New Instructors Increase Faculty

Ten instructors have been added to the Harding faculty this fall, making a record total of 75.

Nine of these received their bachelor's degree from Harding, and all but two have obtained higher degrees since that time.

Also, Kenneth Davis, Jr., Winnie Elizabeth Bell, and Edward G. Sewell returned this year from graduate study in music, library science, and education, respecti-

Wayne Puckett, currently com pleting higher work at the University of Arkansas, joins the faculty in the spring semester as the seventh doctor in the department of education.

William Joe Hacker, Jr., comes to Harding as an assistant pro-fessor in Bible and religious edu-cation from the Cedar Crest Church of Christ in Dallas, where he preached. Hacker has been a contributing editor to the Christian Bible Teacher and has written for the Firm Foundation.

The father of three children, Lauren, 11, Andee Lea, 6, and Martha Jan, 4, Law-yer spent five years preaching in Ibaraki-Ken, Japan, and helped to establish Ibaraki Christian High School and College. He replaces James H. Atkinson who is presently doing graduate work.

Planetary Panorama Viewed By Biologists

By Edna Dorris

The stars and moon are fascinating objects of the evening sky, not only when viewed from a campus swing, but even when seen through a telescope.

W. R. Rushton's class is being introduced to the strange world of astronomy through classroom study and telescopic observations. Through an inquiry made the first day of class, Rushton felt that such a study would be pro-fitable. The question he asked was, "How many of you have ever seen a planet?" Two or three students timidly raised hands. With a grin, Rushton then had the students look out the window. There they saw an actual planet - earth!

From this basic point the class has begun studying such planets as Saturn and Jupiter, which they observed through a telescope instead of out the nearest window. The students were very interested in the vivid circles around Saturn, the three moons aligned with Jupiter, and a galaxy outside our own. Many of them had not realized that our galaxy is the thick group of stars called the Milky Way or that our planet is constantly hurtling to-ward a star named Vega. Besides the distant planets and stars, the nature study group is studying the plants, animals and minerals of our earth. Since the class is designed primarily for those planning to teach ele-mentary school, they will be learning about common animal and plant life with which children may come in contact. As Rushton says, "You'll appreciate what you're learning when a little boy comes running to you with an oatmeal box half full of some slimy green stuff and wants you to tell him what it is.'

To a small child or to a college senior this world and the worlds outside can be very fas-cinating. Just ask the nature study class; they've actually seen

Staff Members Go To Meeting Next Tuesday

Delegations from both the Bison and Petit Jean staff travel to John Brown University in Siloam Springs, Ark., Oct. 10, for the fall workshop of the Arkans Collegiate Press Association. The 1961 Petit Jean will be vying for the top yearbook awards along with a host of other yearbooks from Arkansas colleges. Yearbooks are evaluated prior to the convention by the School of Journalism at the University of Minnesota. Awards based upon these evaluations are then presented at the workshop in four divisions: photography, typography and layout, editorial planning, and editorial content. In addition to these four categorical awards, a general excellence award is presented to the outstanding yearbook.

Harding is secretary for the ACPA this year, and Dr. Joseph Pryor, faculty sponsor for the Petit Jean, is chairman of the yearbook contest. Dr. Pryor explained that while the workshop is being conducted for both student newspapers and yearbooks only awards for the 1961 yearbooks will be made at this time Recognition for outstanding newspaper work will be given at the spring workshop.

Margaret Mabry Makes Dream Into Realization

By Marilyn Horvath

A dream became a reality for Margaret Mabry, senior English major from Friona, Tex., when see boarded a Pan American jet pound for London, Eng., June 13 at Idlewood Airport in New York

Margaret, who first conceived the idea of going to England during Leonard Channing's visit to Harding last October was among 35 Americans going with the purpose of establishing a church of thrist congregation in Wember-ly, a borough of London. The campaign, sponsored by the Hillsporo Church of Christ in Nashville, was headed by Dr. Batsel Barrett Baxter of David Lipscom. College and Dr. Otis Gatewood president of Michigan Christian

Members of Group

The 50 Christians who assembled in London, June 14 consisted primarily of missionaries ministers, college professors and students. "Actually it was an un-usual campaign," said Margaret, 'because for the first time there were more teachers and preachers in the group than there were students.

In addition to the U.S., other countries represented were Scotand, France, Spain, Belgium and After establishing headquarters at the Harrow Hotel in Wemberly, efforts were begun to devertise the meeting held each evening during the 30-day campaign. In addition to scattering posters throughout the area, the group divided into pairs and personally began visiting English

Each pair was assigned a definite number of homes to which they made approximately three visits. On the first visit they left invitations to the meeting in

Outstanding Students Receive Scholarships

Because of outstanding ability in one of several fields, there are two hundred seventy-six stu-dents with scholarships at Harding College this year. These scholarships were given in various fields including scholastic excellence, publication, grants-in-aid foreign, orphan, departm and memorial scholarships. departmental mailboxes, a few days later they returned with tracts introducing church of Christ principles and on the third visit they knocked on doors and personally extended invitations.

Commenting on the reserved nature of the English people, Margaret remarked, "It isn't easy to reach English people because they don't discuss things that mean a great deal to them. We sometimes were embarrassed because women, especially, were reluctant to invite us into their homes. They would stand on the doorstep and talk for two hours vithout asking us in." Laughing-ly she added, "Once you managed to get your foot in the door, you were okay.

Results of Campaign

Although the campaigners were warned to expect cold receptions n Anglican dominated England, the personal visitation program proved successful. When the neeting closed July 21 there had been 20 conversions and an average nightly attendance of 50.

Conversions included two "tedof the American juvenile deliquent, a 75 year old woman who had never before owned a Bible and a woman with a 14 year-old illegitimate daughter. In a recent letter to Margaret the latter remarked, "I am still very happy about being a Christian am learning more about the Bible."

"The elderly lady whom we baptized is now making personal calls herself," Margaret added, 'and there have been two more conversions since the campaign.'

Started Building Fund

The newly organized Wembery congregation, though currenty meeting in a rented hall, has already contributed $210 toward building fund. "Most of the people we baptized have low in-comes and can't give too much, but they've been very enthusiastic about working for the church," Margaret said. Ministers of the church sent by the Hills-boro congregation are E. P. Lakes from Michigan and C. P. Slates from Tennessee.

Because only four per cent of the English people attend church, organizers of the campaign hope to visit England again next year while the people still are receptive to the gospel.

Margaret, after her summer in England, summed up her feelings toward the English people as, "They're still reserved, but they're also wonderful."

American citizen, member of the Communist Party, U. S. A. and counter-spy for

His story began in 1940 when he and his wife, Eva, moved to Cambridge, Mass., where he was slated to work with an advertis-ing firm. Desiring to become acquainted with the community, they joined a newly organized youth association called the Cambridge Youth Council. Six months later Philbrick stated, "I awoke to find myself in and chairman of a communist youth organization. My first thought was to get out as fast as I could but then I realized that some-one had to know what the communists were doing because others like me were being used to benefit their movement."

Informed Against Reds

On a spring morning in 1940 Philbrick entered F.B.I. head-quarters in Boston and informed them of the communist movement in Cambridge. This event led to the tri-section of his life and the ultimate arrest of 11 top Communists in the U.S.

According to Philbrick his decision to work as an undercover agent for the F.B.I. was based not only on feelings of loyalty to his country but also because of a sense of curiosity. He had to see for himself how Communists could move into a city and set up fronts in churches and social groups, letting good American people do their dirty work.

Work Through Fronts

"Through Communist front organizations the communists are using loyal Americans to help their cause in more ways than Philbrick said. In addition to using them as recruiting grounds, the fronts also serve as a "transmission belt" for the communist propaganda and for fund raising projects for the party. One such Communist front organization in the U.S. today is called the "Fair play for Cuba Committee," which openly boasts of having 50 chapters on American college campuses.

From similar fronts promising young recruits are asked to join the communist youth league and eventually emerge as hard-core communists. "Although the majority of young people joining front organizations realize what they've gotten into later, a few of them for reasons unknown, stay in and become criminals, not by accident, but by training. They become animals climbing a ladder until they reach a point of no return."

American Communists There are 10,000 American communists in the U.S. today. Dedicated men like Guss Hall who in an American court said he would, when the time came, overthrow the American government by force.

When he entered a New York court room in 1949 where 11 top communists were being tried, Philbrick's masquerade came to an end. l wish you could have seen the faces of those communists when I got up and testified against them," he said. "They didn't even know who I was or where I came from," Philbrick Philbrick concluded his speech with a plea for better under-standing of the nature and goals of the Communist movement and a deeper dedication to Christian and American ideals.

Writer Suggests Pledge Week Procedures Need Alternations

Harding was not set up to be the typically American ivy-league college. She would no doubt lose some of her Christian warmth and friendliness if she adopted some of the policies and practices of the ivy-league set. However, there is one thing Harding can do to gain a little more collegiate atmosphere without endangering her Christian heredity. And that is to revise the so-called pledge week activities which occur six weeks after the beginning of the fall term.

My arguments are not against the idea of pledge week as such but against the pattern of pledge week at Harding. Trapsing around arm on shoulder shouting juvenile songs, wearing colored stockings, Indian garb and other costumes, performing such tasks as sprinkling the lily pond or washing feet in said pond, watering the flag pole, conducting clandestine meetings at Wyldewood or similar areas, carting around stuffed animals, and all the various and sundry other pledge "requirements" which are a part of Harding's pledge week echo high school club initiations.

Complete Revision Needed

How could pledge week take on the semblance of a university directed activity rather than the high school affair that it is? Probably the best and least complicated way would be to do away with the entire procedure that has been used in past years. This includes doing away with the mad rush of girl-askboy and vice versa for dinner dates, coke dates, study dates, etc. This practice may be a good way to meet people — Harding girls seem to have more initiative along this line that the timid Harding fellows - but it does create a problem for those somewhat inhibited individuals or those students desiring no dates at all. My plan also includes doing away with the so-called informal initiation at which most of the "rough stuff" occurs.

Pledge Work and Meetings

Starting from scratch the clubs could plan work to be carried out by each pledge during pledge week rooms cleaned, shoes polished, clothes ironed, etc. This has been done in the past to a certain extent but not with any degree of organization. General meetings only for the pledges could be held each day of pledge week to give the pledges opportunity to become acquainted. Meetings could deal with plans for parties and programs to be presented for the active members at the end of the week. Some time could be spent at the meetings writing out reports of the work assigned and accomplished for each day — to be given to the actives.

Study Table Suggested

Another suggestion which could be initiated is a practice which national fraternities and sororities use. These organizations have a study table system whereby their pledges spend a certain number hours per week studying at a designated place. The pledges themselves decide where and when they want to spend their four or so hours per day of study and the actives check at an unannounced time to see that they are actually studying. (Most freshmen pledges are thankful for this assigned study period.) Even though Harding has only one week of pledgeship, a study table could be put to use to help the pledges learn the value of time budgeting. Perhaps the study table could be continued for sometime after the pledge week so that the freshmen could accustom themselves to the routine.

In the past, pledge week has been a time for high school antics and pranks wherein nothing truly constructive is gained. While college students should allow time for fun and amusement, they should not reach for entertainment below their level.

If the pledge-work-study plan could replace the high school practices of club initiations, then Harding College will have made a step forward toward attaining a more collegiate spirit.

Band Needs New Uniforms

The Harding College band is in dire need of new uniforms. At the present time band members have to wear antiquated uniforms which were originally purchased by the Academy.

Saturday night band members march onto the field at half-time in these out-dated, out-moded garbs. Even though band members do not have new uniforms, however, they will not let this hinder their performance.

Band Has Doubled

The band has doubled this year and is improving at each rendition. Considering they spend only around three hours per week in practice, they are making honest efforts to become a college band.

I would like to see our band rewarded for their time and efforts. I think they merit new uniforms. In fact, I have talked to a number of students and others who feel the same way.

Uniforms Would Boost Spirit

New uniforms would encourage our musicians to do a better job and would boost school spirit immensely. It seems that this is only a small thing to ask for students who receive little or no recognition - and most of the time criticism.

It would be wonderful if the band could go to Arkansas State Teacher's College attired in crisp new uniforms. Not only would it raise student morale but it would also let people know of that college near the foothills.

College Roommating Compared To Matrimonial Combination

By Joel Anderson

"Oh, that silly roommate of mine! I can't get anything done because of him—him and his buddies!" This remark is heard every now and then on campus, and no doubt it or a simi-lar one passes through minds even more often than it is actually voiced. The college makes no secret of the that room matches are not made by a Univac machine as husbandwife matches are made on Art Linkletter's "People Are Funny" show; therefore, matches which enjoy "good" smooth sailing from September to June cannot always be expected.

Comparable to Marriage

Rooming at college has sometimes been compared to the mar-ried state. And sure enough, one of the definitions for "married" in Webster's New World Dictionary is, "closely or intimately joined," and we must admit this fits fairly well. The thought that some kind of a state of marriage exists between you and your roommate may be unpleasant, but it has been said that if a roommate succeeds in his efforts at college to live and get along with another human, his chances of succeeding when he actually does get married are improved.

There are, however, some advantages in marriage which are not found in rooming. First, you may not have picked your room-mate as you probably would have your marriage partner. Second, when roommates begin their efforts at getting along with that other human, they have not fallen into that condition called "love," which is supposed to be quite an initial advantage to

Possibilities Presented
In spite of the definite disadvantages which rooming has compared to marriage, it also has great possibilities. (Look at all the former roommates in the Kennedy Administration!) It can be one of the richest and most worthwhile experiences and result in one of the finest friend-ships of one's entire life. One of the best ways to effect closer relationship and friendship between roommates is to have a daily devotional at bedtime or in the morning, as pre-ferred. So far as I know, these are rarities on this campus. This is regrettable. In my opinion, nothing is better to develop a mutual respect and interest, not to mention the inherent spiritual value of a devotional. Reading a short portion of scripture, briefly discussing it, perhaps airing a personal problem, and then praying together just before going to bed can be highly edify-

Involves Consideration

Rooming means learning to give—to give perhaps even more than you take. It involves, very simply, consideration. If your roommate can't sleep while you bang on a typewriter, don't wait until midnight to begin typing. If he likes to shower just before breakfast, take yours at another time. If your alarm clock sends him into convulsions when it sounds, either set it on "soft" or set it to go off a second or two after his does. If your friends interfere with his work, get them out of the room, (tactfully, of course). If he likes your red tie, offer to let him wear it; you wear another. Etc., etc. Few of us will ever be fortunate enough to get a room-mate who has absolutely no idiomate who has absolutely no idio-syncrasies, who always does things as we wish him to. But "that silly roommate" of yours could well turn out to be a great one. And the friendship between you and him, with a little thought and effort, can become a very satisfying one, a very helpful one (he might be first to the moon!) and a very

Student Observes Inadequate Comprehension by Individuals

By Don Stillinger

This summer I worked in a coin-operated restaurant. The machines used were of a simple type. Each machine had the directions for use printed on the front in a step-by-step form. All that was necessary was to read and follow directions. To condense a long story, at least nine out of every ten people that I saw that came in either couldn't or refused to operate machines properly. The most impressive fact of the whole experience wasn't that people didn't have the intelligence to reason for themselves, but that they simply refused to do so.

Changing World

The world we live in is changing all the time, and perhaps ours is the most glorious age of all. I have often wondered what it would have been like to have lived in the Golden Age of Greece. It must have been a great experience to have walked down streets where men like Socrates, Plato, and Aristotle daily walked and talked. What an experience it would have been to have studied in a math class taught by Hippocrates or acted in a play directed by Euripides. It is on their foundations that many of our technical and political buildings stand today. To this day the world is still feeling the influence of an age of thinking

Not Age of Thought

With all our scientific knowledge and technology, the present age could hardly be called an age of thought. This is strange when you think about it. No other country has ever provided as much opportunity for advancement of the mind as our own country has. A quick look at the various colleges and universities in the United States would soon prove that the human mind is used largely to create excuses for any type of behavior imaginable.

This summer an old farmer told me to come and see him when I received my degree and he would teach me some good old "horse sense" and then perhaps I would be ready to meet the world. I think he had a point. Perhaps a little "horse sense" would teach a man to appreciate the opportunities he had to learn. It might even make him realize that every man is human and is capable of being mistaken.

There is a serious need all over the world for people who can think for themselves. The one thing that separates a man from all other living creatures on this earth is his ability to think. Although it is one of the greatest treasures mankind possesses, thinking has almost become a forgotten art. Never before has the need for sober, level-headed thinking men been so great and never have they been so scarce. Let everyone examine himself and lay aside past foolishness. Anyone can remain a child all

Teachers Analyze Widely Acclaimed Bible Translation

The new English Bible, translated from the best Greek manuscripts available by a committee of eminent Greek scholars, has been widely acclaimed and criticised but remains among the top five on the best seller book

Harding Bible instructors who have made the most thorough study of the version thus far are Leslie Burke, Robert Helsten and John McRay.

In effect, Burke was disturbed by the wil-lingness of people to accept the new translation as a replacement for more dependable versions; Helston was pleased by peo-ple's interest in the version and thought it indicated they were interested in reading the Bible in modern language, and McRay's chief criticism was its use of entirely British colloquialism.

Burke said, "At first the New English Bible was only widely praised but now that biblical scholars have had time to closely examine it, the criticism is growing." He added, "My criticism is not to discount the translation because in some areas it is very good, perhaps the best that has ever been rendered in these Helston recommended that every student of the Bible have a copy and read it as an auxa copy and read it as an auxiliary to more dependable versions. "The King James Version is not going to keep its unrivaled position," he said, "because the American Standard and Revised Standard Version are already encroaching on it." croaching on it.

According to McRay, the new English Bible is the first actual translation by a committee since Tyndale's in 1525. All other translations have been revisions of man or have been revisions of other revisions; a prime example being the King James version which is 90 per cent Tyndale. McRay stressed that Christians should remain open-minded and not reject advances in scholar-ship because it may be new or a little different.

When asked whether the new English Bible will ever replace the King James as the most prominent Bible in America, Burke said, "definitely not." Helston said he didn't think any particular version would take its place but he felt that the King James version would be replaced and McRay said no version would replace the King James until the American people became better educated.

All three Bible teachers agreed that the English Bible should not be used as a text for sermons. For personal use Burke and Mc-Ray prefer the American Standard Version while Helsten studies by the Revised Standard trans-of his life, but it takes real men and women to grow and mature in mind in the manner that God Colhecon Women

Over a decade ago communist forces chased more than a million frightened people out of China to Hong Kong, Among retugees were tour small girls, Rebecca and Estner Wan, Jane Chang and Elaine Wong.

Rebecca Wan, born in Canton, China, in 1941, has a sister, Es-ther, a year younger than her-self. In Canton their father met Lowell Davis, missionary of the church of Christ and was con-verted to Christianity through him. At the age of seven, Estner and her father fled to Hong Kong where they were finally joined by Rebecca five years later.

Rebecca and Esther Wan both agreed that, "Americans are friendly to that, "Americans are friendly to us." Elaine Wong said after her long trip to America, "I think America is a vast, friendly and many-sided country." Elaine also found that the Chinese do not express their feelings and opin-ions as readily and freely as Americans.

Fashion Flavors

By Ferne Gulley

If you stop to think about it, fashion includes not only the things you wear but how you wear them. Look around you, and instead of noticing what is being worn, notice how it is

A woman may wear Dior origionals, but unless she compli-ments a dress with the right accessories, the effect will be much more shocking than stunning.

We all agree that tennis shoes are here to stay for casual wear, but when the occasion and dress calls for flats or other type of shoe. . . conform. Nothing looks more out of place than a pair of tennis shoes with a nice sheath. Remember that dirty tennis shoes are way out (the door)!!

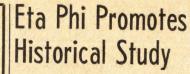

Then there are the fads which sweep the nation by storm. It's nice to feel in the majority, but are you really using good judgment when you conform to some of these present styles? Some-times it may be the wisest thing to stay in the minority.

Now gentlemen, we all have room for improvement. For instance, when you have a date you expect her to look neat and charming. Do you show her the same courtesy by dressing with care and attention? You're appreciated much more when it's apparent you spent a little time in preparation. Anyone can be a Maynard G. Krebs.

To be fashionable. . . use common sense.

"You grow up the day you have your first real laugh — at yourself.

— Ethel Barrymore

All-American Basketball Star Wrong Sex for Collegiate Play

By Nancy Cope

An All-American basketball player is attending Harding this year; but unfortunately, Coach Groover can't use the star player on the Bison team. She is Judy Doty from Nelson, Mo. Judy not only won the all-star trophy for four years of basketball playing in high school and totaled 2,297 points, but also won the much coveted All-American trophy in the National Tournament.

Made New Record

Judy has been a sharp-shooter for a long time and in her fouryear career has written a new individual scoring record at Nelson High. After the entire girls' squad voted to give her a chance to break the state scoring record in their game against Santa Fe High School in Waverly, Judy made 60 of her team's 62 points but didn't reach her goal of 85. (Ruth Harms set the state scoring record at 85 in 1951.) Judy made 46 points the first half but Santa Fe began pressing her so that she was unable to play the entire second half of the game. However, the Nelson girls trampled Santa Fe in a 62-5 victory.

Held Winning Streak This "one-girl gang" continued its winning streak and won fame throughout the area. Judy praises

Played Professionally

When Judy's high school bas-ketball career ended last March, she decided to seek more thrills by accepting an invitation from Coach Frank Evans and Manager Bob Peck of "Peck's Good Girls" in Kansas City, Kan., to join their squad. Peck's is a semi-professional team and plays against other professional teams from all over the United States in the annual National Tournament.

With the assurance from Coach Evans that she would be able to return to Nelson in time for the final high school highlights, including the annual Basketball Conference Banquet, Judy left with Peck's team by train from St. Louis to attend the National Women's Basketball Association Tournament held this year in Waterbury, Conn.

Won Third Place

Their first game was scheduled with Brooklyn, N. Y., on Satur-day afternoon and the second the fine teamwork which the Nelson Eaglettes demonstrated throughout their season and the second one with Philadelphia, Pa., Satur-were observed leaving the stands last week at halftime. When you give up on your team so readily how can you expect them to be willing to come right back out and fight as valiantly as they did for you and the school last Sat-urday night? These men, substitutes as well as regulars, put in some two hours every day, rain or shine, in order to play for the school and fans. The team's past record, as entered on the books, would not impress one who has only winning records in mind. But the team has more to offer than such a tangible mea-sure. The team has fight and a degree of school spirit that is sadly lacking among many stu-dents. One definite way you may support these men is to take your little blue card that you received in the registration line and go to Alumni Field this Saturday night and cheer YOUR team on to victory. Game time is 7:30.

Yearbook Heads Elected Today

Three candidates for Petit Jean editor and four for business manager were voted on today by the junior class

Making bids for the editor post were Lucrecia Stein, Annabelle Climer, and Ann Smith, with Jere Yates, Travis Stewart, Lynn Rhodes, and Gale Smith seeking the business manager position.
All are juniors.

Ann, a transfer from Lubbock Christian College, was editor of the yearbook, The El Explorado, and Lucrecia and Annabelle, both Petit Jean veterans, edited their high school yearbooks.

None of the business manager applicants have previously work-ed on the Petit Jean. Yates is vice-president of the A Cappella Chorus, and Stewart and Rhodes have both had experience selling Bibles. All have been associated with business techniques, according to Dean Joe Pryor, Petit Jean faculty sponsor.

Winners of today's election assume apprenticeship duties this year and take over head positions next fall.

often by the athletes under Coach Carl Allison's tutorage. The con-fidence he has continued to show in these men was rewarded in full last Saturday night when they survived a dismal first half, they survived a dismar first hair, being outscored 19-6 and outrushed something like 143 yards to 43, to emerge as victors.

Apparently the Muleriders, with their "comfortable" lead at halftime, thought they had the game stashed away behind the scoreboard. But they had failed to reckon with the Bisons' ability to rise from the dust for ano-

Second-Half Comeback

Beginning in the second quarter, Harding had made some semblance of recovery, but the clincher came in the second half. Shortly after returning after the intermission, they caught the SS men on their backs and slipped another marker on the board by way of unrelenting pursuit and ball-hawking. Gerald Griffith, freshman center from Chattanooga, Tenn., recovered a Rider fumble in the end zone to bring the score to 19-13. This seemed to be the complete turning point for Harding.
All may be proud of this team for their refusal to quit in the face of terrific odds. As Coach Allison said, "Those men had every reason to quit, but they didn't." This is the mark of the big man.

The Bison front attack will be limping this coming Saturday night when they meet Ouachita Baptist College, but after the su-preme effort displayed by the herd last week, don't look for de-feat. Harding battled the Tigers to a 0-0 deadlock last year and will be going for the win this

Injuries are plaguing the Bisons this week. Walt Mays and Larry Lambert, veteran tackles, are on the injured list. Freshman Bisons Give Team Depth Prospect Seen for Better Season

Coach Carl Allison this year has present a large number of young freshman football players who are trying to take Harding upward in the conference ranks. This crop of players has an abundance of ability and they should prove interesting to watch in the coming season.

In this early part of the season Coach Allison has already called upon a few of the freshmen to play major roles in his attack. Morgan Outlaw from Alachua, Fla., has earned a starting berth at the guard position and has held up very well under college competition. However, Outlaw is used to playing against tough competition as he particitated in the Florida All Star pated in the Florida All-Star

Ray Ritchie, the largest of the freshmen at 220 pounds has seen considerable action for the Bisons and has done a tremendous job on defense. He took over for the injured Walt Mays in the Arkansas Tech and Southern State games and turned in excellent game performances. He tied with Ray Griffin, junior end, with 10 tackles against Tech. Perhaps the most heralded freshman on the squad is Her-man Jenkins from Clarksdale, Mississippi. In his senior year he was All-Conference, All-State and All-American. Jenkins also had the honor of playing in the All-American game in Ft. Lauder-dale, Fla. He has seen considerable action this year at offensive end and has been doing an admirable job of punting for the Bisons. After three games, his punting average is 35.5 yards.

Jim King from Earle, Ark., i well known among Arkansa;
fans for his record making 45. yard field goal while still in high school. King was also named on the Arkansas All-State team both his junior and senior years. Un-fortunately, he injured his foot in the first part of the season and has been unable to kick effectively so far this season.

These are only a few of the highly-talented freshmen which Harding is fortunate to have this year. There are 16 freshmen out for the team and most of them have already seen game action at one time or another. This valuable game experience is going to be an asset for the Bisons in the coming seasons. Most all of the boys were on winning high the Student Center, from 12:00-

After making adjustments for the second half, Allison sent his eleven back onto the field, and the fired-up Bisons were to make the most of the second half to outscore the Muleriders, 21-6. Harding took advantage of every break, grabbing up three visitors' fumbles and holding the Monticellians to 65 yards rushing in the second half.

The turning point of the game came right after the halftime intermission when Herman Jenkins punted to State's David Alpe at the State 13. Alpe fumbled when hit by a herd of Bisons and Gerald Griffith, freshman center, covered the pigskin in the end zone. This brought the score to 19-13, Southern State.

The Muleriders scored their final when Alpe took Jenkins' punt on his own 35 and sped down the sideline for the TD. Pettit's kick was wide and the score stood at 25-13.

Desperate, the Muleriders then went to passes, but the story is shown in the statistics. The Bison defense was aggressive and charged hard enough to make the Rider passer hurry his throws.

The defense was the key of the night for the Bisons. The defensive line forced the breaks which won the game for the home club. Offensively, the backfield could not find the holes in the visitors' line and had to resort to pass-
