Chairman of the Board Don Sherron said, "We are pleased to extend his contract until he makes 30 years in 2013. We greatly value the leadership he has provided Harding for the past 20 years." Under Burk's administration, Harding has "experienced unprecedented growth," Sherron said. Enrollment has more than doubled, more than $12 million has gone to the construction or renovation of facilities, endowment has grown from $22 million to $430 million, and five international programs were added (Australia, Chile, England, France and Germany) and campuses in North Little Rock and Bentonville were added. In the House, Democrats were undecided. "It's really not a huge change," Burks said. "If you go back 20 years, it was fairly easy for people to retire at age 65, and that's no longer true - it's not true for faculty members, it's not true for administrators."

Joe Sherron, chair of the board of trustees, said, "I'll try to do it," Burks said and nothing is set in stone, but the general expectation is he will continue in his position until 2013.

Educating For Life To Host Fundraiser Tomorrow

SUSANA VELIZ

Evaluating for Life will host fundraising activities tomorrow at 8 a.m., with a breakfast. A spaghetti luncheon will follow at 11 a.m., and baby-sitting will be provided from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. at James Christian Church parish hall, at 1122 Ponder Rd. The spaghetti luncheon will include spaghetti, salad, breadsticks, drinks and dessert, courtesy Berangueilly Pagoada said.

The donations for the luncheon will be $5 for adults and $3 for children ages 10 and under, baby-sitting will cost $5 per hour per child for the first two hours, and $1 per hour after that, graduate student Callie Bower said.

The purpose of these activities is to help support local service projects and Education for Life, a student-based program that provides scholarships to children in Guatemala, Pagoada said. The profit of the activities will be divided between Evaluating for Life and local service projects in the Scenery area, Antunez said.

"Evaluating for Life has set a goal to raise $2,000 for this year," Pagoada said. "Right now we're sponsoring five children," Pagoada said. "But every week we need about $400 to provide them with school uniforms, food, rent since they stay in an apartment, transportation and other needs.

All of the proceeds are destined to the children. Administrative and travel expenses to Guatemala will be paid with the member's own funds, Antunez said.

The recipients of these scholarships live in the indigenous community of San Antonio El Organo, in Huehuetepec, Guatemala, where the closest school is two and a half hours away. Most of the residents of the community speak Mayan dialects, which hinder their integration in the outside world, Pagoada said.

"We want to provide more and more scholarships for these children," Pagoada said. Their living conditions are really poor. They come from a community where they lack electricity and drinking water. We try to bring this community up by providing education to these children so they can move forward in life."

"We want to educate this generation, the next generation, to put them into a more positive direction in life," Pagoada said. The scholarships recipients provide tutoring to younger students.

Pagoada said most of the scholarship recipients are boys, and recruiting girls is an extra challenge because they usually stay in the village performing household chores.

Evaluating for Life was working at Harding since 1999 and raises funds through activities such as car washes, selling discount cards from local merchants, setting up tables at local restaurants and selling raffle tickets from local businesses.

Membership in Evaluating for Life can be contacted by whoever wants to join. Antunez and Pagoada may be contacted at my obligation.com.
It's Time To Choose

It's that time of year again... No, I'm not referring to sports -- Thanksgiving or the last half of the semester. It's the time for advising, and consequently I started this column in my office at 7 p.m. The hours of daylight have gotten shorter, but my time at the office has increased. My office is a Central Station most of the day, but I'm not complaining.

Despite my occasional gruas over the frantic pace, advising is a rare time of year for me. I enjoy chatting up students, particularly ones who have already graduated, but I also get to meet new students who have decided to cross over and major in the dance studio of history. Furthermore, this is the time of year when I feel most confident about the mission that the Lord has granted me.

Today, people talk of having a "calling," but as my mother would tell you, I have wanted to be a teacher from the age of three. I decided I would teach high school and then go back and get my degree in social sciences. I took a Reality Check at the end of my junior year, and a now he loves teaching instead of history.

I was feeling quite confident about my students and the class I was teaching, and I thought I would use this occasion to share with you what my students and I talk about. We discuss our majors, our families, our jobs, and any other important stuff we think of.

So what's my point? Go see your advisor. When you think about what you want to do with your life, it's not a bad idea to have someone who knows you well enough to help you with the best path for you. It's never too late to make a change, and I've seen many students who've done just that. It's never too late to get a second degree or switch majors, and it's not as hard as you think.

I hope your class went well, and I'll see you in the office. And remember, this is just a time of year for me. I'm thinking about my students and my classes, and I'm looking forward to the next one. So, I'll see you in the office. And remember, this is just a time of year for me. I'm thinking about my students and my classes, and I'm looking forward to the next one. So, I'll see you in the office.
ELECTIONS: Democrats Sweep The Polls

"The final outcome was expected, but most of the early indications had been pointing to a much larger margin of victory for Starns," Breezed said.

On other issues, Breezed said the Democrats would move more power and more responsibility.

"The change in leadership offers the Democratic Party an opportunity to present their agenda," Breezed said. "Control of both houses also carries a greater responsibility for the Democratic Party, putting them in a position where they will face some pressure to produce policy outcomes rather than simply responding to Republican proposals.""

Rep. Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif., will likely become the first female Speaker of the House. CNN reported Pelosi has said she will not her new position to push for implementation of all 9/11 Commission recommendations on national security, raising the minimum wage, cutting interest rates on student loans and supporting embryonic stem-cell research.

CNN, after winning reelection of Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld. Many Democrats and some Republicans had called for Rumsfeld's resignation leading up to the election.

"The AF reported that on Wednesday morning Rumsfeld announced his resignation and Bush nominated Robert Gates in his replacement. Gates formerly headed the CIA and is currently the president of Texas A&M University.

Fox News said Gates looks forward to the challenge of serving under his new position. We face other serious challenges to peace and our security. I believe the outcome of these conflicts will shape our world for decades to come," Breezed said.

Breezed said the election results were generally consistent with everyone's expectations.

"Most predictions were for a five to seven seat gain for the Democrats," Breezed said. "The outcome was for a ten-seat gain to the Democrats."

Breezed said the results would have an impact on judicial nominations.

"The elections mean that it will become much more difficult for President Bush to gain confirmation for his judicial nominees," Breezed said.

BURKS: HU President Continues Planning

According to Burks, the board does not have a successor in mind at this time, but they are looking for one. Such a search will not occur for a few more years, he said.

"We don't anticipate that a change will take place immediately there's no reason to get into that," Burks said. "And that is one of the outcomes of the decision — that won't be high on the agenda for several years."

Burks said he has received positive feedback from people across the state. He received a standing ovation at the Black and Gold Banquet when his contract extension was announced.

"I was pleased at the reaction and the commentary, but I'm not looking for that," Burks said.

Burks said Harding administration works on a series of five-year plans, and this year is the fourth of the current five-year plan.

"The emphasis next year will be to listen to ... all members of the Harding family and get input as to what we should do during the next five years," Burks said.

"Now that would have happened regardless, but it will be easier doing that knowing that I'm going to be here over that five-year period to try to implement it as part of the plan ... as opposed to going through the process now that just knowing exactly who the people would be who would try to implement it."
Senior Show Features Live Art

Alfred North Whitehead once said that "Science is the report of what has been proved wrong." But what about the arts? The question of how to prove what is 'wrong' in art is the subject of a series of public lectures and discussions taking place in the weeks leading up to the opening of the Senior Show at the Hoggard art gallery.

The Senior Show, which opens on November 7, features the work of 32 students from the Senior class. The show, which runs through November 24, is one of the most anticipated events of the year, attracting visitors from all over the world. The show is open to the public and admission is free.

"The Senior Show is one of the highlights of the year," said Dr. Katherine Mitchell, chair of the Art Department. "It is a great opportunity for students to showcase their work and for the community to come together and enjoy the arts."

I can picture myself getting out in an anointing bliss, my last words dropped out by a campus-wide fire alarm. "Who's the idiot that forgot to put the "Balls" sign on the gallon of Ne Out to the Ballgame," Beethoven's "Hymn to Joy," and the Arkansas Razor-

The idea of the occasion might prompt some people to run off the phone. Imagine these scenes:

Teenager running Queens Elizabeth.
"I'm a fatigue to get... Sorry, your Majesty, my roommate is texting me. Oh, blimey, she's forgot her rewarded."

Lawyer addressing the United States Supreme Court. "In conclusion, your Honor, the Constitution bounds upon us the sacred trust to...

I'm now convinced that there is no point in continuing, no point in venturing out to imagine things that don't merit an immediate call. No doubt while you were reading this column, someone, as usual, said: "I just got out of class."
"Well, praise glory and pass the salt, I should be ready to eat what I happened to not find you out.

This idea is set forth in a welcome book, "Talk to the Man, the Utter Bloody Wonderful Realism of Today," the extremely sensitive Lynne Truss create.

It is an obvious Barr Simpson type: "My "bible," my rules," to describe books that in part appear to feel that an infallible suppository comes into everything. As a rule, they assume their load, thoughtless behavior when one reads.

I wish to be clear that the CAA agrees with ear-pieces who walked around with prescribed pharmacies and expenditures and consequently regarded all the little people as anti-farm academic Truss-type.
"Now, understandably, it's really overwhelming.

The idea of somebody public events will be ruined as much as me. A dream that will be put to the day they're getting on a service plan plus by the current of their manner. A dream that all men and women, old and young, rich and poor, black and white, will someday stop hands and say, "No, we cannot have this anyway out."

To my dismay, I recently learned that music lovers are not as vocal in North America as they used to be in the past. This was not just a casual remark. The idea that to find something - anything - to

Christmas Season Grows Stale

Someview We Blame Ourselves Too

INTERVIEW WITH DR. JAMES GIBBONS

Christmas season is coming. Every year, we procrastinate, put our holiday chores off, and when the season is over, we regret not getting it done right. This year, I urge you to get it done right from the beginning. By doing so, you will enjoy the season to the fullest.

Dr. Gibbons is an expert on procrastination and has written extensively on the topic. He tells us that the keys to a successful Christmas season are planning, preparation, and taking responsibility for our actions.

Dr. Gibbons: "Planning is the most important aspect of preparing for Christmas. By making a list of the things you need to do, you can avoid last-minute rushes and ensure that everything is done on time.

Preparation is also crucial. Make sure you have all the necessary supplies, such as wrapping paper, ribbon, and cards. Don't leave anything to chance."

Dr. Gibbons: "Taking responsibility is the final step in getting ready for Christmas. You can't blame others for not getting things done. You must take responsibility for your own actions. If you don't get something done, it's your fault.

Remember, Christmas is about enjoying the season. By planning, preparing, and taking responsibility, you can make sure that your holiday season is memorable and enjoyable."

Dr. Gibbons: "So, get started now. Plan your Christmas season, prepare for it, and take responsibility for your actions. You can do it!"

Building a Dynasty

Some people like the concept of a dynasty and some don't. There is the perception that the only thing a dynasty brings is aches in the lower legs. I'm glad to see that there are once again a number of teams and individuals who are working to add to their dynastic credentials and the ever-increasing number of knock-off versions off their families.

Dynasty teams have to prove themselves worthy year after year. Thus far, because a team has won: 105%, it doesn't mean that the team has proven that it can hold up to the demands of the win. Impressions in other regions, injuries, opponentIncidents, etc. all factor in when considering a dynasty. These teams/organizations that successfully build and then reassemble their dynasties:

Michael Jordan has merely just past gone 25 of the year. Charlotte Bobcats. "His Airness" has become an NBA icon in the last few years and is the most widely respected individual in professional basketball. His presence in this young team will be huge. He will be the focal point of any opponent. That's what makes the biggest mistake you can make.

The Bobcats have been hit as spectacularly as these first few seasons. You expect a brand new team to struggle early on, but the Bobcats might see that changing in the near future. Armoni Brooks, after being plagued with injuries last season and having to sit out for a semester, has fully recovered. Gerald Wallace, the second overall pick in last year's draft, returns in full force this season. Raymond Felton has emerged as a true point guard and Sean May will develop in the seasons going on.

And there, Adam Morrison. The baby, multimillionaire All-Amercian from Gonzaga was picked third overall by the Bobcats in the draft, a decision largely influenced by Michael Jordan. He plays with passion and there is no doubt Morrison is a natural leader.

I pay my money on Adam Morrison despite criticism he faces for playing too much emotion and emotion from his opponents. His smoothness remains unrivaled in the NBA. My own focus: I think he will be a great Morrison. He already has double figures in points against Memphis and helped pull Lehi out of some jams. Morrison has cut his contact in the year to come. He's already noticed this past few weeks. I'm excited to see how he develops this season. A fewぞ

The Bobcats basketball team began the season last week with a 105-106 exhibition loss to NCAA Division I Northeastern State in Washington, D.C.

"It's great exposure for us to play against a Division 1 school," center forward Patrick Andropoulos said. "People on that level helps you get ready for our conference." But the Bobcats outscored the Demons 52 points in the loss against the Demons. Morrison was oubounced the Demons but struggled with turnarounds through the game. Morrison will definitely need some rest.

Jordan was cold from three this season and that will be for us. "We can play with just about anything if we need to," Jordan said. "It's crucial to us to be able to knock them out of the game." Andropoulos said the team's approach to practice in the off-season was focused more on defense and improvement. "Good warmups communicate well. We are really focused on the area off-off-season," Morrison said. Andropoulos said the team is much more focused this off-season, whether in the weight room or on the court. "We had a harder work ethic overall," Andropoulos said. "That's what will be giving us the edge this season." The Bobcats basketball team was picked by many analysts to be among the strongest teams in the country for 2006-07 season. Morrison has been a season-ending injury due to a shoulder injury against the University of Montana.

"We had 100 percent without much due to a back injury," said Jordan. Hall said he is physically fit and it is trying to find a rhythm in the team's debut for the second time in the game plan, and the rest of the game. Morrison said, "Our team goes well. We have points of emphasis that we focus on and those drive everything we do." Andropoulos said that tournaments and championship games will be in sight for the Bobcats this season. Starting Five
Back For Lady Bisons

class president

As the Lady Bisons are looking forward to a new season, one must wonder if this team will fare well in the upcoming season. The Lady Bisons opened the season against Northwest Oregon College and had a successful season. Though Harding lost the season opener 62-70, the future looks bright according to second-year coach Tim Kirby.

"I expect this team to keep getting better every day," Kirby said. "The new girls are starting to figure out what we need, and then they are running the play and the returning players have great attitude. It has been really nice to see everything come together. This girls have known how to play together." Three players were to see one of the team's strengths early in the season. The Lady Bisons finished the exhibition season at Northwest Oregon College. play through forgets, but normally we've had a much stronger team than last year.' The Lady Bisons finished the 2005-06 season with an overall record of 12-7 and 5-0 in Gulf South Conference play. The team will kick off the regular season against North Alabama Nov. 17 at Athens, Ark.

This season's team features all returning starters as well as two junior college transfers. The previous coaches' poll picked the Lady Bisons in fifth through place in the GSC West Division.

Katie said she thinks this year's team is already a better team than last year and will be a major contender in the Gulf South Conference.

"Last year, we had some mobile finishing games," Kirby said. "A few of the games were close and we lost by just a few points, but I think we figured out the winning formula at the end of the season and I expect that momentum to carry over to this season."

The team's first home game will be Nov. 27 against William Baptist and will be one of three consecutive games played at the Rhodes Field House. The team will face off against York on Dec. 1 and Alcorn State on Dec. 2.

Athlete of The Week

LADY BISONS

Sarah Bivens, Biology major, was named the University of West Florida Athlete of the Week on Nov. 19. Kiraly Bivens defeated Harding earlier in the week to win the Lady Bisons' seventh straight regional tournament.

Bivens defeated sessions this past weekend to advance to the national meet.

"It's a very tough thing to do," Bivens said. "We are going to have to go from the recruiting class from your next year with big done to 02."

She said spending time with her team is the most important part of her job and he had never a practice while she had been at Harding but last time the three seniors have not been on the teams with us. There are high expectations for the Lady Bisons next season. The team and supporters alike.

"It's much better to start out slow, but when we get the storm going, that was what we expected," she said.

"There are no holes of some holes of some real nice," Bivens said. "We are going to expect a lot from the recruiting class next year with big done to 02."

Dreamworks’ Movie Flushed Doubts

JORDAN DYNESKI

stuH reporter

Humor abounds as冉 Rat, an animated character in the Dreamworks animation, "Blamed Away." This company-generated feature follows the journey of Roddy, a lovable yet timid rat, as he navigates into the deepest levels of the sewage underground and struggles to find his way home. At the beginning of the movie, Roddy remains somewhat of a shy character, but as the story progresses, his courage grows.

In the picture, Roddy is seen standing at the entrance of a septic tank, where he is about to face his fears. This scene is a perfect example of how Dreamworks' animation brings humor and adventure to its characters.

While the movie's animation is highly detailed and realistic, the story itself is not without its flaws. In one scene, Roddy is seen tête à tête with a toad, which some viewers may find a bit too dark.

Overall, "Blamed Away" is a heartwarming and entertaining movie that will keep audiences laughing and smiling from beginning to end.

Suzean Casey, therapist, Lino Richio, dietician, Richard Duke, physician and Sherry Pollard, counselor, all sit at the eating disorders panel. It seems that the student body is aware of the dangers of the disease. The panel discussion was open to students, faculty and the public for free to answer any questions people had about eating disorders and how to get help for themselves or someone they knew.

THANKSGIVING

CONSISTORY

Wise I don't despise all Thanksgivings, but on the bland ones that remind me of a cafeteria line with all the desserts at the back, I'm not in the mood. I'm not in the mood for a new holiday, however the one this year was a little bit more interesting. I went to visit some family and we spent the day at a Thanksgiving-themed restaurant. It was a fun experience, but I still prefer the traditional meals that we have in my family.

For me, Thanksgiving is a time to spend with family and friends. It's a time to reflect on the blessings that we have in our lives. I think that the key to enjoying Thanksgiving is to focus on the positive aspects of the day and to appreciate all that you have.

No matter how you celebrate Thanksgiving, I hope that you have a wonderful day filled with love and good food.
