In keeping with the nostalgic trend that is currently sweeping the United States, the S.A. will present the Vogue concert set Feb. 9 at 7:30 in the Main Auditorium, according to Ben Sims, social affairs co-chairman.

Tickets for the concert will go on sale today for $2.50 and $1.50 with Harding ID and $2.50 without ID, Sims stated.

Playing together for fourteen years, the Vogues have created their own unique sound with an original blend of harmony that has remained constant throughout the years, Sims said. The group has toured the United States, England, and Australia performing in concerts, on college campuses, and in club appearances.

Sims stated that the three members of the group, Bill Burket, lead baritone, Don Miller, baritone, and Chuck Blakemore, tenor, grew up together in Arkansas. They received national acclaim with an album titled "Special Angel." This was followed by a series of million seller albums and singles including "Turn Around, Look at Me" and "Mama's Little Angel."

Their shows will include roll and rock, pop sounds, country-western and current songs such as those written by Mac Davis, Sims concluded.

Plans made for summer school

"Summer school can be a lot of fun," said Dr. James Carr, assistant to the President, in announcing the plans for this year's session. First session will be held June 3-July 5 and the second session will be July 7-Aug. 1.

According to Carr, the administration in cooperation with the S.A. will provide special recreational activities during both sessions, including free Saturday night movies, free ice cream on the lawn, plays, movies, basketball games, softball, and mixer clubs with live entertainment and faculty services.

Special plans are being made for a cruise down the Arkansas River on a boat this summer, according to Carr. Students can benefit at least as well as socially from summer school, Carr stated. The extra hours acquired at summer school can enable a student to graduate in three years and earn an extra year's wages, he said. In addition to courses required for graduation, workshops on teaching reading, teaching math and science, and teaching Bible are offered. Early summer single session on workshops on ecology and energy will also be offered according to Dr. Nyal D. Royse, associate of education.

Financial aid for the summer sessions will be available through part-time work under "Wk, National Direct Student Loan Program and the Arkansas Local Board." The Loan Program, reported Russell Showalter, director of financial aid. Freshmen who entered school after July 1, 1973, may qualify for a Basic Educational Opportunity Grant.

To receive financial aid, students must submit an application and a need analysis during the spring semester. Freshmen must also complete all admission requirements before they can qualify for financial aid, Carr said.

According to interviews with freshmen who had expressed feelings of being impressed with the use of it. Larry Wade said, "It is really encouraging to see people of type of people." Betty Taylor said about the program. "It is too close communication of the teaching staff to our students, I am impressed on how pleased she was with the small class enrollments. She said that she was pleased that the classes were conducted in a relaxed atmosphere and that it really measured up to a college class met by sitting in a circle on the floor.

Varsity debate team visits Waco, Tex. for tournament

The varsity debate team is off campus again, according to Brad Childs, the Junior from Waco, Tex. for the 41st Annual Baylor University Debate Tournament. The verbal action began yesterday (Jan. 31) with Harding hoping to improve on last week's disappointing results at the Delta Intramural Tournament, where the team placed 24th of 28 teams.

The tournament will be held on March 8. The year's last but important event for Harding's Speech, Drama, and Debate team will be the spring "Gateway Invitational." The team placed 11th in the last three years.

Division for Harding this semester will be Commissioner Jo Corum and Joe Card, senior Jana Smith and junior Richard Faile. Freshmen Steve Koll, Jim Cone, Mark Worth and Cecil Wilson comprise the second division.

Carr said the trip for the team will be to St. Louis next weekend for the Tournament Church planting at the University of Missouri and plan to attend a contest at North Central College on March 1 and the Arkansas State Speech Festival in Little Rock, March 8. The year's last but very important event for Harding's debaters will be the Phi Kappa Delta Regionals in Edmond, Okla. Harding has won sweepstakes there for the last three tournements.

Campbell chosen registrar for selective service system

Recently the Selective Service System asked different college and schools for volunteers among their staff to serve as registrars for the draft board. Eddie Campbell, Dean of Men at Harding, volunteered for the job since he is now serving as registrar for the Arkansas Local Board.

Campbell explained that this job has been open to him or any other faculty member, but it simply makes it more convenient for the college male to register. Even though the Selective Service is not drafting people, the office is still on stand by and it's the law that a young man register by March 23.

According to the Selective Service non-registration or late registration for the draft are serious matters involving possible criminal penalties.
Editors pushing attendance for anniversary celebration

Two weeks from today, Feb. 15, will be Harding'sconvocation, marking its 50th year of service as a four-year institution.

A regular regalia has been planned for this beginning celebration of our anniversary, with Arkansas Governor Dale Bumpers as the featured speaker, and an academic procession of our faculty members in addition to over 75 representatives from other colleges and universities across the nation, which include Duke, Stanford, West Virginia University, Ohio State, University of Wisconsin, University of Northern Arizona and Cornell.

These are just the guys on stage. Out in the audience will be friends of Harding, supporters of Harding and - yes - Harding College itself. or in other words, US.

The administration has dismissed classes for that Friday so that the students can plan to make a long weekend of it. The administration has planned an event that will last from about 10 a.m. noon, only about two hours. After that, H.C. students are free to go home, enjoy a leisurely week-end on campus or get caught up on studies.

Also, the Student Association has scheduled movies for Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights, and other possible special activities are still in the planning stages.

Still, despite all of the festivities, numerous Harding students have made plans to go home on Thursday before the Friday program, which will be a make-up registration day for the semester.

We've been asked by the administration to stay on campus at least until noon Friday so the student body will have a good representation at the convocation.

After all, it is our birthday... shall we miss our own party?

Pursuit of the Great Because

By H. K. Stewart

I can remember when the world was falling to pieces around my feet. It was in the days of the Christmas tree that shed its needles all over the carpet, or like a snow storm, everywhere. Everything becomes a little more mundane each Sunday, Monday through Friday. But I must admit that life, in general, is very big and very wide and I am smiling again.

Being somewhat of a pessimist at heart, I usually don't spend too much time trying to think about the rose-colored side, as it were, but I must admit these rare moments. The way I see things right now, the sun still shines for them. I'm also somewhat beside myself and rain for the people who like to shoe horses in the rain with a friend.

I am in a room with other people around me. There is a man standing near one of the walls and he is talking with people in the room. All sorts of things are being said about wars and congresses and Karl Marx and Groucho and riots and Mexico City. Which is wondering to myself what we are accomplishing by sitting here talking about the shedding Christmas tree. It really is a shame to feel so good when everyone else is going down and taking their world with them. Look at me. I know a girl once who was very paranoid because she was afraid the world was going to be taken over by insects. That is a problem. I have another friend who told me not too long ago that he had at one time been addicted to chapter books more than four years. Just to look at him you wouldn't think so, though. He said he was spending up to forty minutes a month on chapter books, and when he finally decided to quit he went through three weeks of withdrawal chapped lips. He helps still has problems. The biggest problem I have is remembering that I'm not the only person who has problems.

Because this is one of many endings, I would wish that you consider what you have just read as being a do nothing, after a fashion.

Rutless tries country just for fun of it

By Bill Dodson

HANK WILSON'S BACK, Vol. 1 (Leon Russell)

Rock and roll has a way of confusing outsiders as it turns on its fans' heads. As Hank Wilson reached two interesting extremes on its one-track, in some make-up, sexual perversion and stage theatrics. On the other extreme, the music was as if the New Riders of the Purple Sage, and John Fogerty's bands were all the same. Not made country music their specially usually do a little C&W for the fun of it. There are quite a few long-haired singers and what like rednecks, Entertaining, but ironic as could be!

The record is presently confusing outsiders, and maybe only a few. The old ways are back, and Wilson's Back, Vol. 1 (Shelter) is a collection of 13 tracks that have been enjoyed by fans. His back to the camera, he stands wearing white denim, an acoustic guitar, and a white cowboy hat and stop all hair hanging halfway down his back.

However, the opening version of Flatt's "Rollin' In My Sweet Baby's Arms" reveals the true identity of Hank as the producer of this and many other remarkable recordings, according to Leon Russell. "I mean, the country singer from Tulsa has been a failed rock singer since he starred in Cokee's Mad Dogs and Englishmen band and was the lead singer on the George Harrison's Concert For Bangladesh. Early in 1973, Leon and his bandming to Nashville and cut 36 of his favorite country tunes, just for the fun of it. According to Russell's manager, Denny Cordell, Rutless had always wanted to go back to his country roots, he was just waiting for the right time. When the time came, Rutless doubted the ability of his voice to carry the country flavor, but the owner of the Nashville studio was impressed enough by Rutless voice and production work to say that "his interpretation of the country and western songs shows a full appreciation for our music and a deep knowledge of it."

The rest of the credit belongs to the excellent country musicians playing with Hank, including Peter Drake on steel guitar, Ernest Tubbs guitarist Billy Byrd, J. C. Payne playing rhythm guitar and George Jones. We see our doctors immediately after our survery. There was no country music withdrawal.

Although Rutless may be the only one who can bear it when his "one big scoop of the semester" is announced in a few months. Tonight the paper comes out on Friday. And they resolve to work on improving our cynical attitudes. No kidding.

Shortly before Jan. 1, we here at the Harding News began to plan our New Year's resolutions. As we were all caught up in the excitement of starting a new year, we failed to notice that this is one year we won't be reading a paper till the middle of Jan., our fresh-start spirits were in full swing.

That's why we've revised our resolutions to begin them all over again start to new - beginning Feb. 2, Groundhog Day. We are allowing that the events of the past year to look out on the world.

It is our hope that some of our friends will plan their New Year's resolutions to begin on Feb. 2, which will set apart one at least one administrative official.

We promise never to try and get a dial tone on Tuesday nights when we're working, because we know that it's impossible to stop ourselves from doing these had goals wonderful?"

We will do our best to print our news stories, whether you are interviewed demand, regardless of the professional standards it may offend.

We will faithfully dedicate ourselves to the service of the students of our school, our 8 o'clock classes on Wednesday after have their day and all the other stuff that morning prewriting and reading between the lines.

We promise to search out the hardest, most ridiculous crossword puzzles available to the press, so our readers will continue to complain about in their 12:25 classes.

We promise to resolve out the fingers of all who walk across the campus to look at our maps, and go on to his hand.

We will do our best to obey fully our share tuna fish sandwiches with the P.P.P. staff, regardless of the demand, and even put on our tuxedos and drooling mouth.

We promise to work on improving our cynical attitudes. No kidding.

Volume One is a collection of 13 tunes that have been enjoyed by truck drivers, happy ranchers and even those who have a thing for good music.

Along with the similarity of the names Hank Wilson and Hank Williams, Rutless' version of "Six-Pack To Go" reminds us of the happy-go-lucky world of the old timers.

Rutless sounds more always comes across as "She Thinks I Still Care," but the album would be incomplete without the bonus track, "Rollin' In My Sweet Baby's Arms." According to George Jones, we see our doctors immediately after our survey.

Motis B. Totis

"In Xanadu did Kubla Khan / A stately pleasure-dome decree."

Where Alph, the sacred river, ran

Through caverns measureless to man

Down to a sunless sea."

—Samuel Taylor Coleridge

These are the opening lines to "Kubla Khan," an unfinished poem which is considered by many to be one of the best poems in the English language. It's art. So are the soaring arches of medieval cathedrals, the clean lines of a Greek urn, the crude pictures of animals inscribed on cave walls, and the work of Rembrandt. A Bissow article this fall quoted an art student as saying that the way people select their clothes each day is a form of artistic expression.

Art is for art's sake — that's true, but almost anything done with genius or creativity produces some sort of reward. Mediocrity, however, is its own reward. Blind impersonality, fear of being oneself, satisfaction with boredom — these are examples of mediocrity, and mediocrity is their reward.

Perhaps you know a lot of people, but how many are true artists? Most artists that I know (not all, but most) are recognized as such, and their work is admired by those who can see it. I know a young man whose art lies in his speech and in writing. His conversations sparkle and shine — not just put on, but simple, clear, colorful, and always going off like a light switch.

Another individual is a student, but an exceptional student, and organization, comprehension, interest, simplification, understanding, neatness, and originality are blended and embroidered into his work in such a way that flawlessness becomes spontaneous and natural. Effort becomes effortless.

Have you ever listened to a master storyteller — one who could recreate images and moods as well as minute details? The grandeur of the performance of an athlete whose sport is his art is also graphic — his clear-cut struggle against physical obstacles is psychologically similar enough to real life to provide catharsis to both the athlete and his audience.

Art, like gold, is where you find it. Anything involving abstract thought can be art, such as music or mathematics. Manual acts can be art — painting a picture or a wall, making a dress, splitting a log, or fixing an engine. There is an art to meeting people, or managing children, or leading in worship.

Perhaps one of the most sadly neglected arts, made precious by its rarity, is the art of being a woman, and the art of being a man. These arts compliment one another, and can only be learned from another artist.

How you do what you do is a big part of what you are.

Lynn conducts music clinic; employs unusual techniques

Dr. George Lynn said last week that Harding students are a joy to be with and that he achieved a "social and spiritual satisfaction" from his visit here.

Lynn was on campus to conduct a music clinic and an A Cappella concert in which three vocal groups performed.

Lynn employed some unusual techniques, they said, like throwing a wallet at one student practicing the scale in an attempt to make the student relax and vocalise better.

Lynn stated that he always looks forward to coming back to Harding because of the "sincere sincerity" of the students. His visit ended with Friday night's concert which featured "Worship," a Lynn composition written especially for the A Cappella choir.

Permits and bonds approved for dorm

Building permits and bonds for financing construction of Harding's newest women's dorm have been approved according to Harding business manager, Lott Tucker.

With a target date set for completion of the $156,000, the dorm should be ready for use for the Fall 1977 school year.

Tucker said the new facility will house 350 women in 150 rooms, with plans to include two kitchens, three study lounges, storage room on all floors, plus a large reception room-lounge on the first floor.

Swimmers close gap on Hendrix

Harding's Water Buffaloes closed the gap a notch tighter on league-leading Hendrix College as they came within a mere thirteen points of defeating the Hendrix swim team Friday night, Jan. 25.

Coach Arnold Pylkas seemed extremely pleased with the team's performance, noting that in the last two years of competition, the Water Buffaloes have edged closer and closer to Hendrix, and Feb. 23, at the AIC Championships, Harding should have a strong chance to take the AIC crown as the powerful Hendrix team.

Results of Friday night's meet are as follows: Tim Hughes - 1st in the 200 yd. freestyle and a new school record in the 100 yd.
