PEDIATRICIAN'S PRAYER
by John Paul Gibson, M. D.

O God of Little Children, hear our earnest plea.
Be with these anxious parents, and also grant to me
sound judgment in decisions and to my hands true skill
as I attempt to help this little one so ill.

Bless Thou the means we use of drugs, or blood, or knife.
Reward our anxious efforts and spare this little life,
that this dear child shall be restored again to health and bless anew this home with its most precious wealth.

O God, you had a son and know the piercing pain that fills a parent's soul when life begins to wane.
Now may it be, we pray, according to Thy will that this young gift of Yours may live and love us still.

Amen
In the ancient world Leprosy was the most terrible of all diseases. E. W. G. Masterman writes "no other disease reduces a human being for so many years to hideous a wreck." It might begin with little nodules which go on to ulcerate. The ulcers devlove a fowl discharge; the eye brows fall out; the eyes become starring; the vocal chords become ulcerated, and the voice becomes hoarse, and the breath wheezes. The hands and feet always ulcerate. So the sufferer becomes a mass of ulcerated growths. The average course of that kind of leprosy is nine years, and it ends in mental decay, coma and untimely death. Perhaps it might begin with loss of all sensation in some parts of the body; the nerve trunks are affected; the muscles waste away; the tendons contract so the hands are like claws. There follows ulceration of the hands and feet.
then comes the progressive loss of fingers and toes, until in the end a whole hand or whole foot may drop off. The duration of that kind of leprosy is anything from 20 to 30 years. It was the kind of terrible progressive death in which a man dies by inches. That's from Wm. Barclay.
I should like to have seen his hands:
Clenched baby-fists, under his mother’s eyes,
Grasping at sun-motes, touching her smiling lips.

I should like to have seen his hands,
Holding a mallet and chisel, working the rough-grained wood
To beauty it never had known but for the touch of his hands.

I should like to have seen his hands
Touching a withered arm, teaching the dumb to sing,
Waking the dead, and mixing clay for a blind man’s eyes.

I should like to have seen his hands
Washing the feet of Peter, and Judas alike;
Breaking the Bread of God, and giving the Wine of Woe.

Yes, I must see his hands
Clenched on spite-driven nails, torn and bleeding for me
Under the weight of my sin, the death of his body bringing life to my soul.

One day I shall see his hands.
Though there be but dust which once I wore like a garment
And laid aside in the endless dark of the tomb—

He will touch my dust,
And I shall see his hands.¹
