I finished on the radio dial one of the newcomers of the day. It was a radio station. It seemed that the whole world was tuned in to various stations. It was a delightful experience. Then the network was filled with one of those chatty, heart-warming voices that make your heart feel good about breakfast, but this one made you feel good about the rest of the day.

"Well, guys and gals, this next bit of information is the most important one of the day. It's a new record for the week. The singer used the best of all the songs. But I didn't like her type!"

The day went on as usual, with the same music, the same voices, the same old songs. It was a delightful experience. But I didn't like her type.

Have Our Powers Been Upset?

By WARREN BRYANT

We received a letter this week, which is printed elsewhere on this page, that contained quite a few paragraphs in which the writer asked if we had done anything, above all, to make sure that our political campaign did not repeat the mistakes we made last year. The writer went on to state that he thought we should be more careful in the future.

We feel that the author of this letter has done himself and the student council a disservice by his remarks. He has taken the wrong approach to the problem of political campaigning and has not given the student council credit where credit is due.

The reason for doing this is not that we have not given the student council credit, but because we believe that the student council should be given the credit for what it has accomplished. The student council has made many changes in the student body, and we believe that the student council should be given the credit for these changes.

We feel that the student council has done a good job, and we believe that it should be given the credit for its work. We believe that the student council should not be criticized for what it has not done, but for what it has done.

We feel that the student council should be given credit for what it has accomplished, and we hope that the student council will continue to work hard to make the student body better.
Omegha's Give "Evening in Tropics" Banquet At Mayfair Terrace Room
Omegha members and their dates enjoyed "An Evening in the Tropics." It was the Mayfair Terrace Room at 7 p.m.

The program was given by the national officers and a number of officers who are visiting from state organizations.

Dr. D. B. Jackson, president of Omegha, was master of ceremonies.

Dr. Jackson welcomed the guests, and he said that the purpose of the evening was to give Omegha a chance to meet and socialize with each other.

Dr. Jackson then introduced the national officers, who spoke briefly about their organization and its objectives.

After the opening, the group enjoyed a delicious dinner, which included a variety of dishes from different tropical regions.

The evening ended with a dance, during which the guests enjoyed the music and the company of their friends.

Overall, it was a wonderful evening for Omegha members to come together and celebrate their organization's achievements.
