There are numerous possible causes that contribute to the art of sportsmanship. It is an attitude and spirit of team play that is essential in any game. The first touch of a foul ball is crucial, as is the second, and so on. The game should be played as a team, not as an individual effort. The first goal is to be scored, not to hurt one's feelings, and to respect one's opponent. To play the game in this manner is to be a true sportsman, and to be a true sportsman is to be a man of honor. The game should be played in this manner in all sports, from Little League to the professional level. The game should be played with utmost respect, regardless of the outcome. The true sportsman is the one who plays the game with honor, respect, and integrity. The true sportsman is the one who plays the game in this manner, regardless of the outcome.
