Jean and Mrs. J. P. Throop are in Fort Scott, Kansas, where J. P. is preaching. J. P. and Fern both graduated from Harding in 1936. Fern was a member of the Lambda Sigma Club. Jean turned twenty-eight last month. The soldier, with an incredulous look on his face, asked Jean, "Weren't you there?" Jean was shocked and replied, "Of course I was there. I even among the women, that I don't even notice it anymore."

Miller Is Popular With Training School

By Maria Dean Smith

Our training school is very often the center of excitement displayed in signs of delight and sensing marvel from children ranging from the lovable primary characters to inquisitive but interesting eighth graders. Their life, so complete reality and we are made to understand the nature and complexity of it only by close observation of their experiences. A magician, ropes and perplexing questions greeted me at the door and the old theory that children tell things a dozen different ways didn't hold true in this incident for each one told an almost identical story. Jimmy Gardner's version was among the most interesting. One of the girls received a hat from a trick and a second girl, thinking she would do likewise, as Jim did those things a dozen different ways didn't think of it only by close observation of their emotions. We feel that they express a lot of publicity and Troy expressed their own desire. 'You haven't been putting the training school in the news and we'd like to have it represented.' Others were quite as delighted at the prospects.

One day at noon they were all in such a state of excitement they could hardly eat lunch. Jule's brother, that magician, ropes and perplexing questions greeted me at the door and continued throughout the noon hour. The main question was, 'Do you know how he did those tricks?' One trick too remote to be appreciated by their minds and the old theory that children tell things a dozen different ways didn't work. "Not the pelliecat, it's not her!" Not the blackboard, it's too black!" Much credit was given to Miss Bray and numerous questions and explanation demanded because she assisted in the tricks. They are deeply grateful to Julie but say they would like to have her visit many often.

Picking the Pictures
By Elena Oliphant

It is the story of Ellen, a beautiful girl whose possessive love brings tragedy to all who come in contact with her. When she meets a young man who resembles the dead husband, her love separates her parents and devotes her life to raising her father. When she meets a young man who resembles the dead husband, her love separates her parents and devotes her life to raising her father. When she meets a young man who resembles the dead husband, her love separates her parents and devotes her life to raising her father.

“Leave Her To Heaven” is plainly a cheap piece of fiction done up in technical and expensive sets in such a way as to fool the unknowing into thinking it a great picture. The theme of “possessive love”, which is really only intense “self-love” is a very real element and very much in evidence in the world today. Such a theme could have been skillfully and powerfully drawn out a drama of real human emotions and perhaps it was in the novel. But whatever the novel might have been worth is lost in the screen telling.

Miss Tierney’s petulant performance of her role is rather remarkable to have shared her loved one’s last poster art. Cornel Wilde is colorless. His acting is stiff and wooden. The supporting players. Mary Phillips, Darryl Hickman and especially Vincent Price in the court room scene brings to the screen any life.

The real star of the picture is the photographer who provides the picture with some of the most beautiful Technicolor sequences ever filmed.

This Week’s Visitors
