Twelfth Night” To Be Presented By Players Inc., Saturday Night

The "Twelfth Night" William Shakespeare will be presented by the Players Incorporated in the Harding College Auditorium Saturday, Dec. 19.

This energetic young company of fifteen actors is indeed the "end of our day," coming from a very early spring for the Season. Approximately 150 performances are given each season, before audiences ranging from high school students to veteran theater-goers. Their travails have been limited to the continental U.S. as they have been in Canada and in so far beyond that as the Arctic Circle.

This year the company has made three trips abroad under the auspices of the Defense of Defense to entertain troops. Twice they played in the Far East during the Korean war and they have made four tours of the European Com-

Do we work as long as we are in the lead. Do we hate to admit we have failed. Do we work to keep up with the demands of society. Do we work to keep up with the demands of a succeeding generation, in whatever pursuit he may be engaged in. Do we work because we want to beviews and values of the world. We will not be deterred. We will work to make our actions a reflection of the values we hold. We will be successful.

Both of the members brought a gift for a child in an orphanage. These gifts were placed under a tree similar to that on the table.

Harding's greatest lead in the first half was six points, 22-16, with only five minutes left. With only seconds left Oarkadf closed within two points, 28-30, as McQueen and Orrell scored the point.

After the intermission the two teams battled evenly with Harding holding up to four-point lead until there were about thirteen minutes left. Fred Massey hit a layup, Dennis Smith a one-handed jump and Evan a layup to put the Bisons in front by 43-33. About three minutes later the Mountaineers closed within three points, 45-42, as Orrell shot six of Oarkarf's next 10 points.

Bisons Tally Fifth Straight Win in 70-60 Victory Over Boll Weevils

After a lethargic first half, South Health Groover ignited some fire into his hot-and-cold Bison Friday night, who came back snarling with enough steam to take a 56-40 decision from Arkansas A&M's Boll Weevils.

The Bisons, who took their fifth straight victory without a facet, couldn't find the right combination until the first half was nearly over. At one point, eleven minutes deep in the game, the Buffaloes found themselves in the short end of a 13-12 score. Harding's main problem was Weevil guard Ray Wilson, who insisted on hitting two-handed set shots consistently from 20-35 feet out, although he was seldom allowed to come in any closer. During the first half, Wilson hit eight straight of his attempts, despite a man-to-man defense employed by Harding. The Bisons, as a result, had to fight hard to come within two points of A&M at the half. The boys from Monticello held a narrow 32-31 halftime margin.

Following the intermission, the Buffaloes shifted and went into a 1-3-1 defense specially designed to bottle Wilson, who had garnered 18 tangles by the end of the first stanza.

Things went more on an even basis from then on, and the Buffaloes trailed 53-52 with six minutes remaining. The black and gold suddenly started, and dumped in eleven points before the Weevils could manage another. They finished the game with three points on their side of the scorecard.

With three minutes remaining, the Bisons held a ten-point lead, and coasted in comfortably for their fifth in a row.

No one particular Bison dominated the scoring, as big Leon McQueen led the way with fifteen points, followed by Dwight Smith and Fred Massey with thirteen, and Jim City with twelve. Floyd Evans and Donald Craig followed with nine and six, respectively.

Helping Wilson in scoring honors for A&M was Marshall Gay, who was in the Bisons' hair nearly over. At one point, eight straight of his attempts were noted as well as spirited.
