Faith, Facts and Fun

By Mark Woodward

How fleeting is the fame of life and quickly passed the glory.
Each one of us tries to wear size 14 combat boots when we walk through life so that we leave footprints behind, but the will be deep and lasting; yet, it is commonly the fame of all men to be forgotten and only a few to be remembered. Greater than I have come and gone and are now non-entities. Even great faculty members come and go, and more often than not, the freshness of the following year says, "Dr. who?"

The cries of today are the tales told tomorrow. The troubles of the present are only the vague memories of the future. And yet these people that come into our lives and the trauma that we experience are real today, and do affect our lives. By them the clay of our lives is gently molded into a never-completed shape, a shape that is known as Me.

And then I am led to the conclusion that it is not so much the same that is linked to the effect but the event that I think

My self-p ride would like to make me think that students for years to come would recognize my name and attach to it some the things that I have done here. I know that the life I have lived

The self image is brought on by a self-examination, saying, "Mark, what have you done or said or written this year that has been the black man under the spotlight. But what is the black woman? Why has she kept quiet? How has she responded on Harding's campus feel about certain problems as seen on campus? First of all, what about Interracial Dating? Can the black man respect Interracial dating is fine as long as the black man does not forget his true identity.

It has been observed by the black women on campus that they are not dating the white women because the black women feel that they are white. This does not mean that she is prejudiced, but the shoe fit a few a.

It is believed that the black male student and how their dignity and forgot their true identity. It seems then have that they are white. This discussion is not new, but a child of God. When asked why it happened, she replied, "because I didn't give one of the Soul Brothers my meal ticket."

Now the may ask, "what is the big cause that the black man on campus has been fighting for?" This type of action prompts one to wonder, how can the black man respect the white woman on campus, when he does not respect his own black woman? And secondly, how does he expect the white man to respect the black woman, when her own black man does not respect her?

I wonder what the slogans, "I am black and I am proud" and "black is beautiful" mean to some of the Majors on campus? And especially how does the black woman feel, since she is supposed to look up to, and be lead by, her own black man?

And one this last thought, will the black man on campus ever be able to govern his own destiny? And when he does control his own destiny, will he be responsible enough to handle it? We'll just have to wait and see.

Harding's Flying Faculty Members Relate Tales of Exciting Episodes

By Donna Holmquist

"We were coming back from Auburn, Ala., and knew the weather was going to be bad. I wanted to get as far along as we could and when we came to the storm front, I flew up over it."

"This was a mistake! To get down to land we had to go through the turbulent weather. We finally found a hole and started down. I hit fog so thick I lost all contact with the ground and had to ask the passengers to tell me when they saw the ground."

"It was night, it was raining and the radio was not working right. We were lost! We had been following a railroad track and after some time flew over a highway and I thought I recognized it. I was right and we ended up in Jasper, Ala., and had to stay there two days — skilled pilot that I am!"

And thus ends another Jerry Jones flying episode — only one of the many exciting incidents he can recall about his life as a pilot and a member of Harding's "flying faculty."

Along with Jones, Joe Hacker, Ken Davis, Bob Knight and Fred Alexander can all cite similar experiences. They all belong to a flying club composed mainly of Harding faculty and students.

The club was organized in March, 1967, when several faculty members pooled their funds and bought a Cessna 150. Two of the members were already pilots and the others learned to fly with that plane. The club now has a four-seat Cessna 172.

Membership is on a partnership basis. The $200 which enables a person to become a member of the club buys a share in the plane. This money is returned when a member leaves the club. Dues are twenty dollars a month.

The club is not limited to faculty members. Some students, Ben Bob Booth, Gary Corum and Gary Abney, have also been involved. "Last semester several student members had to put the plane down on an interstate highway while returning from a basketball game."

For Jones the plane means being able to make appointments he would not otherwise be able to fill. "In spite of the raining moments," comments Jones, "flying is really very safe."

It is exciting; it's useful. And one needs only to watch Jerry Jones' eyes light up as he talks about flying to be sure that it is also fun.

Bison Thinclds Enter AIC Meet

Harding tracksters compete tonight and Saturday in the all-important AIC meet in Little Rock. Field events will start at 6 p.m. tonight at Scott Field. Coach Ted Altman's Bisons will be hard pressed to equal State College of Arkansas and Southern State. Both have demonstrated their prowess on the cinder track and are expected to vie for the AIC crown.

Main Strength
Harding will enter twenty-one participants in the meet. As in past years, the Bisons' main strength will lie in the middle distance events.

The team has good strength and depth in the 880, mile, and two mile. Jim Crawford, Tim Geary and Dick Sheffield should rank high in these races. Crawford, AIC distance champion, will be competing in his final AIC meet as a Bison thincld.

The Bisons are stronger this year than they have been at any previous time in field events. Jim Duncan is presently ranked the number two shotshooter in the AIC. Three times this season he has recorded new school marks. Harding's other strong man, John Buck, will hurl the discus in the championship meet.

Field Events
In other field events, Jerry Evans will be the Bison entry in the pole vault and Richard Gillenwaters will handle the long jumping chores. Charles Kisler will run the 120-yd. high hurdles while teammate Ken Costen will enter his specialty, the 440-yd. intermediate hurdles.

Field Events
In other field events, Jerry Evans will be the Bison entry in the pole vault and Richard Gillenwaters will handle the long jumping chores. Charles Kisler will run the 120-yd. high hurdles while teammate Ken Costen will enter his specialty, the 440-yd. intermediate hurdles.

There are three Bison thinclds who Altman is hoping to pick up for high finishes in the sprints. Jimmy Isom will be counted on heavily in both the 100 and 220-yd. dashes. Rick Harris and David Byrd are expected to pick up some points in the 440-yd. dash.

The biggest weakness is the lack of depth in the sprints. There will be only four runners in the sprints. Because of this lack of talent, Harding will not enter a team in the 880-yd. relay event.

As has been the case in previous AIC meets, a big question mark hinges over the Bison relay entries. Harding's big hope in the relays lies in the medley relay team composed of Byrd, Isom, Harris and Crawford.

Altman received disappointing news earlier this week concerning sprinter Emerson Hayes. Hayes pulled a muscle and will not be able to participate in the meet.

In reference to the meet Altman said, "It will be very interesting." The mentor continued, "If the boys do what they are capable of doing then we will finish well.''

Former VMI Star Will Address Athletic Banquet
Chuck Beall, former outstanding athlete at Virginia Military Institute, will be the guest speaker at Tuesday's all-sports banquet.

Beall is presently employed by Fidelity Union Life Insurance of Little Rock. The VMI graduate is a noted speaker for the Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

Coaches of all Harding's nine intercollegiate sports will present awards to their outstanding players. Included in these presentations will be the outstanding back and the linenman awards in football and baseball's MVP and batting champion awards.

Harding's athletic committee annually selects the "Outstanding Senior Athlete" and will make this presentation at the banquet. Qualifications for winning the award include two varsity letters in any sport, superior effort both in the classroom and in sporting events, leadership characteristics and a life and conduct of positive influence.

Bison Boosters will honor their selection of "Athlete of the Year" and Searcy's Bison Booster Club will make presentations to the graduating senior athletes.
