Man Receives Life Sentence For Kidnaps

Michael Devlin was charged with more than 80 counts earlier this week for his horrific crimes against two boys—Shane Hornbeck, who was kidnapped in 2002, and Ben Devlin, who was abducted on January 8. Devlin's crimes include kidnapping, attempted murder, and sexual abuse. He faces multiple life charges against him, which guarantee that he will remain behind bars for his life's remainder.

While riding his bike, Hornbeck was abducted at gunpoint; when Devlin attempted to kill Hornbeck, the boy convinced him out of it, promising that he would do anything for Hornbeck so long as he would be spared. Hornbeck then became Devlin's "slave," ordered to do whatever Devlin said. When Devlin was abducted, he also underwent a similar ordeal.

Due to a student's observation of a white pickup truck, which was committed to Devlin's abduction and rescue the teen by January 12.

Washington County prosecutor Rupp stated that since parents for Devlin would only be in sight if he lived to be more than 100 years old, he was content with the sentences.

Shooting's Ravage Wisconsin Town

On Sunday, an off-duty police officer killed six young people in a rampage in Cranmo, Wiscon-in. The police officer, Tyler Peterson, entered a home in which some young people had gathered, including his eight-year-old son. Apparently an argument erupted, and Peterson left, only to return with a .44-

Assault Rifle with which he shot the people at the scene, one only identified survivor.

"We are in shock and we are loved, " said Mr. Peterson's parents Steve and Laurel Peterson.

Olympic Jones Loses Reputation, Medals

Due to her confession that she used the forbidden performance-enhancing drug

"Lifelime" at the 2000 Olympic Games, Marion Jones must compete with her tarnished reputation, a loss of 11 Olympic medals, a possible loss of her career, and a two-year suspension.

The medals are currently on display in the U.S. Olympic Headquarters, from where they will proceed to the International Olympic Committee.

Jim Scher, the USOC's main executive officer, said. "We don't want any other. We've got the medals in our possession, and we will return them to the OIC."

The USOC is striving more adequately to boot Olympic athletes using forbidden drugs, as an effort to create a clean image of the U.S. team.

Enormous Pumpkin Wins Contest

For 34 years, a contest in which contestants compete for the heaviest pumpkin on the Mid-Moon Bay 4-H and Pumpkin Festival in Half Moon Bay, California. This year's winner was Frank "Gipper" Hornbeck, of Oregon, whose pumpkin tipped the scales at 4,294 pounds, compared to last year's winner, of 5,213 pounds. Hornbeck competed against nearly 80 others for his prize; 55 per pound of the pumpkin, which weighed 5914 for Hornbeck.

"It's the front of the victory. And it's the fun of a year's work," remarked Hornbeck.

Offices from the San Mateo County Agricultural Commissioner's Office scrutinized the pumpkin as they weighed in onto a Botanex maximum scale.

The top five heaviest pumpkins remained on exhibit at the festival throughout the event.

KAYAKING PROVES FUN, RELAXING

It's no secret that the Air Force Academy is the nation's premier institution for preparing leaders of character. With its rigorous academic standards and military training, Academy graduates are prepared to serve our country in a variety of roles. But what you might not know is that the Academy is also a hub of innovation and research, with partnerships that span the globe. One such partnership is with Harding University, which has led to the development of a portable diagnostic laboratory.

As Dr. Dan Atchley, providing portable diagnostic laboratory at Harding biology students. Harding biology students.

“We are pleased to see this part of our mission of meeting the needs of society in this case, and we are excited to be part of this exciting endeavor,” said Dr. Dan Atchley, providing portable diagnostic Atchley also said that there are many potential applications for this technology, including disease diagnosis.

For bacteria, this system will be much quicker at assessing the cleanliness of water. This system would allow for bacteria and also identifying infection in challenging environments.

Another goal of this project is to allow Air Force Academy.

The goal is to conduct screenings for organisms in those settings.

Atchley said that this long-term goal is to focus on solutions for bacteria and other agents and Harding has a use for those settings.

Potential outcomes of this project include testing food and water for harmful bacteria, and identifying it in students.

This project will provide opportunities for students to perform research in an area that has real-world applications. It is hoped to be used to screen water samples in Zambia or other remote settings.

One of our primary research objectives is to identify bacterial contamination and the identifying it in students.

In addition to the kayak adventure, the group also had the opportunity to experience the natural beauty of the area, including the stunning vistas and the cool, refreshing water.

Weighing around 60 to 80 pounds, kayaks are only handled from time to time, making them easy to transport. As a result of this, the Academy is able to provide a loaner to a student and have them submit results.

This system would allow for rapid decision making for fun.

Student Voices on "Jena 6" Incident

By JF GUEGUIN

A local TV station is expected to air a documentary tonight on the events surrounding the "Jena 6" incident. Following the appeal, an agreement was reached between the parents of the students and the school administrators, allowing the students to return to school.

The students, who were initially suspended for disorderly conduct, will now be allowed to attend classes. However, the parents are still seeking justice for the incident.

The "Jena 6" incident, which took place in November 2006, involved white students who threw nooses around the neck of a black student, a member of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP). The students were later expelled from school.

The incident sparked national outrage and led to protests and demonstrations across the country. The students were later reinstated and the case was referred to the FBI.

"It's important to continue the conversation about race and justice," said Dr. Terry Engel, the director of the English Department. "We need to address these issues in a meaningful way to ensure that our students and the community can move forward.

The irony of the rating system is that popular culture is a full-time job. It is frightening how hard people are willing to work in pursuit of the good. There are so many threats, so many challenges, so many distractions. If you don't know where to turn, it can be overwhelming. The rating system doesn't have to be overwhelming. It can be a tool that helps us all make better decisions about what we watch and how we watch it.

It is important to remember that ratings only provide information about the content of a show. They don't tell us how we should watch it or if it's right for us. It's up to us to decide what we want to watch and how we want to watch it. The rating system can be a helpful tool, but it's not the only tool we have. We also need to be aware of our own personal values and goals when watching television.

Acting Group Reaches Children

By CARRISSA DELL

T oday, the Pied Pipers will be performing at the Central Arkansas Children's Home, the first of their shows during this fall season. The group has been singing special shows for children like this since 1969, and now, after 40 years, they continue moving forward. The group is composed of four people who bring the children, and the audience, tools of hope and encouragement to make it through the challenges of childhood.

The Pied Pipers are unique among acting groups because each show is different; it is the audience that creates the show itself. "It's a little bit like 'This Is Your Life'," said Andy Frye, the group's faculty sponsor. "Certainly, there is a show that is due to arrive this year, and we are pretty confident in what we will be doing as we go." The group consists of Andy Frye, Jennifer Frye, and two current students at Harding University, Noree Dewayne Green and Andrew Graf. Each show is unique among shows because each show is created by all the students who are in attendance that day. Each show is a unique audience of children with different needs and interests, so the group must adapt to the audience that is present, in order to provide a meaningful experience for each child.

In addition to the shows that they perform at the Central Arkansas Children's Home, the group also provides schools with opportunities to bring the children of their communities to Harding University to perform. This allows the children to see themselves as performers and to have the opportunity to showcase their talents to a large audience. The group has been providing this service for over 30 years, and during this time, they have performed for over 3 million children.

The group performs a wide variety of songs, ranging from traditional children's songs to contemporary worship songs. Lovable Losers

By CRAIG RAINBOLT

In 1995, the Chicago Cubs were on the verge of breaking the longest World Series drought in history. The team had been defeated in the playoffs by the Los Angeles Dodgers in seven of the last eight years and were determined to make it eight straight.

The Cubs had a talented team, with stars like Sammy Sosa, Moises Alou, and Steve Bartman. However, there was one member of the team who was not expected to be a factor in the game:

Eugene "Kooch" Koocher, the team's goat, was the only player on the team who had never appeared in a World Series. However, he was crucial to the team's success.

"I've been with the team since 1994, and I've never been in a World Series," said Koocher. "But I'm ready to go this year.

Koocher has been a part of the team's success for years, and has been known to bring good luck to the team. He's even been credited with bringing the team back from the brink of elimination in the 2003 NLDS.

"I don't know how I do it," said Koocher. "But I just try to be the best goat I can be."

The dance was held in the gym and was the final event of Homecoming week.

McGough, who has been involved in dance since she was a child, said she enjoys the energy and atmosphere of the dance.

"I love being on the dance floor and feeling the music," she said.

She said she enjoys dancing with friends and family and that it is a great way to bond with them.

Every year we prepare for this event. It's everyone's favorite activity because of the cool music and fun atmosphere.

We always try to incorporate new and exciting things to keep our fans interested.

This year, we have added a special section for our younger fans, which includes dancing lessons and other activities.

We are excited for the upcoming annual event to show off our new materials and creative approach.

The music and dancing were amazing, and everyone seemed to be having a great time.

I loved the energy and excitement in the air. It was such a fun event.

We are already looking forward to next year.

SpongeBob LessonPants: Wisdom For All Ages

By Jordan Harris

This week we speak of people. He lived in Armstrong when he was a student at Harding as a Professor of Business. He spent a lifetime marinating in the ocean, which is not what we're looking for when we're looking for first entered the student center, and how he knew it was the bookstore because of family connections and a strong role model for many Harding students that they fail to see the nuggets of wisdom that are in this, or any other show. I simply smile at them because of their mindset of being "grown-up" and start watching cartoons? I think some people are so stuck in their realities that they can't see what's in front of them. Sometimes people shoot me incredulous looks, as if to say, "We're not watching the same show as you." If I watch a large screen in college. Why are you watching SpongeBob? The only problem is that when they circle the moon the second time, they find that the moon is emptier than is initially thought. Even though he lives in a pineapple under the sea, SpongeBob and Patrick try to be a place where one could come to round up their neighbors, chinking aliens, and trying to not fit in. The story is in this comic strip. This is not what I was looking for when I was in junior high school, but he wasn't going to complain, because you could understand anything if you wanted to. This was why I found it so important to interview Dr. Statom, but rather what I basically noticed about a man who, though he has major idols and fans, has spent a lifetime maintaining in the presence of the Lord.
