Future Grads Prepare For Teaching Overseas

By CHLOE GORDON

In the coming year, students from various universities will be sent abroad to teach as part of a new program. This program, called the Teaching Assistant Corps, aims to provide students with the opportunity to teach English as a foreign language in Spanish-speaking countries.

Dean Gives New Life To Old Cars

Varner Restores Everything From Cars To Tractors

By ZACH WELCH

The Associate Dean of Students restored a 1941 Ford Model A to its former glory. This car was purchased in West Virginia by his grandfather and has been in the family for many years. Varner said he plans to use the car for family events and special occasions.

Administration Adjusts Policy For Off-Campus Housing

By ROBERT LARSEN

The administration recently announced a new policy for off-campus housing. This policy allows students to live off-campus for one year before being required to move back to campus. The decision was made in response to the high cost of living on campus and the need for more affordable housing options.

Abilene Christian Revises Alcohol Rules

Plans are in motion at Abilene Christian University to revise the school's longstanding policy on alcohol. According to the church's Oxyapproved university's current policy, all students, regardless of age, are prohibited from consuming alcohol on or off campus. Under the new policy, going into effect this fall, ACU students over the age of 21 will no longer be punished for what they drink on campus.

Dr. Jennifer Thompson, dean of students at ACU, started pushing for the changes after coming to the university last July. Working with the Students' Association, Thompson brought several student conduct policies before the President's Cabinet and the Board of Trustees for recommendation. "For me personally, the way in which we commit on campus alcohol is a major issue, down to the very alcohol," she said. Thompson believes the changes will encourage dialogue on the issue, allowing students to develop a Christian perspective on alcohol. Though he anticipates controversy over the changes, Thompson reiterated ACU's tough stance on alcohol abuse. The campus will remain dry, as all alcohol-sponsored activities, and students who violate the new policy will have to deal with, as Thompson said, 'tender sanctions.'

Praying Parents Charged

The parents of Madeline Neuman, an 11-year-old girl from Westby, Wis., who died of Type 1 diabetes last month, were charged Monday with second-degree recklessness in the death of their daughter. Madeline died on Easter Sunday after the lack of insulin in her body. She had been showing signs of illness for about three weeks before her death, during which time her parents, Dale and LeAnn Neuman, checked in with her doctor for Madeline's recovery rather than take her to a doctor. The Neumans face up to 25 years in prison if convicted. The mother told the Associated Press that she didn't expect her daughter, who was homeschooled in the family's rural Weston home, to die.

Congress Forced To Drive Greener

As members of Congress look to ways to make the U.S. more environmentally friendly, one recent requirement is causing quite a furor in their trucks: their new energy bill is forcing some lawmakers to give up their gas-guzzling trucks and choose vehicles with greater fuel efficiency and lower greenhouse gas emissions. The whistleblower amendment, a result of a deal reached at the top of the congressional lease-vehicles, rang up $200 million for Rep. Wally Herger's (R-Calif.) Ford Expedition, which averages 14 miles per gallon and has a 2007 amendment, which runs on cooking grease. Congresswoman Zoe Lofgren (D-Calif.) has been working to force the L.A. Times that the same lawmakers who are mandating more efficient vehicles for the public should set a better example, lest they look like "fat cats living the life of leisure." Under the new requirement, the Environmental Protection Agency would determine which vehicles representatives could lease. However, some lawmakers are saying. Some say that the public doesn't care, and that the press tabloid drive. Some lawmakers already lease environmentally friendly, but believe that their colleagues should be able to choose what they drive.

Chair-lots Of Fire

The first-ever Office Chair Racing Championship took place at Bad Kissingen, Germany last Saturday. Seven participants strapped on harnesses and brought their racing chairs from the office to the race track, a 7-meter downhill stretch of Odenwald street. Though no racers were seriously hurt, many of the chairs didn't make it to the bottom of the hill as one piece.

This is it. After three years, hundreds of battles with our old printer, multiple computer malfunctions, numerous typos, thousands of Diet Coke, a couple of annual awards, some emotional slip-ups, and a dozen 3 a.m. trips to Bobby’s, it’s finally here. The end of the year means less hours spent cooped up in my office alone with the students. It’s my last issue of the Bison. I still can’t believe it.

It’s a crazy feeling knowing this time next year, I might be writing my columns, editing my own pages, using my new office, and sitting in my desk. But regardless, of the natural feeling surrounding this issue of the Bison, the staff needs to know that from me, these were moments I will never forget.

To say I have lived every minute of my college career with public relations would be an understatement for us. The Bison has been there for me through every relationship I have built. I have not had to lead or take a position, but it has been there for me in big ways and small. To say I have loved every minute of this would be a bit of an overstatement. I have had times where I have not wanted to work, times where I have had less stress, but I am thankful for this job.

Forbes Speaks About Economy Spring ASDI Series Concludes

By SHANE O’CONNOR

Senior reporter

Several Forbes spoke at Harding University, April 25 about the area of the economy. The American economy should be powered if we do not improve our productivity, Forbes said. The CEO of Forbes magazine and a former vice president in the United States, Forbes’s goal is to provide the appropriate goals for the American government policies. The economy must be driven by innovation, Forbes stressed.

Forbes said that an increase in productivity could make the American economy grow faster. He added that America has a greater advantage in comparison to other countries. He cited that the productivity has increased faster than the population growth. He pointed out that innovation and research are key drivers of economic growth.

He also mentioned that the American economy should be driven by innovation, not by government policies. He emphasized that the private sector should be the leader in driving the economy. The government should provide the right conditions for innovation to flourish.

Forbes also highlighted the importance of education and workforce development. He stated that the United States has a strong educational system, but we need to improve the skills and knowledge of our workforce. He stressed that vocational education and training programs are essential to equip workers with the skills needed in today’s economy.

He also discussed the role of technology in driving economic growth. He stated that technology is the engine of productivity and innovation. He emphasized that the United States should be at the forefront of technological advancements.

Overall, Forbes emphasized that the American economy should be driven by innovation, not by government policies. He stressed that the private sector should be the leader in driving the economy. The government should provide the right conditions for innovation to flourish. He also highlighted the importance of education and workforce development and technology in driving economic growth.

Kirwa Being Compared To Past Harding Greats

Kirwa's versatility is one of the things that makes him such a valuable contributor in any event. He is a dual All-American in track and field, having won the 800 and 1500-meter races at the NCAA Division II championships, and he also excels in cross-country.

Kirwa's talent is widely known among his teammates and the people who have watched him train with Coach Ted Lloyd. He has a reputation for being consistent and hard-working, and he is known for his dedication to improvement.

Kirwa's talent is widely recognized, and he is widely expected to continue his success in the future. His performances have earned him comparisons to past Harding greats like Jim Crawford and Daniel Kirwa, who were both excellent in multiple events.

Kirwa's future in the sprinter category is promising, and he is expected to make a significant contribution to the Harding track and field team in the years to come.

Global Outreach Offers Students Trips Overseas

By MARIAH SHADY

Harding University presents a special trip to make educational opportunities more accessible - from traditional to creative programs, to global seminars and cultural excursions. The university aims to highlight the opportunities available to students.

The Global Outreach department makes educational opportunities during the summer month available to students who have never traveled or were not able to attend one of the traditional programs. Students can choose from a variety of options to further their education. Summer programs are offered in over 15 countries worldwide, both domestically and internationally.

Harding Hosts London International Program

By ALISON HUISMAN

Every summer, including this one, Harding University travels to the United Kingdom to provide students with an educational experience. The program is open to all students who are interested in participating.

The program is coordinated by Dr. Todd Wyatt, who will be providing oversight for the students involved. Students who participate in the program will have the opportunity to experience British culture and learn about the country's history.

Invisalign® Open House

Friday, Nov. 9, 9:00 AM - 5:00 PM

Invisalign® will be providing brand representatives to attend the open house and answer any questions about Invisalign treatment. The event will be held in the Invisalign® office from 9:00 AM to 5:00 PM.

It's A Sign Of The 'Game' Times

By TROY BURT student reporter

The world as we know it changes everyday, and Harding changes along with it. One of the changes Harding has made this past year is the allowing of online playing of video games. In past semesters, students could only play on their dorm network, with situations about the dorm or on another floor, but not outside of it. Now that Harding has opened its network, because of a lag in local widths, students can play with games all over the world. "Being able to play with people in my dorm, play with friends from back home, play with friends from back home and all over the world is much better," senior Jake Wood said.

There were a number of factors that led to this decision. Harding increased its bandwidths to a point where it would have been possible to set the games without affecting the university core process, that is to academic utilization.

However, in order to stick with Harding's mission, we could not give up all games some required known ports that are used for security purposes, said John Cronk, VP of Information Systems and Technology. "The system that goes in support of the console, having the rights to set the ports, and we are doing that in the form of the Harding network. "That is it, any game of choice. I was very happy to see the ban on the line for online playing of the Harding network," Wood said.

Students say that they were pleased with this change because they could not play on all games some required known ports that are used for security purposes, said John Cronk, VP of Information Systems and Technology. Opening ports for certain games allows for background security activity, so these ports need to remain open, which means that games that require these ports need to be open. "It's a great way to set the ban on the line for online playing of the Harding network," Cronk said.

"With this new way to set the ban on the line for online playing of the Harding network," Cronk said. "I am very happy to see the ban on the line for online playing of the Harding network," Wood said.

kowara, the head coach of the Harding University cross-country and track teams, has had many success stories with his athletes. One of his athletes this season, Daniel Kirwa, has even won a national title. Despite Kirwa's success, he still has room for improvement.

Kirwa was born and raised in Kenya. He started running at a young age, and eventually moved to the United States to attend Harding University. Kirwa has been a member of the track and cross-country teams since he arrived at Harding.

Kirwa's dedication to his sport is evident in his performance. He has broken several school records and has placed highly in numerous track meets.

"As far as his game, the one thing that enables him to excel in both distances is his range. What enables him to excel in both distances is his range," Guymon said. "He has such a unique runner for the team, as he is a world class long distance runner.

Kirwa's experience has set him apart from other runners. Although he has set school records and placed highly in numerous meets, he still has room for improvement. He is always looking to improve his times and his technique.

"We have military, so we have military, so we have military. We have military, so we have military," Kosgei said. "I think he brings much better longer range things than a normal runner.

Kosgei is a student reporter for the student newspaper. He has seen Kirby's efforts firsthand and is impressed with his dedication to the sport.

Kirwa's hard work has paid off. He has qualified for nationals in both the 10,000 and the 5,000 meters. He is looking forward to competing in these events.

Kirwa's teammates are also impressed with his dedication. "He is a very good teammate. He always encourages me, and we have had a lot of fun with him," Lloyd said.

Kirwa is looking forward to the future. He plans on continuing to improve his times and his technique. He is excited about the opportunity to compete in championships and see how he can improve his performance.

Kirwa is a true example of what can be achieved through hard work and dedication. He is a role model for his teammates and a inspiration to everyone around him. He is a true athlete who is always looking to improve and excel in his sport.
MAKING HARDING HISTORY

Howard Wright

In the wake of a growing movement for campus change, from students who wanted to make at least some changes to the curriculum, to those who simply wanted to make campus life more enjoyable, Howard Wright, the new provost of Harding, has been at the center of it all. He has been working closely with the students to make sure that their voices are heard.

"It's been a challenging time," said Wright. "But I think we're making progress. I've seen a lot of positive changes already." Wright said that he has been working with the students to make sure that their voices are heard and that they feel like they're part of the decision-making process.

"The students have been very vocal," said Wright. "They've been pushing for change and I think they're starting to see some results." Wright said that he has been working with the administration to make sure that the students' voices are heard and that they feel like they're part of the decision-making process.
