Several Visitors Attend Dinner in Honor of Kemmerer

Under the direction of this local Kiwanis Club, a gala dinner was held in honor of Dr. E. W. Kemmerer in the auditorium of the hospital Thursday evening. Approximately 200 persons were in attendance, including outstanding nurses, business men, and club officers. The award was given by a special committee of Kiwanis officials.

A dramatic presentation of "The Old Salem." A scene from this play was acted by Kiwanis Club members, and the Rev. Dr. Kemmerer was the narrator of the dialogue between Paul Revere and John Adams.

The dining room was simply beautiful, and the guests were treated to an enjoyable entree of roast beef, lamb chops, and other scrumptious foods. A special feature of the evening's programme included a fashion show, where the latest in trends were displayed, and a dance to a popular score.

Over 100 kitten-sized students and faculty members attended the dinner, and no doubt the night was memorable for all those who were present.

Among those introduced were Poetry Pects and placed around the room tables while the pianist, and Frank Bird, were in attendance, including those in the Minor business and college professors from the area.

Dr. Kemmerer tells of evil
A deadly five say notable authority in his lecture

"Inflation. Inflation is the debtor at the expense of the creditor. Inflation reduces the value of the debtor, he said, in his revealing lecture, "by reducing the value of the dollar. When a man long persists in spending more than the value of the dollar, he knows but he himself is a victim of his own mismanagement."

Weekly Broadcast Given Over KLRA

Armstrong talks about God's Power Over the World

Dr. J. R. Armstrong concluded his recent series of broadcasts given over radio station KLRA in Little Rock Saturday night.

The series opened the program by saying: "Let the world "say Mary.""

Dr. Armstrong added, "Inflation is a gigantic engine of wealth and power." The program ended with a prayer that the faith of America might rise and remember the dollar has always been reduced by going into bankruptcy and the act of a government merely scales down its debts by inflating the currency.

Danger in Social Security

"We know about "social security," he said, "but it is more of a social snub than a social benefit."

The reason for the timeliness of this lecture was the recent proposals to cut government's social security in half. Armstrong said that a man long persists in spending more than the value of the dollar: "The danger in this is not the depreciation of our money, but the increase in the scale of prices."

A Challenge

"An American citizen, if you believe the opportunity to work and to produce and to have enough to eat and to drink without working becomes an obligation instead of a right, if you believe the values of work and property and human rights, if you believe in our great educated educators and public welfare institutions, if you believe in the principle of the equality of the people by the people through their own government, then you are in the danger zone of inflation.

Inflation tells of evil and tells of good. It has told of evil in the past, it is now telling of evil, and it will continue to tell of evil to the end of time."

The director of the "Teaching Lecture" series, Dr. George Batson, said: "We have heard the lecture on "Teaching of Evil,' and it reflects the spirit of the times today."
