Fowler, Tucker tie in election

A run-off election between Bill Fowler and Stephen Tucker for the office of S.A. president is being held today in the main lobby of the Student Center.

According to Gloria Burch, social affairs co-chairman, Wednesday's voting put Fowler in the lead with 557 votes. However, he led Tucker by only ten votes, and 51 per cent of the votes cast is necessary to win. The other presidential candidate, King Buchanan, carried 166 votes.

In the vice-presidential race Mike Lincoln defeated Mark McInteer, 657-582, and Brenda Dimitt beat Nita Stalley for secretary 770-477. Dewitt Yingling was elected treasurer with 634 votes to Randy McCord's 395 and Suzie Carey's 227.

S.A. representative elections will be held Wednesday in the Student Center. Candidates for senior men's representatives are Al Burkett, Rick Hendricks, Mike Adams and John Heid, while senior women filing petitions are Lisa Wishart and Connie Wilke.

Paul Kee, David Johnson, Lott Therio and Mark Trotter are seeking the office of junior men's representative, and Andee Lawyer and Nancy Cochran are running for junior women's representative.

Red Cross schedules dates for blood bank

The Red Cross will be on campus to collect blood donations April 16, 17, and 18, according to Dr. Don England, Professor of chemistry.

Like last fall, donors may go to the band room of the music building to register and make their donations. According to England, the Red Cross will be accepting registrations and donations from 1-7 p.m.

"A lot of students expressed discouragement to me last fall because of the long lines when they only had one hour before class. Officials in Little Rock have promised that 21 beds will be set up the first day whereas before we've only had 15 beds," said Dr. England. He believes then, that a donor can give blood any one of the three days.

Last spring, 450 units of blood were donated. Dr. England is "shooting for 500 units in this spring drive."

Recognition plaques will be given to each men's and women's social club for 90 percent or better participation of its members. Recognition will also be awarded to those clubs with outstanding participation in recruitment of donors.

Forensics squad attains second place in region

Harding's Forensics Squad won the second-place trophy at the Regional Pi Kappa Delta Forensics Tournament March 27-30 at Central State University in Edmund, Okla., according to Dr. Evan Ulrey, debate coach.

Participating in the oratorical contests were freshman Jim Cone and junior Bob White. The oral interpretation event was entered by junior Richard Paine and freshman Mona Smelser.

Extemporaneous speakers were sophomore Joe Corum and senior Jana Smith, and those competing in discussion groups were Cone and freshman Cecil Wilson.

In standard debate the teams were made up of freshmen Mark Worth and Steve Kell, Miss Smith and Paine. Corum and sophomore Joe Cardot competed in the category of examination debate.

Miss Smith, for the second time this year, was first in extemporaneous speaking, having been rated first by every judge in each round of the contest. Dr. Ulrey said that Miss Smith also received a special award as the outstanding woman contestant of the tournament. Corum also received an excellent rating in the extemporaneous speaking event.

Wilson was chosen as the outstanding participant in discussion, and Cone was awarded a rating of excellent in the same event. In the oral interpretation contest, Paine was rated superior, and White attained a good rating in oratory.

Worth and Kell were given an overall rating of good in standard debate, and the team of Smith and Paine was one of two teams to win all of their debates, thus receiving an overall superior rating.

The University of Southwest Louisiana won the first-place sweepstakes, which Harding had won at the last two regional contests. Harding also won the Nationals last year, a feat which they intend to repeat next year in Philadelphia, Dr. Ulrey said.

Fiftieth-anniversary medallions now on sale

Fiftieth Anniversary medallions are now on sale in the College Bookstore at $7.50 each, according to J. L. Dykes, manager.

The medallions were unveiled during convocation services Feb. 15. Since then the bookstore has received a shipment of 200, with 1,000 more scheduled to come in for sale or honorary presentations.

The medallions were created "because of the great interest shown by many alumni and friends of Harding," according to Dr. Clifton Ganus. He said, "Many among Harding constituency have indicated their desire to have a souvenir memento of Harding's fiftieth year celebration."

The design for the medallion was done by Don Robinson, associate professor of art, and Arnie Anderson, senior art major. Robinson did the work for the front side of the four-inch medallion, which features an engraving of the Ad building, the front gate, and the dates 1924-1974.

Anderson designed the back side of the medallion. It pictures profiles of Harding's three presidents, J. N. Armstrong, George S. Benson, and Dr. Ganus, and the motto "Educating for Eternity."

Biology department receives grant

Dr. George Woodruff, associate professor of biology, announced that Harding received a National Science Foundation grant of $10,462, to be used in a three-week course, June 3 through June 21.

The purpose of the course is to train teachers in the use of Elementary Science Study, a curriculum used in elementary schools across the nation. According to Dr. Woodruff, it has proved successful in the schools and he has used it to some degree in his methods classes. Directing the study will be Dr. Woodruff, William Rushton, assistant professor of biology, and Mrs. Betty Amey, a teacher from Wichita, Kan., who has taught this method for four years.

During the course, teachers will be taught how to use the study. They will then practice on a demonstration class of 20 students. Teachers and students involved will be from the Harding Academy, Bald Knob, and Wynne. The practice class will be videotaped for further study and improvement.

The grant will be used for equipment, meals, transportation, faculty and staff and teacher participants.

Students send help to family

Harding students contributed $131 to the family of 3-year-old Leslie Johnson, who was killed in a gun accident near Hoxie two weeks ago, according to DeWitt Yingling, president of the Kappa Sigma Kappa Social Club.

An appeal was made to the residents of Searcy to help the Johnson family pay hospital and funeral expenses. The Kappa Sigma Kappa Social Club responded by collecting money as one of their service projects for the '73-'74 school year, helping to total the contribution to $2,300.

"It seems to me that we ought to have closer communion with the Searcy residents as students," Yingling said, "I really appreciate the students giving as they have done, because this serves to tie us together."

S.A. releases April activity schedule

The Student Association has announced its activity schedule for the rest of the month, according to Ben Sims, social affairs co-chairman.

Tonight, the S.A. will present the movie "A Man for All Seasons," and will present "Wait Until Dark" Sunday night at 7:30. The S.A. also will serve refreshments at Track and Field Day April 15 at the football field, Sims said.

The movie "Oliver" will be shown April 20, and the movie "Sounder" will be presented April 26.

A lyceum will be held April 27 featuring Dean Scott and the Cosmic Cowboys.

Dr. Moore brings Mark Twain show Friday, April 19

The music department will present a lyceum, "Mark Twain Tonight," Friday, April 19, at 8 p.m. in the large auditorium, according to Dr. Erle Moore, chairman of the music department.

John Chappell will present a live, dramatic, theater presentation of one of America's most prominent humorists, Mark Twain. The show will consist of stories and comments selected from Twain's material.

Tickets for the show can be obtained Monday through Friday in the business office free with a Harding ID.

Midnight oil not best remedy for good grade point

The end of the semester is rapidly approaching and most of us are finding ourselves caught up in a wild rat race, trying to finish up the year's assignments.

Across the campus students are realizing the deadlines which must be met soon and some are stopping just short of drastic means to get the jobs done.

Frankly, we are alarmed that you as our classmates are beginning to overdo the meet-the-deadline game and will soon be pushing yourselves to the point of exhaustion and apathy as you attempt to get all accomplished.

We aren't advocating completely abandoning studies since they are a necessary part of the Harding environment, but we are endorsing the principle behind "all work and no play makes Sally a dull girl," when we say SLOW DOWN.

This is the only 1974 spring semester you will ever have at Harding College. So take the time to enjoy it while you can.

We suggest that as you plan your studies for the remainder of the semester you also include some form of recreation on your agenda. There are numerous methods of enjoyment which require little time, little effort or little money, but which provide that needed break from burning midnight oil 24 hours a day.

For instance, there's bicycling, sunning on Cathcart's or Armstrong's rooftops or playing the quarter machines (air hockey, foosball, electronic tennis) at the bowling lanes.

For quick relaxation you can still buy 10-cent ice cream cones at the college inn, join a frisbee brigade on the front lawn or swing a little on the traditional white porchers which are placed strategically about the campus.

You can play tennis or handball, stroll the campus sidewalks or participate in your open swimming hours at the waterbuffalo pool or enjoy a period of prayer and meditation in Shores Chapel located on the second floor student center.

Use your own creativity if you wish. Just don't let those mounting research papers, reports, and assignments get you down. Keep up with your classes, enjoy yourself and take it easy.

Think, Listen, Speak

Christians need spiritual agape

By Chuck Heaton

Those who define spiritual fellowship so narrowly as to include only the usual acts of worship and other social activities do violent injustice to the biblical concept. Tom Jones, one of our campus ministers in Springfield, Mo., offers this definition: "Koinonia stands for a significant personal bond between people that grows out of sharing in the total experience of life."

That definition could aptly apply to a marriage relationship. But how often do we Christians consider ourselves married to each other (Rom. 7:4 — KJV)? This is the kind of fellowship God desires us to have with Him, His Son and each other (I John 1:3-7). It fits well into the analogy drawn in the New Testament between the Christ-church relationship and the husband-wife relationship (Eph. 5:22-32). Whatever it is Christ has with the church and a husband has with his wife, is very similar to what we all as Christians should constantly strive to maintain among ourselves. Someone said that the same principles that make a person a good Christian, will make him or her a good husband or wife. That's why koinonia should be cultivated in both areas.

Thayer's Greek-English Lexicon gives these synonyms of koinonia: fellowship, association, community, communion, joint participation, intercourse, intimacy. King James also translates it once as communication (Phile. 6). The New American Standard uses "sharing" at I Cor. 10:16. It seems "oneness" should be on the list too. God and Christ are one (John 10:30), Jews and Gentiles are one in Christ (Eph. 2:14,16), husband and wife are one flesh (Matt. 19:5,6), Christians are supposed to be of one mind (Rom. 12:16, Phil. 2:1,2).

Think about these terms and observe whether or not you include them in your own concept of fellowship. For instance, had you considered before that God wanted your Christian relations to include intimacy (at least of a sort)?

Although the word itself appears only about 16 times, a major part of the N.T. is devoted to teaching Christians how to make the best of life, realize goal No. 2, have koinonia. If you were to go through and study all of the instances where "each other" and "one another" appear, you would gain a firm grasp of the biblical concept of koinonia-fellowship. Let's look at some of the scriptures which I believe teach this idea best.

John 15:9-14 — Agape-love is the first and foremost prerequisite for koinonia to exist. You can agape-love your enemies but you can't have koinonia with them (II Cor. 6:14-17). Koinonia is the natural by-product of a relationship in which agape-love is mutually, and only when it is mutually practiced (see Jan. 25, 1974 Bison for more details on "Agape").

Gal. 5:13 — I know a girl who thinks the idea of letting fellow Christians serve her is somewhat ridiculous. But we can't "Serve one another" if we don't also allow ourselves to be served.

In Pursuit of the Great Because Lying down almost asleep, I was half in a dream and half out. A song stepped up to the front of my mind from out of a dusty, forgotten corner, and I found myself remembering the song and all the life I had spent around it. For a few moments the dream seemed to fade away and I listened to the song. I don't know, maybe the song was the dream. I started wondering if all the things that were coming to mind with the song were real or were just parts of an old dream I'd had before. I tried to decide whether the dream itself was real or not. I began to remember people and places that had been buried under the present. I kept digging around inside until I found glimpses of the faces I had buried like a bone. Those faces and times and dreams which I had covered over intending to return to later on, but never quite made it back to them. I had lost them. I'd left them on a shelf in a room I don't visit very often any more except in old dreams.

People talk about dreams a lot it seems. They talk about dreams like they talk about wishes. Dreams can be like old songs or brown photographs, they're things to be remembered after they've been forgotten for a day or a month or twenty years. My dreams come from what's already been and what I've already seen. They are made up of the people I've passed and been passed by. Dreams bring to the surface those smiles and frowns and tears and words that are the parts of friends I took to keep for myself. Half awake and half asleep, I watched a song resurrect them from inside.

Waking up, I see that the song has run off once again pulling the dream along behind it. Now I am remembering a smile. The smile is giving me another song. This one is obviously a song that a smile would give. It laughs because it's happy. It's full of tennis shoes and ice cream and kites and macaroni and cheese. It smiles, too.

Feeling contented I will simply say that what I dream, I dream because of what I am. I write what I write for the same reason. I wrote this and you just read it. So be it.

A WORK OF ART

The world is a massive canvas
Upon which is painted the portrait of God.
He is smiling — at kings in palaces
And at peasants in houses of sod.
His smile blooms forth in every flower;
It shines through the broad sunlight;
And when daylight fades into shadows,
His smile twinkles through stars in the night.
Sometimes His smile goes unnoticed
(At times we become busy or bored.)
Life then mirrors a mere existence,
As we devalue life's greatest reward.
— Joe. E. McReynolds

NIGHT STROLL

Students walking in the night, together in their own separate spheres
And I with myself
Merely wishing to beg myself;
How I envy those with their love,
alone by themselves.
Yet I dare not touch their spheres, for their monuments are of solitude, fragile,
and might be shattered.
For I too have shared my sphere.
— Noah Lewis

TROUBLE

Over my head floats
The darkest of troubled skies;
Can such clouds shed Light?
— Gail Evans

THE BLESSINGS OF OLD AGE

Old Man —
Once faster than a speeding, fle-e-ing bullet —
you're dead,
can't even whistle.
Old Man —
Once sat at home on Sa-der-day to hear Kate Smith's silver chords —
you're dead,
can't recall God or America.
Old Man —
Once charging thru angry, chirp-ing Japs —
you're dead,
can't even cock a pistol.
— Regina Little

Modern-day virtue is found

"Who can find a virtuous woman?" A modern day answer to this question might be, she is a good mother whose children's welfare is first; she teaches her children as well as others; cares for those who need care; and keeps a creative mind by continuing to learn more every day. We could also answer this question with one name: Mrs. Maxine Morton.

Mrs. Morton, a widow from Hemet, Calif., is a graduate student in speech therapy here at Harding and is operator of the Planned Learning Center located at 202½ North Blakney.

She came to Harding along with her two daughters, Mary, 16, and Martha, 12, in 1972. Mrs. Morton explained, "The reason we came here was that I could get work in speech therapy and my daughter who is in the academy, a sophomore in the band and taking French, could take French and continue to be in the band here.

When the Mortons came to Harding, Mrs. Morton, a graduate of Pepperdine University, began tutoring at the Learning Center. Last spring semester she had only one class, so she began taking care of one child. Then two more children started staying with her and then another until as Mrs. Morton said, "Soon I was doing more babysitting than I was tutoring. I wasn't very good at tutoring because they had modern math since I'd been to school and that was kind of a stumbling block to me. So Dr. Walter Porter had this idea that we move here (child center location) and have a day care center because there was a need for the children to have a place to stay while their parents were in school and working."

The day care center is licensed for eight children. Daily activities include a varied amount of educational periods. Crafts are offered for the older toddlers, but every part of the day is related to learning.

They are also taught cooperation and Mrs. Morton tries to instruct the children in using different words and in taking responsibility. Mrs. Janice Rhodes, a former Harding student, helps Mrs. Morton and keeps the children while Mrs. Morton attends classes.

Mrs. Morton's plans after her graduation are to either work with children in elementary schools as a speech therapist or work in a Veterans hospital.

Mrs. Morton expressed that "Harding has lived up to our expectations and beyond." She added, "I wanted the girls in a Christian school and they have profited from it greatly. So have I. It's been a thrill to me because sometimes you get to feeling its a big struggle and you're not going to make it, but when you see all these fine young people at Harding you know that the Church has a great future."

Mother, teacher, babysitter, student — Mrs. Morton is a woman of many talents. Her main goal however, is for her and her family to be more like Christ. This is seen in her comment to the question of why she took the job at the planned learning center. She replies, "If the good Lord could wash peoples' feet I can wash a few little bottoms."

'Three weeks hard work' gets remodeled office

By Nancy McGee

The army of workers which remodeled the Business Office in the Administration Building strove day and night for three weeks to complete the job, according to Miss Pat Young, Harding's cashier.

She further stated that "the good men working for us deserve all the credit." Harding employs a permanent personnel of carpenters and electricians and owns a carpentry shop and a supply of building and electrical materials.

The Business Office continued to function in spite of combined files, shuffled and dusty desks, and office machinery that was stashed from the downstairs Financial Aids Office to the corners of Miss Young's office, yet no one missed a day of work or asked for available time off through all the confusion, apprised Mrs. Young. Some worked at night to keep up with the recording of the students' accounts. Miss Young remarked, "It was inconvenient, but we made it."

The finished product will result in "faster and better work" according to Miss Young. The new front counter, designed by Miss Young and built by Harding's carpenters, has four windows instead of two, with two girls permanently occupying bank-like desks built into the counter. Two windows are for meal tickets, which will shorten the meal ticket lines.

In addition, the office has been painted and re-carpeted, and new ceiling lights are installed in the lowered ceilings. In the back part of the office there is more working room for the employees and new telephone and electrical installations.

Dean of students Ted Altman, who first started the remodeling craze by working for six months to get permission to have the Personnel Office remodeled, reports that the remodeling "has made this place a warmer, more personal place where students can walk in and ask questions without getting the run-around. Instead of a prohibitive 'Office of Doom,' we now have a personable information center."

Keglers start new dynasty

The Bison bowling squad re-established their bowling dynasty as they captured the championship of Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference for the 1974 season. Their victorious week-end was capped by their NAIA 17 championship, which qualified them for their ninth straight appearance at the NAIA Nationals to be held in Kansas City.

Zearl Watson claimed the top spot in the singles competition in the conference with a total of 4,508.

Harding's team pin count was 1,306 ahead of runner-up SCA, who finished with 21,903. Third place went to Arkansas Tech with 20,899. Ouachita Baptist finished fourth with 20,623 followed by Southern State with 20,565, Hendrix with 18,866 and Henderson State with 17,782.

After the AIC competition, the Bisons began competing for the NAIA 17 crown they have won for the last eight years. Harding showed they were equal to the challenge as they claimed the top five positions in the singles competition. Freshman Robby Hartley of Sebastopol, Calif. held a hot hand as he rolled up 1,142 pins to take first place. His total was just four pins ahead of Bob Helvering's 1,138, who finished just 12 pins ahead of Davis, at 1,126. Don Mitchell was close behind with 1,110 followed by Zearl Watson in fifth place with 1,104. Harding's team average was an outstanding 187 per game.

State College was again the runner-up team finishing behind the Bisons 5,630-5,220. Ouachita gained third with 5,187 followed by Southern State's 4,936, Hendrix's 4,766, Arkansas Tech's 4,741 and Henderson's 4,318.

The nationals will be held May 2-3, at the King Louie Plaza Lanes in Kansas City.

Rebuilt netters pose title threat

The Bison tennis team has shown itself to be stronger this year than it has in recent years. The record at the end of last week stood at 5-3.

The team gained many valuable players this year, both in transfers and incoming freshmen. In addition to returning lettermen Dave Hawley, Charles Ganus, Jeff Smith, David Cannon and Rick Adkins, the team is given its depth by York transfer Ken Gibson, and first year men Richard Watson, Bob Helton, James Bixler, Dan Burden, Paul Knarr and Terry Greenwood.

Last week's competition saw three matches. Tuesday the team played ASU, Harding's toughest competition, and lost 0-7. Friday and Saturday the team came back to thrash Arkansas Tech 9-0 and Henderson State 8-1.

The fourth home match for the season was on Saturday against Henderson. The only match lost was in number three doubles after a close score of 5-7 in the third set. Charles Ganus gave their number two man his first loss of the season in AIC competition.

Anxious stars, weary amateurs await the races

Sore muscles and tired bodies are of common occurrence this time of year at Harding. The cause is, of course, that interclub rivalry known as track and field day which will be taking place Monday, April 15 at 6:00 p.m. and Wednesday April 17 after second service.

This annual classic is both serious and amusing in nature, depending upon your club affiliation and just whom you are watching.

A quick rundown of the large club teams shows Kappa Sigs as the early team favorite. Behind the Sigs are Sub-T and Mohicans; both are very strong in the sprints and both are definite threats for the team title.

There should be a battle for the small club title between Theta Tau and the defending champion, Sigma Tau.

Feature events of the two evening derby will include the 100, 220 and 440-yard runs.

Tom Ed Gooden, Jack Barber and Larry Richmond will be the Sigs' major threats. Joe David Smith, Tim Hacker, Ken Lawyer and James Jameson are some Sub-T standouts, while Mohicans boast Graham Burcham, William Spellman and some very quick relay teams.

A variety of women's events included with the men's competition makes the occasion a true school-wide function.

Harding thin clads took top honors in a triangular track meet earning 74 points to outscore the Arkansas State jayvee squad who finished second with 36. Philander Smith College compiled 26 points to rank third in the meet.

Bisons winning first were Steve Celsor in the long and high jumps, (20'11 and 6'4), Greg Blake in the triple jump, 54-1, Keith Dooley in the highs, 16.1, Rock Meservey in the three-mile, 15:06, Steve Kent in the shot, 43-11, the mile relay of White, Harris, McLendon and Comotto with a time of 3:28.2 and Joe Shepherd in the 880 in 2:02.1.

Others placing for the Herd were Mark Galeazzi in the three, second; Dave Stafford in the three, third; Paul McClendon, second in the 440; Gary Oliver in the 440, third; Dave Nixon, third in the mile and second in the 880; Butch Gardner, second in the high jump; Ken Sewell second in the 440 intermediates and Dave Bell, third in the pole vault.

Bison briefs

By Matt Comotto

Sorry girls, but at last week's faculty representatives meeting of the AIC, the ruling concerning female participation in sports was denied. Hendrix College brought up the resolution but the final vote of 6-4 overruled the motion.

Harding's baseball team placed three men on the AIC all-star team that will play the Arkansas Travelers on April 18 in an exhibition baseball game. The game will take place at Roy Winder Field with Vince Adams, second baseman; Lynn Chaffin, outfielder; and Rance Reagan, pitcher representing the Bisons.

Sophomore high jumper Steve Celsor is the track team's first individual to qualify for the NAIA National Track and Field Championships to be held at Henderson State College on May 23, 24, 25. Celsor made the qualification standard by leaping 6'6" in his specialty.

Freshmen basketball sensation, Butch Gardner, aside from doubling as a high jumper on the track team, was recently named to the All-AIC Basketball Team. Aside from his all-conference acclaim, Gardner won a berth on the All-NAIA District 17 team.
