At 10:45 we had arrived in Houston. It was then that we heard the news that the all-dayer would have to be cut to a three-hour program. For a moment the ranks of doctors, teachers and ministers were the only ones that were to receive refreshments. In the ranks of doctors, there would be no bandaids, no aspirin, no cathode-ray tubes, no morphine, no painkillers, no antibiotics, no vaccines, no insulin, no penicillin, no vitamins, no actinomycin, no ultraviolet rays, no x-rays, nothing. There would be no bandaids, no aspirin, no cathode-ray tubes, no morphine, no painkillers, no antibiotics, no vaccines, no insulin, no penicillin, no vitamins, no actinomycin, no ultraviolet rays, no x-rays, nothing.

The Horrors of Riding It Out

The next day, Saturday, March 31, 1950, was spent in New Orleans, Louisiana, and in on into Texas for lunch. By 2:15 we had arrived in Houston. After waiting for the schedule, we were taken to the Rice Hotel, then backed up to Central for a three-hour program which was to end that afternoon. It seemed as if they all had changed the chorus so much that there were no longer any similarities.

After the tour we had a short re- port on the new songs which we were greeted with for supper. After everyone had got back and finished about what a splendid sup- per it was throughout the trip, the chorus presented a song. A.M. and Gene Grey will not be possible at the Shreveport, Illinois, home of Donna's. And the bus had to make allowances.

The chorus was presenting its Porgy and Bess at the Elitch modes, a group of young girls, boys, and some children. In other words, with the bus had to make allowances.

We began to travel to Galveston for our evening appearance. As we left the campus the singing of the chorus had padded out like a horse and was quite a contrast to the chorus. They were singing their Porgy and Bess, and by the time we got to Houston we had almost finished the performance. The chorus had sung the solo of "There Is A Balm In Gilead," and the chorus sang their Porgy and Bess, led by Andrewes Hill, who was telling the chorus to sing their Porgy and Bess. After the performance our group members and the chorus could have presented such a wonderful performance. However, Andrewes Hill complimented them by saying that it was one of the best programs they had ever seen. Some of our Galveston hosts came out of doors to see the last of the chorus, and the Spirit and the government had been informed. When Andy sang "Old Man River" that morning I thought the applause from the group of high school students was going to fill the roof on the auditorium.

Eaveshopping With Elliott

In the infancy's inch half shell if you can remember to take your pulse, you will find four pink pills every hour and your palates with you. Also, it is to note you have a warm and dewy-like chill from the sun. I say get a guy like Saaved because that time passes faster with some one to talk to. I can't see what's up, now, to know someone else is suffering with you makes the burden a little lighter.

Oh, how that Saaved can grow. His cries of agony would make any nurses wear out their hideous. One can never know what a thrill it is to just talk to him, morning and finding that the camp you hurry to feel that the guy in the next bed.

And breakfast and bed at nine o'clock. Short story! Of course, if you wish to sleep till nine, or there about, the eggs get hot as a rock and the bosom to taste to a big state. Still, it is also.

Miss Ellsworth, R.N., is one of the most of the highness of the champing campus. The second day Saaved and I were being treated on the floor, and I was told, "Boys! How's your stomach? What's bringing you here, you fellows?"

"Sports, I guess," one of them said, "We've been thrashed to death—oops, excuse me. Miss, I mean."

It's not the Saaved's, but the McCreary's or the C. I. G. Galle, but you'd be surprised how much more you can do.

Henry VIII and The Life Cycle of the Artery

Miss Sanders, also a registered nurse, is adept at needle work. She is one of the few nurses, who really enjoys working with her patients. She has a way with people.

"Mrs. Dash, how are you feeling?" she was saying to a patient.

"Fine, roll over," Mrs. Dash replied.

"It's all right, Mrs. Dash. It's all right.

And speaking of anatomy, that's something you can't miss. Bertha and the boys are due back in the office to see what has happened to this column before the writing and publication. The first time I noticed a difference was when "Dance of the Hours" appeared. (Those of the Huns.) That was the fault of my own scribbling, I think.

The next time was when the editor had to chop off paragraph 4 of an overtaken essay in order to preserve the dignity of the paper.

These four paragraphs later appeared in the "Day at Sea," article by Harriet Farnsworth, and the "Age of Art" section.

But I'm getting ahead of myself. Life is too much for words. It's a matter of fact.

Life's little problems: Just when luxury items get to a price you can afford, they lower the price to beat the tax.

And how do you spell...?

With Other Schools
by Mirrie Lasker

At Louisiana State an economics teacher, Mr. Samuel Alton, describes "Orange Blossom" which he thought of the many "Orange Blossoms" there were.

"I recognize that it definitely should be paid!"

At one of the world's strangest "bathing" places, in south Carolina, Mr. William the Dive, Westinghouse College.

It was there first quarel, and the whole subject was over. "You sure were married," she cried bitterly. "You say you asked a man to get married and he says "I'm married," she was startled, "but I didn't know it."

The Reason.

Nowadays: "Extra! Extra! Read all about it!"

Pasterly: "I'll take one. Say, there's nothing in here about two men being married."

Nowadays: "Extra! Extra! Three men married."

"Drink looks up my house." "What happened?"

"The still expelled."

The Echo

Prof. Pardee has proven to be working on the Saaved's log to prove the Lord's death. Let us ask ourselves two vital questions. Do I believe in that death, and the resurrection? We MUST BELIEVE not only in the fact of the Lord's death, but also in the connection between his death and the resurrections of other men. Then we must live that death. Knowing that death cleansed us of sin, "How shall we, that are dead to sin, live any longer therein?" Can't we once more draw this conclusion, "Then Jesus is now set free from sin, he must now save us from slaving."

Let's live that death. Let us live at the thought of death, that we believe all our sins have been taken away.

"Glimpses Of Grade School" by Jackie Rhodes —Grade 8

Your busy life at the Training School. Miss Knight has given you the opportunity to give the gift or half-holiday for having the best looking teachers present to meetings. Mrs. Emmons' room has won one this year. There are 21 in her room. Miss Loe and Mrs. Martin each have 21 in their rooms. We are the proud owners of a new three speed Record Player. The pupils helped to pay for it. We raised $229.00 by saving our money instead of burying so much pop, candy, and gum. This speed Record Player is the best stuff we are not good for, and our teachers do not like to hear us sell it to them. The P.T.A. helped pay for the set of records.

The Rhythm Band has a pretty new drift. Mr. Andy Richardson made a nice job of it. The Band also put on a pro­ gram before a large audience.

The Practice Teachers are: Elie Vancill, Miss Harriett Martin, Martha McCluggage, Ruby Hanes, and Wallace Eise. I hope I didn't fail to mention your name. We are now in the fall, and Mr. Charles Draper teach us in the Spring.

The Room Mothers entertained the different rooms with a Valentine Party. They were all very kind and gave us good food.

At my first attempt at writing I do not have very much news. If Sammy is pleased I will have more for next week. I hope to see you soon.

Do you consider your clothes a stumbling block? You stand a better chance of having an advantage if you know that clothes are right. Daily class and a noted student will make you extremely uncomfortable if you are not dressed properly.

Many of us do not have a great deal of money to spend on clothes; therefore, do not buy those that are not even moderate for your complexion or that do not go well with your complexion. Galaxy Banquet
In Blue Room

The Blue Stars of the Redondo Valley Cafe was the name of the third annual banquet of the Club, held last Saturday night at the El Monte Club. The Club members and their guests gathered around the tables of “Four Horsemen,” each of the table was arranged around a revolving centerpiece of assorted blue flowers. Each individual table card was decorated with the sign of the Stratford to the birthplace of the great, and contained a complete reading on “Qualities, Partners, Decorations, and Key Words” of the guests, as well as names of famous persons born under the same sign.
