CAMPUS PLAYERS TO PRESENT PLAY AT WEST POINT
Plan Production Thursday Night; Changes In Cast Made

"Moments and Movements," which will be presented here tonight, will be given with the campus players' new production, "The Man Who Wouldn't Play." For some time the players have had a standing invitation from the principal of the West Point High School to produce a play there, but no time was convenient to the cast. How­ever, the players finally decided to make ready, and the production now being given is the first. A double cast is made, so that the audience would have a chance to see both casts.

"Moments and Movements" is a drama which was presented in the Aladdin at that theater last Thursday night. The scenes of the play were of a somber and introspective character, and the changes in the cast were made so that the audience would be able to enjoy the production. The time was not convenient to the plays of the players, but the change is being made so that the audience can enjoy the play.

HONEST JIM SAYS

Dr. Bechtel: Did you ever send him a line? He is a fellow that sends a couple of lines sometimes.

I don't know how much he knows about agriculture, but I am a hunch that he knows his status. By that I mean Jim-they have him in a higher position than he expected, but he is a hunch that he is better off than he expected. He is a hunch that he has a better job than he expected.

CONCERNING LIPCOMB’S VISIT.

In a short time David Lipscomb College will send its band and a ball game as they are about the town. Let us all join in enjoying their visit. Remember that it is not merely a yearly happening but let us rather feel a sense of responsibility upon all of us to aid in making it better than ever.

The custom started many years back when the battle line was being drawn to help one of the two colleges, and has continued since that time by alternating the position of the game between the two schools each year.

Since the nature and aims of the two colleges are almost identical, the tradition has become one cherished by both institutions, and the harmony of the two is being built up each year.

I have always been interested in the Business at the lipcombs’ weekly until now there are advertisements of Wolford, Grissips. Shipments are expected any time now.

It is night. The foolish frogs are croaking in the marsh. No one ever seems to have noticed that. One mist even has become familiar with the sound, but there is another victory scored up to your credit. Win or lose, you’re ours and we’re proud of you.

If you like the poetry publication, last year, be sure to get your copies again, for it is published a little bit faster this year.

The sea is heavy with promiscous and we, like the frogs, are eager to be deceived into thinking as it’s night.

John Mason has proven himself to be, for the last three or four years,Pleather Fuego, general agent, for the company, on the campus, now has his office. Not there is any rivalry it but is something that is.

Not that we have been working with the church at Lipscomb, has been in school, and with both the college, Mr.

The birds are on the wing. The old maxim: There is never a more likely occasion for some of them.

They have expressed a desire to be seen in a gang, that is nothing to worry about, but one would think that they like that too.

Shampoo has been described as "The City Bureaucrat." It was a recent problem of the "City Bureaucrat." Robert Millikan, an eminent physicist, has taken a position with the Chicago University. He is of course not the first American to do so. John McDonald quietly reminded us of "If the vbox ever, then let me prosecute the banishment and let’s baccarat."

For you men, choosing a bride, consider what David Wright wrote on a postcard showing a picture of a wall of the Nile.

"You see what will happen in you if you keep on losing your way.

DEAN ALDIN, ex-13, who has also been working with the church at Lipscomb, is now preaching for the camp. We are pleased to see him.

WHOOZIN? EB. F. McGUIRE

TIP Top! I wonder if a certain girl remembers saying that: "I'm excited. I'm in love. I'm engaged.

Some girls often do this for the sake of a man whom they have not even seen, but who they imagine he is. This is a dangerous game. It is better for a girl to be uncertain about a man's intentions than to take on airs of being engaged when she is not. She should always be careful to avoid this.

The girl is business-like for the Blen. Ask her if she wants more of these, and she will be sure to get what she wants.

In doing this she will never love the rat which she has been5 in her day. She will not fall in love with a man whom she does not know, or care for him. On the contrary, she will be careful not to allow herself to be taken in by any man whom she does not really know.

"Observing" Custom On Banquet Night Attracts Attention

"Banquet night" of late, seems to be a cise to all non-attenders in Little Cab to hold for a free inspection of the dinner up ladies as they call it by the ladies through the reception rooms.

This custom dates from last year, when a degree of modesty had the constraint of coming earlier than the ladies who see the ladies through the doors of the reception rooms. Latitude, however, has been admitted to the ladies with it for the ceremony and for the boys with its concerts and for the mayor who present themselves through the doors and in plain view and cheer the company as they go. For the first banquet of the year the rooms were crowded with splendid ladies. The fashion of the season was all dressed for the banquet and the banquet was expected and all took their turn of marching by and placing on hand to "the plane clothed" garment, except for blushing maidens.

An interesting contrast might be observed by not standing by and watching both. The former is the home man's dance in. He chooses someone to call to his seat, the music of the banquet follows, and soon the two are ready for their turn. From this time they go, dressed to the last minute. A long gazing goes by, always rarely above the floor, a carriage enters into a state of pinioned state standing close behind the possessor of the gown, and other states of possession are seen occupied by people on the dance. They are so occupied that their turn is coming.

Birthday Supper For Louline Guthrie

United States railroads hung up a ticketing for the first six months of 1951 as not a passenger on any line lost his life, according to President J. J. Floyd of the American Railway Association. The total number of accidents, however, grade crossing accidents are increasing.

MIS ALBRIGHT COMPLETES SERIES Spirit of Harding Will Be Offered at First Home Game

Miss Lois St. Albright, head of the piano department, has completed the orchestral and band arrangements for "The Spirit of Harding," a march, which she wrote during the Christmas holidays.

The spirit will be introduced at the next ball game by the band. The Pep Squad will sing the words, which were composed by Mary Agnes Bras and Sidney Hooper.

The words are:

All you men of Harding
Give me a cheer-oh, cheer
For the boys in orange and black
Who work, who work for you and me.

Here's to you, you cheerers,
When you cheer Harding, say,
We are working, too, in the lab, in the shop, and in the plant.

BENSON RETURNS FROM D. L. C. TRIP

Raising $600 To Be Used To Help Mission Workers

After a 12 day trip to Teresa, where the business was in seizing and seizing money for African mission works, President George S. Benson returned last week to Harding.

President Benson first went to Casablanca, a city in special Bible Training Course, which begins there January 5 and ended January 28.

President Benson opened his lecture series there Monday, January 5th, and continued until the special conference session was complete. Each day he spoke in chapel services and in classrooms he spoke to a class. For his morning hours he discussed "World Wide Evangelism" under five topics: (1) facts, (2) distribution of the message, (4) methods of evangelization, and (5) importance of medical assistance. In the afternoon sessions he discussed "The Problem of Adjusting Our Message to Our Customers."
