted Ashby this honor after her name was drawn from among hundreds of ballots which were filled out by the students who attended the Rick Walters concert.

During the day, Kim was allowed to do anything she wanted, within reason. Students visited her in the president's office and she hosted a luncheon in the presidential dining room for about a dozen of her friends. In addition to this, her bodyguards were with her all day to ensure her safety. "It was fun being the president for a day," Ashby said, "but it was also a good opportunity to see behind the scenes - all the work his job entails."

While Ashby attended to school business, Burks attended her communication classes and gave a weather forecast on TV-19. "I especially enjoyed sitting in class and listening to the teachers," Burks said. "That was the highlight of my day." Burks had the privilege of sitting in on "The Acts of the Apostles," "TV-19 Production," "Religious Applications of the Media," and "Advanced Broadcast Journalism."

SA President Rich Little presented the "President for a Day" idea to Burks early in the fall. It had been a tradition in past years and Burks said that he was more than willing to accommodate the SA in activities of this nature because they tend to break perceived barriers between the administration and the students. "It was a positive, beneficial experience," he said.

Ashby and Burks met early in the semester to work out the details of their respective schedules.

Sears Learning Center provides students with opportunities for both. . .

TEACHING AND LEARNING

On the northwest corner of campus, next to the American Studies building, stands the Sears house, bearing the name of Harding's longtime Dean L. C. Sears, its former owner. To the casual person strolling the sidewalk, it is nothing but a nostalgic stone house reminiscent of the 1930s. But as soon as you step through the door and see the buzz of activity, this sleeping giant suddenly awakens with the spark of life glowing from within many college students.

Tucked away inside this house is the Sears Learning Center (SLC), which offers free tutoring to all Harding students. All tutoring is done by students who have successfully completed the classes they now tutor.

The SLC is certified by the College of Reading and Learning Association, and it operates by their guidelines. These include 10 hours of training and certification upon completion of 25 hours of tutoring. This training emphasizes helping students learn how to learn, the basic philosophy of the SLC. As tutor Heather McGlaughlin said, "We try to tutor students in such a way that they won't need tutoring." Basically, the tutors are trying to work themselves out of a job, teaching the students to become independent learners.

The Learning Center had two major expansions this year. First, their Supplemental Instruction (SI) program expanded by two classes. SI is group tutoring, offered for some of Harding's general education requirements, potentially reaching 700 students. The other expansion this year was a reading proficiency software program, which offers supplemental reading assistance through the use of computers.

Besides offering tutoring, the Learning Center also offers several learning strategy workshops each semester. These include seminars in note-taking, test-taking, time management, and general study skills.

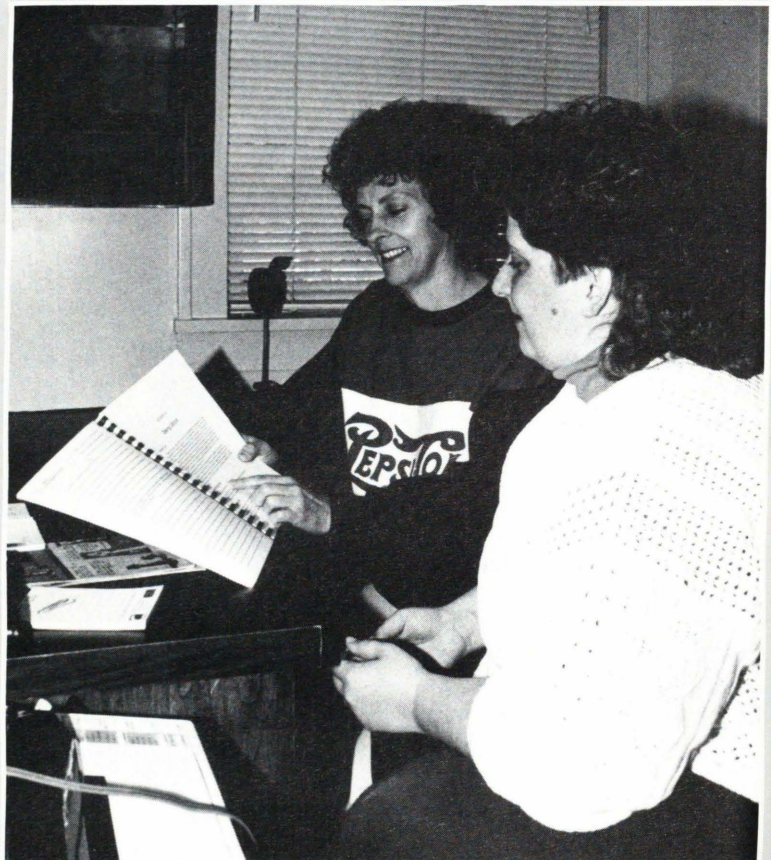

Student tutoring is rewarding to the tutors who know they are helping students excel. Roger Clayton said, "Seeing someone you've worked with get an 'A'

makes you feel like you've accomplished something."

Still, there is hesitation among some students to admit difficulty in learning to study. The cross-section of students from the humanities to the physical sciences who use the Learning Center, however, indicate that it is really the smart students who have taken advantage of this service.

Students with a DCB find it easy to say. . .

"PUT IT ON THE CARD"

Completing registration forms meant answering one question after another. Will you have a car on campus? Do you want a campus mail box? How much DCB do you want? That third question really threw some students off. What in the world was a DCB?

A declining cash balance was money deposited at the beginning of the semester, which was accessible through student I.D. cards and used to purchase items in the College Inn and Etc., the campus gift shop. Students welcomed the advantages a DCB had to offer, such as the opportunity to get away from the everyday cafeteria meals once in a while.

chose to reap her benefits in the gift shop. "I chose way too much money on my DCB plan, so now I go to the gift shop every other week, pick out a few things that I like, and put them on my DCB."

It was true that many students enjoyed the DCB plan. In fact, many enjoyed it too much. "Three weeks after we got here, my DCB was gone. I had spent $121!

Then I had to mooch off my friends to buy me food," freshman Angie Casch said. Her roommate, Mandy Winter said, "She always tried to get me to buy her things with mine after hers ran out!"

Using other people's DCB's was a clever way to save one's own money, but it wasn't amusing when that happened without the owner's permission. Freshman Tamika Chatmon related an incident in which someone had secretly used her DCB. "I went in to buy a candy bar and, instead of 50 cents, my balance would be $10 less!"

Having a DCB helped students learn to manage their money. Students who chose a low DCB amount could not offer to pay for anyone else. "It was hard either way," said Winter. "Either you got much more money than you could possibly use, or you had to choose an amount that wouldn't last the whole semester."

JUNIORS

raise money for fire victims

After wildfires swept the southern California area in early November, the junior class decided, for their fall service project, to assist those students from Pepperdine University whose homes were destroyed. The fire storms wreaked havoc wherever the winds led them, causing millions of dollars in damages. Many homes of Pepperdine faculty and students were affected by this disaster.

Although the fires didn't reach any of the buildings in the heart of the campus, they did scar approximately 100 acres of school property. As a precaution, students and faculty were evacuated from all campus housing until the fires subsided. "The last thing I remember before falling asleep [that night]," said student Jason Presley, "is somebody whispering that the winds had shifted away from the school."

Michael Brooks, Harding's junior class president, said that helping those whose homes were consumed by the blaze was "just our way of helping our sister university. We saw a need and did our best to be of service." Approximately $500 was sent for their assistance.

Gaining experience through internships is. . . TRAINING FOR TOMORROW

Perhaps the best way to learn about something is to experience it for yourself. For many Harding students, internships provided a way to do just that.

Many majors, such as radio/television, graphic design and dietetics, require internships before graduation. The internships are viewed as an important part of learning, and the "hands-on" training gives the intern invaluable job experience.

Students may arrange their own, but the Cooperative Education office assists students in finding internships. Many are available during the school year, but most are offered in the summer.

The Cooperative Education office makes sure that an income is provided for their students. This can cause problems since most companies offer unpaid internships to allow the student to get on-the-job experience without cost to the organization.

All internships taken through the Cooperative Education office are taken for one to six hours of credit. Interns must write papers on their work which summarize their experience and evaluate its benefits.

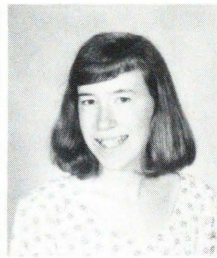

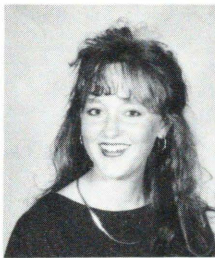

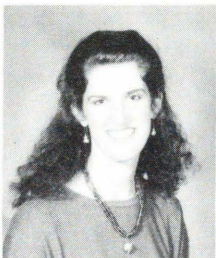

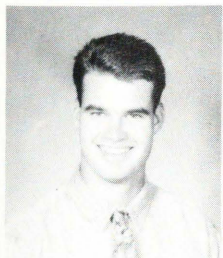

Valerie McCammon, a senior chemistry major, worked as a co-op intern last summer at the Environmental Certification Labs in Farmersburg, Ind. She said, "A lot of people don't get a chance to work in their major before graduation," she said, "yet the employers want experienced workers. I'm certain that this experience will help me get a job."

For students living in extended housing, each day is another. . .

LESSON IN 'LIFE 101'

"The best of both worlds." That's how almost 175 Harding students characterized their living situation. These individuals were residents of the various Harding-owned apartments and housing units located on and around the campus.

Based on age and/or credit hours, the criteria for living in the extended housing units were stricter than dorm requirements. Students had to be 21 years old or in their fifth year. Transfer students were required to spend at least one year in the dorms before being approved for a house or apartment.

Katrina Timms, supervisor for women's apartments, said that the idea of extended housing is important to a growing school like Harding. "Harding is taking advantage of the boom in enrollment without building new dorms that might stand vacant in a few years," Timms said, referring to the difficulty many Christian schools are having due to decreases in enrollment. "Students enjoy the freedom of living on their own, as well as the money they can save by not having to buy a meal ticket."

Senior Jeff Conner expressed a similar view by saying, "It's nice to come home after a hard day of classes and be able to stretch out in the living room. Having more living space makes joking around with friends even more fun."

The students in the houses and apartments were supervised by a live-in resident assistant who reported to resident supervisors. Timms reported that the apartments and extended housing have worked well. "I haven't had any more problems than usual," she said.

The 1993-94 school year marked the first year for female students to live in Harding-owned homes as part of the project. Men have been living in three off-campus locations for about five years.

"I consider this something like Life 101," Timms said. "These situations teach students to communicate and to get along better. By choosing to live in an apartment, they have chosen more than the average college experience."

When money gets tight, students find themselves. . .

ON THE JOB

Many students found it difficult to balance time for study and recreation. Those with jobs faced even greater demands on their time.

Freshmen Jeremy Gaytan worked at the Wal-Mart Distribution Center and said that he liked his job, but he wished he could work fewer hours.

"I worked about 22 hours a week," Gaytan said. "By working so much, I missed out on a lot of the fun that took place at school and club functions. Looking back, I sometimes wonder if the money was worth it."

Many students complained about getting up for an 8:00 class. Senior Sara Healy, however, worked at the College Inn from 6:30 to 8:30 a.m. each weekday.

"Getting up that early really took a lot out of me,"

Healy said. "Going to bed earlier would've helped, but to get eight hours of sleep, I would've had to go to bed around 10:00 each night, which is virtually impossible in a college dorm."

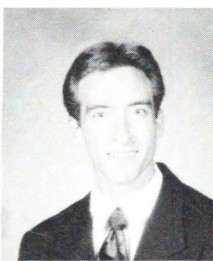

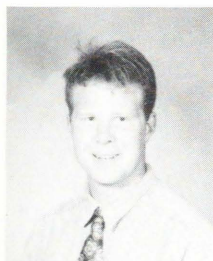

According to Jacob Moran, working at the Brackett Library wasn't as easy as it looked. There was more to it than most people realized.

"Shelving books is important, and very few workers like to do it," said Jacob. "The good thing was that the more seniority a person had, the less shelving they had to do. The bad thing was that I didn't have any seniority."

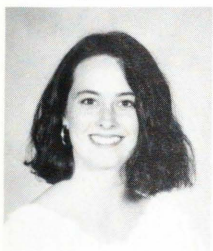

Whether they worked on or off campus, students with jobs had to make every minute count.

TAKE A BREAK

Leaving school for the security of home was the answer for many students trying to get out of the school year rut.

"There is nothing in the world better than going home during the holidays," sophomore Mike Figgins said. "What could be better than sleeping in your own bed and getting fed real home-cooked meals?"

"School is great, but once in a while it gets a bit monotonous and you need a break," freshman Carrie Payne said. "Holidays are that break for students, a chance to get away and sort of clear your head."

Unfortunately, rest and relaxation often were not the only items on the agenda for holidays. Aside from schoolwork that had to be done, students had to carefully arrange schedules to make sure all their social engagements were met.

"All your friends from school are also home for the holidays, so you want to spend lots of time with them, but you also have to set aside time for the family," freshman Chris Baker said. "Thanksgiving and Christmas just turn into big juggling acts."

While some students' vacations were largely a balancing act, other students had a definite plan of attack for conquering the holiday season.

"I went shopping," Payne said. "That was my plan the whole time: to go shopping with my mom as soon and as much as possible."

Going home gave students a chance to plan activities they ordinarily would not have time for while school was in session.

"During Thanksgiving I went to see one concert in Little Rock, one in Memphis, and finally watched another one on TV," freshman Shelby Smith said.

However, for many, going home meant spending time with the people they love most. "Seeing my family is what I look forward to when I think of going home," sophomore Rachel Carter said. "But even though I love going home, I'm always ready to come back to my friends here at Harding."

make their mark on campus

They weren't the "new kids on the block" anymore, but neither were they anywhere near graduation. They were sophomores with one year of college experience under their belts and were determined to build on it.

Being a sophomore meant many things – the last "upperclassmen" to try to register for classes; the last group to understand that pledge week did not have to be a "grudge match;" the class, next most likely to seniors, to return with a renewed commitment to getting things in perspective.

"Last year's experiences helped me to be stronger and not to take so many things for granted," sophomore Kim Burch said.

Lisa Fauth, a sophomore biology major, said coming to Harding brought her closer to God. "The opportunities are right here for you. Harding is not a perfect school, but it has a spiritual emphasis state schools just don't have."

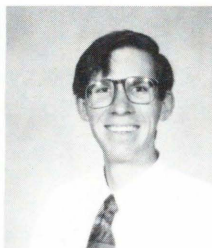

As sophomores neared the end of the spring semester and their first days of college became a more distant memory, maturity and wisdom began to envelop them and to ready them for the days ahead as "real upperclassmen."

'Christian fun will be done' serves as theme for the. . .

STUDENT ACTIVITIES COMMITTEE

From concerts to virtual reality, there was always something to do on Harding's campus, thanks largely to the Student Activities Committee (SAC). The committee's motto, "Christian fun will be done," proved appropriate as they searched for ways to keep students active.

Led by graduate student Terry Davis, the committee consisted of 30 members, with each class equally represented. Members met to assign responsibilities for events and give suggestions for future activities.

In order to get ideas for activities to bring to Harding, Davis attended the National Association of Campus Activities' annual convention in Nashville, Tenn. After a day of watching comedians, bands and unusual tricks, Davis narrowed the possibilities to those suitable for a Harding audience.

Once talent was found and a date was set, committee members did their part by selling tickets and doing what was necessary to make sure the show ran smoothly. "We work all of the functions. It's like a job, but we don't get paid. We do it because we want to," said freshman Freedom Goguen.

The job may sound like a lot of work, but it had its rewards. Each member received free admission for themselves and a date to activities and movies. Workers were also able to meet performers and "enjoy a wide variety of activities that they ordinarily wouldn't have seen," said junior Amy Conner.

Some activities were more popular than others, however; numbers weren't the sole measure of success in the eyes of the SAC. Davis said, "If the activity was accomplished and the students liked it, it was a success."

Students reinstitute dorm devotionals in. . .

P.M. PRAISE

The Harding campus has always been alive with opportunities for spiritual growth and discovery. In 1993 many students became involved with a brand new concept in devotional and praise time. P.M. Praise was originally intended to be just another slate of dorm devotionals. But with dorm devos playing such a prominent and sometimes tiresome role in the past, the spiritual life committee decided to put a new twist on things.

Carolyn Holmes, who along with Nathan Mellor was appointed to co-chair P.M. Praise, said, "People often have negative images of devos, so we decided to make it more of a time for just praising God... a time for students to unwind after curfew, to relax and re-focus."

With P.M. Praise, the emphasis

was definitely on praise. The short programs, held every other Tuesday night in each dorm, consisted mainly of songs and prayer. Speakers would address the groups with about five minutes of brief thoughts and messages. "This gave students who might not otherwise have it, the chance to speak to their peers," said Holmes.

P.M. Praise was also designed with accessibility in mind. The programs started at 11:15 p.m. and seldom lasted longer than 20 minutes. This format proved more convenient for students.

Faith Ort, a senior from Vancouver, Wash., said, "I think it's a wonderful idea. It has brought a lot of different people out who might not normally attend devos. And I know our group in Stephens has grown very close."

Kristi Cash, a senior from Gresham, Ore., said, "It's a good idea. I think that often we don't take enough time to clear our minds and just praise God."

SPARE TIME

Tests, quizzes, essays and term papers are all things people associate with college. Although the main goal of college is to further a student's education and prepare him/her for the job market, it's important to remember that play is also important. College isn't just grades and degrees; it's a place where hobbies are pursued, students get to know each other, and where memories are made.

Before and after classes, the student center was a popular gathering place. During the day, a person could walk in and find almost every table filled with people talking, laughing and socializing. Conversation topics ranged from intramural sports and visits to Heber Springs, to job interviews and summer mission trips.

"The student center was probably my favorite place on campus," said senior Doug Horton. "I could eat, visit with my friends, and keep from being bored all at the same time."

Time away from classes was spent in leisure activities as well. Many students made exercise a regular part of their day. Several students had Nautilus gym memberships so they could play racquetball, lift weights or do aerobics. And on any given night, dozens of students could be found running at the track.

"Sometimes when I felt tense I'd go running," said freshmen Tish Elliot. "It was often a struggle to make myself do it, but after I got back from running, I'd always feel better than I did before I left."

On Friday and Saturday nights, movie-going was a common activity. The Student Association usually showed a movie in the Benson Auditorium, and the Searcy Cinema V was always glad to welcome Harding students.

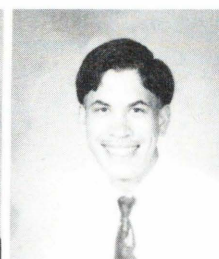

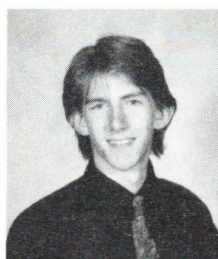

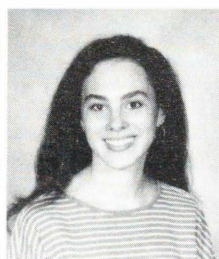

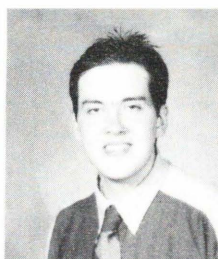

For those who ventured out of Searcy, Little Rock provided a nice break from the usual weekend routine. There, a student could not only see a movie, but eat at a wide variety of restaurants, attend a baseball game, ice skate, shop at a mall or attend a concert.

Regardless of your class load, there was time to enjoy life, and to thank God for giving you the opportunity to live it.

For Rose Wilson, touching lives was. . .

ALL IN A DAY'S WORK

When looking back through time, each of us can recognize a milestone that set a definite course for the rest of our lives. Such a milestone came in 1968 in the life of Rosemary Wilson, Harding's assistant to the director of admissions until October of this year.

That year, her husband George was offered a promotion which would take their family from Jonesboro, Ark., to Searcy. Although she and the children preferred to stay where they were, Rose led her children to submit to George's leadership. Sure enough, that move brought countless blessings to their family.

Not only did George's promotion work out well, but the children's education was Christian and Rose's contribution to Harding was far reaching—literally into every student's life for the next 25 years.

As assistant to the director of admissions, you could say that Rose was the admissions office. Her knowledge of the work and her wisdom in dealing with people made her invaluable. At her retirement dinner in October, President David Burks called her "the voice of Harding to prospective students and their parents." Former director Fred Alexander cited her humor and compassion, saying, "Rose was a subordinate, partner and superior" all at the same time.

In all things, even when offered the job of admissions director, Rose thought of her family. She refused the position because she was already giving as much time as she could to her job without neglecting them. About her years at Harding Rose said, "If I had never done anything else, I would feel that I had accomplished what I was put on earth for in serving God and my family."

Harding becomes more environmentally conscious by starting a . . .

RECYCLING PROGRAM

Recycling garbage has for some time been on the minds of various students and faculty members. People like Dr. William Ryan, a faculty advocate, and members of RENEW (Realize the Environmental Necessity to the Earth now) advocated Harding's involvement in recycling efforts, but the problem of cost-efficiency clouded their vision. However, that cloud began to dissipate in 1992 when members of RENEW presented Lott Tucker, Harding's vice president for finance, with some ideas concerning a solution to the problem. After the meeting, Tucker contacted key officials and began to lay the groundwork for a recycling program. Within months, the Harding administration produced a well-formulated plan for a campus recycling project.

The fall semester marked the beginning of this "dream come true." With the anticipated completion of Searcy's first recycling center (a building project launched by Mayor David Evans), Clyde Owen, director of buildings and services at Harding, supervised the purchase and installation of a Cam-2 compactor and a 40-yard dumpster, both situated near the physical plant, and a food mulcher, which was installed behind the dishwasher unit in the cafeteria. Although these three units were operational by December, the hard-core recycling did not begin until spring.

Once the project was in full swing, students placed their aluminum cans in designated dispensers, while disposing of all other trash in garbage cans at the bottom of each dormitory stairwell. In offices, staff and faculty members separated their garbage in three ways: white paper, aluminum cans and non-recyclable trash. Those departments on campus which produced large amounts of cardboard waste separated used cardboard and all other non-recyclable materials.

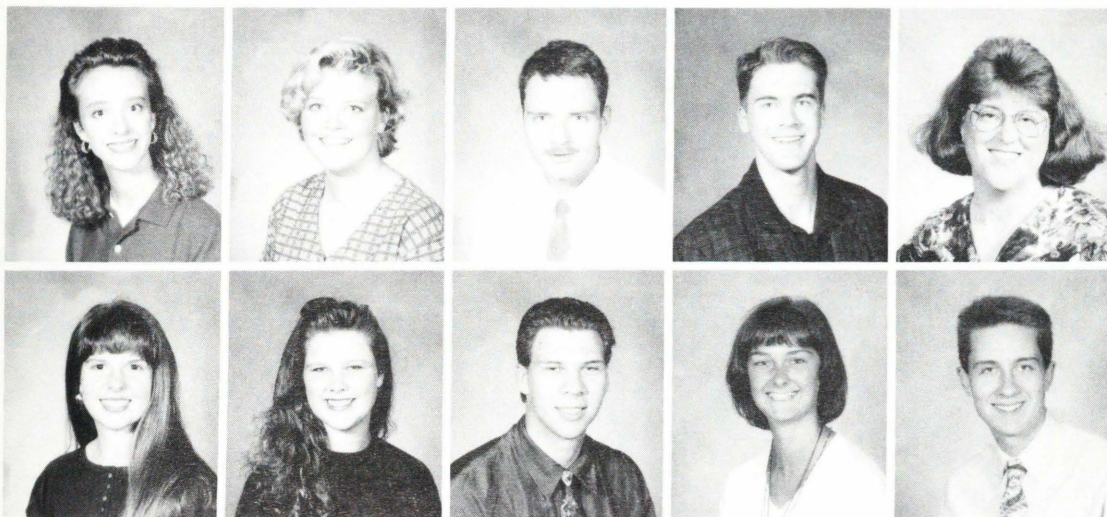

Maintenance workers picked up, separated and disposed of the garbage, and members of the Searcy Sanitation Department made pickups regularly.

This new disposal system proved more cost-efficient than the old one for one reason: the less non-recyclable garbage Harding produced, the less Harding paid Searcy to transport it to the landfill.

FRESHMEN

provide food for Bosnia

As the world becomes smaller through communication, people become more concerned about the suffering of others in remote places of the world. Harding students showed their concern by taking action through service projects.

The freshman class, led by their elected officers, organized a food-gathering campaign designed to help Bosnians suffering from the devastation war brought to their country.

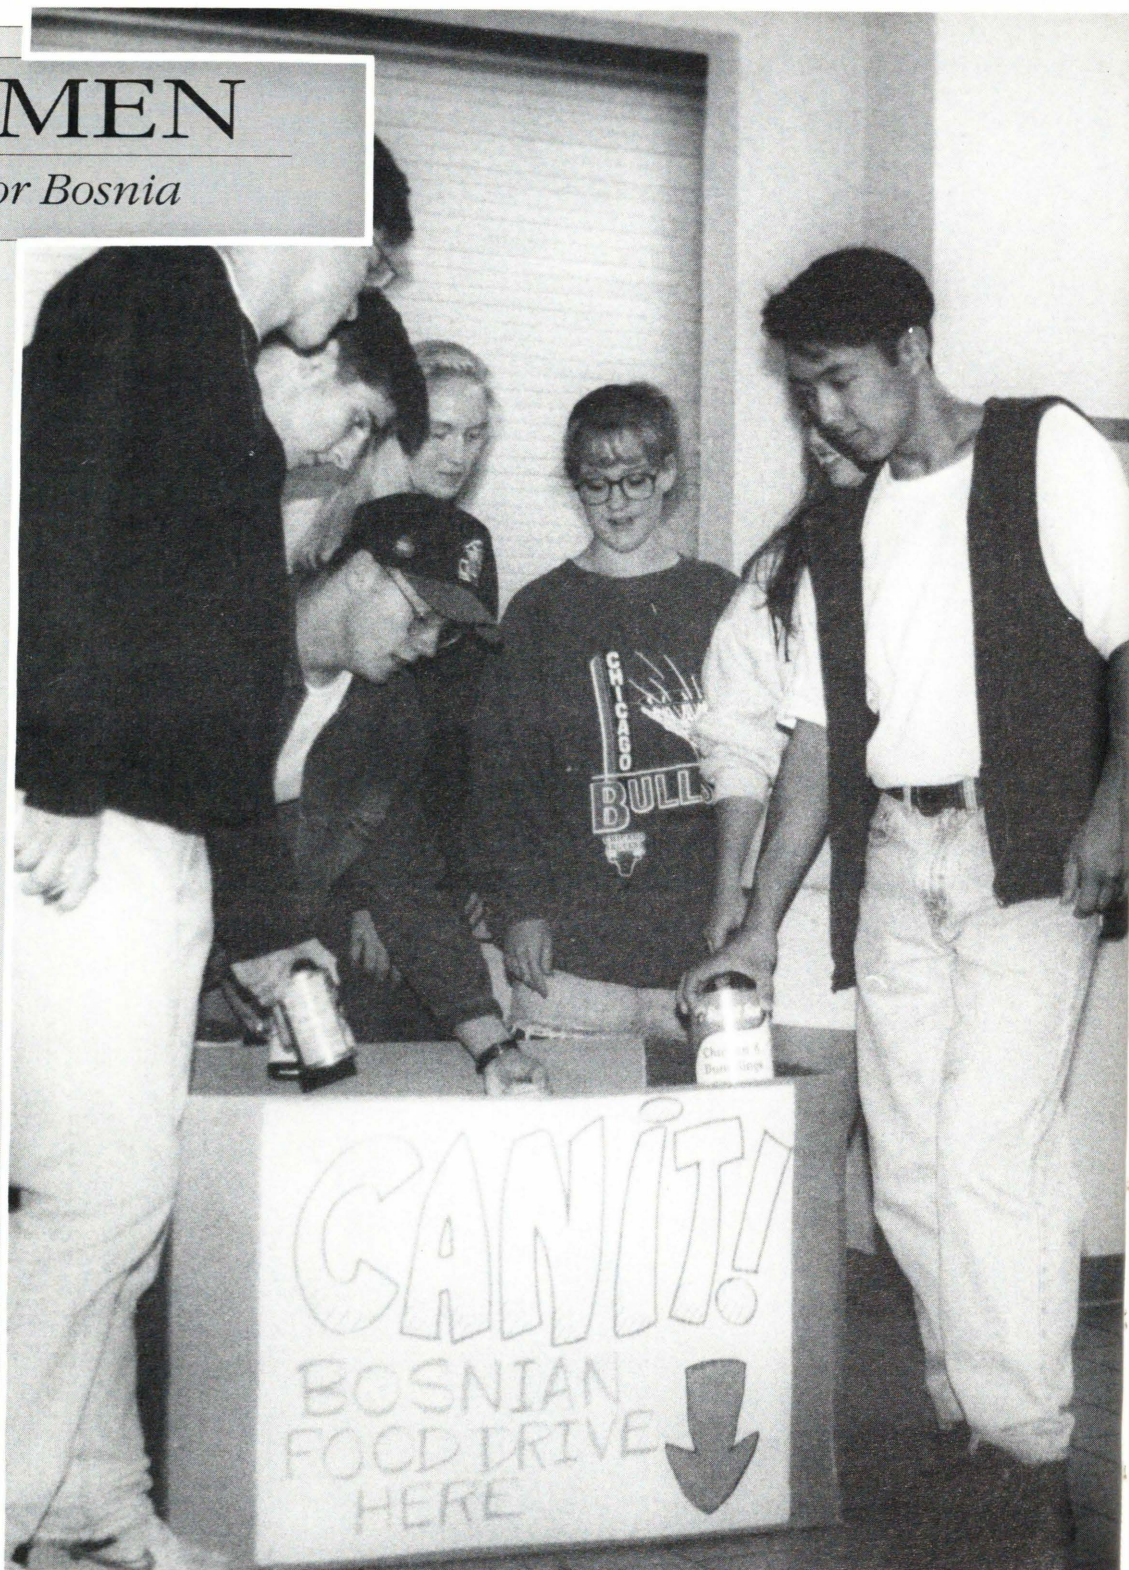

To kick off the drive, Dan Norton and Ty Christopher, freshman class president and vice president, called Ivan Tesic during chapel. Tesic, a member of the church in Croatia, took a few minutes to share with the entire student body details about the situation in Bosnia. Once the food was collected, it was packed and shipped to Dallas, where Love In Action combined it with other shipments of food and routed it to its destination in Bosnia.

Helping others is often a good way to help yourself. "One of the major goals of this project was to unify the freshman class by serving others as Christ served others," Christopher said.

By beginning their year in service to the Bosnians, the freshmen laid a foundation for growth that would carry them through the rest of the year.

Moving from a large city to Searcy is a . . .

BIG TRANSITION

Leaving home to go to college always involves a number of adjustments. For many, making the transitions from "big" cities to one the size of Searcy was one of the toughest.

"This is going to take some adjusting to," said Irene Bedolla, a freshman from Chicago, Illinois.

"Activity" seemed to be the most noticeable difference. "I miss the big city because there was always something to do there," said Missy Grady, a freshman from Littleton, Colorado.

Hanging out at Wal-Mart, Frozen D's and TCBY were often the most creative ways students had of finding something "fun" to do in the city of Searcy, with its 16,000 residents.

The Student Association planned special activities each weekend. Many students stayed on campus for club sports, movies and concerts, to do laundry, or even to play volleyball or frisbee on the front lawn. Most, however, drove to Little Rock occasionally to eat out, shop or go to a movie.

But even without the excitement of a big city, Searcy had its advantages. Most students felt secure in its small-town environment. "The people here are really friendly and they always ask if you are from Harding," said Sherrie Krebs, a freshman from Glen Allen, Virginia.

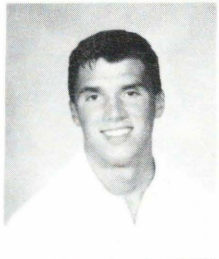

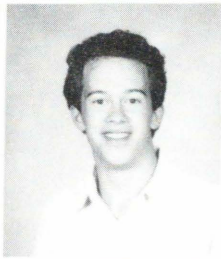

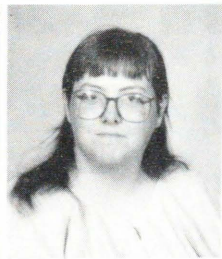

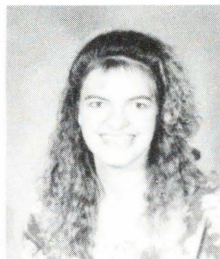

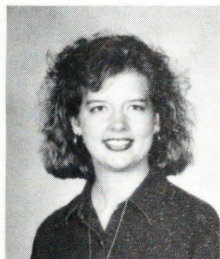

For the most part, students liked Searcy. The environment, the diversity and the stores were cited as unique aspects when compared to larger cities. It often took some "getting used to" but, for most freshmen, Searcy became "home sweet home."

Although unofficial, Harding soccer is. . .

COMING ON STRONG

Although soccer has been around for a long time and has received lots of recognition in Mexico, Italy, England and other countries, the sport has just started to pick up momentum in this part of the United States.

The Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference (AIC), of which Harding is a member, has not included soccer in its sports program, but a number of AIC schools formed the Arkansas Intercollegiate Soccer League. As of this year, the league included teams from Henderson State University, Arkansas Tech University, University of Southern Arkansas, Arkansas College, University of Arkansas at Little Rock and Ouachita Baptist University.

The Rogues and Sidekicks, two teams composed largely of Harding students, had already been competing in community and/or intercollegiate matches for about five years. A women's team, the Strikers, was started this year to eliminate the necessity that women who wished to play be on a men's team.

Senior Leana Watson, the women's team captain, was the only woman on the Sidekicks team last year. "It was fun, but I felt a little awkward. I worked really hard to get a girls' team started and it's rewarding to see 20 girls on the field when we practice."

Competition for positions on the men's teams has grown each year, with 65 trying out for teams this season. Senior David Hook, captain of the Sidekicks and one of the tryout judges, said, "Some tough decisions had to be made. I do feel that the best guys were chosen."

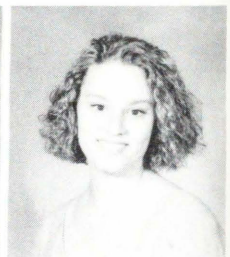

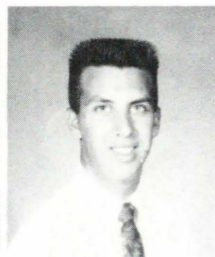

Because the teams were independent, the expenses for referees, uniforms, transportation, etc., were paid by the players. Freshman Jeremy Kendricks said, "I hope that Harding and the other schools will someday sponsor soccer so that it will be simpler and less expensive for the team members."

The All-School Retreat gets the school year. . .

OFF TO A GOOD START

The Bible department sponsored an All-School retreat the first weekend after school began to help new and returning students "get off to a good start," according to Monte Cox, coordinator. Designed to encourage students "to renew their commitment to the Lord," the two-day program was held at Camp Wyldewood.

Stanley Shipp, coordinator of missions internships for the Mid-County Church of Christ in St. Louis, was the keynote speaker. His three presentations and those of other speakers—Mark Moore, Robert Chambers, Marnie Moore and Suzanne Casey—focused on the general topic of commitment.

"Stanley Shipp's lessons were real encouraging to me," said Angie Fouts, a freshman from Searcy. "He found a way to tell people in various situations about God."

Small group discussions and prayer times were interspersed with lectures and a special presentation of spiritual songs by the student group, Legacy.

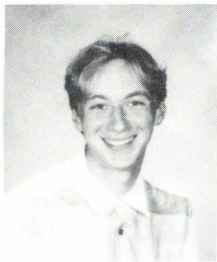

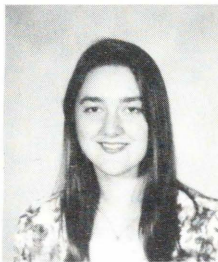

On Saturday morning, participants were encouraged to "grab a friend" and go off by themselves "to recommit their lives and to share and pray together about their renewed commitments," Cox said. "There were some real live confessions," he said. "I saw some real change in people's lives that morning."

Amy Jones, a freshman from Valdosta, Georgia, said, "The retreat was a lot of fun. It was very spiritually-oriented, and it provided a great chance for freshmen to meet other people."

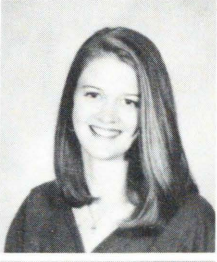

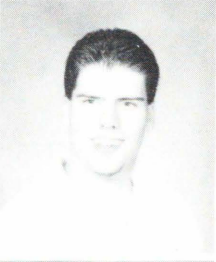

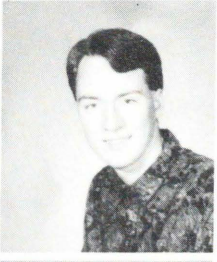

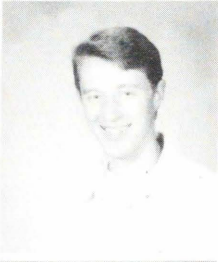

This was the first year since 1977 that an event like this was held. "We're going to try to make this an annual event," Cox said. "It really seemed to make an impact on the lives of the people who attended."

It's after curfew, but the fun is just beginning. . .

AFTER HOURS

The time was 11 p.m. The place was a Harding dorm at curfew. One might assume that students were getting ready to go to sleep, but don't be fooled. Just because everyone was in the dorm didn't mean that everyone was settling down for bed. In all reality, the dorms were just beginning to liven up.

All during the day, students were in and out of classes, in and out of the cafeteria, and in and out of the library. The only time that everyone was guaranteed to be in the dorm was after curfew, so it was no surprise that this was when most people decided to visit with one another.

"I was hardly ever in bed before 12:30," admitted Shannon Willhite, a sophomore who lived in Sears. "Some of us girls would get together every night to talk, laugh, and play around."

Shannon believed that people really got to know each other while everyone was sitting around in shorts and t-shirts an hour after curfew. "After curfew you really didn't care what you looked like; you weren't trying to impress anyone," explained Shannon. "The real you came out, because you were just out to have a good time and maybe make a new friend or two in the process."

Unfortunately, not everyone was able to stay up and be a part of the dorm night life. Some had responsibilities the next day that made it crucial for them to get to bed as close to 11:00 as possible.

Matt Quigley, a freshman who lived in Armstrong, was on the school's cross-country team. The team practiced at 6 a.m. every day. Matt said there was no way he could stay up until one o'clock and be ready for practice when he woke up.

"In a way I miss not getting to stay up late like a lot of the other guys," Matt admitted. "Guys would be out in the hall playing baseball, and I'd want to go out and join them, but I knew better. If I had it all to do again, I wouldn't change a thing though, because I really enjoyed being in cross-country."

Dorm life could be a lot of fun, but every once in a while things could get out of hand. Keeping everyone in line was the responsibility of the resident assistants. R.A.'s not only made sure that everyone was in his or her room on time, but they also made sure that the noise didn't get too loud and that the dorm rules weren't broken.

"Usually things were pretty calm," said Carter Davis, a junior R.A. in Keller. "After curfew on my hall, most guys usually sat around watching television, playing video games, or talking to girls on the phone. Every now and then I'd see someone actually studying. Very rarely did I have to put someone in his place."

When college years are a thing of the past, many memories live on, and among them the many bonding experiences encountered during the years spent in dorms.

Most Harding students go with the flow, but some are. . .

BREAKING TRADITION

The typical profile for Harding students has been 18 to 23 years of age, single, residing in a university dormitory, belonging to a social club and participating in intramural athletics. Although most students continued to meet these criteria, many fell into a category known as non-traditional.

Among those was Karen Chandler, who was married and had two small children. "It was really tough trying to take care of my family and, at the same time, keep up in school," she said. "I'm still working on my time management skills."

An accounting major who has been enrolled since the fall of '92, Karen said that being in classes with students who were 10 years younger was, at times, stressful. "In the back of my mind I'm thinking, 'Hey, I'm going to have to compete against these people for jobs. So many of these students are really bright.'"

"I'm just hoping that there are some employers out there who are looking for an older person to fill some positions," Karen said, "someone who has a couple of years under her belt – someone like me."

Most non-traditional students lived off campus, but Greg Faulk was an exception. A 29-year-old ex-Marine, Greg decided to spend his first semester in college in the dorm. "Living in the dorm was quite an experience," Greg said. "It was fun while it lasted, but I was ready to move into an apartment my second semester."

Extracurricular activities generally drew only traditional students, but Russell Miller spent 20-25 hours each week as copy editor of the Bison. "Working on the Bison has given me a chance to meet a lot of students. At first they thought of me as 'the old guy,' but once they got to know me, I became just one of the guys."

With more and more people returning to college each year to be better prepared for the job market, it has been no surprise that Harding's non-traditional student population was partly responsible for six consecutive years of record enrollments.

Having a sibling at Harding is almost like. . .

HOME AWAY FROM HOME

"Sibling rivalry" was a somewhat foreign concept for Harding students whose brother or sister was also enrolled. Most said they enjoyed having each other around, "especially during the hard times," and that relationships grew stronger because of the common bond they shared as students.

Karen and Diana Springer, freshman twins from West Germany, chose to room together. Diana said, "It's great to have someone here that I know. You can remember home, remember the good times, make good things out of being so far away from home." Karen and Diana, who grew up being best friends, say rooming together has made them even closer. "It's great being sisters because we each get to meet different people and we both get to know them," Karen said.

Jen and Scott Thornton came to Harding from Franklin, Tenn. Although they were not particularly close, they say their relationship has grown since they have been together at college. "I loved my brother being here. It made it easier for me because he was an upperclassman," Jen said. "If I got homesick, I could just go see my brother, and that always helped." Scott said, "I really enjoyed having my younger sister here. It's home away from home and I always have someone to talk to if I need to."

David and Keith Evans came to Searcy from Houston, Texas. "My brother and I get along better now than before, and we have grown closer since we came to Harding," Keith said. David agreed, saying, "I really enjoyed having my brother here with me. I can keep an eye on him." All the students agreed that it has been a wonderful experience for them to be at Harding together. They shared a lot of good times and a lot of heartaches throughout the year. Jen summarized the feelings shared by siblings by saying, "Having someone there to share good times and to lend a shoulder for the bad makes it wonderful to have family close by."

cademics at Harding are set in a tradition of excellence.

Students learn in an atmosphere of Christian love.

Small classes and the feeling of family allowed students to know their teachers well. Caring professors reached beyond the classroom into the lives of students to mold them into Christian professionals. That caring attitude caused teachers to push students to their limits academically and to require hands-on experience in many of their chosen professions.

Graduates were equipped to leave Harding, competent in their chosen fields and having a solid spiritual foundation on which to build their futures.

LeAnn Pierce, Academics Editor

President and Chancellor Lend Support to Students

Taking a visible approach to his presidency, Dr. David Burks donated a lot of personal time to student activities in order to "get to know the students better."

"I enjoy being around students," he said, as he explained his open-door policy. And the door was not only open to his office, but also to his home. Burks and his wife, Leah, hosted Bible studies and various meetings in their home. "Sharing time with students gives me opportunity to better understand them," he said.

Burks' most visible exposure to students was also his favorite. Presiding over chapel each morning gave him opportunity "to have a positive influence in the lives of students," he said.

Sporting his casual shorts and t-shirt instead of his usual suit and tie, Burks helped students who worked in a cleanup effort to assist flood victims. "That's what Harding is all about," he remarked to the chapel audience upon his return.

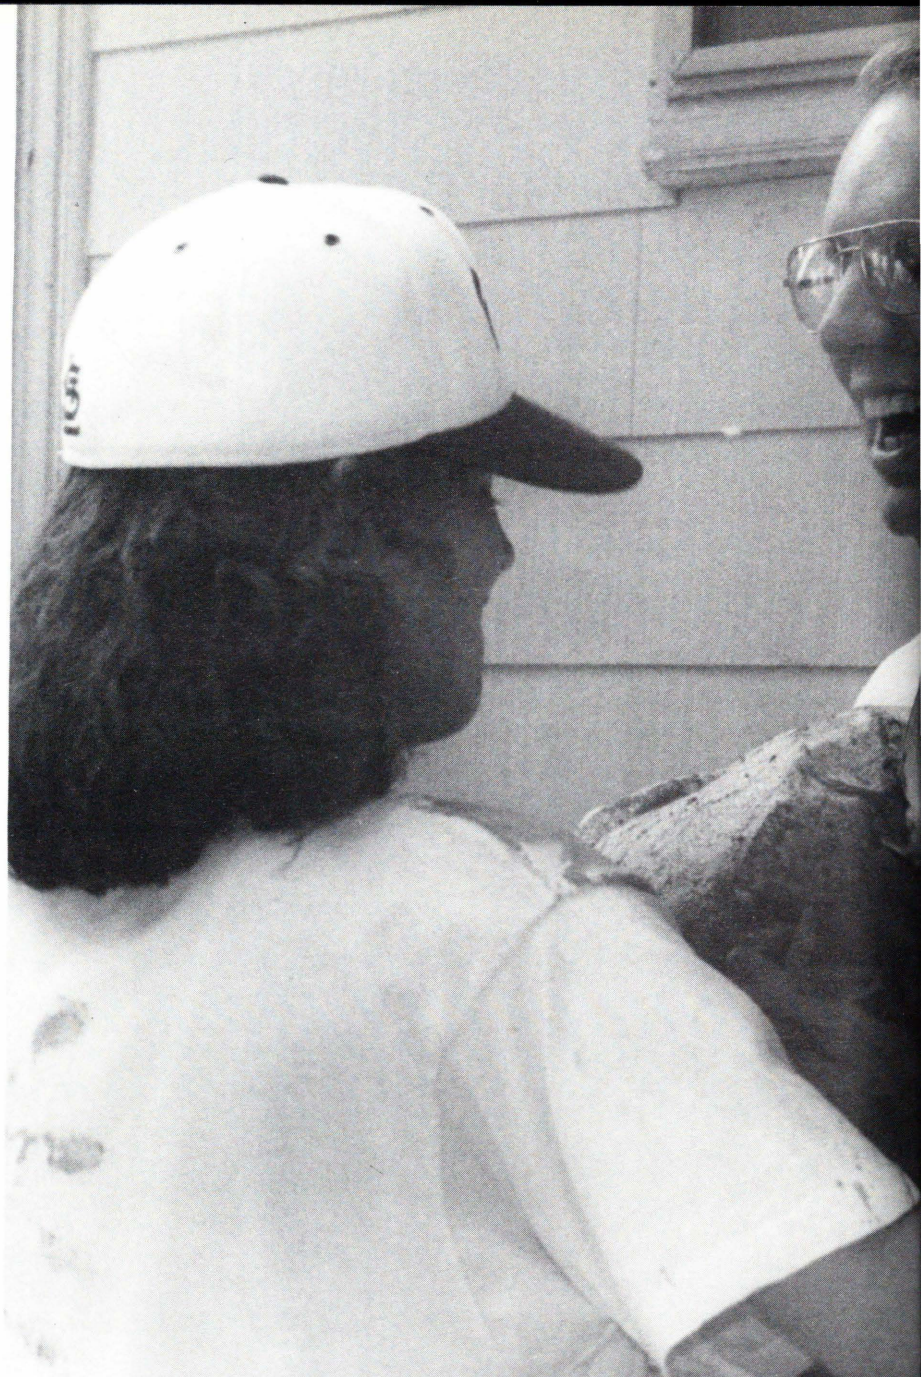

But Burks was not alone in his support of students. Chancellor Clifton L. Ganus, Jr. was most visible at athletic competitions. Off campus, he spent a great deal of time in Central America and Mexico, recruiting students and raising money for the support of Harding.

Ganus' international interests were seen during his teaching years as he shared his knowledge of other cultures with students, and during his administrative years as he established Harding University in Florence (HUF), a one-semester program of studies abroad.

His role as chancellor kept Ganus traveling throughout the United States establishing financial trusts and other fundraising efforts, as well as promoting Harding through personal contacts.

Board, Council Continue Tradition of Excellence

Twice a year – once in the fall and once in the spring – the board of trustees and president's council traveled to campus to assist in planning and policy making to secure the future of Harding.

The board had important goals to accomplish as its members established school policy and ensured its implementation. Approval of a new five-year plan and a Harding University in Greece curriculum took top priority in the fall meeting, but continued building projects and renovations were also planned.

Don Shores, a trustee since 1976, expressed his pleasure with Harding's impact on young lives. "The most gratifying aspect of my job is to see Harding grow in the teaching of God's word and to see young people going out into the world and spreading the good news of Jesus Christ," he said.

The president's council, consisting of about 400 families serving five-year terms, offered advice and guidance as the university launched its "The Dream Continues" campaign and formulated a 20-year plan for growth. Advancement Officer Art Woods said, "These people are our most valuable asset as volunteers through raising funds, recruiting students and hosting functions."

Citing his own personal experience at Harding, Chairman Jim Bob Humphrey told the council that his course of life was altered "when he found a university where strong Christian ideals were commonplace."

In speeches and casual conversations, the mutual impact of Harding and its people surfaced over and over. Offering an outsider's look into campus life, both the board and the council provided tremendous service to the university.

Harding's Vice Presidents Expect Promising Future

Floyd Daniel stepped into a new position this year, that of senior vice president for university relations. When asked if he liked his new position, his surprising answer was "no," but he quickly added a resounding, "I love it!"

Daniel's new job requirements demanded that he spend a considerable amount of time off campus. He often traveled to different states to help find support for Harding. Daniel said his first priority was, "not raising funds, but raising friends." He added, "Friends can give while funds cannot, and friends can pray while funds cannot." Daniel remarked that his new job gave him more time to be with people who love and appreciate what God has done at Harding.

Each of the other four vice presidents were asked what was their favorite aspect of the position. Gary Elliott, vice president for advancement, replied, "being involved in Christian education." Lott Tucker, vice president for finance, said, "working with different types of people." Neale Pryor, vice president for academics, said, "working with the students and meeting with the deans every Thursday for lunch." Executive Vice President Jim Carr said that "the Harding family" was his favorite part of his job.

All five men have high expectations and goals for Harding's future. Elliott hopes to see "The Dream Continues," a five-year plan designed to expand the campus, fulfilled. Tucker predicted an enrollment increase of two to three percent each year, which would necessitate additional housing. Carr sees Harding becoming even more outstanding academically, with an even greater reputation. Pryor said simply, "We'll be getting stronger and stronger and stronger...."

With the leadership and dedication exhibited by these five men, fulfillment of Pryor's prediction seems inevitable.

Deans Spend Leisure Hours in Variety of Special Ways

Participating in some kind of lifelong sport or hobby, playing with children or grandchildren, or even working on a profession-related project were among the favorite pastimes of Harding's academic deans this year.

Dr. Dean Priest, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences and professor of mathematics, had once planned to be a music major so he spent time away from work leading singing at church or singing at weddings. He also played racquetball, a sport in which he once competed in tournament play.

An avid sportsman, Dr. David Tucker, dean of the School of Business, was a sports participant, coach and observer. He coached his daughter's soccer team, watched his children play ball, took his family snow-skiing during spring break, and managed a relaxing game of golf occasionally.

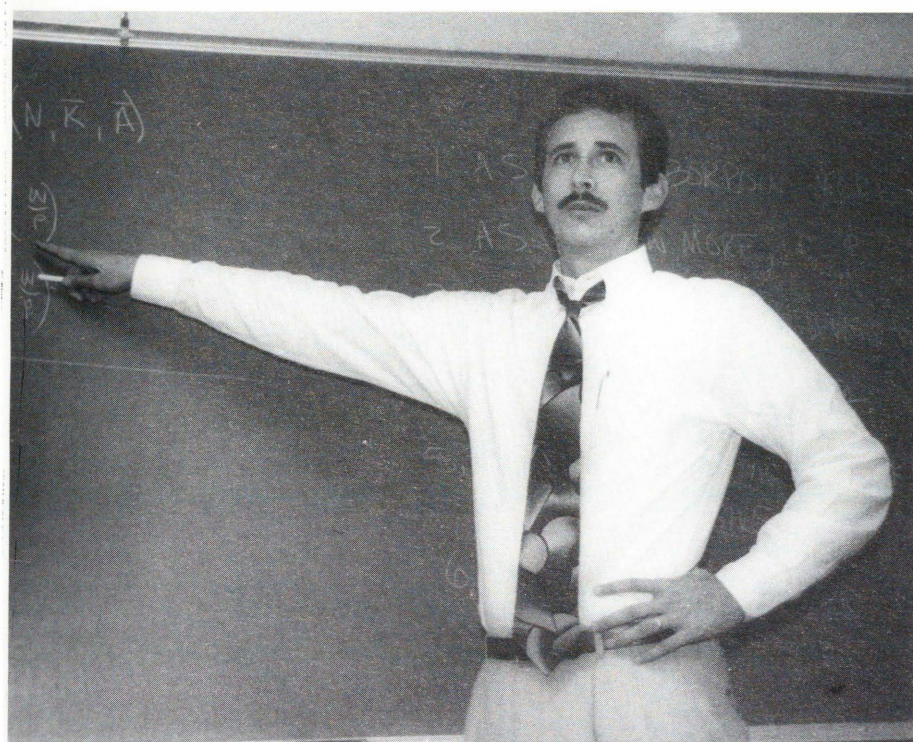

Dean of the School of Education, Dr. Bobby Coker found pleasure in counseling students and in visiting colleges as a part of his work with the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education (NCATE). At home, he masqueraded as a carpenter, mechanic and cook.

Dr. Carl Mitchell, dean of the College of Bible and Religion, spent occasional time on the golf greens with friends. Among his greatest joys were seeing that students were challenged to succeed and spending leisure time with his seven grandchildren.

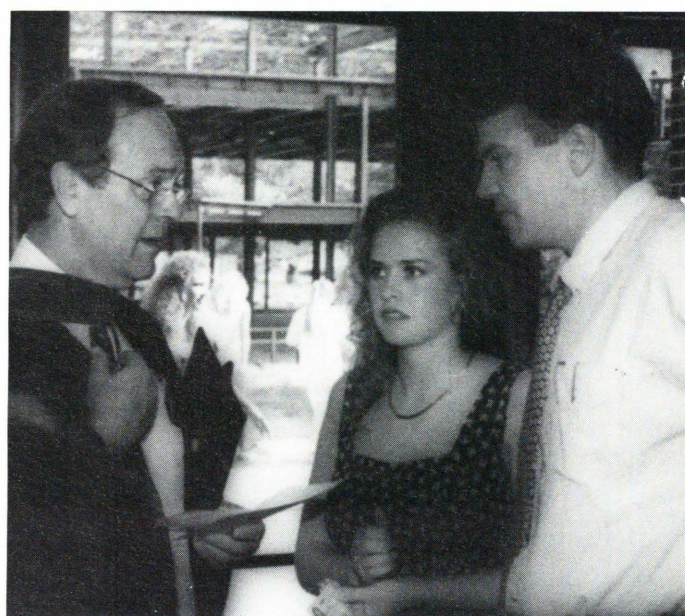

A member of President Bill Clinton's task force on health, Dr. Cathleen Shultz, dean of the School of Nursing, authored an article in Nursing and Health Care magazine. In addition to her professional work, Shultz enjoyed making jams and jellies, quilting and gardening.

Alumni, Parent Relations Promote Special Programs

The Office of Alumni and Parent Relations has been an integral part of the University Relations division at Harding. Dr. Jimmy Carr, assistant to the president, and Doris Coward, assistant director of alumni relations, coordinate many events involving alumni and parents of current students each year.

According to Coward, the office is responsible for keeping alumni records updated and for printing an alumni directory every four years. They also provide academic departments with current information about their graduates.

"If the English department calls us," Coward said, "and they want to know how many English graduates we have living in California, I can not only give them the exact number, but I can also tell them what city they live in, what street they live on, and what their telephone numbers are."

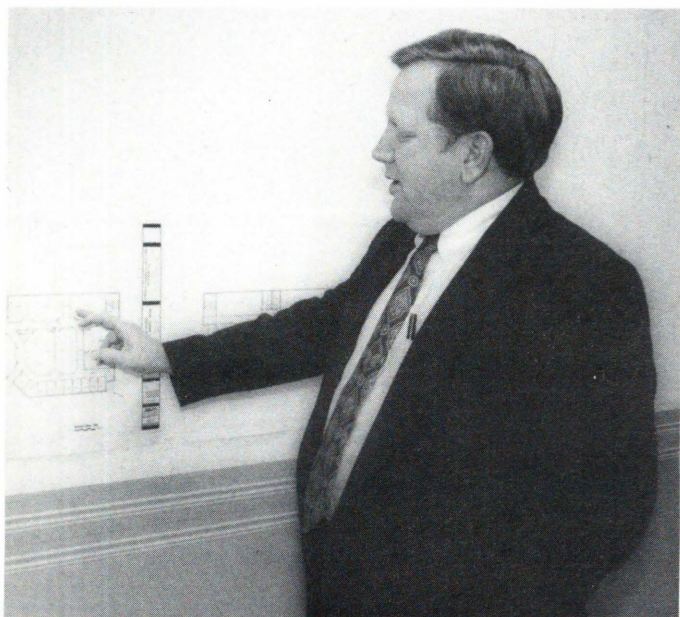

Coward, who compiles alumni information for inclusion in Harding magazine, said she maintained an active file this year on about 27,000 graduates, making sure they received each issue of the magazine and information about class reunions and other items of interest.

"There are approximately 5,000 graduates who are classified as 'inactive' because we are no longer able to contact them," she said. "Basically, these are people who moved and didn't leave us a forwarding address. When materials are returned to us as 'undeliverable,' we try to reestablish contact, but that isn't always possible."

Parents' Weekend and Homecoming were also planned and coordinated by the Alumni office. "We usually start in March, trying to make plans and preparations for the fall," Coward said. The office is assisted by Harding Hosts, about 20 students who are selected to work with alumni and parent programs.

HU Health Services Staff Promotes Student Wellness

The Student Health Services provided basic nursing care, physician referrals and some over-the-counter medications to Harding students each week. Pat Rice, director of the health services office since 1984, said the services they provided were well utilized by the student body.

"We see about half of the students over the course of a year," Rice said. "Sometimes they just want an opinion about a sprained ankle or they have a sore throat or some minor problem and we help them."

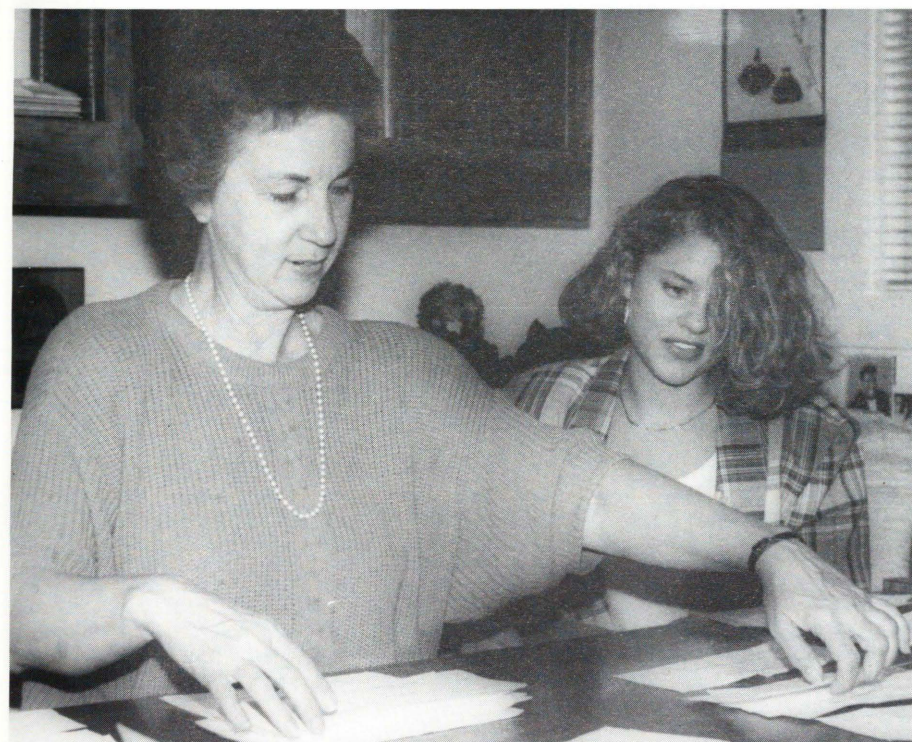

Rice emphasized that her job entailed more than just handing out an aspirin or removing stitches from someone's arm. "We are truly interested in the total student," Rice said. "We're not here to take care of the students' physical wellness only. We are interested in their spiritual and intellectual well-being, too."

On a typical day, Rice said, anywhere from 35 to 40 students used the health services. On some of the busiest days, however, she noted that as many as 140 students were seen in the clinic. She also mentioned that her office provided a car for transporting students to and from medical appointments, but that of all the services her department provided, this was the least utilized by the students.

The health center was only one of the many services provided for student support. These programs were designed to help make life a little easier for students outside the classroom.

Student Support Services Provide Academic Aid

For many, college is just one of life's great experiences, a challenge to be met and conquered. But for others, college is more than a challenge - it's downright hard.

The main goal of Student Support Services (SSS) was to help students academically. This was accomplished through tutoring, career planning, assessing and teaching study skills, personal counseling, personality testing, testing for learning disabilities, helping with financial aid, and helping with Pre-Professional Skills Test preparation. Other aspects of this web of support were assisting students with physical impairments and learning difficulties, note taking, interpreting, reading, supplying books on tape, critical thinking and aiding in cultural enrichment.

"The most important part of our job is helping students stay in school who might otherwise have dropped out," Jenene Alexander, diagnostician and member of the Student Support team, said. "There are kids out there who have financial problems, trouble at home or problems with academics. We try to keep these students in school."

Alexander said what separates Student Support's work from that of other academic support groups on campus is its interaction with the university. "We work with the university as a whole," Alexander said. "We listen to the student's needs and try to steer him or her in the right direction, whether that be financial aid or other special needs."

With approximately 275 students being helped by Student Support Services, Alexander said the most rewarding part of her job is, "getting to know so many students and sharing with them as they reach their goals."

In addition to SSS, Harding provides other academic aid organizations, including the Sears Learning Center, Brackett Library, Cooperative Education Program and ADVANCE.

Minor Prophets Serve As Lectureship Theme

More than 500 registered guests descended on the campus for the four-day annual lectureship September 26-29. Many were Harding alumni, coming to rekindle the spark of old memories. Others were newcomers, discovering the campus for the first time. Whatever their status, the visitors quickly took on a new role, as beneficiaries to the collective wisdom and insight of the lectureship's 60-plus speakers.

The speakers, like their audience, were diverse, hailing from around the country. But they carried a common banner and labored for a common cause, that of spiritual illumination, as explored in the theme, "Today Hear His Voice: The Minor Prophets Speak."

Dr. Don Shackelford, lectureship director, said, "I was excited about this particular theme. Sometimes I think the minor prophets are overlooked, but I believe their messages to be very relevant to Christians today."

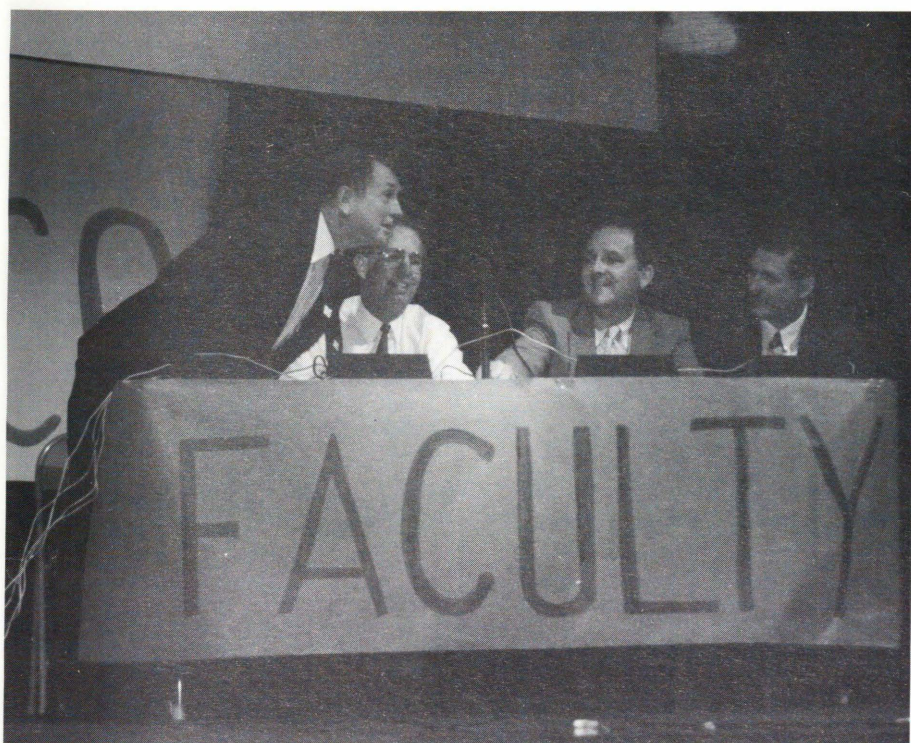

The lectures catered to everyone. Many of the daily classes offered topics of interest to all Christians. However, a few were designed specifically for the men, women and youth.

Every evening, large crowds gathered in the Benson Auditorium for the keynote lectures. These theme-oriented lessons, directly related to today's problems, served as finales to the day's activities.

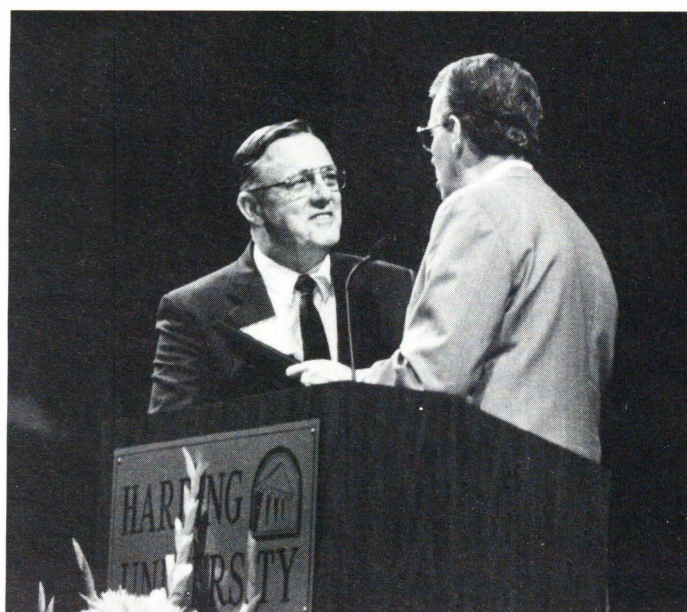

"I thought the lectures were directly applicable to the current situations in America. I found them both uplifting and enriching," said senior Rob Kernodle of Harrison, Ark.

Fire Damages Mansion At Graduate School

Tragedy struck Harding's Graduate School in Memphis July 29 when a fire broke out, destroying most of the contents of its Old Mansion and resulting in more than $1 million in damages.

"The fire started as a result of a short in a wiring junction box," said Lott Tucker, vice president for finance. The school lost computers, furniture and books. Of the 100,000 books housed in the structure, 15,000 were completely destroyed and the others have been freeze-dried.

The Old Mansion's attic and second floor were destroyed and the first floor received water damage. "At one time," Tucker said, "there was five feet of water in the basement." The fire left wooden floors buckled and the European artistry on the plaster ruined. "Only the interior was destroyed," Tucker said. "The foundation and walls remained strong."

Reconstruction of the Old Mansion provided a challenge. "Our insurance policy insures the replacement of everything as it was. Since we wanted centralized heating and air conditioning, the school had to come up with additional money to pay for the alterations," Tucker said.

The Leroy King Mansion, built in the 1930s, housed the administration and faculty offices for the graduate school. Following the fire, all of these offices were moved to classrooms. "We ran the school from our cramped quarters in the classroom building, but needed to get back into the Old Mansion as soon as possible," said Dr. Bill Flatt. However, the class schedule continued without interruption.

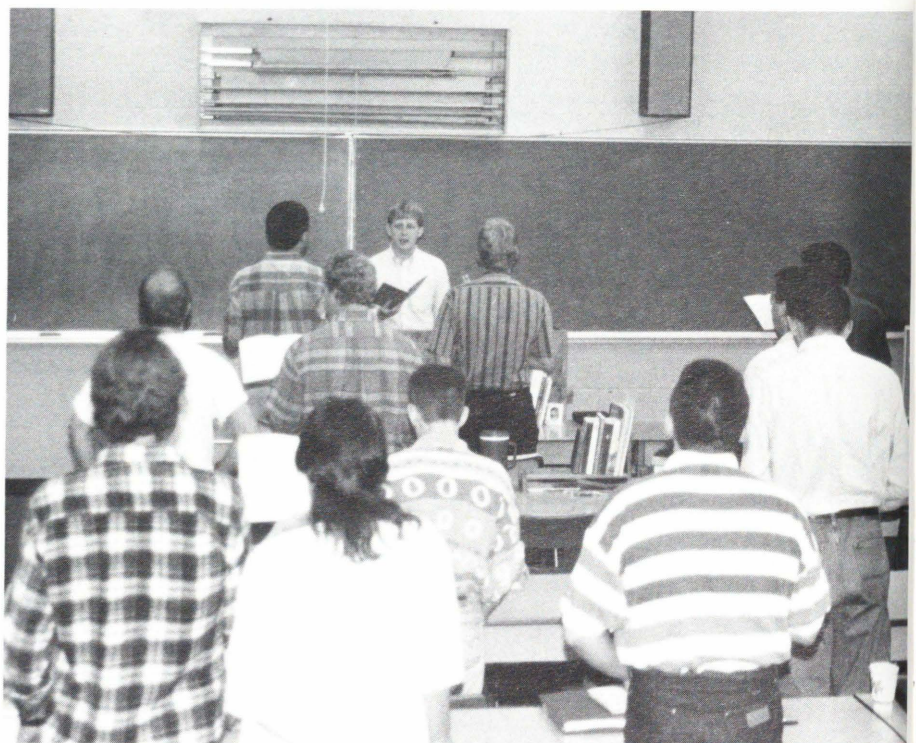

Harding began offering graduate courses at the Union Avenue Church of Christ in 1957. The graduate program moved to the present location in 1958.

School of Business Strengthens Curriculum

For Harding's School of Business, 1993-94 was a year of both academic growth and departmental expansion.

Dr. David Tucker, dean of the school, cited several examples of how his department had upgraded and strengthened the quality of instruction this past year. "We added two new faculty members," Tucker said. "Dr. Budd Hebert, who has extensive business experience in both oil and gas exploration and international business, designed and developed our new BBA program in International Business. Bill Hemphill, a 20-year Air Force veteran and the former chief of security at the Air Force Academy, was added to the management and marketing area." Tucker said Hemphill was also put in charge of the new ROTC scholarship program on campus. Scott Stovall rejoined the department this year after spending three years in doctoral study.

"A new minor was also added this year in computer applications," Tucker said. This resulted in 20-25 new computers and a new computer lab in the Mabree building. The school felt the new curriculum was needed so students could stay current in the marketplace, Tucker said.

There were also two promotional moves within the department this year. Dr. David Perkins was named director of the accounting program and Don Yates assumed the directorship of the Walton Scholarship Program.

Department Enhances State Education Program

The School of Education at Harding University offers a diversified program designed to meet both the career and vocational objectives of its students, as well as the academic needs of the community at large. On the undergraduate level, programs are offered which lead to degrees in 21 different fields of emphasis. Graduate programs lead to degrees in elementary education, elementary administration, secondary administration, reading and secondary education.

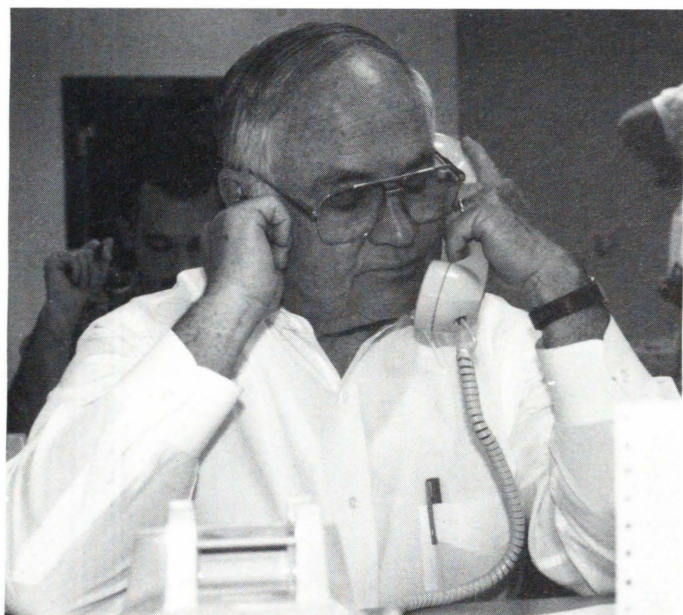

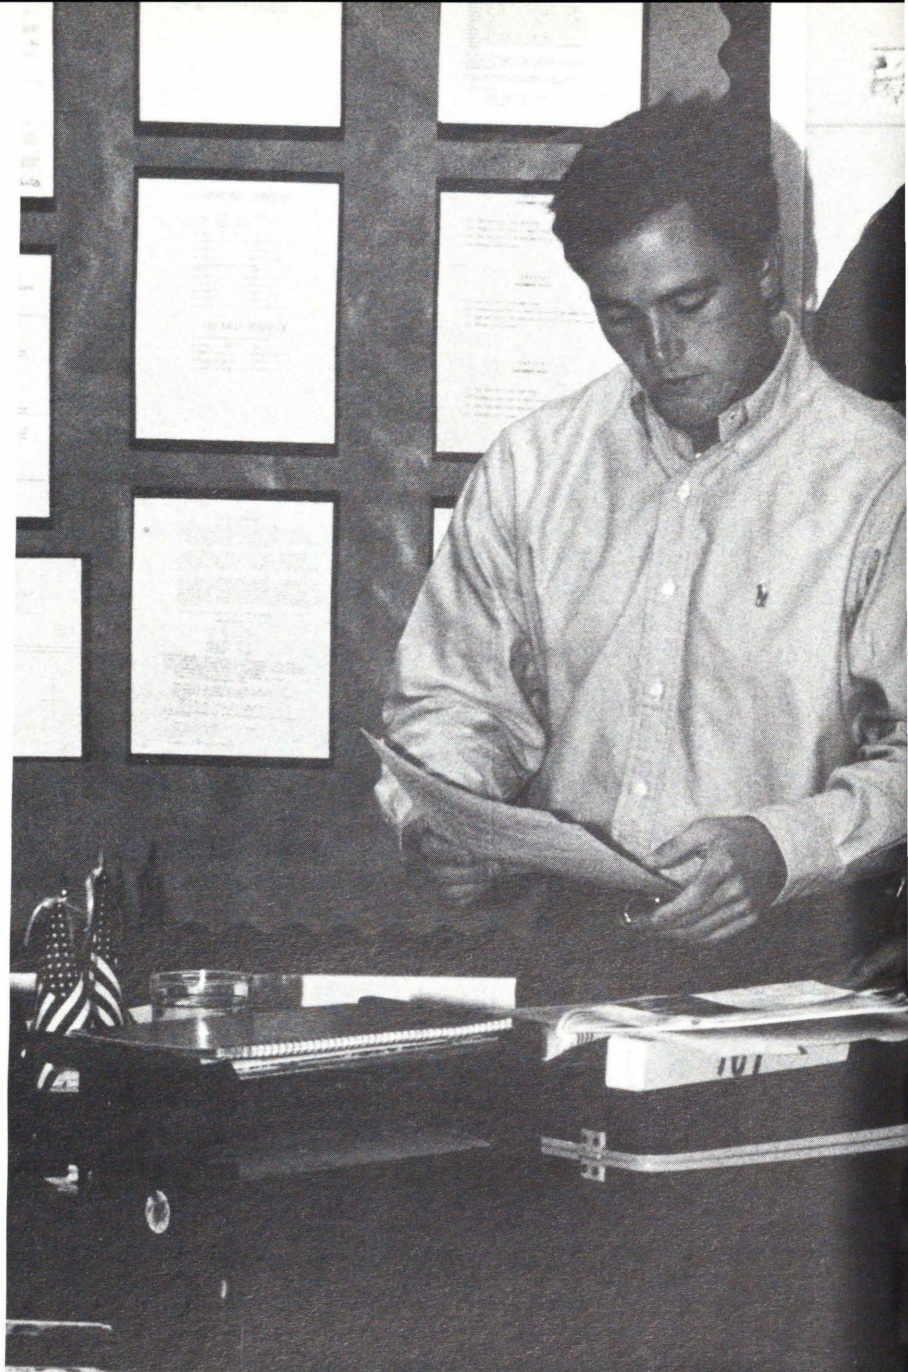

Dr. Bobby Coker, dean of the school, pointed to technological advancements and curriculum review as the focus of the department this year. "We instituted a major curriculum study to review the degree requirements of our elementary education program," Coker said. "In addition to that, we have been exploring ways in which we can make use of new advancements, like satellite technology, in order to upgrade and supplement the department's offerings. What we have been aiming for," Coker continued, "is a way in which we can make use of all the new instructional technology that has become available in the last few years."

"Dr. Tony Finley was also deeply involved with higher education training this year," Coker said. In January, Finley directed an on-campus program called "Science Crusade," in which 80 science teachers from around the state gathered for a week of intensive training, designed to help upgrade the level of science education in Arkansas.

Finley said the program was part of a $35 million grant, which is being spent over the next five years in an effort to improve the quality of math and science instruction in the state.

Nursing Organization Earns National Honors

The School of Nursing was more than an ordinary group of people who happened to be pursuing a career in the medical field. It was the birthplace of the award-winning Epsilon Omicron chapter of Sigma Theta Tau International.

A national honor society for nursing, the local chapter consisted of nursing students, nursing faculty and community nursing leaders. Dr. Cathleen Shultz, dean of the school, served as president of the chapter. "Only a small percentage of junior and senior nursing students with a high GPA could be nominated," said Julie Clapp, a member of the organization. "And each nominee had to demonstrate leadership qualities and live up to a specific set of standards."

The chapter received three honorary awards: the Chapter Key Award for member involvement, the Outstanding Chapter Award, and the Ethel Palmer Clarke Founders' Award for excellence in chapter programming. The Founders' Award, given every two years, was one of the highest honors bestowed by Sigma Theta Tau International.

Sigma Theta Tau sponsored various researchers who visited the campus and gave presentations on the society's Research Day. The chapter was active in service projects and gave scholarships for working nurses to conduct research and to continue their education.

This chapter represented the university as a professional society. "We are not just an honor society for students," Clapp said. "We're on the cutting edge of the field of nursing."

Art, Music Departments Propose Renovations

Renovation has been a buzzword at Harding for the last five years and the art and music departments drew its attention this year.

The Claud Rogers Lee Music Center, built in 1952 and expanded in 1966 and 1969, and the Mildred Taylor Stevens Memorial Art Center, constructed in 1969 around the former president's home, have long shown evidence of their age. As plans were finalized for a five-year plan and long-term suggestions were materializing for a 20-year plan, these fine arts areas submitted plans for much-needed improvements in space, decor, equipment and functionality.

Although no architect had been retained for the music building, a 10,000-square-foot gallery addition, estimated to cost $950,000, was projected by architects to fill the space now occupied by Stevens Art Gallery, according to Don Robinson, art department chairman. The plan provides for larger faculty offices and more gallery space for students.

The music department proposal from Dr. Arthur Shearin, chairman, called for an auditorium/classroom for music appreciation classes, rehearsals and recitals; more faculty studios and practice rooms; soundproofing of the entire center; and improvements in equipment throughout the facility. Shearin expressed hope that additional space would be added, saying, "As the situation is now, music appreciation classes are taught in the Bible building in a room unsuited for teaching music."

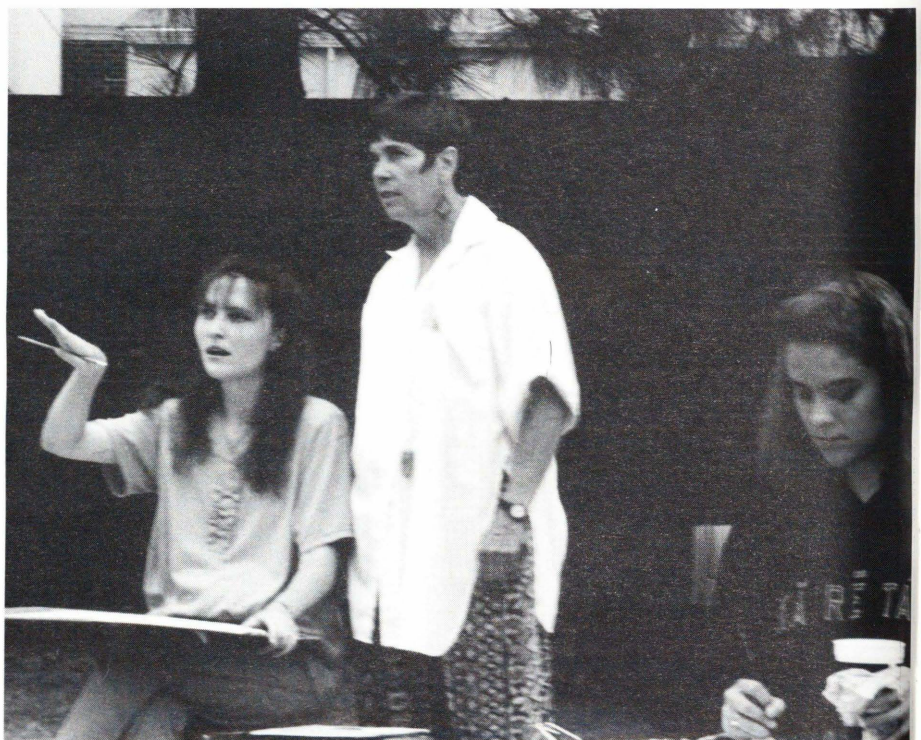

When the most recent five-year plan has become reality, perhaps the 25-year-old facilities for art and music will have joined the ranks of renovated facilities which now grace the campus.

Academic Programs

Aid Service Professions

Academic endeavors and special events assisted students preparing for service professions in the departments of home economics and behavioral sciences this year.

Behavioral sciences received national accreditation of the human resources degree program and national recognition for the Society of Human Resources Management, in conjunction with the School of Business, and statewide recognition of the undergraduate psychology program. Other special accomplishments included upgrading of the Statistical Programming for Social Sciences (SPSS) curriculum, re-accreditation of the social work degree program until the year 2004, and the addition to the faculty of Dr. Ken Cameron, a former psychologist for the Missouri State Prison System.

"Our curriculum is patterned after the strongest of the four instructional models which are endorsed by the American Psychological Association," said Dr. Jack Thomas, chairman of the department.

Home economics students participated in activities designed to serve the community and the world at large, while assisting in their preparation for professional careers.

According to Dr. Beth Wilson, department chair, among the more notable events were "Child Health Day," observed in October, and the 10th annual "World Food Day Teleconference," designed to examine possible ways of increasing and conserving the global food supply. Special activities in February coincided with the national observance of "Eating Disorders Awareness Week," and in April with "Child Abuse Prevention Month."

"We try to do something on campus in conjunction with the national observances related to our field," Wilson said, "which means things relating to children, the family and, of course, nutrition."

Language Departments Enhance Global Literacy

The departments of English and Foreign Languages offered students a wide range of services and educational opportunities.

The English department taught core courses and oversaw the Teaching Of English as a Foreign Language program. According to Dr. Dennis Organ, chairman, international students who needed help with their English language skills were enrolled in one of two courses.

"Every summer," Organ said, "we bring in Walton scholarship students from Central and South American and enroll them in 'Basic English as a Second Language' to offer them both language and cultural orientation to the way of life they'll experience here. And we have a second course for those who need additional help."

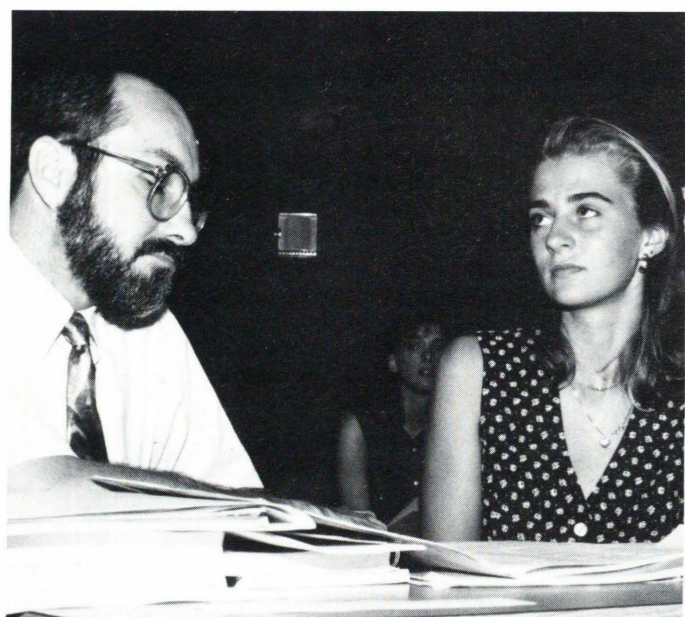

Organ said his department also sponsored three organizations – the English Honors Society, for English majors and minors; the Film Studies Association, for students interested in classic films; and "Scribblers," for students interested in creative writing as a form of self-expression.

The foreign language department experienced an increase in enrollment, according to Dr. Winfred Wright, because foreign language was added to the general education curriculum. "We added new sections of first- and second-year Spanish this year," Wright said. "That's in contrast to our other languages – French, Italian and German – which can be taken for only one year each."

Wright also noted that, while a number of international students chose to take a second language other than English, there was a general reluctance among American students to take a second language unless it was required.

New Chairmen Selected To Serve Departments

The departments of history/social sciences and communication experienced "changes of the guard" this year, as long-time department chairmen stepped down to devote more time to teaching.

Dr. Tom Howard, professor of political science and a member of the faculty since 1972, replaced Dr. Ray Muncy as chairman for the history/social science department. Howard said the faculty was active in state and national leadership roles.

He noted that Dr. Fred Jewell sponsored the local history honor society, Phi Alpha Theta, served on the national chapter's Board of Advisors, and was secretary-treasurer for the Arkansas Association of College History Teachers.

Other highlights included a new history text which contains a chapter which Dr. Muncy wrote and the "Best Paper" honor at the regional meeting of Phi Alpha Theta for Dr. Paul Haynie and graduate student Rick Fought.

In the communication department, Dr. Mike James, a 1971 Harding alumnus, assumed the chairmanship, replacing Dr. John Ryan. James said he had not made any major changes in the department this year. "We were blessed with eight years of excellent leadership from Dr. Ryan," James said. "And he left the department on a very even keel."

"We were extremely fortunate that Karen McLarty was with us in communication disorders and Kyle Reeves in radio-TV," James said.

According to James, the strength of the department was the faculty. "There could not be a more congenial mix of faculty than what we have," he said. "I don't think there's anybody on our staff who could be very easily replaced."

Two Science Programs Merit Special Recognition

Exciting research earned national and international acclaim for Harding in biology and physical science this year.

Dr. Mike Plummer, professor of ecology, received international recognition for his thesis paper on snake ecology. In response to his work, Plummer was invited to an international conference in Australia.

On campus, the barrier between the ever-increasing base of scientific knowledge and what is taught in the classroom was being broken by a NASA research grant. The physical science department has worked with the Jove project for three years. The research has focused on the sun's magnetic fields and how they affect its energy production. The NASA grant has paid for extensive networking, the Sun Work Station and several scholarships.

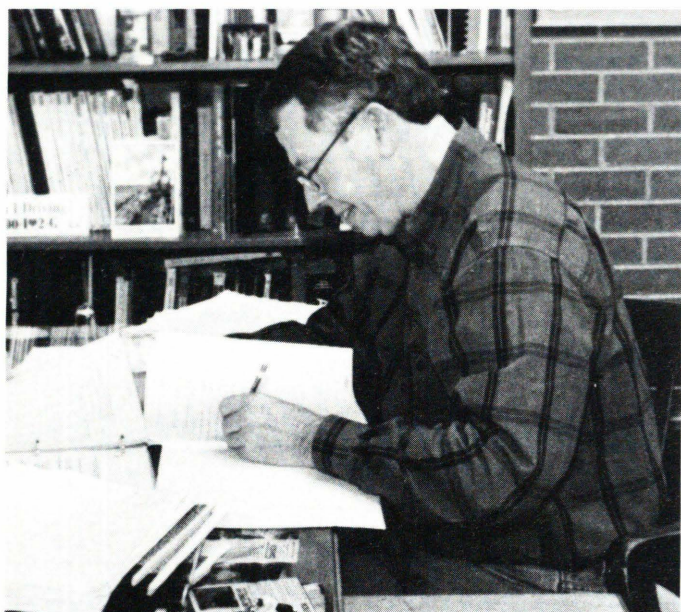

Faculty members work with Dr. Jim Dowdy, a Harding alumnus, from NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala. "Jim tells us what type of programs he wants written and we act on his suggestions," said Greg Lindstrom, computer programmer and assistant administrator for the Sun project. So far, faculty and students have completed one in-depth program to help assimilate data collected, and are in the process of writing three others.

"In most of the research world, everything is cutthroat. But at Harding, we all work together to solve the problems. This always amazes Jim," Lindstrom said.

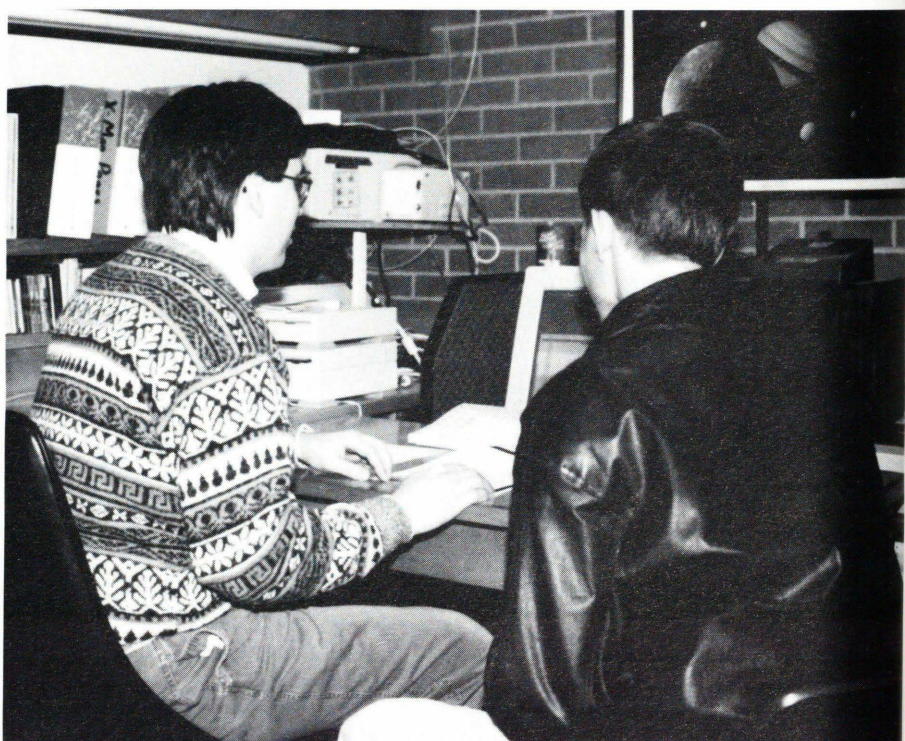

Dr. Steven Moore, a macrobiologist and immunologist who researched in organ transplants for the last three and one-half years at St. Jude Children's Hospital in Memphis, joined the biology faculty this year. After working with research scientists, he enjoys teaching at Harding. "The best part is working in a Christian environment," Moore said.

Curriculum Revisions Interrelate Departments

The kinesiology, mathematics and computer science departments became more closely related this year, thanks to a change in graduation requirements. "In the future, classes like math, chemistry and physics will become a major requirement," said Bob Corbin, designer of the Introduction to Wellness courses. The purpose of the alterations was to connect math, science and physical activity, Corbin said.

The Introduction to Wellness class was originally designed following a 1979 NASA research grant. "The research resulting from the grant gave us the idea for a class combining lecture and physical activity," Corbin said. "There is so much information out there that just isn't true. We wanted the students to understand the underlying factors so they could determine what is true," he said.

Harding's computer science program was designed to affect the student's academic fitness. One of the two basic degree programs focused on the math and science of computers. "This degree allows the student to get jobs on the technical side," said Dr. Steve Smith, department chairman. The other, computer information systems, has "more jobs available," Smith said. "The students must basically take the business core, along with computer courses."

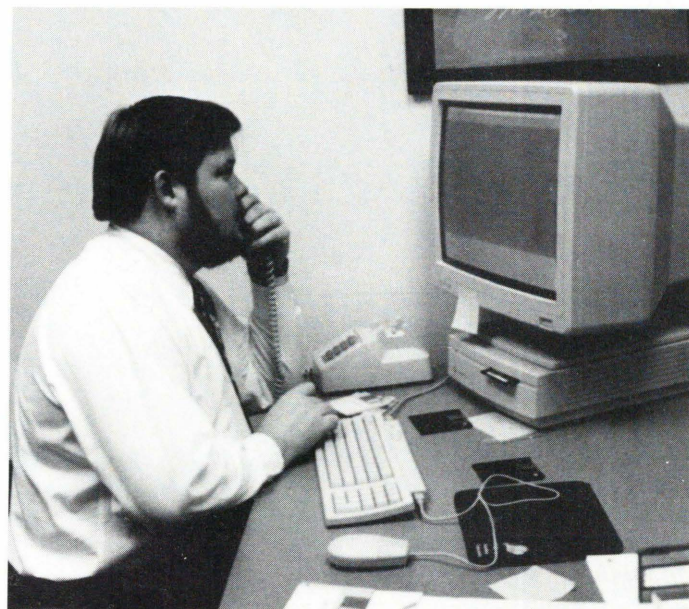

A strong emphasis on graduate study pervaded all the fields of math, computer science and kinesiology. "In order to teach math or become a statistician, one must get a higher degree," Smith said. With an increasing correlation between kinesiology and math, the demand for Harding graduates is expected to increase. "Right now, we can contact any of the graduate schools in the area and they will take a good look at our students," Corbin said. "In computer science, more jobs are available than students we can graduate," Smith said.

Postmistress Brings Smiles to Faces of University Students

Sparkles appeared in the students' eyes when they opened their mailboxes and realized they were not empty. Throughout the school year, students would check their boxes daily in hopes of finding some type of mail – whether campus mail or “real” mail.

According to Kathleen Crouch, the postmistress, Harding receives about 4,720 federal letters each day, not counting packages and campus mail. “Pledge Week and Christmas are the most hectic times. However, they are the most enjoyable times because we get to see the neat, creative gifts students give to each other,” Crouch said.

Crouch has been the postmistress at Harding since 1984. “I love working with the students. The best part, I guess, is when I find students who are a little grumpy and I can take the time to give them some attention. Sometimes, the students just need a mom away from home,” she said.

“It’s an advantage to have a little world with Christians all around,” she said. “Serving the students is the best part of my job. I really, really enjoy it.”

Harding’s has not been the ordinary post office. Since it’s at a university, it has often received unusual mail. “Sometimes we receive crickets and such for Dr. Plummer’s biology labs. Those are the most creative packages,” she said.

Some mail is undeliverable because the student population is transient and individuals often fail to leave a forwarding address. “The federal mail that we can’t deliver has to be sent to the dead mail office. The campus mail that we can’t deliver, we tape near the entrance where students can identify and claim it,” Crouch said.

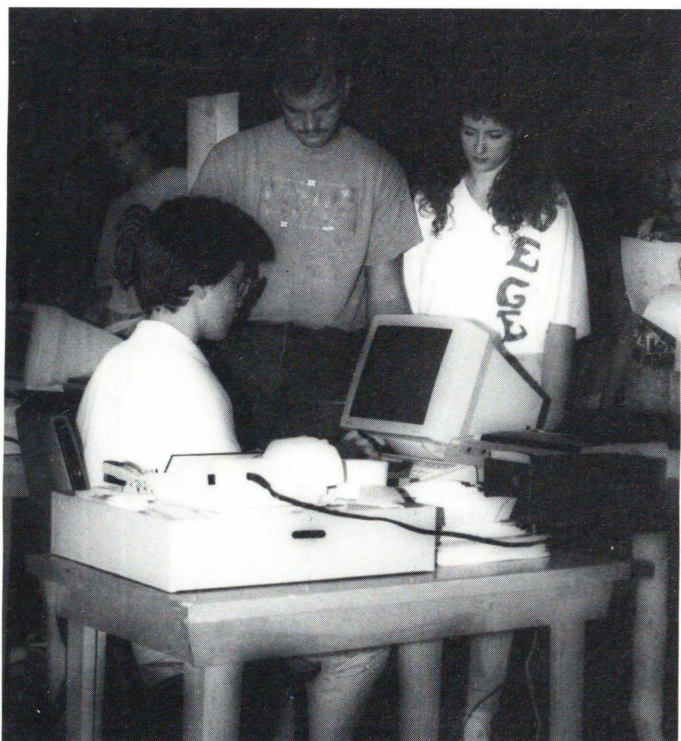

The mailroom has always been an exciting place – a place where students’ days were made special because they received packages or letters from home... a place where mailroom workers were quite popular with students when they received those special remembrances... and a place where Kathleen Crouch could be that “mom away from home” that so many students needed.

Dorm 'Mother' Enjoys Watching Girls Grow and Develop

Adventures in the student dorms during the year have been memorable. From water-gun fights to room check, the dorms were filled with constant activity. However, the dorm experiences would not have been the same if it were not for the many dorm parents.

Doris Dalton, the "dorm mother" of Stephens, has been a dorm director at Harding longer than anyone else. "I started working as a dorm mother in the fall of 1976," Dalton said. Her first four years were spent in Cathcart, the next nine in Sears, and the last five in Stephens.

"All the dorms have favorable characteristics," she said. "There is so much enthusiasm in the freshmen dorms, but in the upperclass dorms, the girls are already established in their majors and with friends. This makes working in those dorms exciting," Dalton said.

"I became a dorm mother when Mrs. Idell Ables, a substitute director, called to tell me about the opportunity to meet and serve the girls. I applied and was lucky enough to be chosen," Dalton said. "At first, I was afraid of not being on top of things – girls slipping out at night and that sort of thing. However, I was lucky and didn't encounter any of that.

"Being a dorm mother has had its disadvantages," Dalton said, but the enforcement of rules is not really one of them. Over the years, the dress code has evolved from skirts to dress pants to jeans and finally to shorts. "Eighty-five to 90 percent of the girls abide by the rules," she said. "I believe rules are for a good purpose, and I have no problem upholding them."

The rules are just a fraction of Dalton's job as a dorm mother. Her most challenging task is dealing with students who don't really want to be at Harding. "These students are here because their parents want them here. They don't want to be here. It's a struggle for them and their parents. Plus, it's a challenge to try to make them feel comfortable in a situation they don't like," Dalton said.

"For the most part, being a dorm mother is fun," Dalton said. "I love pledge week. I like to encourage the girls to make the most of pledge week. I really hate that some girls don't loosen up and enjoy it." She believed that it was during pledge week that the most enduring friendships were made.

The most interesting experience she had with pledge week was when she was a dorm mother in Cathcart. "When the pledges first came into Cathcart after rough night, I met them at the door. We would strip them down as much as possible because their clothes would be covered with eggs, mud and whatever else you could think of. Many girls went out and purchased an outfit from Goodwill just for rough night so they could throw the clothes away. The dorm would smell for weeks afterward."

Dalton has really enjoyed being a dorm mother. "I love just being with the girls. I wait up every night until they are all home safe. I also enjoy getting up in the morning and seeing them start their day."

Doris Dalton has been a dorm mother for more than 17 years. "As long as my health stays good and I enjoy my job as much as I do, I plan on being a dorm mother. It's indefinite," she said.

Leadership stands tall among qualities of excellence. It takes time to develop any skill worthy of recognition. Our microcosm here was built on a foundation of networks. More than 60 organizations on campus created a strong network of individuals who joined together in smaller groups to fulfill a single purpose. It may have been the Thundering Herd holding a formation as the trumpet line performed the melody. It may have been the debate team arguing to prove a point. Whatever the organization, the sum of the parts was indeed greater than the whole.

Kerri Hartman, Organizations Editor

"Nasty." "Light." "Heavy." "Wet." With every descriptive word came another sandbag passing through the hands of students as they helped to remove the fortresses that protected thousands of homes from the flood waters that filled areas around the Midwest during the summer.

Just as the flood had come unexpectedly, so had the number of students desiring to give up their time to help strangers eek back into the normalcy of life. When Student Association President Rich Little asked for volunteers to help flood victims, five times the available slots showed up. Due to the overwhelming response, room was found for 505 students. On September 9, one-seventh of the student body traveled to the flood-devastated areas of Arnold, O'Fallon, Maryland Heights, Florissant and St. Charles.

"The Arnold Church of Christ divided us into smaller groups of about 15 and sent us to different places in town," Kim Smith, a junior from Chicago, said. "My group did sandbags both days. Other students tore apart houses and helped clean up the mess left behind from the water."

Because the first trip was a tremendous success, four additional weekend trips were planned for smaller groups. During the second trip, students worked with students from David Lipsomb University.

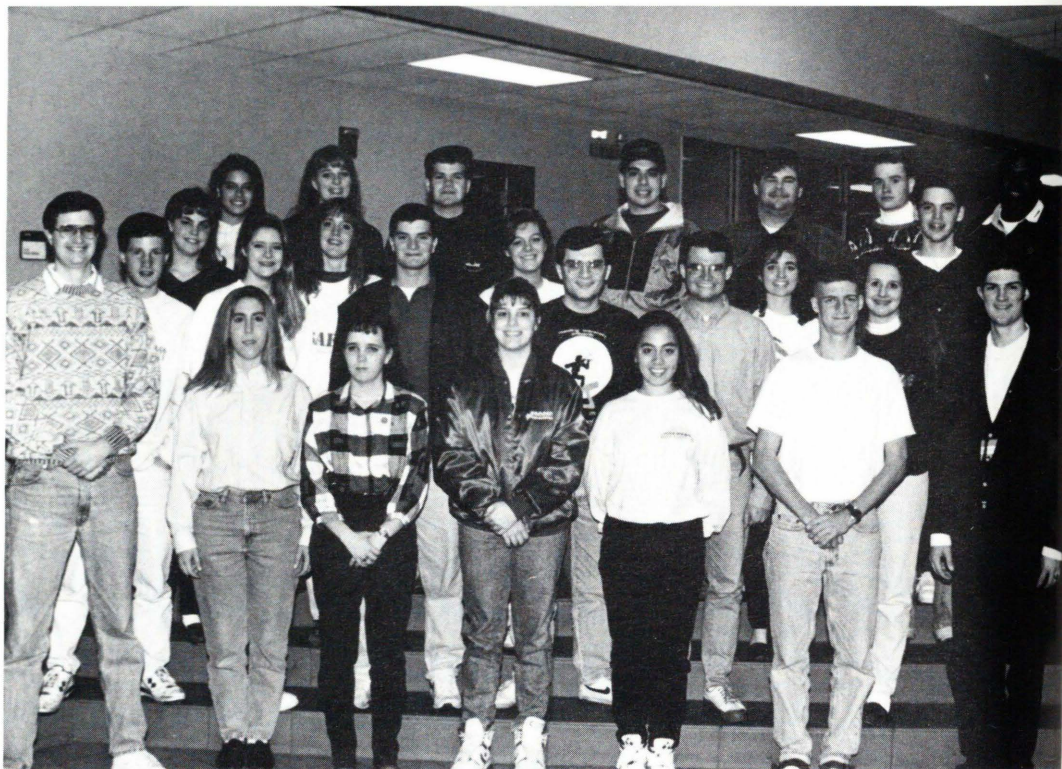

While accolades continued to come from the St. Louis area, freshman Alex Aziamov, a Russian student, expressed his thoughts this way, "I don't consider us heroes," he said. "The real heroes are the people who are living there, the people who have to face the effects of the flood every day and have never given up."

The elementary gymnasium slowly filled. The excitement of another assembly thrilled the students. As the principal announced the program, the children quieted down.

Harding Athletes as Role Models (HARM) traveled to elementary schools to talk about the importance of school. "We are a group of athletes chosen by our coaches to teach the importance of staying in school and away from drugs," Steven Fitzhugh said. About 40 athletes traveled in groups of three to visit schools in White County and talk to children and teachers.

Harding Athletes Amplify Awareness

The athletes usually talked to a large assembly of older children and then visited individual classrooms. "This makes it more personal and individual," Fitzhugh said. He said that sometimes a teacher would indicate that a student as young as fifth grade had already tried alcohol. "We try to talk to him about why he doesn't need to do that. We try to teach him that it's not cool to drink," Fitzhugh said.

HARM began three years ago when several schools called and wanted some athletes to talk to the kids during Red Ribbon week, a drug awareness program. "We went to three or four schools and afterward organized a group to continue that type of work," Fitzhugh said.

"It's always great when a teacher addresses you and says, 'Hey, you changed a kid's life in there.' That's what we are all about," Fitzhugh said. "We are out to help the children."

Youth Corps Reaches Out

Corps teamed with Tentmakers and Alpha Chi Malachi for a weekend retreat at Camp Wyldewood. Amidst the fun and fellowship, speakers Joe Beam and Stanley Shipp offered instructional tidbits about various ministry concerns and helped set the tone for the year.

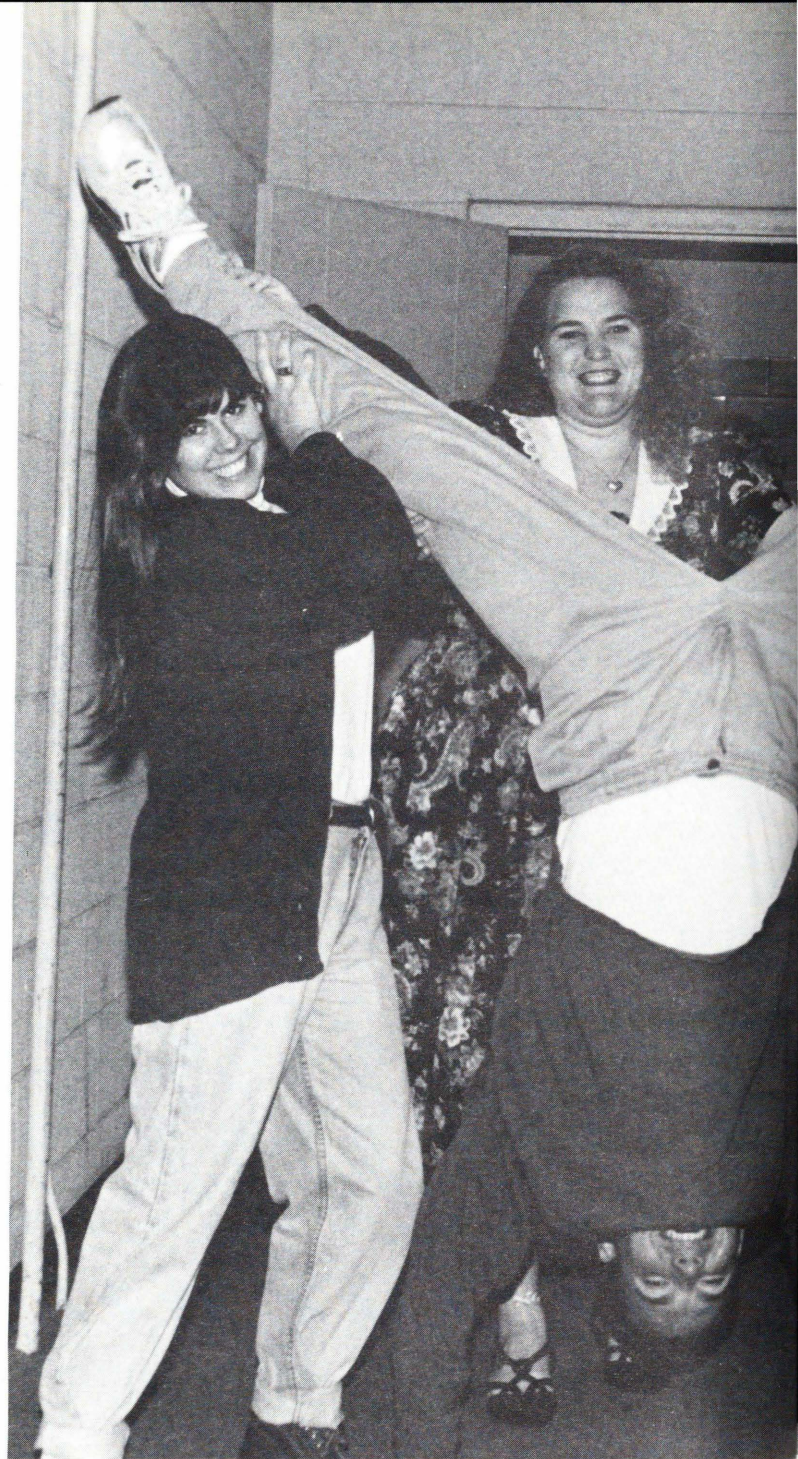

Youth Corps kept its 80 members busy with several activities, including Project Outreach, a program involving the formation of relationships with teens in Searcy; Women's Fellowship, which incorporated faith building and faith sharing for women in area churches; the formation of Joyful Hearts, which introduced students to clown ministry; and the Spring Lock-In, which, according to sponsor Dan Stockstill, emphasized fellowship, fun and faith.

Operation Youth, another Corps project, provided hands-on opportunities for members to assist churches with their youth ministry programs. "With Operation Youth, we placed 12 teams of students in the congregations in and around Searcy. This was beneficial both to our students and the congregations," Stockstill said.

Stockstill emphasized that membership in the Youth Corps was non-exclusive. "We do not accept just youth ministry majors. Anyone interested in what we're doing can get involved."

Almost every year, new organizations are formed on Harding's campus. In the fall of 1992, the chapter of the Council for Exceptional Children was established. "Everything started when Dr. Richard Blankenship, professor of special education, addressed the issue of starting a student chapter on campus," Gail Vaden, president, said.

"We started with 40 people—the largest chapter in the state," Vaden said. "The organization is open to everyone. Teachers, students of all fields, and even parents who work with exceptional children can be involved," she said.

"The Council for Exceptional Children aims to increase the awareness of the needs of handicapped of all ages," Vaden said. "This is being accomplished through many events. Those events include the Special Olympics basketball tournament and spring track-and-field events.

For Harding's Academy and University, the council hosted an Exceptional Children Week. "During that week, we offered a 'Walk a mile in my shoes' event," President-elect Denise Ortbals said. The purpose of this event was to encourage students to simulate some of the handicaps people endure daily. Students were given the challenge of traveling in wheelchairs and performing other tasks, according to Tracy Sharp, committee chairman for Exceptional Children Week.

"Exceptional children have a unique perspective," Sharp said, "and students shouldn't shy away from them. They have different insights which we can learn from."

Campaigns Create Close-knit Choir

Choir members held not only each other in high regard, but also their director, Dr. Arthur Shearin. "He is very funny, but he is also very professional. He gets things done," said freshman Shane Jackson.

"One of the most special things has been traveling on campaigns together, because you always develop bonds," said senior Laura Rice.

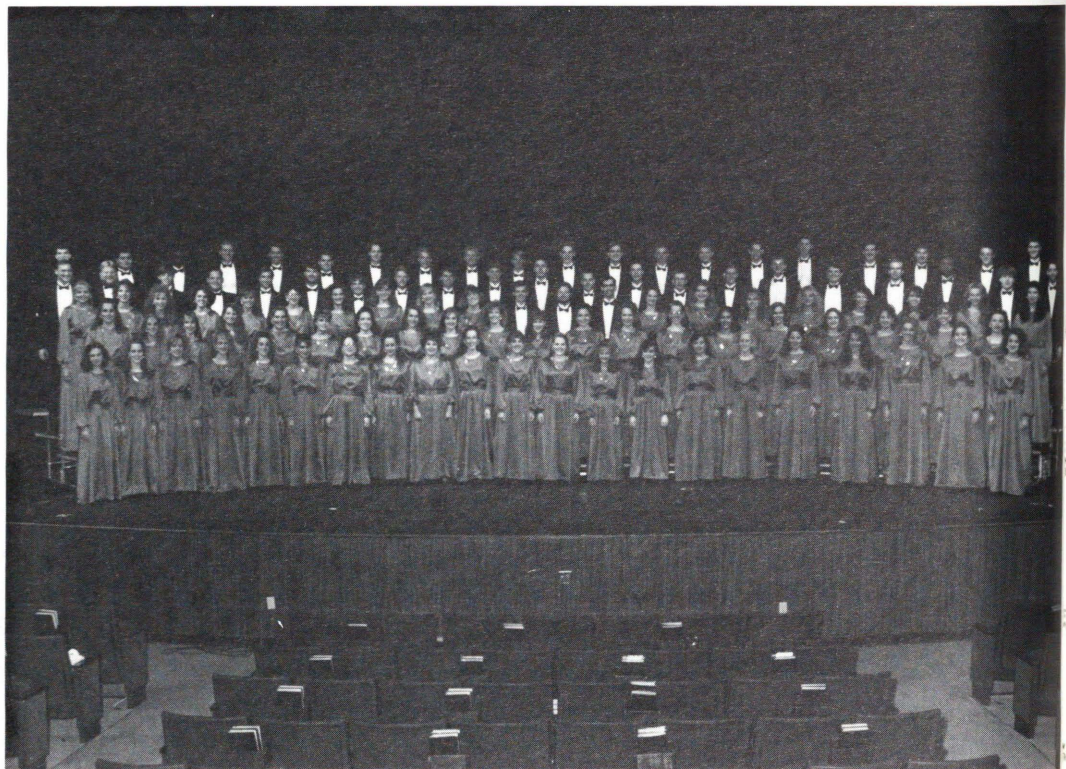

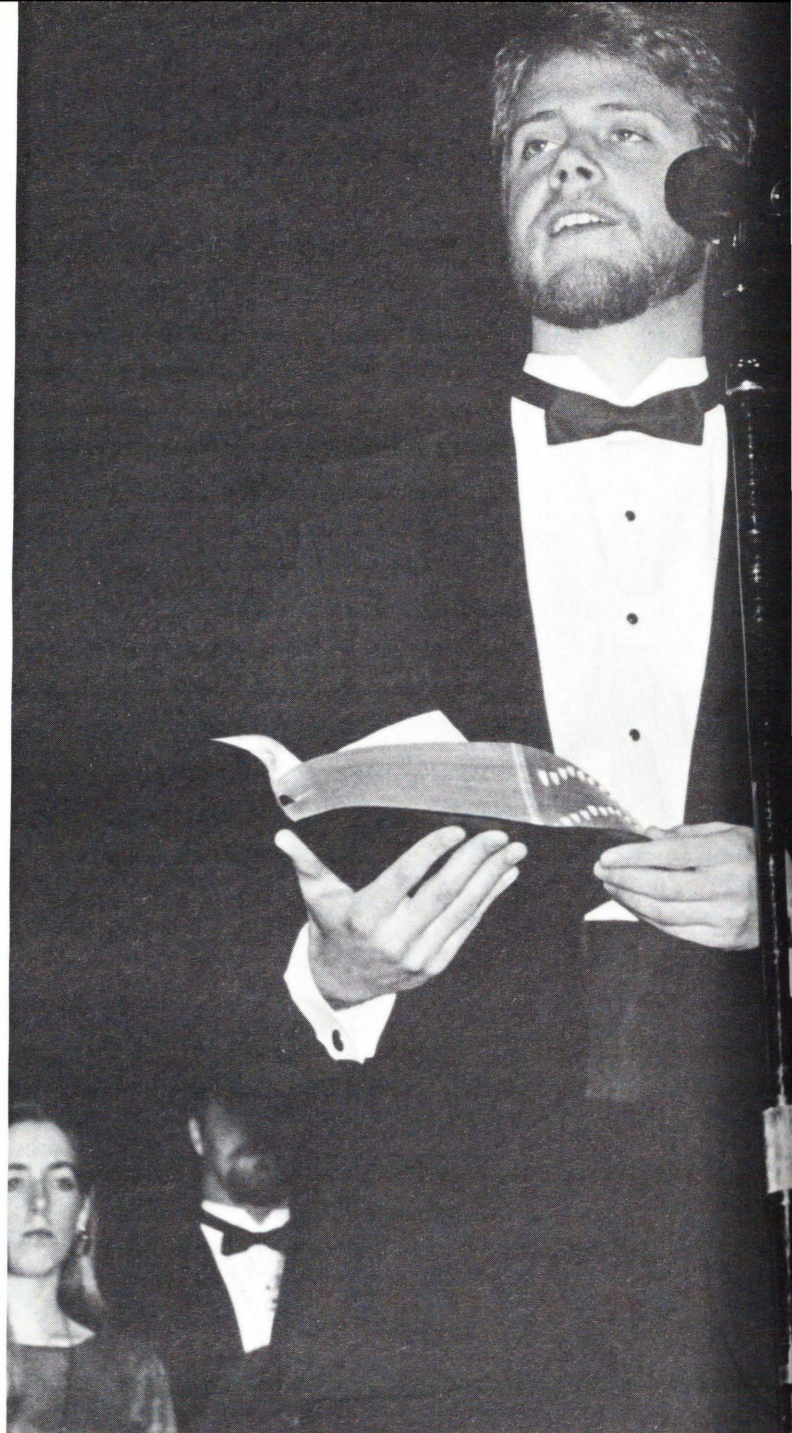

Choir president Jonathan Vest felt that one of the greatest opportunities the choir had to offer was the chance to go on various campaigns. "Last summer, we went to Germany and Switzerland," he said. "I think choir campaigns are great because singing reaches people more easily than talking, because music is a universal language."

To be in Concert Choir was "a privilege, but also a responsibility requiring the people to give up a lot of other things," Pickens said, "but I wouldn't trade it for anything."

The Good News singers, a group sponsored by the College of Bible and Religion, were among many who used their singing ability as an outreach to others.

These eight students spread the "Good News" as they traveled from church to church. "Good News gave me the opportunity to use a gift God has given me to spread the message of the gospels," Micah Parkhurst, a sophomore biology major, said. Beth Spurlock, a sophomore music education major, said, "This is my ministry. When I see people respond, it is very rewarding."

'Good News' Spreads the Gospel

Although the ministry was rewarding, each member had to sacrifice time in preparation. Good News practiced three times a week. Those practices prepared them for the two or more performances each month.

"This year we had intense practices and an even more intense performance schedule. It's a hard schedule, but it is not impossible," Spurlock said. The group traveled in Arkansas and surrounding states.

The goal of the Good News singers was to reach out to all age groups. "Our goal this year was to sing songs which appealed more to the older generation while incorporating things for the young," Spurlock said. According to Good News director Steve Kell, the singers worked in conjunction with the admissions office at church youth rallies.

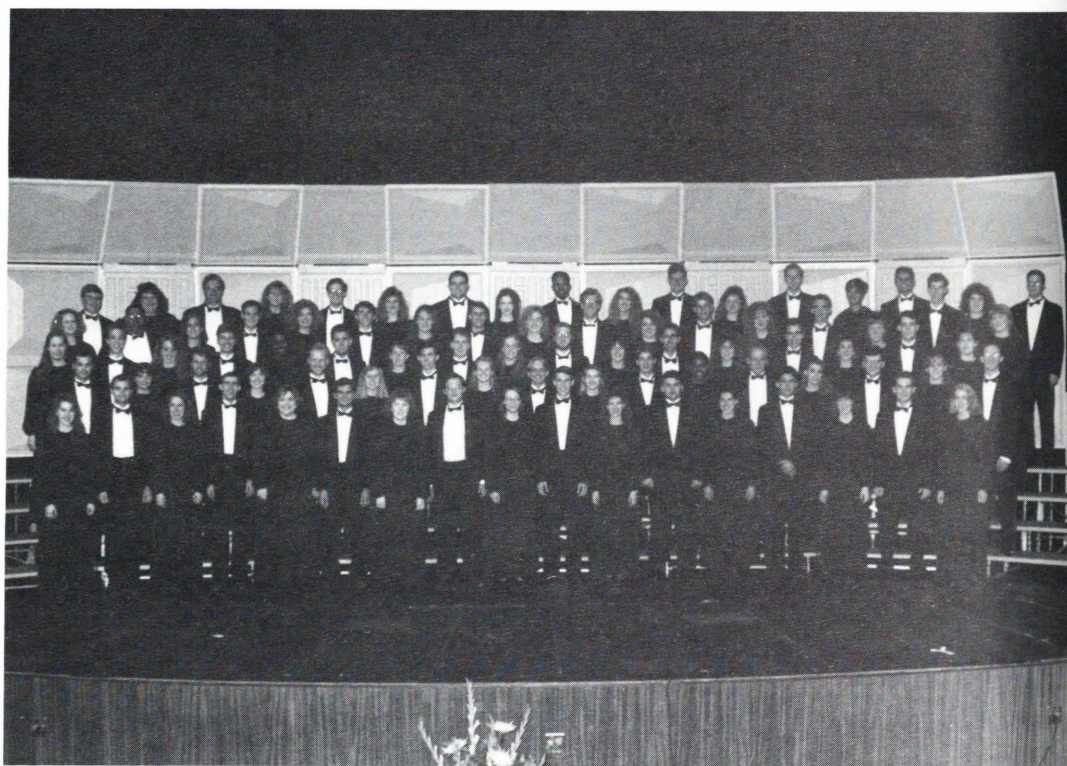

Through the efforts and voices of Good News, people heard the word of God. "I've been dreaming about doing something like this all my life, so I tried out for the singers and made it," Spurlock said. The group discovered their talents and used them to benefit everyone.

Harding's orchestra has been a small but integral part of the campus music scene. Comprised of both students and faculty, membership is granted on an audition basis and fluctuates between 20 and 35 yearly.

Patricia Cox, associate professor of music, directed the orchestra. Cox said the orchestra played a unique part in campus activities, although the group was not well known.

"We are the only group on campus which has a string section," Cox said. "And we're responsible for providing the accompaniment for the Homecoming musicals as well."

The orchestra featured 15 to 20 strings on a regular basis, Cox said, with a full wind section added for the Homecoming musical and the group's annual spring concert. There were also two string quartets, comprised of orchestra members, which performed independently.

Last year the group played with the Conway, Ark., Civic Orchestra and performed for the Searcy Beethoven Club, in addition to their campus engagements. "We would not be opposed to traveling and performing more than we do," Cox said, "but right now we are really constrained by our limited budget."

While additional travel may not have been possible, Cox said the group would have enjoyed performing more on campus if the opportunity had been there. "That's something that would only require us to invest a little time, and it would be enjoyable for everyone involved."

Approximately 70 students were involved this year in the Honors program, a selective curriculum which encourages critical thinking and requires high levels of academic excellence from its members.

"The Honors program is an invitational curriculum offered to freshmen who are either Trustee or National Merit Scholars," Honors Association President Vic McCracken said. "We started five years ago and have been taking in around 20 new students a year. But we are looking to expand and double our size to 40 students a year."

Critical Thinking Enhances Curriculum

The program presents selected general education classes in a different way. "Honors students take extra classes that replace some of their general education classes," McCracken said. "These classes differ from a lecture format in that they are mainly discussion-oriented. We feel that it's important for students of this caliber to think critically. It is crucial that students learn to think on their own and are able to take what they learn and apply it to their chosen fields," McCracken said.

McCracken said that everyone had different motives for accepting the challenge of the Honors program. For many it was to collect academic accolades or to produce an impressive transcript, but for him it was different. "My whole belief system has been changed," McCracken said. "I really wish other classes could be like this. The program has encouraged me to think, and I've enjoyed that the most."

All of the debate supplies were packed and it was time to leave for another forensics tournament. After the participants filed into the van, Dr. Pat Garner led the team in a prayer for safe travel.

The forensics team has traveled out of state to compete with other schools from around the nation. The fall Cross Examination Debate Association (CEDA), debate topic was, "Resolve: that the national news media in the United States impairs public understanding of political issues." "This topic was very affirmatively biased because it's easy to prove impairment," Roger Clayton, a senior debater from Nashville, said. Although the topic leaned heavily to the affirmative side, the negative had ground to stand on, too. "The negative could say that the media is good, that all of the good aspects outweigh the bad aspects of media," Garner said.

The 11 member forensics team consisted of two varsity, one junior varsity, two novice teams and one individual competitor who competed each semester at participating universities. They traveled to Sam Houston University, Middle Tennessee State University, Northeast Louisiana University and Vanderbilt University.

"There are many people on the team who really want to learn and are willing to put forth the effort. They are doing well because of their drive to be the best," Clayton said. The skills learned on the forensics team helped to nurture many areas of life, including research skills, communication and confidence.

In the 1930's, Dr. George Benson, president emeritus, began a program on Harding's campus which emphasized "three C's" – constitutional government, capitalism and Christian values. That program was the basis for today's American Studies Institute (ASI).

ASI focused on increasing awareness of American tradition and encouraged leadership. This was accomplished by bringing in speakers from the areas of business, government and education, such as Dick Cheney, former Secretary of Defense, and Dan Quayle, former Vice President of the United States. Numerous individual and corporate sponsors from the Searcy area contributed money and resources needed for such speakers to appear.

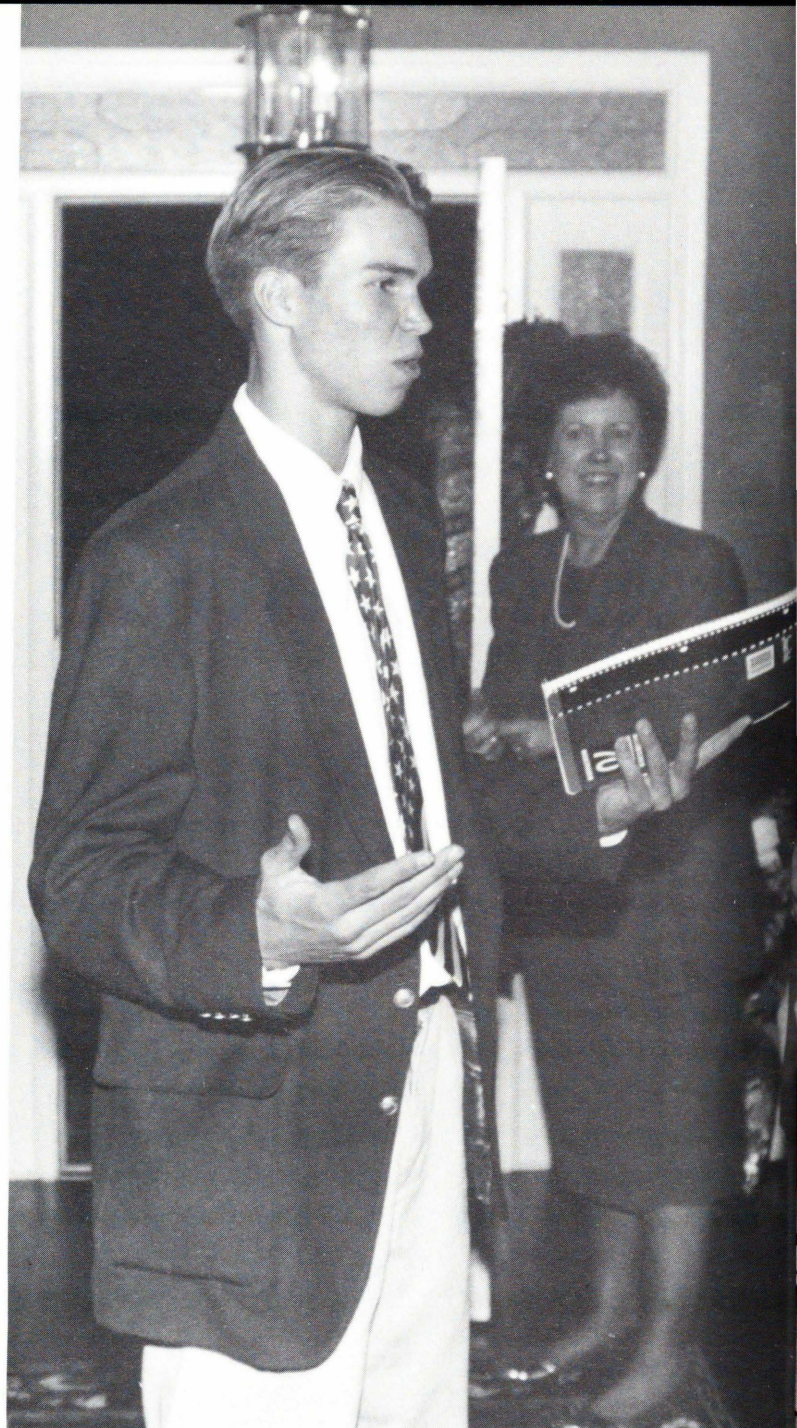

The vice president for membership, Christy Coonts, a senior from Harrison, Ark., said, "It has given me a stronger sense of politics and an interest in history. It has made me realize Christians need to be politically active and stand up for the rights we believe in."

ASI also sponsors dinners and receptions for speakers, and they offer the Symposium, a special presentation by five or six faculty members who each present one aspect of the assigned topic and then interact with the audience and other panel members in a forum. President Laura Rice, a senior from Searcy, said, "The Symposium gave us a chance to work with the faculty and to hear from several different disciplines."

Leadership, exploration of issues, knowledgeable speakers, informative tours – all of these contributed to the impact made by the ASI.

The Society for the Advancement of Management (SAM) provided practical experience beyond the classroom for students who were interested in management professions. Through activities of the campus chapter and competition in the national conference, members learned management skills and concepts.

SAM's international conference brought key speakers from around the world and focused attention on the case competition. "It was different than any other national collegiate competition and was completely a student case analysis and presentation," said Levon Carter, sponsor of SAM. Everyone received the same case about four weeks before the conference, and they were not allowed to solicit help from anyone. They could not practice their presentations in front of anyone. Students analyzed the case, prepared presentations and outlined their strategies in written form. At the conference, they went before a panel of judges, made and defended their proposals.

SAM helped give the students some experience in managing an organization. They arranged for speakers to come to speak on subjects not covered in the classroom. They also held fundraising events and designed projects to raise money to attend the international competition.

A mixer was held at the beginning of the year at Carter's house to attract new members. SAM was an active program designed to benefit students interested in developing management skills.

Founded in 1947, the Association for Computing Machinery (ACM) is the oldest and largest educational and scientific computer organization in the industry today. ACM is dedicated to the advancement of computer professionals. One of its primary functions is to provide a forum for the publication of advanced technical information.

ACM and Internet Access the World

Harding's ACM chapter began in 1991 and emphasized excellence in academic computing by assisting students and faculty with available technology. ACM's access was greatly expanded in 1991 by its connection to the Internet, a cooperation of networks located throughout the world connecting universities, corporations and research laboratories in several countries. An average of one million people used the resources of Internet each day. Internet also provided a wealth of services, such as access to large databases, card catalogs and libraries, including the Library of Congress.

One of the most useful resources of Internet, electronic mail (e-mail) allowed messages to be sent around the world among users. Joel DeYoung, ACM chairman, said, "E-mail is quickly becoming a modern form of communication among all types of people, rapidly catching up with familiar technologies such as FAX and telephone service. With electronic mail, however, there are no postage and long distance costs."

ACM's worldwide organization has grown to more than 80,000 members. Membership in the Harding chapter totaled about 20.

Health, nutrition and fitness have become a way of life for people who want to feel and look good. Eating right and learning about good nutrition are top priorities, and people are eager to learn more. These changes have resulted in increased opportunities in the field of dietetics.

According to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, employment of dietitians is expected to grow faster than the average profession through the year 2000, especially in the areas of public health, consulting and business. The job market for dietetic technicians is expected to grow at a fairly rapid pace.

Dynamic Future for Dietetics

Dietetics is a dynamic profession offering many different opportunities for practice. Today's dietetics professional works in health care, education and research; sales, marketing and public relations; government, restaurant management, fitness, food companies and private practice. There are many different directions to go in the profession.

Students prepared meals on Thursday afternoons for faculty, staff, students and Searcy citizens. At each meal, one student would plan the menu and delegate all the specific tasks needed to complete the meal. The weekly event gave the students practical, hands-on experience in quantity food production and management of food service.

Diadra McGregor, dietetics club president, said, "Dietetics majors present opportunities to each other and work with each other. They're an empathetic group of friends who support you and pray for you when you are applying for internships. They're so wonderful during that stressful time."

Through its emphasis on leadership, service and friendship, Circle K International is dedicated to the realization of individual potential. Because of its world-wide scope, Circle K has taken the lead as one of the world's largest collegiate-level service organizations.

Circle K has many objectives which emphasize the advantages of democracy and provide the opportunity for leadership training. The organization reached these through various service projects.

Harding's Circle K chapter painted the playground equipment at the Home Economics department's Child Development Lab in October. They received some extra help from a visitor who belonged to the Key Club, the high school equivalent of Circle K. According to Robin Pierce, the visitor heard the project announced in chapel and wanted to help.

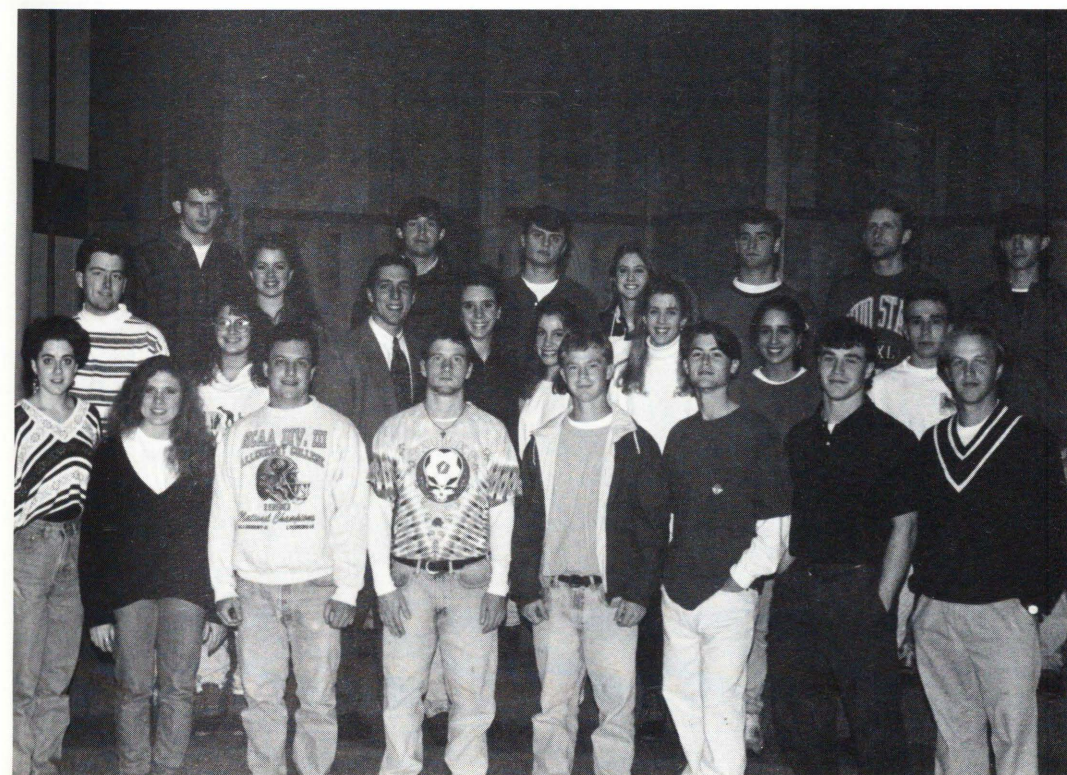

The group has assisted the Searcy Kiwanis club with such projects as cleaning highways, holding fund raisers, providing recreation for students from the Sunshine School, and shopping at Christmas for needy families. In 1991, the chapter's first year, they raised more than $3,000 for Yugoslavian missions.

Circle K members are associated with local business people through the Kiwanis club. In appreciation for Circle K's help, the Kiwanis club provides professional contacts and services such as job hunting and networking.

Peter Epton agreed. "Our purpose is to educate ourselves and others, and to encourage the wise use of resources," he said.

In order to accomplish these goals, the organization sponsored several activities throughout the year. "About twice a month we went out to pick up trash around the area," Epton said. "These cleanup efforts involved Riverside Park and the creek which runs beside the Jerry Moore Field. We also adopted Moss Street and picked up trash there on a regular basis," he added.

In December, the club hosted speaker Suzanne Gross, a representative of the National Wildlife Federation. Gross's lecture focused on details regarding the Endangered Species Act.

RENEW also played a major role in encouraging the formation of a new campus recycling program. During the spring semester, receptacles were placed in each dorm to facilitate collection of aluminum cans, white paper and cardboard. "Instead of throwing their recyclables away, most students helped out by tossing them into the containers," Epton said.

With the help of practicum students and Dr. Lou Butterfield, KHCA's directors ignited a flame of enthusiasm in the radio station this year.

"The goal for this year was simple in concept," station manager Melanie Whitehurst said. "We wanted to let the campus know that we existed." To achieve this goal, many approaches were tried. A new focus on campus news was implemented. Each director participated in promoting KHCA. Marcus Grayson and his sports staff conducted live remotes from athletic events. Other remotes included ticket giveaways conducted live from the Student Center for the Restless Heart concert.

"This was a good year for change," music director Allison Dean said. A new and stronger programming was developed.

Located at 560 AM and intermittently on cable TV-19, KHCA constructed a new plan for reaching out to the student body. "We, the directors, decided to focus more on the many campus activities to draw the listeners' interests," Whitehurst said. Practicum students gathered news and reported all types of sporting events, academic activities and service projects. "This heightened the awareness of the many activities available on campus," Whitehurst said.

The variety of music attracted more listeners. "We added a new format of contemporary Christian music which increased listenership," Dean said. KHCA offered a different music format each night and included some specialty shows designed to increase the creative potential and variety for practicum students.

Students who write poetry and fiction found an outlet this year in Scribblers, an informal group which met every other week to share their creative writing and to get responses from others.

"Scribblers offers students an audience and feedback," said Dr. John Williams, adviser. Although some members have had their work published, Williams said, Scribblers accepted writers from all levels, including beginners.

In addition to poetry readings featuring their own work, Scribblers hosted guest speakers who shared various aspects of writing and publishing skills. The group, which started in 1992-93 as an off-shoot of Sigma Tau Delta National English Honor Society, wanted an informal organization of students who wrote poetry and fiction on a regular basis to share their work with," according to Sondra Smith, a past president.

"A lot of times you get in a rut," Adam Brooks, a sophomore psychology major from Noblesville, Ind., said. "Having other writers read your work lets you improve."

According to Charles Adams, a graduate student from Readyville, Tenn., input from Dr. Williams and other members proved valuable with suggestions for overcoming writer's block, and exploring new ways to express themselves in writing.

"It's scary to share something as personal as something you've written," Adams said. "But you know that Scribblers are there to help you and no one will think that what you've written is dumb."

A number of projects and ministries served students and others as a part of Campus Ministry, a College church-sponsored program led by Dwight and Barby Smith.

A twist was added this year to the 13-year-old transportation program for international students. Three Saturdays each month, a van was available to take international students to Wal-Mart. The fourth Saturday was reserved for a trip to Little Rock, where students had the chance to shop in various malls. This program helped international students without cars to have more freedom and gave them opportunities for fellowship.

Campus Ministry Meets Needs

Another program expanded this year was the Big Brother/Big Sister program, renamed FRIENDS. Twenty-three students and 27 children participated. "We set up children in the Searcy community with a student role model," said Candace Ware, student director. "Usually the children were from single-parent homes and needed extra friendship."

The student role models enjoyed spending time with the children going to movies, sporting events and campus activities.

Campus Ministry also worked with the social club devotional directors to raise money for a mobile clinic in Ghana, Africa. During the fall semester, one special day was set aside in chapel for students and faculty to "run for their lives." This two-mile run provided funds and created interest in the project to help African people to have better medical assistance.

Sixty-two students were selected this year for induction into Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities.

Dr. Jerome Barnes promotes the program on the Harding campus, and said that participating schools are allotted a specific number of inductees yearly, based on current enrollment. "The number of eligible participants will vary some each year as enrollment varies," Barnes said. "It just so happens that this year, the number was sixty-two."

Barnes said selection is based primarily on four criteria: academic achievement, service to the community, leadership and potential for continued success. "That's the way Who's Who differs from other organizations like Alpha Chi, which is primarily an honor society," Barnes said. "With Who's Who, scholarship is an important part of it, but it's not the only thing. We look just as hard at leadership ability and potential for service to the campus and the community. Who's Who involves more of an all-around performance."

There is no limit to how many students can be nominated each year, as long as they meet standards for membership set by the university," Barnes said. "The last time we addressed this at a faculty meeting, we decided that a student should have at least a 2.5 GPA on a minimum of 90 hours in order to be eligible."

Nominations for Who's Who are submitted yearly by faculty and the Student Association. Ballots containing the names of nominees are then mailed to faculty members who choose those whom they feel are most deserving of membership.

On February 22, 1922, representatives from five Texas institutions met for the purpose of organizing a scholarship society that would encompass all of the "Class A" colleges and universities in the state. By 1993, the society known today as Alpha Chi had added its 320th chapter.

Alpha Chi is a national honor society that promotes and recognizes high academic achievement and good character. It is distinctive among similar honor societies in its emphasis on the undergraduate student's participation in scholarly events and publications.

Alpha Chi's National and Regional Conventions provide students with opportunities to present papers or other materials appropriate to their fields. Vice president of the local chapter, Travis McNeal, said great experience came from presenting papers at the conference. Before presentations, the papers had to receive approval from faculty members and the national office.

Membership in Alpha Chi is limited to the top 10 percent of juniors and seniors. At Harding, invitations are made to juniors with a 3.75 GPA on at least 80 hours and seniors with a 3.55 GPA on at least 105 hours.

rightly-colored jerseys were tangible reminders of the strong club loyalty felt at Harding. Kinship developed through common goals and shared experiences such as mixers, hayrides, ballgames and service projects. Clubs played an integral social role because of the time and dedication given them. And while clubs were not the only place where friendships formed, they were a good starting place. They established a foundation for friendship – a chance to grow closer to each other and to God.

A GOAL FOR PLEDGING

Pledge week is frequently dreaded, but not by AGO's pledges, because instead of pledges serving members, AGO members served their pledges.

"It was one reason I joined the club," Kevin Crumley said. "AGO acted on the idea of servanthood. That was how they conducted pledge week." The goal of Alpha Gamma Omega's pledge week was to get to know the new members. "We tried not to intimidate the pledges. We just wanted to get to know them and create friendships," President Jason Looney said.

The idea of servanthood extended to the other pledges around campus. When sponsor Rick Healy found a pledge having difficulty with the week's events, he asked AGO pledges to write the person an encouraging note. "The point of AGO is to serve people – whether or not they are members of AGO," Looney said.

"During rough night, AGO members really became imitators of Christ," Crumley said. "We had a devo and then the members washed our feet. They gave us towels to commemorate the event. After that, they treated us to a pizza party."

"Pledge week set the tone for the rest of the semester," Looney said.

AGO's principle of servanthood blessed them. "We have become a tight-knit group of guys," Crumley said.

A DINNER IN COSTUME

For the first time, Alpha Tau Epsilon celebrated Halloween together by gathering at member Jess Robertson's house for a costume party. The guys all brought dates and ate dinner together, and afterwards they played games.

The costumes were humorous and memorable. "Jess works at a bowling alley, so he dressed up like a funny bowler," said President Matt Huddleston. "My date and I dressed like the Blues Brothers." The games were fun as well. The members said they especially enjoyed charades — guys against the girls. "It's not just every day that you play charades," said Dennis O'Malley, a junior from Norman, Okla. "We thought up complicated titles that no one had ever heard of. They were really hard to act out."

Another game they liked was a word game. For a certain length of time, no one was allowed to say a particular word, for example "that." Each member was given a clothespin, which was taken away if he said the forbidden word. This proved to be tricky. "Some words just slip in without you noticing," said Huddleston.

Alpha Tau Epsilon had a fun gathering and grew closer in the process. "It was an effort to keep our club close and together," O'Malley said.

A FOCUS ON SUNSHINE

When Christmas time rolled around on campus, thoughts of students often turned towards home. For Chi Omega Pi social club, however, attention was focused on a little school in Searcy.

For their fall service project, the club hosted a Christmas party for students of the Sunshine School, a facility for mentally- and physically-challenged children and teenagers.

Chi Omega Pi members spent a lot of time preparing for the big event. All club participants were given a personal fact profile indicating a student's hobbies and interests. The girls then bought appropriate presents and assembled Christmas stockings for the children.

Sunshine School students were in on the planning as well. They made a paper chain to count down to the day of the party and removed a link each day in anticipation of the festivities.

Wendy Yeakle, who gave a five-year old boy some race cars, said, "It was neat to see that even the littlest thing causes their faces to light up."

Chi Omega Pi also worked with the Sunshine School students this spring when they participated in Special Olympics. The members went to watch the races, cheer the kids on, and to be "huggers," embracing children as they crossed the finish line.

THE HARMONY OF TRADITION

In keeping with Harding and its many traditions, social clubs have established their own traditions through the years. One of the most notable has been that of Chi Sigma Alpha.

Each semester since 1963, the men of Chi Sigma Alpha have gotten special late permission to leave the dorms after curfew to go serenade the girls in campus residence halls. Responding to a repertoire ranging from "The 12 Days of Christmas" to "You've Lost that Lovin' Feelin'," the girls have generally been appreciative and have shown it by throwing open their windows and cheering.

"We usually wear our club jerseys the day after serenading and the girls come up and thank us," said Clif Mims, adding, "It seems like a little thing, but the girls like it." Mims said, "Serenading has been a neat tradition and we are honored that the university has let us continue it."

While this tradition was fun and entertaining, it was not reflective of everything the club did. Chi Sigma Alpha and its sister club, Regina, have served Michael Shoenberger, a 30-year-old invalid, for a number of years. These clubs worked together to make the burden easier for Michael's parents and the world a bit brighter for Michael.

As clubs continued to meet the social needs of students, Chi Sigma Alpha's activities were a unique example of entertainment and service.

A CHANCE TO REMEMBER

Delta Chi Delta's five-year anniversary called for a Homecoming reunion – a first for this men's social club.

The reunion was held at the home of campus minister Dwight (and Barby) Smith, one of the club's sponsors. The members showed pictures and other memorabilia from this and previous years.

Delta Chi Delta was chartered in April, 1989. Founding members saw a need for another men's club with a different focus. Johnny Scott, the only charter member still at Harding, said they "wanted to start a club that would make an impression on campus, a club that would focus on serving and encouraging one another in their Christian values," a focus he says they have kept.

The club had 72 active members this year, moving them from small to medium club sports and providing greater opportunity to be involved in campus activities, service projects and Spring Sing. President Don Neal said, "I think, through all the changes, that our focus hasn't changed. The things that we hold dear, such as unity, have remained the same."

Delta Chi Delta's motto, Psalms 133:1, says "How good it is when brothers live together in unity." This first reunion showed how strong that unity actually is.

A PROJECT FOR CHILDREN

The idea for Delta Gamma Rho's service project developed when some members worked with children during an inner-city Houston campaign during the summer. Susan Billingsley said, "We really fell in love with the children in Houston, so when we came back this semester, we started going to church with the inner-city children in Little Rock."

Club members helped the children to have a day without the pressures of everyday life. They spent the day at The Discovery Zone, after which they enjoyed lunch together. Their main goal was to show them the benefits of working for the Lord.

"This service project helped the girls realize that there is life after Harding, and that we need to be sensitive to people from all walks of life," said President Amy Ferguson. Billingsley said, "We have all been blessed tremendously with material things. This helps us see that some people aren't so blessed and that we have a chance to make a difference in their lives."

Through their work, the girls of Delta Gamma Rho were able to teach the inner-city children about the Lord and show them the benefits of working in His church. In helping care for these children, the girls felt a sense of responsibility and increased their own faith and strength.

A NEED FOR EXAMPLES

This year, Galaxy initiated its own service project, drawing upon club members' special talents.

Several times during the semester, groups of members would gather to visit an elementary school in North Little Rock to work with students.

The idea originated when a teacher at the elementary school, who dates a member of the club, discovered that several of her third-grade students came from single-parent families. So club members visited the school during the day, and played with them during P.E. or recess. All activities were confined to the school grounds.

"We provided good male role models," member Shannon Simmons said. He stressed that many of the children did not have fathers and seemed to truly enjoy playing and spending time with these young men.

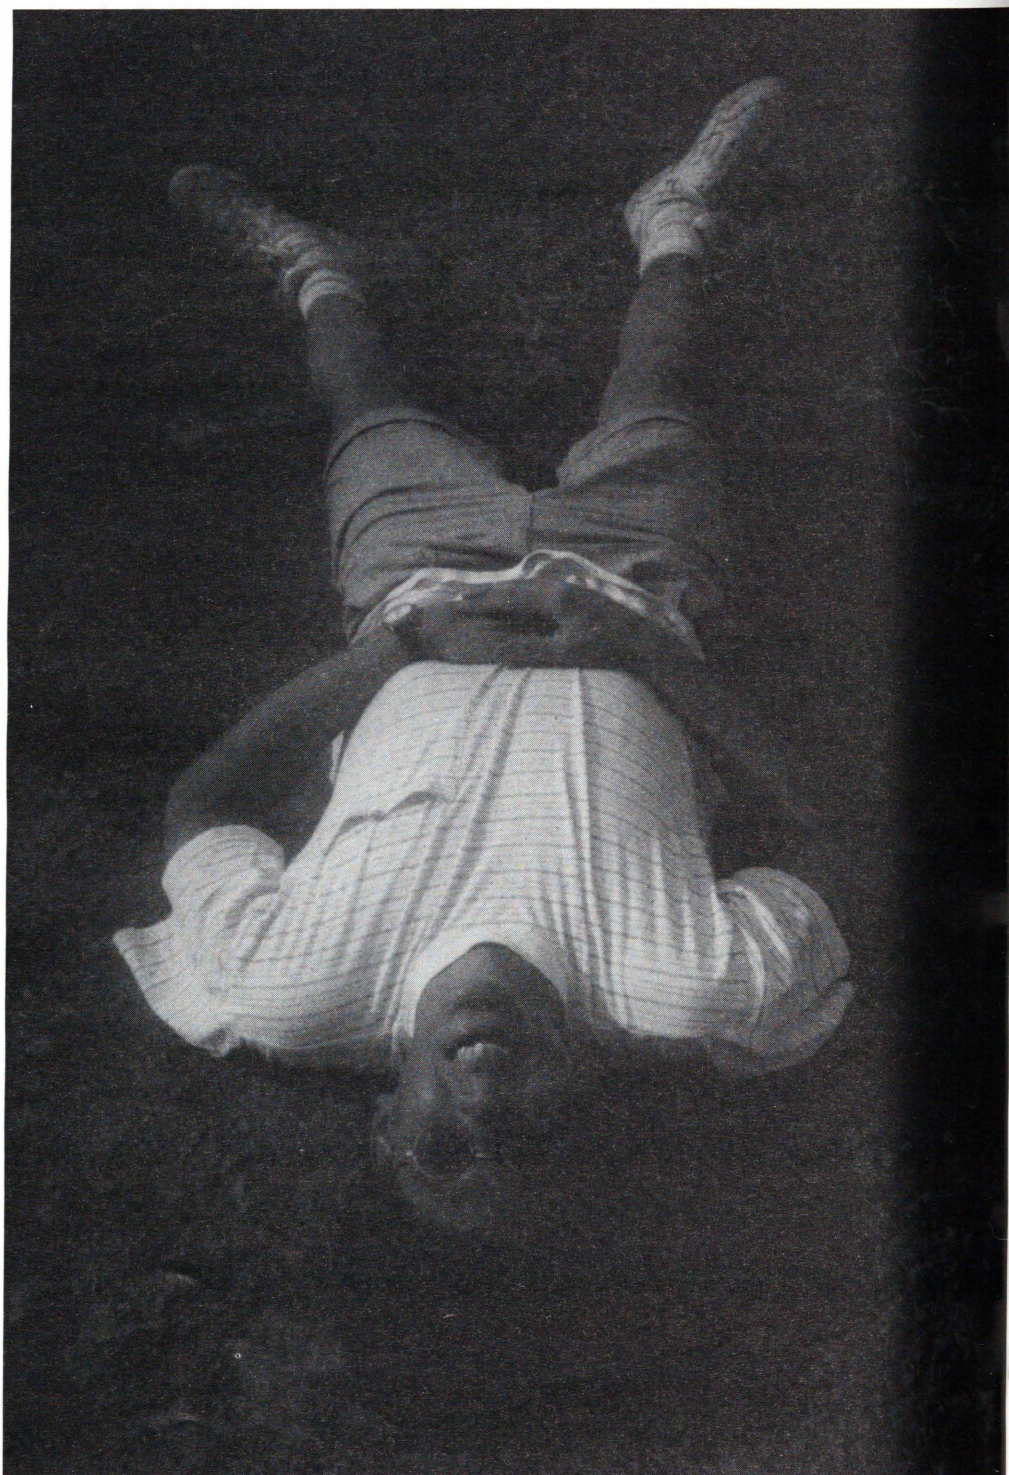

President Paul Pursell said, "This is something that we like to do to benefit people." He explained that, in the past, the club did not spend a lot of time on service projects and it was hard to get members involved. With this project, however, the entire club was active with the children. He felt that the project benefited the club and the kids they came into contact with.

Involvement with these children gave Galaxy members something productive to do during their free time, and also showed the children good examples of what Christian service and attitude is all about.

FUNDS FOR CHILDREN

This year GATA's service project involved the Arkansas School for the Deaf and Blind. GATA raised the money to help refurbish some of their dorm rooms. Alpha Tau went along with Gata to present the money to the school and to spend some time with the children living in the dorms. They threw a small party for the people there and presented the school with the money they raised.

"The staff was really glad we came," said GATA president Dawn Spell. "The kids were excited to have people even try to communicate with them."

GATA had a cookie sale to raise money. Each girl in the club baked homemade cookies which they sold one week in the student center. This raised $160, and GATA added to it for a total of $300. The money was given to the school to use for personal items in the dorm they otherwise could not purchase.

"It was great to share what we had with them," said Spell.

GATA greatly influenced the children and the people associated with the Deaf and Blind School. They showed that there are people out there who want to help support such projects, but most importantly, they spent time with children who needed it.

SERVING ALL GENERATIONS

This year Ju Go Ju took an afternoon during the holiday season to spend with elderly residents of Searcy's Leisure Lodge. Ju Go Ju supplied goodies, gifts and glad tidings. They sang Christmas carols to usher in the holiday spirit.

"It makes you feel good to help someone. Some of these people just sit here day after day and this one trip could mean the world to them," senior Jennifer Land said. Freshman Angelee Whitlow said, "I think that it is great that we took the time to go and share the season with people who may not have had anyone else to share it with."

The project's emphasis was not simply to give gifts but to show a Christian spirit and to serve God by serving others.

Ju Go Ju also participated in a second service project. The Pleasant Valley Church Of Christ in Little Rock had 11 children who were in need. The club purchased gifts to surprise the children and the church. Most gifts were necessities. Some children received toys, but most received shoes and clothes.

Ju Go Ju gave a few children a few small things that made a large impact. "I feel that it was just a good thing to do to make a difference in a little kid's life this season," Amy Chunn said.

Ju Go Ju served the community this year through service to the old and the young. Members had an opportunity to become closer as a club in the process.

A FOCUS ON FAMILY

As any family nurtures its members, Kappa Sigma Kappa centered their attention this year on one of their own. When freshman member Eric Jenkins learned that a brain tumor had returned, the club decided to raise money to assist with his medical expenses.

During the first week in December, four consecutive projects focused on the effort. A collection at Wednesday's Peak of the Week, a special music festival on Thursday, admission to the Friday night movie and a workday for faculty on Saturday helped to fund their newly-established "Friends of Eric Jenkins Foundation." The week's events collected $3,400 for the project.

Kappa Sigma Kappa worked with the Student Activities Council to have all proceeds from the December 3 showing of "Ernest Saves Christmas" added to the Jenkins Foundation fund. The work day for faculty found Kappa Sigma Kappa guys raking leaves, cleaning garages and other tasks.

Club President Jerre Glover said, "Eric was a freshman pledge and we hadn't known him long, but our brotherhood was strong and we had a strong desire to do this for him." Continued donations brought the total raised to $5,000 by Christmas break.

Kappa Sigma Kappa continued taking donations for the Jenkins fund and contributed leftover club dues to the cause they so strongly supported.

A CHANCE FOR RELAXATION

What would it be like to attend a club function where you could completely relax and be yourself, with no pressure and no rigorous structure? Kappa Tau Omega and their fall function dates could tell you, for this is just the type of atmosphere they attempted to create. Rather than having a traditional hayride, Kappa Tau Omega members took their dates to Heber Springs for a cookout. While they prepared to eat, they played volleyball or football on the beach. And they climbed up Sugarloaf Mountain near the end of the day to watch the sun set and have a bonfire.

Kappa Tau Omega prided itself on its uniqueness. President Ryan King said, "We try to be different and do our own thing."

The members of Kappa Tau Omega enjoy their unique tradition. "It's a chance to be together and relax," said junior Kevin Burton, from Garland, Texas. And, because it is different, it is an appropriate activity for them, members said. "It's a lot of fun," said Chad Brown, a junior from Orange, Texas. "It fits the personality of our club because it's not a big organized event or high in cost. We're not much on conformity."

For a club that enjoys a chance to be together in a relaxed and spontaneous atmosphere, the Heber Springs cookout was a perfect outing.

A SALE FOR HIS HOUSE

Ka Re Ta began a service project in 1988 which has become a tradition for the group. Once each semester, the girls gather, price, tag and sell leftover items from His House, a benevolence ministry of the College Church of Christ.

Members took the hard-to-move items from His House, including books, toys, clothing and appliances in need of minor repairs, and sold them on a chilly November Saturday.

George Wilson, the elder in charge of the ministry, and his wife, Rosemary, provided the setting for the sale by allowing the girls to use their driveway. Typical of garage sales in this area, customers began arriving at 6:00 a.m. and, when the sale ended at 3:00 p.m., more than $300 had been raised to buy food and other pantry items for needy families.

A repeat performance in the spring allowed additional funds to be available. Club member Rena McCarty said, "Having the garage sale each semester really helps His House, the community and the club. His House gets money it needs, the community gets to purchase items they need and to have its needy families helped, and the club gets a lot of respect for what we are trying to do."

Ka Re Ta enjoyed doing the garage sale. "It's something we all really do together," President Johnna Jones said. Junior Jenny Tyree added, "It's great knowing that something we like to do can help someone."

A GIFT IN MEMORY

When their long-time sponsor, Ed White, died in July, the members of King's Men made a mid-year's resolution to dedicate an upcoming service project to the memory of their former friend and mentor. The White family requested that all monetary gifts be donated to the Searcy Children's Home, so the club made their own donation in White's name.

"We decided at the beginning of the fall semester to donate all leftover club money to the children's home and leave our club account at $0," Vice President John Exum said. Members also took up collections at club meetings to supplement the final amount.

"White had been our sponsor for 18 years; King's Men is only 20 years old. Naturally we wanted to do something special in remembrance of his service," President Mike Gilpin said.

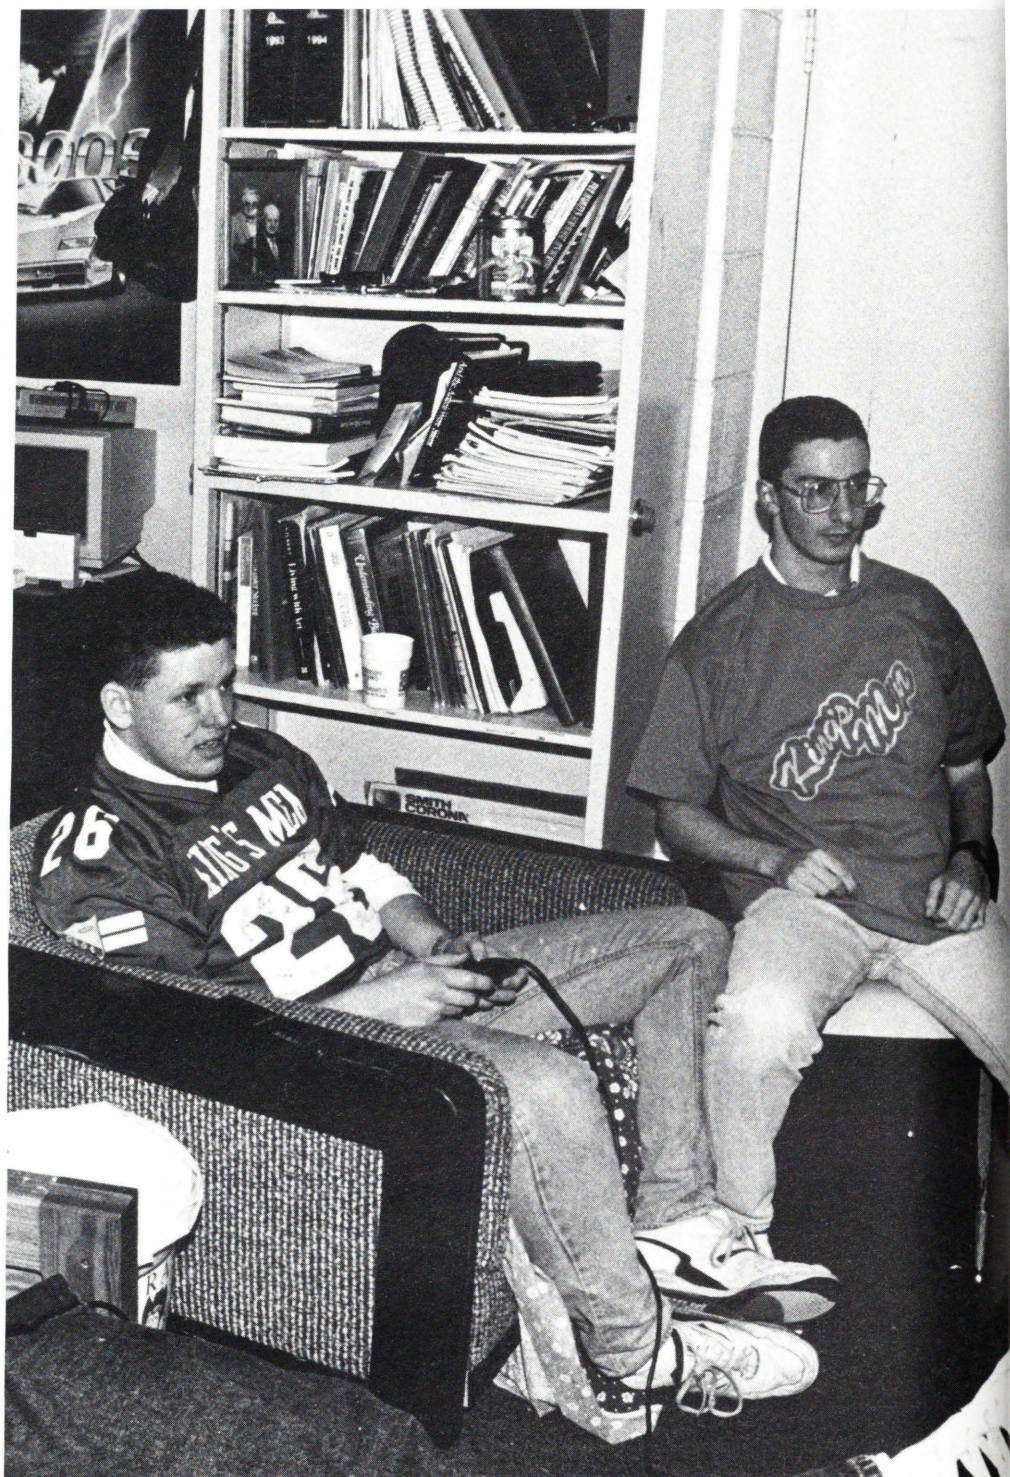

According to Gilpin, the project was more than just a donation. "After White was hospitalized in July, we pitched in to help the family, doing odd jobs like mowing the yard. We have continued to check on Mrs. White, to make sure she's taken care of," he said.

Prior to presenting the donation in December, Gilpin took the opportunity to tour the children's home during its open house. "I was able to see the grounds and all the rooms," he said. "They have a fine facility and I know the money will be put to good use."

A BATTLE FOR HONOR

Thursday afternoon of pledge week, the Knights and their squires (pledges) gathered for the annual joust. They transformed Harding's front lawn into a scene from medieval Europe. Armored warriors galloped across the green while robed ladies watched from their distant platform. But the lance was made of foam rather than metal, and a hit was determined by how much shaving cream a squire could leave on his opponent. The squires were bracketed, competing to defend the honor of a fair maiden, until finally, one squire was declared the champion. He then had to fight against one of the Lord Knight members, who, as usual, defeated him.

Students walking across the front lawn on Thursday immediately recognized the familiar joust. Many, besides those in Knights, stayed to watch. "It's a unique campus event that provides an outlet for everyone during pledge week," said Knights president, Nathan Mellor. "It's a tradition that distinguishes our club from the others."

Besides being unique, the joust represented a competition which actually used to take place. "It's a re-enactment of an event that has a history, even though it's not real. It's not just another pointless task they make up for you do during pledge week," commented Phillip Shero, a freshman from Crowley, Texas. "The best part was defending the honor of the fair maiden," he added.

The Knights' joust creatively provided a refreshing pledge week activity in keeping with the club's name and theme.

A CHANCE FOR RENEWAL

Early in the fall, Ko Jo Kai got a fresh start by escaping for a weekend to Camp Tahkodah. This was a time for the club to grow closer and stronger before inducting its new members. "It was a chance for us to get away from our usual environment," said President Leah Mangrum, a senior from McComb, Miss. "We focused on God and each other instead of everyday, unimportant things."

One activity the girls enjoyed during the weekend was having bags in which each member wrote what they admired most about the others. "That was our souvenir from the weekend," Mangrum said.

"Ko Jo Kai is a very diverse group of girls," explained Mangrum. "When we got away, there were no titles and no diversities. Everyone could just be themselves."

Vice President Kelly Cooper, a senior from Olive Branch, Miss., emphasized the weekend as a reflection of her involvement with the club. "I witnessed the girls reach farther than I ever thought they could, push each other to the limit, and stimulate and learn from each other. We were all united by one jersey."

"Just by looking back on that one weekend, the feeling returns," Mangrum said. "It totally changed the way we looked at each other when we got back to campus. It's amazing what one weekend did for our friendships."

NEW SOURCE OF OUTREACH

Kyodai traveled to Searcy's Spring Park November 6 to string up Christmas lights as a part of Searcy's third annual Holiday of Lights. Club members enjoyed this activity, not simply as an off-campus excursion, but as a chance to meet and serve area residents.

In keeping with Kyodai's commitment to community service, member Steve Adams, who also served on the city's Holiday of Lights committee, suggested to the club that they assist with this project in fulfillment of their service project for the year. The club chose to accomplish this task because "it was an opportunity for club members to be exposed to people who were not in any way associated with Harding," club president Scott Manuel said.

Throughout the holiday season, Kyodai also helped to raise funds for more lights and collected toys for the Toys for Tots drive. They also continued their regular service project - assisting in the cleanup of city streets.

By working at the park, the courthouse and in the streets and through interaction with city officials, area residents and local journalists, club members were able to encourage a positive outlook toward Harding within the community.

UNITY THROUGH SERVICE

The club motto for Lambda Sigma is "Triumph through Togetherness," and this year they did that in a variety of ways. From sports to service, the Lambdas showed their enthusiasm and unity.

Club activities were always something special. November's hayride even featured a fireworks display. In the spring, they planned a banquet, a lock-in, several picnics and other activities.

Lambdas also triumphed in sports. Last year, they were awarded the All-Sports trophy for small clubs. This year, they held the best records in football and volleyball.

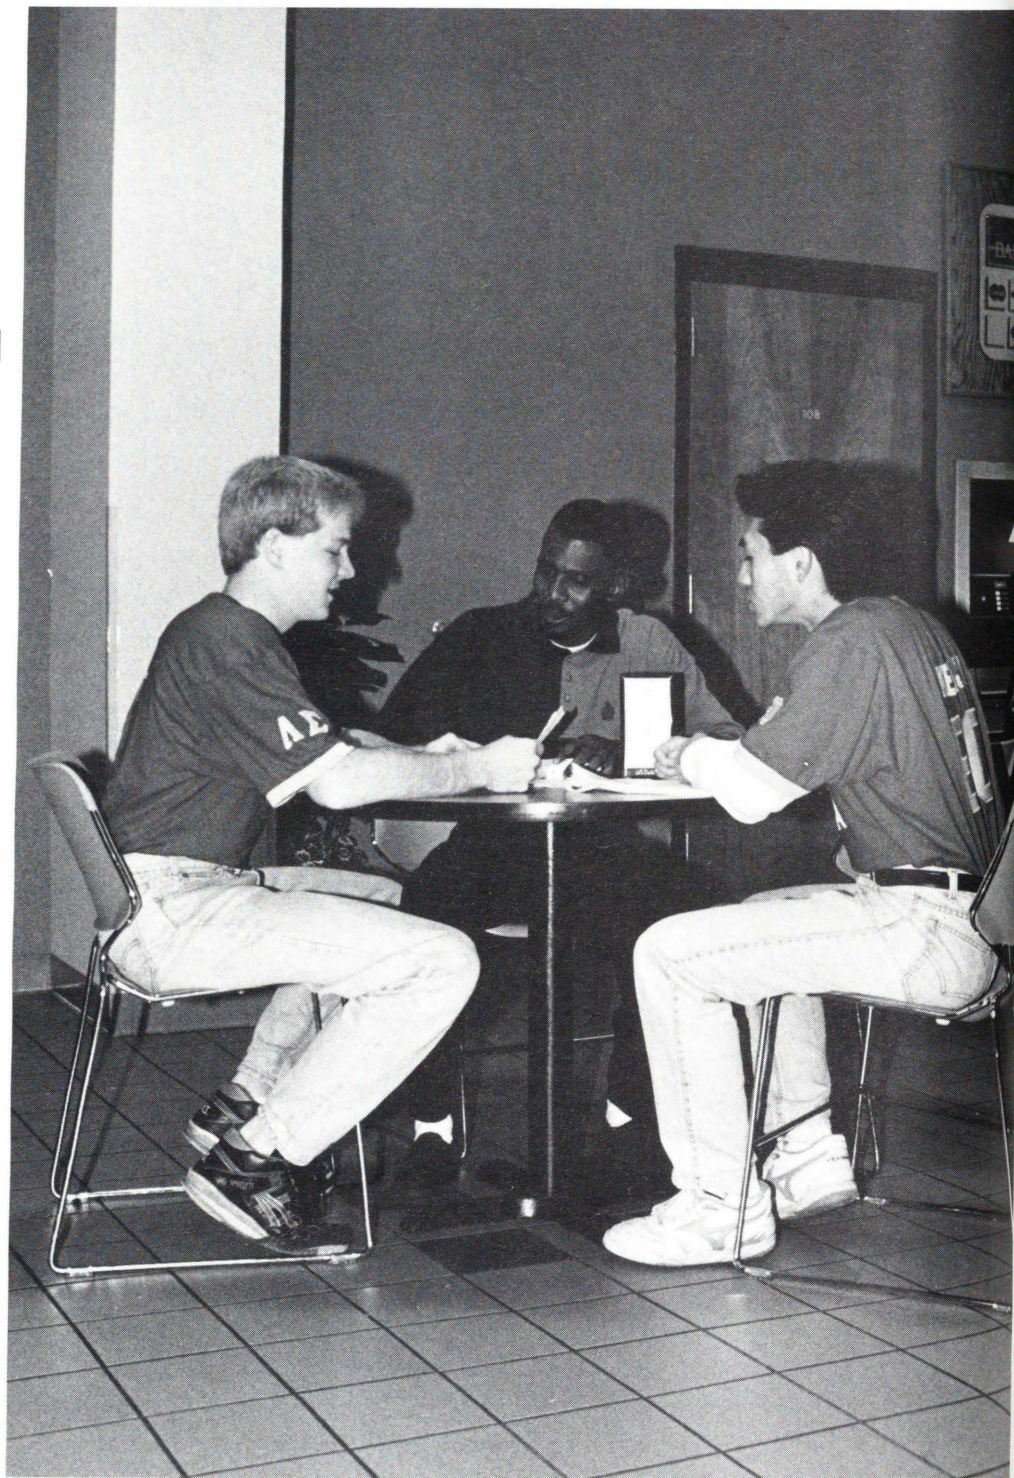

Finally, Lambda Sigma was a club of servants. Four times during the year, the club came together to pick up litter off the highways. Through this, they not only made the area beautiful, but they also grew closer through service. In reference to this activity, Kevin Busch, a junior from Mission Hill, S.D., said, "It seems like a small thing, but it makes a big difference and I guess that picking up trash together could be called a 'bonding experience.'"

Lambda Sigma had 21 members with a wide variety of majors and interests. But despite their differences, they showed their ability to "triumph through togetherness."

A COMMITMENT TO LIFEGIVING

Arkansas cannot supply its own blood needs and has to import thousands of units from across the country. Harding University is one of the main sources of blood for central Arkansas.

OEGE has sponsored blood drives for the American Red Cross for more than 20 years, making it possible for students and faculty on campus to donate blood. Michele Winter, president of OEGE said, "People need blood and it's great to know there are people out there whom you can count on when they are really needed."

OEGE provided volunteers to help donors fill out the registration papers, put labels on blood bags, work the canteen, and make sure people didn't faint. They also assisted the Red Cross in cleaning up afterwards. In addition, they provided publicity, making posters and making the students aware of all the details.

The blood drive which OEGE sponsored to help the Red Cross in September brought in 236 units of blood and benefitted many people. Winter said, "I'm glad we can reach out and help other people. It's great to see everyone come out, especially a lot of eager freshmen, ready to give for the first time." Taran Rawlins said, "We can't make people come out and donate, so it's great to see all the interest that people have in helping others."

A TRADITION OF SERVICE

Phi Delta celebrated its 50th anniversary in January.

In those 50 years, one thing that had not changed was Phi Delta's desire to serve. Once every two weeks, the club helped clean the local Headstart. "We also break into groups of five and babysit for Headstart once a month while they conduct a parents' meeting," Shereen Henry said. Phi Delta took a special interest in these children. "It's exciting to see the kids' faces when we give our parties," said Leah Barber, a senior elementary education major. They hosted a Christmas party, which Santa Claus attended, and a Valentine party. "The kids love it," Henry said.

Phi Delta was a small club, consisting of 37 members. This year's pledge class included 18 people. "They are a good group of girls. They are excited. They are filled with new energy and ideas," Barber said. These new ideas have helped Phi Delta evolve. "Phi Delta has changed. It has a renewed spirit. The new pledges have enhanced the life of the club," she said.

After 50 years, Phi Delta continued to reach out to the children of Searcy. "We try to help the best we can," Henry said. "We've been helping people for a long time, and we plan to help many more."

A FUNCTION WITH CREATIVITY

Have you ever been to a kilt krash? A reggae fest? A Pike fry? The variety of club functions held by Pi Kappa Epsilon reflected the unique interests of the members.

"I think we have the best functions on campus," Vice President Glen Metheny said. "We have a diverse group of guys, and we try to have a different kind of function every fall."

Last year's fall function challenged each member to bring a little bravery, along with his date, if he planned to ride the bull in Cabot.

However, this fall's kilt krash required a different kind of bravery. "We didn't have to wear kilts, but most everyone did," sophomore Brian Reis said. "Our guys are very secure in their manhood."

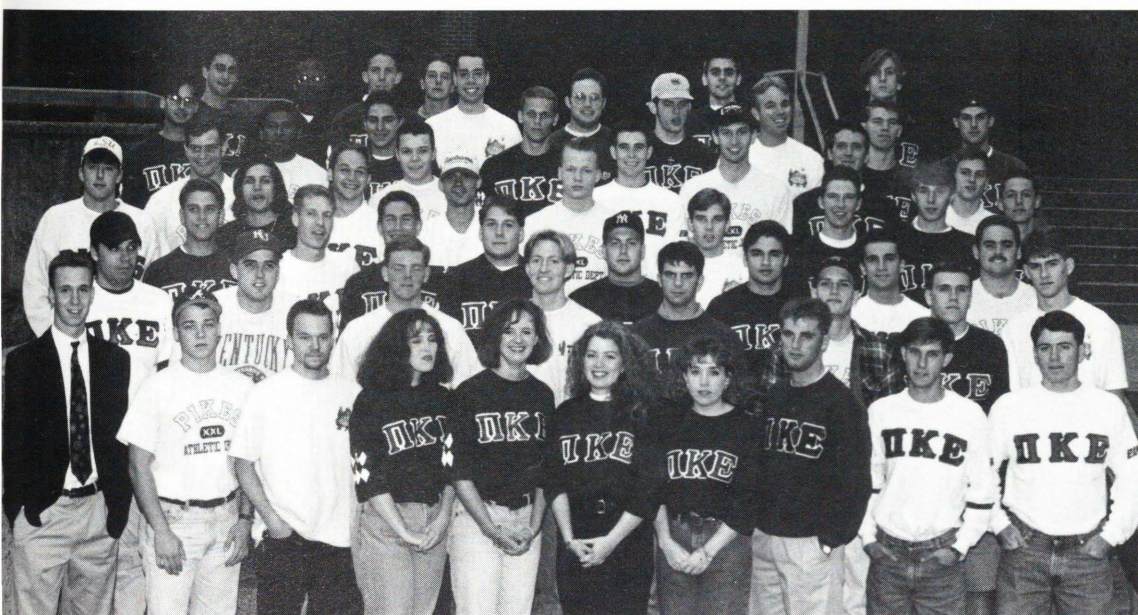

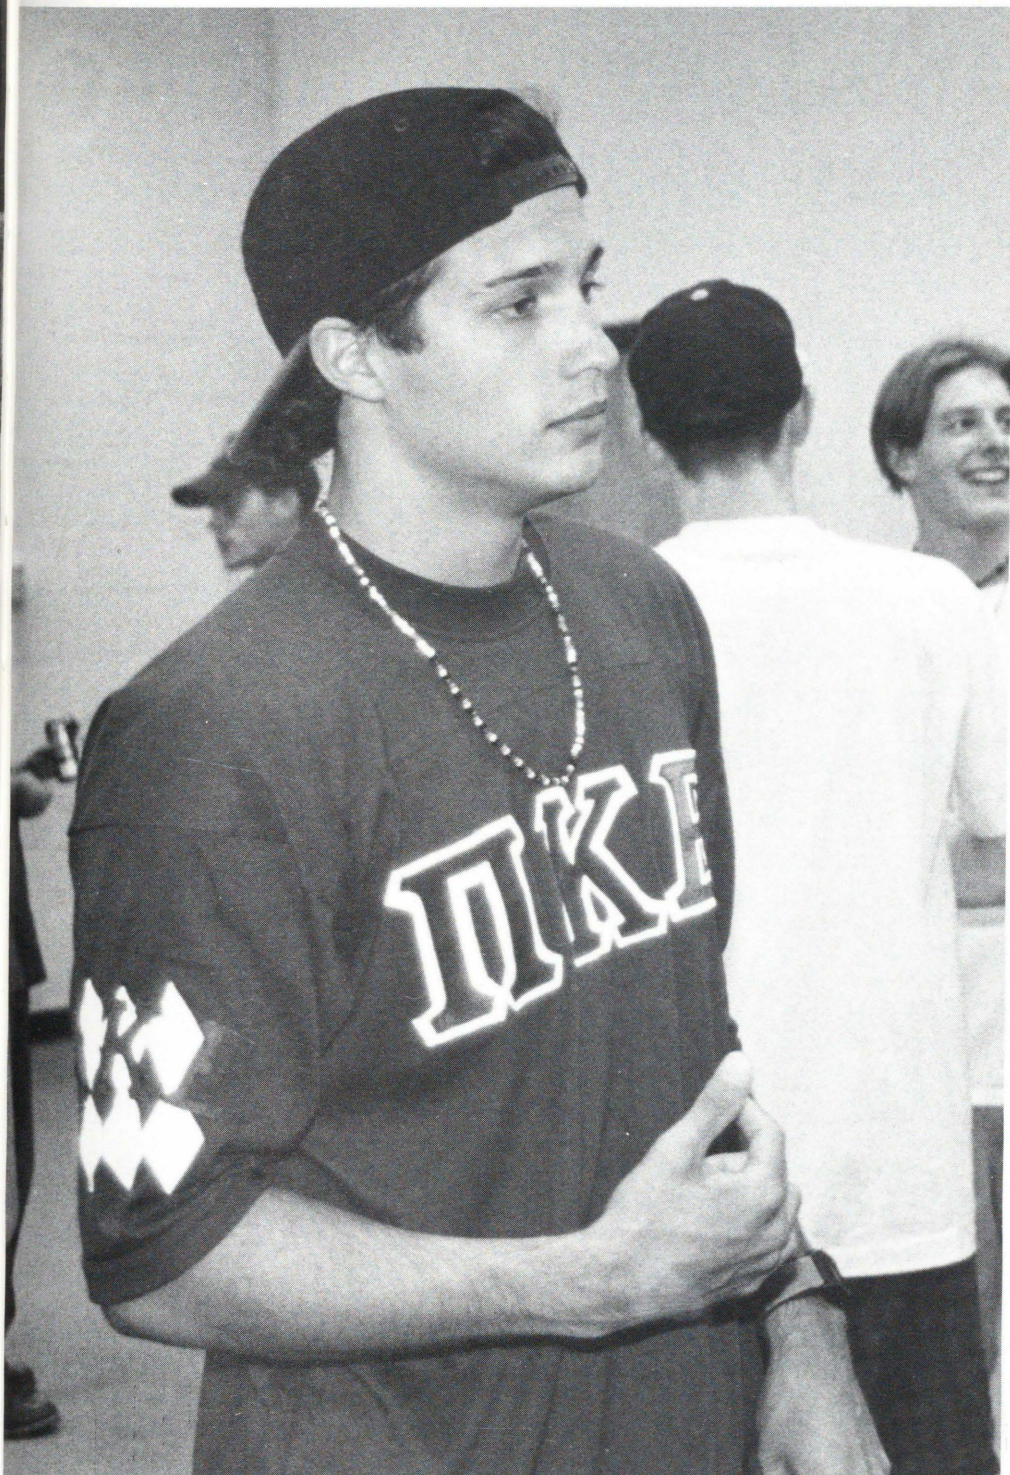

Creativity on a more serious side was seen last spring when members discovered that the newborn daughter of their sponsor, Scott Morris, had cystic fibrosis. They decided to give the money saved for the spring function to Morris' family. A $1000 check was given to Morris, along with a big card signed by all the members. "It almost brought him to tears," Metheny said, "and it brought us closer together."

This year, for their service project, Pi Kappa Epsilon held some fund raisers for cystic fibrosis research, an indication of their continued commitment to service and to the Morris family.

A DINNER FOR FELLOWSHIP

One of the many activities which Regina enjoys is their annual Thanksgiving dinner which they share with their brother club, Chi Sigma Alpha.

Every year, before the week-long holiday, Regina and Chi Sigma Alpha meet on Sunday afternoon in the fellowship hall of the College Church of Christ. Members from both clubs sign up to bring specific food items, and those few who live off-campus and have ovens are given the job of cooking the turkeys. After dinner, the members enjoy a devotional, and then a joint slide show.

What makes this event so different is that it is the only joint activity during the fall semester that is exclusively for Regina and her brother club. It gives the club members a chance to fellowship and enjoy the special bonds that they share.

After the dinner is over, the clubs get in a circle and sing their songs to each other. Last year, Regina surprised Chi Sigma Alpha by singing to them a song that was specially written for their brother club. Chi Sigma Alpha had long had a song for Regina, and members were excited that Regina had finally written one for them. "We already feel like brothers and sisters, so it is only fitting that we share the holiday that is traditionally set aside for families," said Regina beau and Chi Sigma Alpha vice president, Craig Wolfe.

A PROJECT FOR CHILDREN

For the past two Octobers, Seminole social club has been involved with a special project for children, a haunted house. Located both years at the Searcy Emporium, the haunted house has become a source of safe but scary Halloween fun for local kids and their parents.

The project was not without its philanthropic motives. All money raised was donated to local charities and organizations. "Last year we presented a lump sum to the Sunshine School. This year we gave most of it to the United Way," said president Rich Ross.

The event began the 22nd and continued through Halloween. For the workers involved, this schedule called for a great deal of time, effort and intense preparation. "A lot of work went into designing and constructing the different rooms," said Ross. "For the forest room, guys actually had to go out to the woods and cut down limbs and trees. And for the polka-dot room they had to do quite a bit of painting."

Another feature of this year's haunted house was a section of wooden tunnel underlaid with plexiglass flooring. As they entered this part, visitors could look down through the floor and view, to their horror, a live assortment of snakes and rats.

The haunted house provided a way to serve others and have fun at the same time.

AN ALTERNATIVE TO HAYRIDES

"With some functions, everyone is in their own little group... with the Barn Bash, we're all together having a great time," said Stephanie McCracken.

In the fall, Shantih held their fifth annual Barn Bash, which Shantih members originally planned as an alternative to the traditional fall hayride.

"One year, it was raining and muddy during the hayride, and no one had a very good time," McCracken said. That experience encouraged the officers to plan a different type of activity, one that did not rely so heavily on tradition or good weather. They rented a barn, planned some games, brought plenty of refreshments, and gave birth to the Barn Bash.

Since its debut in 1989, the Bash has become one of the more popular fall club functions. Last fall, Shantih members and their dates brought decorated pumpkins as their entrance "tickets" for a pumpkin-carving contest to be held later that evening. A band was hired to entertain the members and guests as they played games, performed skits and enjoyed hot cider and other refreshments.

Will Shantih members continue their recent "tradition?" You bet your barn they will. Officers say they hope to continue making the Bash better each year.

LETTERS OF GRATITUDE

"Missionaries need a lot of encouragement because they've left everything," said Sigma Tau Sigma member Shawn Hart, a senior from Searcy. The club has initiated a service project to fill this need. Together, they write letters to send to missionaries who are in foreign countries.

Before each meeting, those who wish to participate meet early to write their letters. They obtained a list of names and addresses from Monte Cox, Harding's director of missions; club members who know missionaries have brought names as well. In fact, the parents of one club member are missionaries. "We tell them how much we appreciate them," Hart said. "Even though we're not able to be there, we're glad they are and we wish them the best of luck."

The project has been very successful, and many have chosen to be a part of it. Hart, who was expecting about 15 guys to show up for the first letter-writing, was surprised when almost the whole club was there. Sigma Tau Sigma has sent letters to Africa, Asia and Australia, as well as many other places. "It doesn't take much time," he said, "but at the same time it's a good effort."

SERVICE THROUGH FRIENDSHIP

Every month Sigma Phi Mu members visited Southern Christian Home in Morrilton, a home where orphans live in group homes with house parents. After making friends there, club members enjoyed returning on a regular basis.

"The best part is just sitting around talking to the kids and sharing our pasts," said Darla Knox. Members wanted the children to know they were not there simply to have fun, but to get to know them. Melinda Oliver said she liked to go because, "I've made friends there. I know some of them have been abused in the past and I want to show them that it doesn't have to be that way."

Oliver said her most vivid memory was Christmas last year when they went to each house to distribute gifts to the children. She especially enjoyed the surprised look on everyone's faces, including those of the house parents.

Sigma Phi Mu members traveled to Morrilton one Saturday each month. They usually played volleyball or basketball, and sometimes had picnics. Social directors organized each trip's activities, taking into consideration that the kids ranged from birth to 18 years of age.

The club chose this service project because it was mutually beneficial – it gave the children special friends and special times to remember, and it gave members of the club opportunity to get to know and to serve those in need.

FIRM EMPHASIS ON VALUES

Sailing into its 69th year, Sub-T 16 continued to carry the traditions of pride and honor that its charter members felt were so important. Daren Holaday, skipper, said, "It's these values and traditions that make Sub-T 16 such a unified group. They are the glue that binds us together."

At the annual Homecoming breakfast, Dr. Clifton L. Ganus, Jr., a former skipper, spoke to alumni and current crew members. Ganus spoke of the memories he shared with his pledge class and how campus life had changed since he was a student, with Sub-T 16 being one of the few things that has remained consistent on the campus.

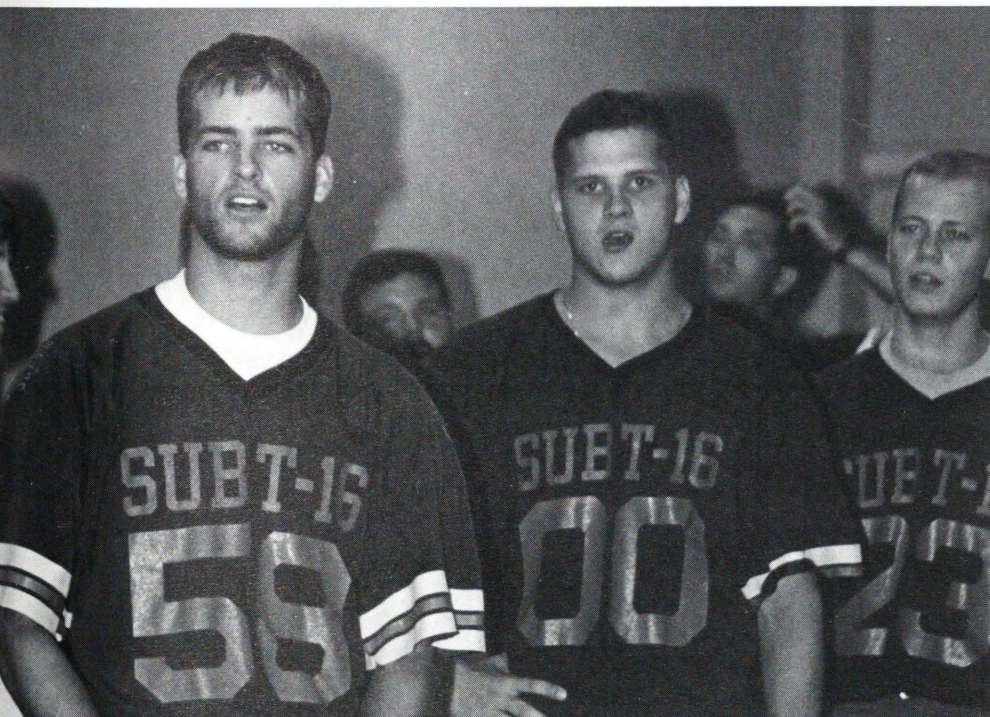

Bill Hinkle, a first-year member of Sub-T 16 reacted to Ganus' speech. "It's really mind boggling to think that the same traditions that Dr. Ganus upheld when he was a student are still around today. It's nice to have a constant that you can always rely on, and Sub-T 16 is that constant."

Spiritual unity was also a big part of Sub-T 16's year. Casey Smith, a third-year member, said, "Devotionals helped me to be able to take a break from all the pressures of school. It lifts you up to know that you have more than 60 people on your side if you need them. That's what Sub-T 16 is all about – having a support group that you know you can always count on when things get you down."

CLEAN-UP FOR SERVICE

Theta Tau Delta social club, under the leadership of Johnny Kerr, a senior from Hamilton, Ala., decided, for their service project this year, to spend a weekend at Camp Tahkodah, cleaning and repairing the camp. It was an opportunity for the club brothers to serve their community. The weekend also gave them a chance to regroup and get to know each other better. Vice President Glen Hollis, a senior from Minden, La., organized the service project. He put the weekend in perspective by saying, "We went to Camp Tahkodah to give the fellas a chance to get together and have some fun. But we were mainly there to get some work done."

Unfortunately for Camp Tahkodah, a weekend of rain seemed to conflict with the weekend of cleanup. Nevertheless, the weekend brought the club brothers closer together and gave them the opportunity to serve God by serving others.

A FUNCTION FOR FAMILIES

In keeping with a growing trend this year, Titans took a different approach to their annual fall function. Instead of modifying a hayride or barn bash, they decided to take a completely different approach, a service-oriented activity.

Since their event was to take place a week before Thanksgiving break, they decided to provide Thanksgiving dinner for needy families. Club president, Andy Chunn, and club members Jason Parscale, Ben Briscoe, Hoyt Slade and Brad Lawson organized the dinner.

"I thought it was good that we incorporated service into our fall activity; it was something different; it was just a good thing to do," Chunn said. Instead of simply funding the event, Titans members brought food for the Thanksgiving feast. Downtown Church of Christ offered their facilities and asked members to help by donating food.

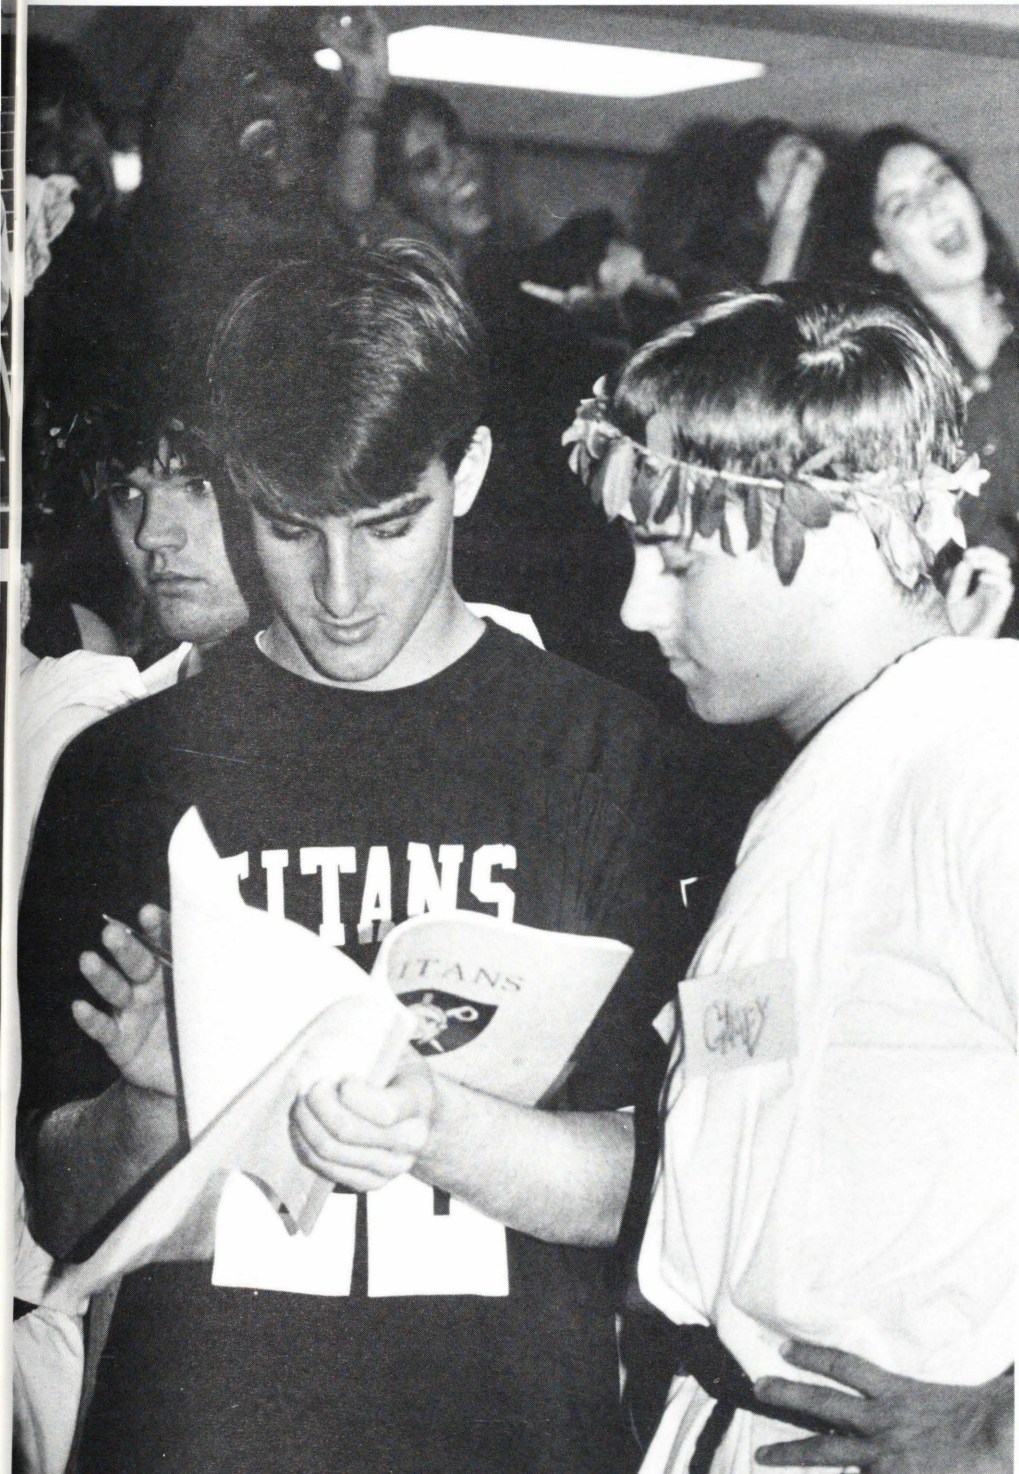

Club members bobbed for apples, enjoyed each other's company, and served their guests. When picture time rolled around, old English stocks were used to capture the moment.

"I'm glad I participated," Ken McMahan said, "because, if our situations were reversed, I'd love to be one of the families that benefitted from the meal. There were so many people who needed a good Thanksgiving dinner. One way of giving thanks for what we had was to share with others."

THE EXPERIENCE OF ZOOFEST

"We wanted to do something other than a hayride," said senior Peter Epton from Anchorage, Alaska. That's why TNT members and their dates "adopted" children from Little Rock's River City Ministries for a day. About 35 children participated in the outing. The Harding students left Searcy at about noon and spent the afternoon with the children at the zoo. After returning the children to their homes, the members and their dates met in a vacant lot near McCain Mall for a cookout.

Apparently, the kids loved it. "They were so grateful for the kindness that we showed them," said Chris Phillips, a senior from Ft. Collins, Colo. "It humbled me and reminded me who I am and who I'm supposed to be."

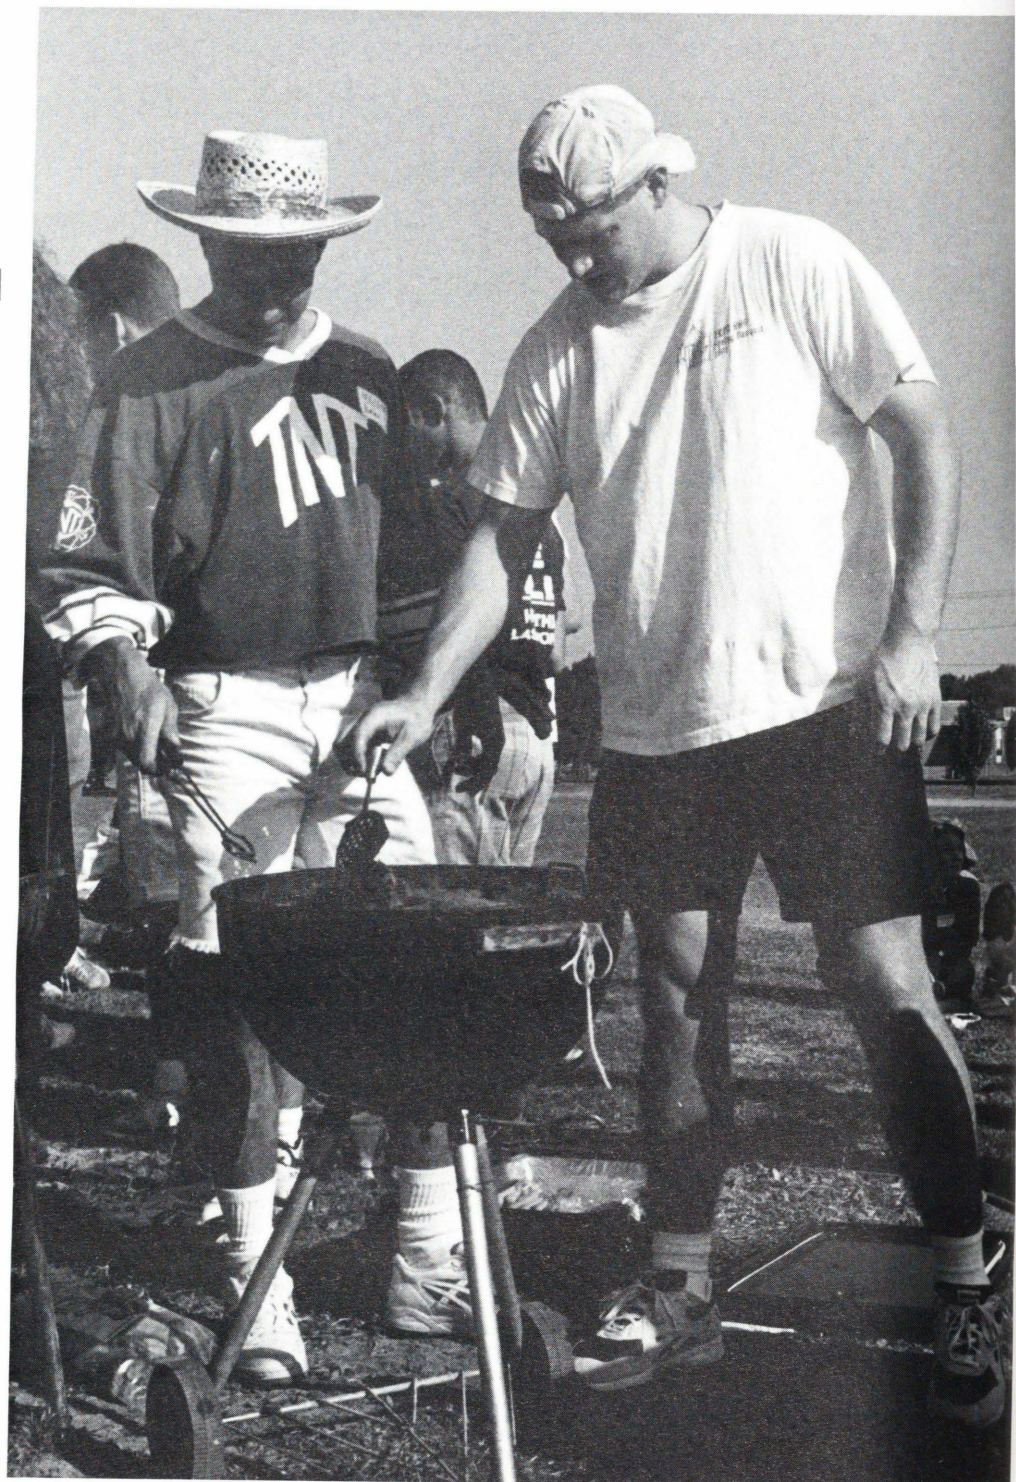

But the kids were not the only ones who benefited from the experience. "I think it helped us to see what goes on in their homes," commented Zach Steed, a freshman from Carbondale, Ill. Phillips spoke of what he gained from the children, "Their genuineness – just being themselves – was a reward for me. I could see Jesus in them."

The "zoofest" was a learning experience for everyone involved. While the children discovered what it means to be cared for with special attention, the TNT members learned about giving themselves in service to others.

A CHRISTMAS TO REMEMBER

Tri-Delta Epsilon social club excitedly planned a unique Christmas party for several young children. On a Wednesday night before Christmas, club members and their dates ventured to the Searcy housing project to adopt children for the evening. By first taking the children to church, the group hoped to "reach children and teach them about Jesus Christ by being an example and by educating through devotionals," Tacy Dubach, club activities director, said.

The party was one that the children did not soon forget. After church the children, assisted by their "adoptive parents" (club members), made hand-print t-shirts which they took home with them.

The festivities continued into the weekend. On Friday night, club members took the children to dinner at Circus Capers in Little Rock where they played for hours.

Fun was not the top priority, though. A more important goal for club members was the chance to "minister to children who otherwise would not hear about Christ," Dubach said.

What could have been an ordinary Christmas party had become much more. Dubach said, "We did it, not to make ourselves feel better, but for the children." As Jesus washed the feet of his disciples, so had Tri-Delta Epsilon exhibited true service by bringing young souls closer to Christ.

A FINALE TO PLEDGE WEEK

When pledge week was finally over, most students' thoughts turned to relaxation and recuperation. But Tri-Kappa social club dedicated the Saturday after pledge week to working on a service project and strengthening club ties.

The old and new members of Tri-Kappa gathered at mid-morning at the Associated Women for Harding (AWH) house. They spent the rest of the day cleaning the windows and blinds and weeding the flower beds outside of the house. The club members took care of anything that needed to be cleaned up — inside or out.

Tri-Kappa learned of the need for someone to clean the AWH house from one of their sponsors, Mary Ann Arnett, who is in charge of that particular aspect of AWH activities.

President Kim Sheets said the service project was a good way to get everyone together after pledge week, where the new girls were treated as equals. She said, "We chose to do it the Saturday after pledge week so that the old and new members could bond."

Vice President Kristi Spears agreed that cleaning the AWH house not only helped to unite the club, but it served to focus the members on service, even after pledge week. "It's really nice to know that people would give up their Saturday, even though it was right after pledge week and most people don't really have a lot of energy. It just proved that we could all work well together," she said.

CHRISTMAS FOR HILLBILLIES

Tri-Sigma Delta enjoyed a different type of Christmas party this year, a "Hillbilly Christmas." Tara Smart, a junior from Bullard, Texas, said, "We wanted to pick a theme that was unique instead of just the plain old Christmas theme. The hillbilly idea made it kind of like a country Christmas."

The party was held at Wyldewood Retreat Center. Partygoers went dressed in ragged clothes, bare feet, straw hats and blackened teeth. Julie Marcangeli, a junior from McAlester, Okla., said, "Dressing in costume allowed us to let loose and have fun. It was a more comfortable setting, especially for people with dates."

Decorations helped set the scene. Tree trunks served as tables, and checkers were plentiful. Activities included a slide show, a three-legged race, a wheelbarrow race, gift giving, the passing-the-lifesaver-on-the-toothpick game, kiss and tackle, and entertainment by the beaux.

Michelle Shaver, a freshman from Valparaiso, Ind., said, "I really liked the theme of Hillbilly Christmas. People really got into the spirit of it. We had so much fun dressing as hillbillies and just goofing off."

Lisa Miller, a freshman from Worden, Ill., said, "It was funny to see everyone dressed up. We played a lot of fun games, and I really enjoyed the slide show. The beaux' entertainment act was great. I had a good time."

A PROJECT WITH PURPOSE

In the midst of a frustrating and hectic week, Zeta Rho and its pledges took time out to make a difference in the lives of others. With TNT and its pledges, Zeta Rho travelled to Griffithville Church of Christ to clean, repair and paint the building.

Members and pledges worked, sweated and sang side by side during the hours at the church. The tasks they completed were as varied as replacing the bathroom fixtures and dusting and vacuuming. The efforts were coordinated by several members of TNT and Zeta Rho who attend the Griffithville church.

The project benefitted both Zeta Rho and the members of the Griffithville congregation. One special advantage of the work was that it was obviously needed. "We really made a difference," said Amy Conner, a junior from Denver, Colo. "You could see how the building had changed from when we started and when we left."

But the benefits were not just physical. Shannon Pollard, a freshman from Searcy, said, "We were just getting used to pledge week, and things had gotten really tense. It was good to have an activity that was more laid back." Conner said, "I got to work beside my pledge. We had one thing in mind and we were all on the same level."

An effort intended to serve the community yielded benefits for members and pledges as well.

THE SPIRIT OF SERVICE

Because of their overt commitment to God, His work and His people, Diadra McGregor and Tquan Moore were this year's recipients of the Regina Spirit Award. Nominated by Regina social club, they were selected by senior members of the student body.

McGregor, a senior dietetics major from Hallsville, Texas, said, upon receiving the award, "I would hope I would live up to it. I hope people see this as something that is actually in my life, and not just as an award I received."

Moore, a senior Bible major from Ft. Walton Beach, Fla., expressed his emotions by saying, "The people who stay up late with their roommates, who visit the elderly in the nursing home – those are the true servants, but they are never recognized. It's kind of ironic that, for service done in humility, they would give you an award."

What advice would they give to Harding students? "You can be involved in a lot of things and receive honors and recognition, but what's really important is having your relationship with God on track," McGregor said. Moore advised, "Expect only what God has promised. If anything else comes, be thankful. But don't expect any more."

In presenting this award, Regina has honored a pair who so represent the spirit of Christ that they were even embarrassed to be publicly recognized – the kind of spirit for which the award was initiated.

THE BENEFIT OF TEAMWORK

The purpose of the Interclub Council (ICC) is to benefit the entire student body by bringing all the social clubs together.

Consisting of all club presidents and vice presidents, the council worked to provide leadership for the social clubs. Sponsoring deans, Peggy Huckleba and James Anderson, administered the organization. "ICC is the governing body for everything that goes on with clubs," Huckleba said. Controversial topics were discussed by the students, who then made recommendations to the deans, who could often approve the recommendation on the spot. If there was a problem, however, the final decision was always made by the deans.

The council worked together to make improvements and changes for the benefit of all clubs and the university as a whole. Dawn Spell, GATA club president, said, "We threw ideas up in the air, had discussions and debates about them, and tried to decide on the best possible solution for everyone."

ICC's Executive Council was made up of three men and three women. It served as a communication link between the ICC and Harding's administration, and made emergency decisions. Executive council members voted on inductees and served on a task force during pledge week. Kim Baker, Chi Omega Pi's president, said, "ICC meetings were a good way to get to know the concerns of the administration and the opinions of the other clubs."

AN AWARD FOR SERVICE

Every year, the Petit Jean staff recognizes a social club for service projects which best reflect Harding's goals of Christian humility and servanthood, as judged by a team of faculty, staff and students. The Petit Jean Service Award for 1993-94 honors Kappa Sigma Kappa men's social club.

Kappa Sigma Kappa began their school year with a project at Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Martin's, an elderly couple who own a local cattle ranch. Members cut grass, trimmed hedges, painted and did other chores that the Martins are unable to do.

About halfway through the fall semester, another need arose which the club felt they could not ignore. Eric Jenkins, a freshman who had pledged their club, had a recurrence of cancer and had to go to Houston for treatment of a tumor that was putting pressure on his brain.

When Kappa Sigma Kappa learned that Eric's parents had spent almost $200,000 on his medical treatment, they decided to start raising all the money they could to put into a "Friends of Eric Jenkins Foundation." The club took up a contribution during Peak of the Week, did all kinds of yard work for pay, and purchased a Friday campus movie and put all the proceeds into the foundation.

By February, they had raised $7000, and contributions were still coming in. Senior Jerre Glover said that Eric's battle with cancer brought the club closer together. "We didn't do this for club recognition; we just wanted to do something for one of our members."

thletic performances remained outstanding in both intercollegiate and intramural play. Stellar individual and team efforts pushed the Bisons to give their all. Athletics required determination and discipline and this year witnessed fine examples of both qualities. Team players displayed the classic Bison pride in all events. Grace under pressure, the ability to show pride in victory, and success through defeat, were the keys to the participants' winning attitudes. With smashing success, Bison competitors continued to build on a strong tradition.

A Season to Remember...

Baseball Team Returns to AIC Playoffs

For the Bison baseball team, the '93 season proved to be a disappointing one. But as is often the case in the sporting world, the small successes along the way made for memorable and rewarding experiences in the end.

Better-than-average expectations accompanied the squad into the spring campaign. Led by proven performers like pitcher Trevor Black and catcher Shane Fullerton, the Bisons looked to challenge the opposition with a blend of promising youth and savvy experience. But the Bison hardballers were met with misfortune. The team lost two key hurlers.

Despite initial setbacks, key conference wins against UCA and Henderson State, and a victory over league powerhouse Southern Arkansas, helped the team secure a second straight invitation to the AIC Tournament.

The season was a memorable one for Bison head coach, Steve Smith, who returned to his teaching/administrative post in the fall. "This last season was special because of the players – my seniors, especially. I recruited them as a new coach four years ago and they played their whole career under me. They'll always be special to me," he said.

The club was certainly not lacking in talent or star power, as several players were honored for outstanding seasons. Catcher Shane Fullerton provided senior leadership in several offensive categories including batting, triples, RBI's and slugging. To acknowledge his impressive numbers, Shane was named to the 1993 All-AIC team.

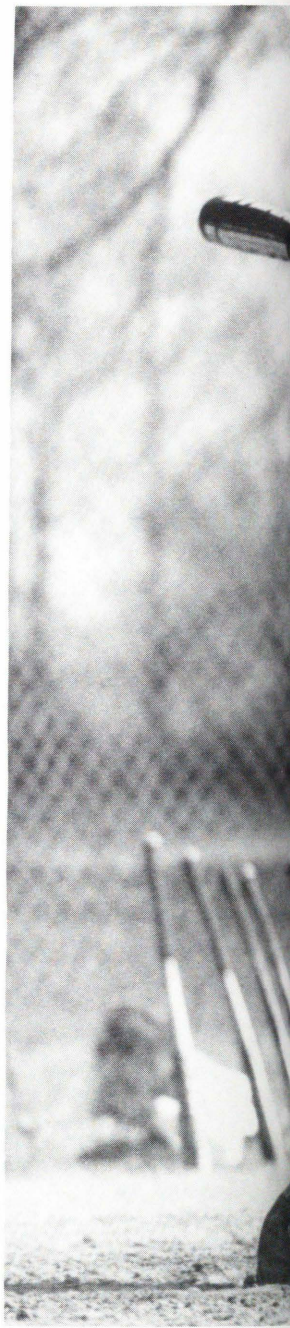

Freshman Daryl Johnson also had a major impact on the team. Johnson, the lead-off hitter, collected 29 stolen bases, one shy of the club record. For his performance, Daryl was awarded honorable mention status with the All-AIC team. Other honorable mentions were Bart Jones, Trevor Black and Nick Fouts.

After the season, when the diamond paths of Jerry Moore Field lay silent, wiped clean of cleat marks, Smith reaffirmed that the season was a positive one. "Our boys played hard. They played as well as they could have under the circumstances and I'm proud of them," he said. "And that's what matters most."

Competition Level Rises in AIC Golf

Men Experience Rough Season

The Bison golf team played like a roller coaster in 1993 – up in one tournament and down in the next.

After a third-place Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference finish in 1992, Coach Scott Ragsdale hoped to break into the “upper crust” of AIC golf. But inexperience and the loss of seniors Todd Rinehart and Darrell Welch left the team pitching out of the sand trap and into a rough season.

“We really played on about the same level as last year when we came in at third place,” Ragsdale said. “But the level of competition in the AIC has been stepped up. To be competitive, we will have to get much better.”

The season got off to a slow start with two losses in three-way matches to Ouachita Baptist/Henderson State and Arkansas Tech/Central Arkansas. But Kevin Kelly shot a 75 against Rhodes College to help Harding bounce back and take a 309-333 win.

In the Bisons’ first AIC match, James Clark shot a 77 and Matt Tiller a 78, but Harding couldn’t touch a hot Tech team. Harding finished in sixth place with a score of 319, 28 points behind the ATU Wonder Boys.

Harding again faced Rhodes College and again walked off the green with a win. This time though, Bart McFarland stepped up with a score of 79 as the Bisons took a hard-fought 338-347 victory.

The Bisons finished in sixth place in the next three conference matches and completed the season in sixth place overall with 27.5 points.

The Bisons had some individual highlights as James Clark was named to the All-District 17 squad and Bart McFarland landed a hole-in-one in AIC play.

“We just played below our potential,” Ragsdale said. “It was disappointing to the athletes. They worked hard, but things just didn’t work out.”

Smash Returns Spark Undefeated Season

Women Take Conference Title

In only their second season as a program, the Lady Bison tennis team overwhelmed the opposition with an on-court assault of talent and spirited youth. The performance sparked a remarkable three-month rise from virtual anonymity to state and national prominence – no small achievement for a program still in the stages of infancy. But for the Lady Bisons, prosperity seemed to arrive overnight, as 1993 was a year marked by one achievement after another.

Sporting an unblemished mark of 12-0 in the AIC, the team captured its first conference title in dominating fashion, after finishing second the year before. Their AIC banner earned the team a trip to the NAIA National Tournament in Kansas City, and the 15th spot in the NAIA women's tennis rankings.

Awards and honors were not in short supply for the Lady Bisons. Freshman Alicia Rojas, the team's leader and number one player, became the first girl from the AIC to make All-American. She was also named to the All-AIC team, where she was joined by teammates Jessica Ruiz and Beatrice Arvizu as Honorable Mentions. The team also placed six on the All-District list, and Head Coach David Elliott was named Tennis Coach of the Year in the AIC.

Elliott gave much of the credit to the team. "They were a very positive group to coach and be around," he said. "They set their goals high and reached most of them – an impressive accomplishment for such a young team."

Bisons Earn Bid to Nationals

Although the tennis team had enjoyed its share of success for many years, the team faced a tough schedule in 1993 with little experience or leadership to fall back on. Laden with freshman talent and featuring no player beyond his sophomore year, the Bisons waded into the new season warily. After opening with an impressive 8-1 victory over the University of Missouri, Coach David Elliott knew he had a talented group.

When the final season stats were in, the Bisons were co-champions of the AIC and received a bid to the NAIA nationals. Their 21-2 record allowed them a share of the conference title with Ouachita, and a number 19 ranking in the final NAIA poll.

Credit for their success was distributed throughout the team. Diego Perez, Ruben Gonzalez, Leoncio Dominguez and Ignacio Ruiz were all named to the All-AIC team. The Bisons placed these few and two others, Juan Domingues and Eduardo Giralt, on the All-District squad. The team's top player for the season, Ignacio Ruiz, was the district singles champ.

Coach Elliott had nothing but praise for his team. "This was one of our best seasons since I've been connected with the tennis program. It was surprisingly good, because of our youth and inexperience. But we grew up over the year and our team chemistry was great."

The Race is On

Women Repeat Success in AIC

Shauna Queen, a three-time All-American, won the 400-meter, 800-meter, 1500-meter and 3000-meter races at the Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference track meet to lead the Lady Bisons to their second straight second-place finish.

"Shauna was the heart and soul of our team," trackster Ketty Jensen said. "Whenever we needed something done, she was the first person we turned to – and what's more, she never let us down. Obviously, she was the reason we were able to do as well as we did this season."

Coach Bryan Phillips said the team's showing was also based on the efforts of the other team members, who practiced long hours. "Shauna was a great athlete, but the reason for our success was that we had several strong events," Phillips said.

Penny Mayberry surprised Coach Phillips with her stellar high-jump skills. "Mayberry performed well above what was expected," Phillips said. "Of course, now we know what to expect from her in the future," he added.

Mayberry was the AIC conference champion in the high jump, and placed fourth in national competition.

Jensen also came in strong for the team, placing second in the 1500-meter, 800-meter and 3000-meter.

Phillips said of the '93 season, "The women performed as well as could be expected."

Runners Finish Strong

Men Nab First Title Since 1982

Football players get "glory" and basketball players revel in cutting down the nets, but what does it take to don the spiked cleats and run track?

"Track takes more discipline than any other sport," fourth-year Head Track Coach Bryan Phillips said. "It is an individual performance. There is no such thing as being physical; you have to focus and do your part."

Perhaps that was the combination – discipline and focus – that led to the Bisons' dominance of the lanes in 1993. The Bisons took home both the indoor and outdoor conference championships and beat the rest of the competition for their first district title since 1982.

The Bisons offered a sign of things to come with individual victories during the Ouachita Baptist University Invitational and a dual meet with OBU. But the team stumbled a bit in the pre-conference meet and settled for a second place finish.

Having qualified three people in four events and one or more in several others, the Bisons were determined to win the championship.

"We had several strong events, and that's probably the reason we won," Phillips said. "Three placed in the high jump, three placed in the intermediate 400-meter hurdles, three placed in the 10,000-meter and three placed in the 5,000-meter."

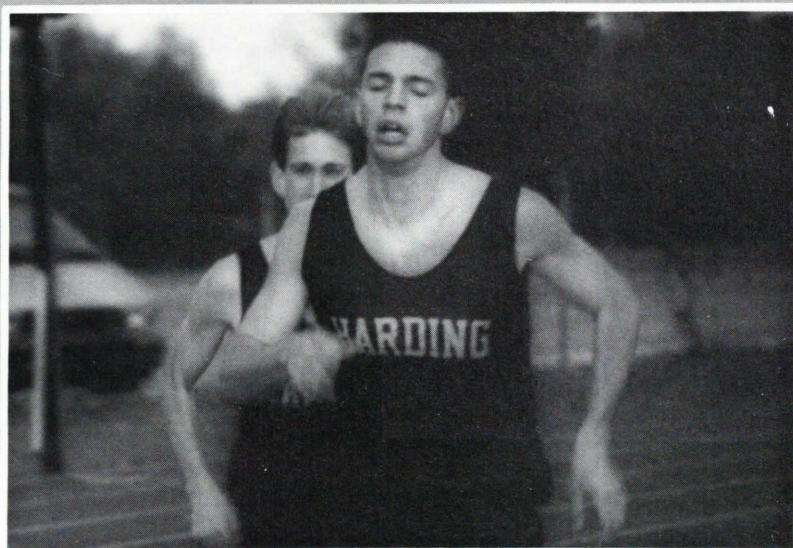

Sigmond Donelson and Tquan Moore each won conference championships, Donelson in the high jump and Moore in the triple jump. In addition to winning the conference, Moore was also named an All-American.

Nathan Mills led the Bisons in individual points with a second-place finish in the 10,000-meter, a second-place finish in the 5,000-meter, and a fourth-place finish in the 15,000-meter.

Achieving High Rankings in NAIA

Women Win Conference Title

For the past eight years, lady tracksters in the Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference have grown quite used to seeing the black and gold jerseys of the Lady Bisons passing them on the way to yet another conference title.

A first, second and third place finish by Bisons Jessica Barraza, Ketty Jensen and Edna Duran secured Harding's domination and their ninth straight AIC/District 17 championship.

Harding outdistanced the University of Arkansas at Monticello, scoring 27 points, followed by UAM with 39. Arkansas College had 72 points, Ozarks had 104 and Southern Arkansas finished with 109.

Barraza, Jensen and Duran made the All-Conference team, along with Keri Hutchison, who finished in seventh place. Mandy Crider finished in 16th place and Heather Muir came in at 19th to round out the Lady Bisons' showing in the conference meet.

Barraza's winning time of 20:37 was well short of her season best of 18:54, recorded at a meet in Rolla, Mo. Jensen followed with a 21:08, Duran with a 21:39, and then Hutchison rounded out the scoring with a sixth place finish, timed at 22:08.

But lest the Lady Bisons appear complacent with their constant domination of the AIC, Harding had its eye set on bigger things this season.

"I suspect we were looking a little beyond this meet," Coach Ted Lloyd said. "The other teams had not given us much trouble so far, and the team was thinking about improving on the 23rd-place finish at nationals last year."

Harding finished their breeze through the AIC without an appearance in the top 20 all year. But the Lady Bisons did receive votes, and a power rating of top NAIA teams ranked them in the 19th spot nationally. A disappointing performance against 40 teams in the national meet in November earned them 27th place in the competition.

A Championship Season

Bisons Honored In Conference

After a year of following on the heels of last year's champions, Ouachita Baptist, the Bison cross country team overtook the defending champs and won the crown as Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference District 17 champions.

Their winning score of 24 points was half that of Ouachita. Southern Arkansas was third with 57, Arkansas College took fourth with 105 points, and Ozarks rounded out the scoring with 133 points.

"We have had many cross country wins at Harding during my tenure," Coach Ted Lloyd said. "But none have ever been more satisfying than this one."

From the starting gun, the AIC/District 17 championship was a two-team race. Both Harding and OBU qualified five runners in the top 12, and at the beginning of the race, OBU claimed the top two slots.

At the three-mile mark, Sam Rogers, OBU's top runner and defending champion, held a lead of about 15 seconds over Bison Damon Work. But, because of Harding's supreme effort all season, the rest of the herd was closing.

Rogers, weak from an earlier sickness, was forced to drop out of the race. Taking advantage of the situation, the Bisons moved in for the kill. The result was an individual victory for senior Damon Work and a great team effort from Coach Lloyd and his crew.

"When you are outside looking in, the thing you are seeing always looks better, and that is how we felt about the championship," Lloyd said.

"OBU and Harding were evenly matched. They had some bad luck when Rogers went out, but we would have won easily, even if he had won the race, and that makes us feel better."

The Bisons came out on top at the nationals in academics. They received the NAIA Scholar Team award for achieving the highest grade point average among teams at the competition. Jonathan Griffin, a freshman team member, said, "We were a young team and could have done better. We had higher expectations going in, but we'll have even higher ones next year. We've set big goals: to win the conference again and to finish in the top 25 in the national meet."

Outstanding Players Lead Team To Victory

Bisons Enjoy Winning Year

In sports, a little experience and ambition will often prove to be a winning combination. Keeping this in mind, the Bisons charged into the new season with spirits soaring and expectations high.

After all, the squad was coming off a prosperous '92 campaign that saw them capture second in the AIC as well as a second-straight NAIA playoff bid. Could an impressive third bid be had in '93? Unfortunately, not. With a disappointing last-game loss to Southern Arkansas, the Bisons fell one game short of a return trip to the playoffs.

Even with the loss, however, the team managed to carry on its winning tradition. A record of 6-4 gave the Bisons another winning season, their fifth consecutive overall, and secured the team a third-place finish in the AIC. A thirteenth place national ranking capped off the season.

"We didn't achieve our pre-season goal of returning to the playoffs," Coach Larry Richmond said. "But I think overall the season was positive and successful. We had some big wins along the way." These victories included the Little Rock Classic, where the Bisons defeated OBU, and for the third straight year, a Homecoming win, this time over Arkansas Tech.

The '93 season was also one of adjustments. A conference re-alignment saw rivals Henderson State and UCA move to Division II. To fill their scheduled slots, Harding revamped its schedule to include some challenging non-conference opponents. Among the additions were West Georgia and Delta State, both Division II schools. Harding's victory on the road against West Georgia proved to be one of its biggest wins of the year.

The season also saw several Bisons honored for their on-field achievements. Many players were named to both the All-Conference team and the first and second All-AIC teams.

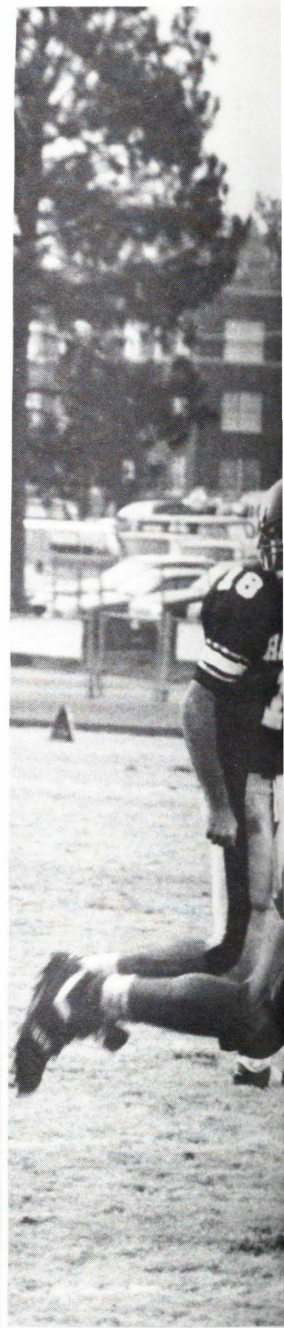

Bison quarterback Paul Mann broke his own personal records for yards and completions, and led the AIC in passing for a second consecutive year.

Summing up the season, Richmond said, "I enjoyed coaching this team, and I'm proud of the seniors. They never had a losing season while they were here, and I think they've laid a good foundation for the future."

A Season of Change

Volleyball Builds Strong Program

Seldom is a team disappointed with a conference championship. But the 1993 Lady Bison volleyball team felt that the AIC championship, coupled with a 19-18 record, was not quite good enough.

"It was a good year, but we were so up and down," Coach Karyl Bailey said. Assistant Coach Kenny Hightower added, "We had the talent, but just didn't do everything we could have to win."

"We were so close there at the end," junior captain Angela Johnson said. "We had a tough schedule and played lots of tough teams, but the wins and losses don't show what this team was capable of doing."

According to Johnson, key players had many injuries this season. "This sort of depleted our team," she said.

Individuals on the team received many honors.

Junior Amy Deuel and senior Kathleen Bassham were named to the All-District team. Junior Angela Johnson was named one of the All-American scholar athletes.

Those involved expect the 1994 season to be even greater. With the experience of returning starters Johnson and Deuel, plus what coaches feel will be a strong recruiting class, the Lady Bisons will have the potential to meet their goals.

"We're looking forward to a much bigger season next year," Hightower said. "We hope to repeat as AIC champs and also get a berth at nationals."

Johnson echoed that thought and said the team is primed and ready. "We did the best we could this year and it was fun, but we are very optimistic about next season."

A Record-Breaking Season

Lady Bisons Dominate the Nets

In a winning season, the Lady Bisons were strong competitors in the Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference. The team showed promise from the beginning of their preseason schedule. They beat College of the Ozarks in a scrimmage, then continued the winning momentum with a 78-62 victory over their first season opponent, Philander Smith. A win over Northeastern Oklahoma in the third game of the season started a six-game winning streak.

Lone senior Kymm Alexander, who led the team in scoring, was accredited with having spurred the Lady Bisons' success. According to Coach Greg Harnden, "A major part of our winning was due to Kymm's ability and leadership. She is one of the hardest workers that I have had. She is always trying to improve her game, especially her shooting." Alexander had a 67 percent career shooting average. She also set an AIC record by hitting 21 of 22 free throws. This year, she brought her average to an 88 percent success rate shooting free throws.

Alexander was also Harding's first female basketball player to receive All-America recognition. Following her selection to the NAIA 1992-93 honor squad, Harnden said she earned the honor by breaking almost every scoring record at Harding. Alexander holds records in career points, single season points, single game points, most field goals, and most assists. Alexander said of her college basketball career, "I have had a wonderful basketball experience and have loved every minute of it."

The Lady Bisons' success can also be attributed to team members Bridgett Benson, Jama Fullerton and Angie Fouts. Benson, the Lady Bisons' second leading scorer, showed great ability on the court. "Bridget is the best freshman in the conference," Harnden said. "Her speed and agility have helped keep the game exciting." He credited point guard Jama Fullerton with excellence in "running the show." Harnden also said that freshman starter Angie Fouts' performance was a "pleasant surprise," and that she provided excellent defense.

With their talent on the court, the Lady Bisons proved to be a difficult opponent. "Based on our non-conference showing and our success in the AIC, this has been the best year overall for the Lady Bisons," Harnden said. "The team play was more exciting and entertaining than ever."

Rebuilding a Strong Team

Men Experience Pivotal Season

As the 1993-94 season approached, a new era for basketball was being ushered in at Harding. The year was pivotal in every respect, with new coaches, new players and new ideas for student involvement. It was a time of change and achievement for those on the team and on the sidelines.

Jeff Morgan, the Bisons' new head coach, came from NCAA Division II's West Texas State University with novel ideas for activating the student fans. The "Bison Badlands," the "Taco Bell Shoot-out" and concert ticket giveaways sparked attendance and created school spirit and excitement. "The home crowd's support breeds enthusiasm," Morgan said.

As the team fought back from a difficult season in 1992-93 and from lack of experience playing together, they started well and entered the Christmas break with a 7-5 record. However, they began 1994 with a seven-game losing streak and were never able to bounce back. "Our greatest achievement was not in winning, but in learning the importance of hard work and dedication together, as a team," Scott Webb, a sophomore transfer said.

The year was one of adjustment for the coaches and for the players, who made up a squad with lots of ability but little consistency on the scoreboard.

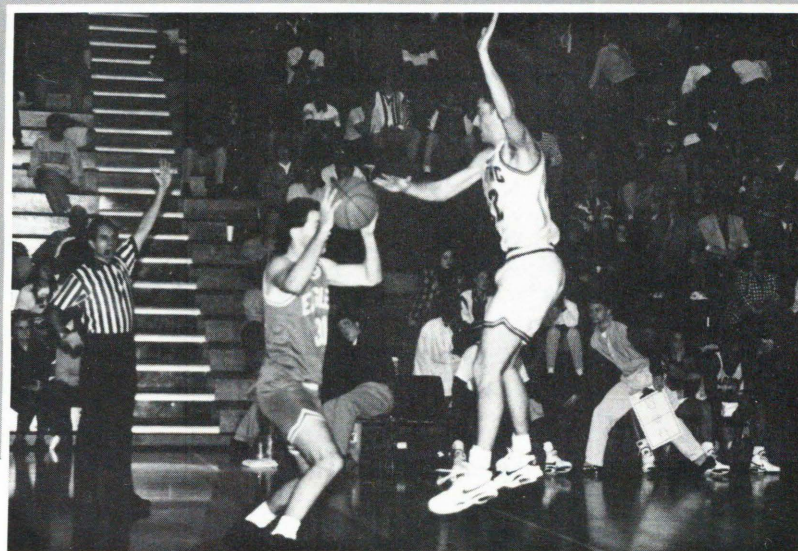

Three of the five seniors were new to the squad. Tony Marion, who averaged 10 rebounds and 17 points per game, transferred from Southwest Texas for his last year of eligibility. Fabian Mina, a 6'7" transfer from West Texas State, contributed to the Bison defense. Tim Lewis, a returning letterman, directed the team as point guard, and Allen Bishop and Brian Bequette were called on add spark to the offense.

Through the majority of the season, the Bisons led the conference in defense, holding their opponents to an average of 73 points per game. Since most of their losses came from less than a 10 point deficit, the coaches have high hopes for the future. "We hope the fans and students have seen a glimpse of what our future will be like for Bison basketball," Coach Morgan said. And, as the last sounds of squeaking shoes cleared the court, the Bison fans knew the best was yet to come.

Firing Up the Crowd

Cheerleaders Boost Team Spirit

Behind every Bison victory on the football field and basketball court stood an energetic team of cheerleaders. Both the fall and winter cheerleaders dedicated themselves to the task of boosting team spirit and keeping Bison fans enthusiastic about the games. The cheerleaders stood by the Bisons, cheering them on to victory or raising morale when the scoreboard showed defeat.

The football cheerleaders incited Bison fans' support to fire up the team. Led by cheerleading captain Ashley House and co-captain Kelly Cooper, the football cheerleaders had a memorable season. They held a t-shirt sale to raise funds and had a bonfire pep rally to promote students' interest in an upcoming football game.

In addition to hard work and long hours of practice, House remembered the fun that the cheerleaders had as a squad. She said Tracy Falwell entertained the cheerleaders during their lengthy bus rides to away games by singing to them. She also told of a bus ride to Oklahoma during which the bus was pulled over for speeding in a construction zone. The police officer allowed them to "slide," provided they shout a "boom" cheer. This scenario gave the cheerleaders many laughs throughout the season.

The basketball season marked a new beginning for the winter cheerleading squad. With Kellye Gooch as the only returning member, the basketball cheerleaders had to get to know each other, as well as to learn new routines. "We've enjoyed getting to know one another," Holly Nichols said. Mindy Center served as captain, and Lauryn Rydl and Nichols were co-captains.

In addition to being new as a cheerleading squad, the basketball cheerleaders worked with rookie coach, Jeff Morgan, to establish the "Bison Badlands." The Badlands were a group of students who stood in the bleachers behind the opponent's basket and employed many tactics to distract the opposing team and amuse Bison fans. "This season has been a lot of fun. The fans have been very enthusiastic, and that has caused us to have a great year," Kellye Gooch said.

Providing Friendly Competition

Many Participate in Intramurals

Women's athletics have come a long way since the days that intramurals were first introduced on the Harding campus. The competition level has elevated, along with the continuing commitment to excellence that Barbara Barnes, women's intramural director, puts into the program.

"I enjoy playing intramurals here because of all of the love everyone shows toward each other," said sophomore Lisa Grove. While competition seemed to push the men's program to give it their all, women generally chose to play because of the positive experience that comes from intramurals.

For almost 30 years, Barnes has run the program, helping participants make lasting relationships in a way that is not experienced at a more competitive level. She emphasizes that intramurals give young women a chance to continue to play sports, even though they may not play well enough to compete in intercollegiate athletics.

Barnes and her assistants put in many hours of work to ensure a topnotch program. During the fall semester, the women participated in softball, football and volleyball. Springtime brought on basketball, more softball, and track and field.

For women who take their athletics more seriously, the program provided other positives. Participants worked to win intramural jackets and/or trophies. For every event that the student participated in, points were accumulated. The point totals varied with each sport played and the place the team finished. At the end of the year, a number of young women were honored because of their athletic accomplishments.

About 75 percent of the women students participate in intramurals and club sports. "Participation has been high because the program has encouraged all women to participate, without worrying about how well they perform," Barnes said. "Above all, we emphasize having a good time."

A Display of Good Sportsmanship Shining Examples Set at Games

The men's intramural program's motto, "A sport for every man and every man in a sport," accurately describes the spirit of this program. Men enroll in team, doubles or singles activities in football, softball, volleyball, basketball, horseshoes, cross-country run, table tennis, swimming, racquetball, tennis, and a pursuit race – a "sport for every man."

According to Dr. Mike Pruitt, program director, it could be said that the second half of the motto, "every man in a sport," is also true because a high percentage of students are involved in intramural athletics. The fierce competition involved in team intramurals is tempered with "the Christian spirit of fairness in the game," according to Pruitt. This proves beneficial to participants as they experience a high level of competition while realizing that victory is not the ultimate goal.

"Students reap many rewards through involvement in intramurals. They have the opportunity for socialization, wholesome physical activity, athletic competition, and the development of a lifetime interest in sports," Pruitt said. "The entire program is dedicated to the idea that one who participates should be a better Christian for having done so."

"Harding's intramural program is one of the best," said Brian Hoover, winner of the 1992 Intramural Spirit award. "The participation level is higher than at many other colleges, which is due to the superiority of the program."

Intramural sports provided a keener sense of competition compared to club sports. Intramural football player Doug Glen said, "The athletic ability seems higher than in club competition. You get more respect from your teammates for your contribution to the team effort." Glen added that "Intramurals are fun because you make different friends since you are placed on teams with people you don't already know. Also, you play with a new team every season."

Intramural games provided Harding students with the opportunity to participate in friendly competition. Students not only took pride in their performances, but in their ability to exhibit good sportsmanship. Above all, students learned that a Christian attitude should be the most important factor in the sports arena.

Enemies to the death for three decades, Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization opened a new era in their blood-soaked history. Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin and the P.L.O. chairman, Yasser Arafat, signed a treaty at the White House. The Mideast accord sanctioned the creation of an autonomous Palestinian homeland in the Gaza Strip and Jericho.

COLOPHON

The 1994 Petit Jean yearbook of Harding University, Volume 70, Building on a Firm Foundation, was printed by Jostens Printing and Publishing, Topeka, Kan. and was produced on Macintosh computers with Aldus PageMaker and Jostens Yeartech program. COVER: The cover is custom craftline embossed in Maroon (490). The grain is Linear (1176) with custom dies for embossing. A hot foil application of Silver (381) was stamped on Building on a Firm Foundation. Petit Jean 1994, as well as the type on the spine, were blind embossed. The cover was produced by Jostens in Topeka. ENDSHEETS: The endsheets were printed with an application of Navy (540) on Cottonwood (266), a recycled paper stock. PAPER STOCK: All 320 pages were printed on 80-pound high gloss enamel, trimmed to 9 x 12.

COLOR: Thirty-one pages are printed in four-color process. TYPOGRAPHY: Most headlines were set in Garamond, except in the Social Clubs section and in the opening, closing and dividers. Avant Garde 48 pt. bold was used for the main headlines and 24 pt. Helvetica for the kickers in Social Clubs. In the opening and the closing, Bernhard Modern was used for headlines and body copy. All captions were set in 8 pt. Garamond and italicized. All body copy was set in Garamond, except on theme pages. DESIGN: The cover, endsheets, opening, closing and dividers were designed by the editor-in-chief. The sections were designed by the section editors, with consultation from the adviser and the editor-in-chief.

PHOTOGRAPHY: The majority of the photographs were taken by Jason Burt, assisted by Michael Bass, unless otherwise noted in the credit line. All black and white photography was developed in the Petit Jean darkroom. More than 230 rolls of black and white and almost 100 rolls of color were shot. All color photographs were developed and printed by Color Lab in Searcy. Classes portraits were taken by Holland Studios of Memphis. National photos were supplied by RM Photos.

SPECIAL THANKS: The 1994 Petit Jean staff would like to thank some very special people. Appreciation is given to Dean Bawcom, our Jostens representative, as well as to Lisa Hecker, our in-plant consultant. They did their best to make sure we got what we wanted. We also thank Sheryl Fulton and Jim McKellar for their experience, advice and encouragement. Tracey Johnson, thanks for all your hints and for stopping by and checking on us. Thank you, John Noah, for your vast knowledge of computers and your availability and willingness to help with the index. Thanks to David Crouch, Tom Butterbaugh and Jeff Montgomery in the PR office for their unfailing support. Thanks to Jay Shappley, Bennie Durham and Leigh Ann Williams of Holland Studios. We appreciate Lavern Richey and Rodger Gilliam for all their help with the endsheets. The deans and dorm supervisors are to be commended for putting up with our late hours and late permission. Wayne Milner in the Registrar's office, thanks for the printouts. Marsha Osborne and Andy Miller, thank you. Stacie Evans, we missed having you in the office second semester. Thanks to Sonya Burchett for all her eagerness and willingness to do whatever was needed. To all those who came up to spread cheer and helped to make ends meet - Danny Moore, Lee Hankins, Carmen Heath, Dona Kolde and Denise Pierce - thanks for always being there. Special thanks is given to our families, the Gowen family especially. Thank you Jimmy, Darren and Aunt Beth. Thanks to all the practicum students and the volunteers. We could not have completed the task without you. Above all else, thanks be to God.

The Petit Jean office is located on the second floor of the Hammon Student Center in room 211. Any correspondence can be sent to the Petit Jean, Box 812, 900 East Center, Searcy, AR 72149-0001. The office phone number is (501) 279-4139. Students who were enrolled for 12 hours or more both semesters have paid sufficient registration fees to cover the $25 cost of the yearbook. Depending on their enrollment status for the year, others are charged full or half price.

The Petit Jean is a member of the Arkansas College Media Association, the Associated Collegiate Press and the Associated Collegiate Press Hall of Fame.

Memorials

In the words of Chancellor Clifton Ganus, Jr., Dr. Ray Muncy was, "an amazing human who most certainly was rare and treasured."

Muncy was treasured not only by family and friends, but also by students whose minds were challenged by him to think about and explore the world around them. "He taught his students to realize that the human experience should be full of fascination and curiosity," Roger Clayton, a senior history major, said.

The history lesson that Muncy ultimately shared was about Jesus, and he exemplified His life of servitude to those around him.

Muncy grew up in West Virginia. He attended Freed-Hardeman College and Indiana University. He began teaching in Harding's history department in 1964, and became chairman in 1965. He served in that capacity until last spring when he retired from his administrative post to return to the classroom fulltime.

Muncy died of a heart attack during the break between semesters.

Carol Carter

Carol Carter, a freshman from Barnhart, Mo., was injured in a car accident November 16 and she died the next morning.

A special chapel service in her memory silenced a sometimes noisy student body as their thoughts were turned to the things in life that are eternal.

Carol would have been 20 on December 28. Her character and sweetness were evident, not only in the shared memories, but in the concreteness of notes received by the beaux of her social club on the day of her death and the cards her parents received from her many friends at Harding.

Jason Roberts, a senior Bible major who sat near her in chapel, wrote a Bison story commemorating Carol's life. "Carol's chapel seat remains empty, but her humor and gentle spirit will long echo in the minds of so many she touched," he said. "Her spotless character, her courage, her attitude and her lovely disposition showed her to be a woman who was remarkably faithful to her Lord."

Carol's father wrote, just days after her death, "I've learned a lot about my daughter... that make me so proud. She touched the lives of so many people in such a very positive way, people we've never met."

TEAMWORK

When I accepted the position of editor, I never realized what an earth-shattering event it would be. I've learned so much from this experience and have grown in more ways than I can even imagine. In closing, I give all the glory to God, and to you my beloved staff, the credit for this book, with this prayer: "But you, dear friends, build yourselves up in your most holy faith and pray in the Holy Spirit. Keep yourselves in God's love as you wait for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ to bring you eternal life." - Jude 20-21.

Thanks for being there when I needed you.

FIRM FOUNDATION

As another chapter in the Harding history closed, many looked forward to the future with great anticipation, having memories as their only souvenirs. As the season changed, drastic changes took place on and off campus. Two more international studies programs in Athens and London were scheduled to begin in the fall of 1994. A campus-wide recycling program was initiated. Hundreds of students rallied behind the Missouri flood relief effort. Dan Quayle and Dick Cheney came to present lectures. Through all of this, Harding continued to build on the foundations forged by her forefathers.

*"So then, just as you received Christ Jesus as Lord, continue to live in him, rooted and built up in him, strengthened in the faith as you were taught, and overflowing with thankfulness. See to it that no one takes you captive through hollow and deceptive philosophy, which depends on human tradition and the basic principles of this world rather than Christ."

EPHESIANS 1:1-3

story. "And you also were included in Christ when you heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation. Having believed, you were marked in him with a seal, the promised Holy Spirit, who is a deposit guaranteeing our inheritance until the redemption of those who are God's possession—to the praise of his glory."

Thanksgiving and Prayer
"For this reason, ever since I heard about your faith in the Lord Jesus and your love for all the saints, I have not stopped giving thanks for you, remembering you in my prayers. I keep asking that the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the glorious Father, may give you the Spirit of wisdom and revelation, so that you may know him better. I pray also that the eyes of your heart may be enlightened in order that you may know the hope to which he has called you, the riches of his glorious inheritance in the saints, and his incomparably great power for us who believe. That power is like the working of his mighty strength, which he exerted in Christ when he raised him from the dead and seated him at his right hand in the heavenly realms, far above all rule and authority, power and dominion, and every title that can be given, not only in the present age but also in the one to come. And God placed all things under his feet and appointed him to be head over everything for the church, which is his body, the fullness of him who fills everything in every way."

Made Alive in Christ

2 As for you, you were dead in your transgressions and sins, in which you used to live when you followed the ways of this world and of the ruler of the kingdom of the air, the spirit who is now at work in those who are disobedient. All of us also lived among them at one time, gratifying the cravings of our sinful nature and following its desires and thoughts. But now, because of his great love for us, God, who is rich in mercy,

EPHESIANS 2:2

with Christ even when we were dead in transgressions—it is by grace you have been saved. And God raised us up with Christ and seated us with him in the heavenly realms in Christ Jesus, in order that in the coming ages he might show the incomparable riches of his grace, expressed in his kindness to us in Christ Jesus. For it is by grace you have been saved, through faith—and this not from yourselves, it is the gift of God—but by works, so that no one can boast. For we are God's workmanship, created in Christ Jesus to do good works, which God prepared in advance for us to do."

One in Christ

Therefore, remember that formerly you who are Gentiles were "separate and alienated" by those who call themselves "circumcisers" (that is, those who were separate from the covenant of the promise, without hope and without God in the world). But now in Christ Jesus you who once were far off have been brought near through the blood of Christ. For he himself is our peace, who has made the two one and destroyed the barrier, the dividing wall of hostility, by abolishing in his flesh the law with its commandments and regulations. His purpose was to create in himself one new man out of the two, thus making peace, and in this one body to reconcile both of them to God through the cross, by which he put to death their hostility. "He came and preached peace to you who were far away and peace to those who were near through him we both have access to the Father by one Spirit."

Consequently, you are no longer foreigners and aliens, but fellow citizens with God's people and members of God's household, built on the foundation of the apostles and prophets, with Christ Jesus himself as the chief cornerstone. "In him the whole building is joined together and rises to become a holy temple in the Lord." And in him you too are being built together to become a dwelling in which God lives by his Spirit.
