Dear Lane:

I hope that you arrived home safe and rested from our hectic but profitable two days together. I appreciate having had the opportunity to be with you and become more closely acquainted. It was a genuine pleasure to do what little I could for the Chronicle.

Some months ago or even a year or so the Chronicle ran some world maps showing locations of mission points. Even though these maps would be somewhat outdated today, I desperately need to get a copy of them. I closely guarded my copy until recently and after loaning it out was unable to recover it. This work you might remember was done by Stanley Shipp.

Any help in fulfilling this request will be appreciated.

Fraternally yours,

John Allen Chalk
