"Famous Twenty" Receives Honor

"The Famous Twenty" are in the news again. Their mission was to surrender an unnecessary N.Y.A. residence in the interest of economy. If bickering and Finnegan; or government economy was not just front page news for a day but is to be perpetuated in all departments, which will ever be an example to future students.

The Committee For Constitutional Government is presenting to the college in their presentation the original of the Gutzon Borglum bust of Abraham Lincoln, valued at a hundred dollars.

In making the presentation the Committee wrote the following to President Benson: "Harding College seniors are interested in the fact that the college has made a donation of a nationally significant role. You have made a great contribution. Of particular value to the college and to the students is the fact that in sacrificing monies that they might freely have, and thus by preserving this national memorial. In that self-effacing manner so characteristic of the nation."p 2

The original of Borglum's famous work is made in bronze and set on a pedestal in front of the base is a bronx plaque with the following inscription:

"Harding College

Seniors Conduct Services Sunday

Harding College seniors were placed in charge of both services at the college church of Christ on Sunday, May 19. The service of the class of '42 could be present; several events which took place either were a regular preaching appointments or on events of the day. It was a thrill to be a part of the group and to participate in the services.

The service conducted by the group was a very informal one with the music being played by the college band. The service came to an end with a song being sung by the choir.

After the service the seniors went to the library for refreshments. The seniors were very much interested in the service and felt that it was a successful one.

Several acres of strawberries were given to the school provided they would do the picking. The college has made several trips in order to accommodate the entire student body.

Picking berries was a fascination to those who had never picked them before, much less seen them growing in the patch. It was a thrill to be able to pick berries and to see them preserved over a long period of time. The students picked regular prices, 30 per quart, for their picking.

When the first truck load of berries were delivered to the college, another group waiting at the college began picking the berries. The berries were put in barrels with sugar until they could be made into preserves.

"My Chandler" and the kitchen workers preserved over 300 gallons of strawberries last year. They were used by friends and picked by Harding students.

This berry picking out to be an annual affair if President Benson carries out his plans to plant several acres for the school next year.

Bill McKenir was the director of the berry picking and he directed the picking, deftly linked the first talk with the second. The closing message was by Louis Green, a call to repentance and victory over the gospel.

Order of worship at the smoking service is scheduled below.

Two-Act Plays Will Be Last Lyceum

These plays are the first that Mrs. Armstrong has directed this year. Mrs. Armstrong is working every day with the members of the cast in rehearsal.

Harding's lads and lassies try Berry Picking; "Cash In From Bursar"

By Virgil Bentley

Harding's lads and lassies, led by President R. H. Benson, have started off in the season of strawberry picking and picked 246 crates of strawberries. Free斯坦福or not their goal, at 300 crates, but the girls forgot their dairy clothes and powder puffs, and hays their newly crumpled pants, and spent a busy day picking a quarter more than their quota of berries.

Some of the girls were given to the school provided they would do the picking. The college has made several trips in order to accommodate the entire student body.

Intramural Speech Awards To Be Given At Last Lyceum

Mrs. J. N. Armstrong, head of the speech department, announced that the intramural speech festival will be held on the campus of Harding College during the first week of June.

There were over 60 intramural events, including the famous "Song of the South," and the "Indian War." The speech department decided to hold the intramural speech festival in order to give the students an opportunity to show their abilities.

The students were divided into three groups, and each group was given a specific topic to work on.

The first group was to prepare a monologue on the theme of "The Indian War," while the second group was to prepare a short play on the theme of "Song of the South." The third group was to prepare a short play on the theme of "The Indian War," and the fourth group was to prepare a short play on the theme of "Song of the South."

The monologue was delivered by a student, and the short play was performed by the entire group.

The students were given the opportunity to work on the plays and to prepare for the festival. The festival was held on the college campus, and it was a great success.

The students were very pleased with the results, and they were excited to perform in front of their peers.

The festival was a great success, and it was a great opportunity for the students to work on their acting and public speaking skills.
And a dream was dreamed. The vision was of future work, success and rejoicing therein. Work of the day, com­forts in the night, waving the evening; a poet, wife, the mother of playful children are the dramatic personae of the young man's dream.

The fellow wonders about himself. He has an edu­cation and does not know where to start in life's work to attain success. Seeing in his heart the youth's decent and orderly structure visualizes the cynical elements of our troubled times. And hear his words:

"The romers of war and stories of bone-crushed battles of the old world and oriental conflicts in our hearts with dread. The tyranny of hate and resulting wail and storm of vengeance is now a fury venting itself on the na­tions of earth. We are struck with calm terror at the thought of our sons going out to the business of world chaos, as if desirous to hasten the coming of the judgment day, mocking hell by throwing little brimstone in his lakes of fire.

"The United States is being subjected to a program of propaganda, inspiring citizens to back the preparation of mechanized military units. To run such units, every luc­rative possibility is used to interest youth to sacrifice itself. Those of Harding, as well as of other colleges, represent the high­est intelligence to which the most enticing of overtures are directed. Advanced pay and advanced rank are the promi­ses. Great worldly and temporal gain awaits those students.

"This is the crowning thought that war is the only thing which holds the minds of the nation, the brain of whose ideals were based on the assumption that there would be peace on earth in which he would live.

"In saying farewell to college days there is the sinking feeling that there will be no more, as if nothing were or had before us, and the better we know little about how we should act in a war infected civilization.

"We are young and can adjust ourselves to it all. And we shall strive to hold fast to faith in God and attain the maturity of the young man in order to carry his burdens forward, as to regret the little that we have found.

Last week softball had a crisp put into schedule by nine unavoidable conflicts and Jupiter Flutierrez. He did not keep the field under watchful eye, but made it uncomfortable and too wet to play a good game.

However, the games postponed have been scheduled for this week and the tournament will continue as arranged.

Teams Number One and Number Two tied up in the third game of the year and showed what they could do with a little opportunity. Number One had it all over two, but they may find it difficult to win next time. Two was missing two or three of their good players.

Each team has about as much talent as the other. That leaves the victor to be declared by pep, team play, and stick to their aims.

In making pre-season predictions do not leave the dark horse out of the sporting picture for the girls. They are going to the field in a practice season and showed what they could do. The team’s worst trouble will be getting all of the players out to the game on time.

As far as solid play is concerned Number Three has it going to be hard to beat.

Thursday afternoon a few of them showed their prowess at the plate when they knocked out 11 runs in one inning. John Watson led the league in hitting for the greater part of last season, but also showed what he could do.

Not only does Number Three have a good hitting club, but they are well balanced in the field.

Their field will probably be their weak spot, but with good pitching and a little ambition on the part of the players they can overcome to a considerable extent.

The present is at which the games are being played softball will last throughout the remaining three weeks.

The intramural program has been very successful this year, both from the participation and exercise viewpoint. Over one hundred boys participated in the thirteen or fourteen different sport events.

Beginning with softball the program, under the able leadership of Coach Berryhill, included such sports as track, football, basketball, swimming, wrestling, badminton, tennis, and table tennis. However, this is only a few of the many sports we could and did participate in.

The girls had a separate program of their own, Frances Williamson and Marvelous Chambers, both seniors, directed the girls’ events.

In about two weeks the jackets and medals will be here. Then the awards to the best sports will be passed out.

Although these awards are highly appreciated there are not the best we get out of the program. Our main reward comes from the fact that it gives us the necessary exercises and helps to keep our pudgy bodies in trim. Not only does Number Three have a strong combination of talents, Tandy’s team finally got out of its schedule by some unavoidable circumstances. Tandy’s team finally got out of the program.

Those attending were Annilee Fogg, Marvolene Chambers, both seniors, and Number Three is going to be hard to beat.
