America's Youth Discusses Enemy of Man-Woman

By MARY ANN WHITAKER

"Woman is man's worst enemy." My eyebrow shot up, and I walked out the door. It's sad but true, I had the remark. In the booth behind me sat two fine specimens of American pubescent youth. I pulled out my pen and pad, ready to write down what I had heard.

"You can't have a soul without a body, now, can you?" The boy said, with a yawn. "When you're old, you'll love us girls more than you do us now."

"Oh, come on, now," said the boy. "You're not the one with the body."

"You see, what you don't understand is what's going to happen to the body in the future."

"You know how we're going to get a new body?"

"You don't think you're going to die someday?"

"Yes, but you'll come back to life again."

"You think you're going to come back to life again?"

"I don't know."

"Well, you better believe you're going to come back to life again. You'll be the same person you were, only better."

"Better?"

"Yes."

"How?"

"You'll be more educated, more sophisticated, more..."

"More what?"

"More, you know, more...

Speaking of Music — "I Apologize"

The fellow who said an editor is never wrong needed to have his head examined. An editor is wrong just as much as any other human being (elsewise he would be an infallible, unerring, and thus, perhaps a little harder to get an editor to admit it when he is wrong. You see he has to admit it with some self respect.) As a result of this, editors are

The Bison (or more correctly the Bison editor) unknowingly stirred up a hot controversy last week through its editorial column. We wrote and printed an editorial concerning the music which was played several mornings during the week, and the reaction of the week, which asked, "What do you think of music in the Bison?"

The editorial was not in any way slated to reflect upon the dining hall personnel. But fortunately we recognized at once from the nature of the sequence it did. With this in mind we certainly want to rectify our error and apologize to Mrs. Hart, Mrs. We have done this privately when the matter was brought to our attention, and now decided to make it public so that all

We are conscious of the dangers connected with the printed word. Many times it can be used maliciously and underhandedly to the hurt of others. We are careful to see that such a thing does not happen at the H"ison. We hope this incident will not place a smudge on the Bison's record in the future.

We have been particularly impressed through this incident of what a responsibility we have to the student body. We had not realized any particular importance to an editorial that was written (as editorial comment on the question of the week) until it was brought so forcefully to our attention. We believe in a Responsible University and in truth, but we also have felt that the fact that there were three editorials in last week's paper—usually only one, was an indication that these three editorial ideas were the shortest. We had not previously been aware of the far reaching consequences of one short editorial. With this in mind we will give our future editorials more thought and careful consideration.

We sincerely appreciate this misunderstanding being called to our attention and we apologize for our error, and to Mrs. Hart, and to all, and to derive profit from our mistakes, as we have from this one.

We Bow Out To Freshmen

Next week marks the freshman edition of the Bison. It has become traditional for the freshmen to put out one issue of this paper each year, and this is our third

With this in mind we say to the Freshman class as an entity to get in and work to make your issue one of the best of the year. There is a place for you in the Freshman issue and we want you to work on it. We will work on a special issue such as this where they might be reluctant to offer their services to the regular editorial offices. The Freshman writers have been uncovered in this manner.
