Dear brother Baxter:

How thoughtful of you to write in response to remarks I made in the Saturday afternoon panel during the Campus Advance Seminar in Gainesville. I appreciated so much your observations regarding the second law of thermodynamics. I am a layman, as you might have supposed, and have always been extremely cautious about using scientific observations which did not square with all of the facts involved in any given situation. Your enlightenment on this matter has been most helpful.

I, too, believe that we must be careful in trying to make out of Genesis or any other record of Biblical faith a scientific treatise. At the same time, we must allow the Biblical record to speak as fully as possible. Your letter will help me be more accurate, more Biblical and, therefore, more acceptable to my audiences in the future. I thank you for sharing this information with me.

Your brother,

John Allen Chalk
