Dear John Allen:

It was extremely nice of you to be with us last evening at the mens club. You were asked because I ~~was~~ felt that you could and would tell the group of very fine men what you really believe.

I do not need to tell you that you were received with real enthusiasm because you know people well enough to know that the men were really impressed with your talk. Personally, I do not see how your talk could have been better or more timely.

In behalf of the entire group, including the four ladies, I want to thank you for a job well done. The four ladies told me they considered your talk a really fine one.

Sincerely,

Edward G. Cornelius
