"Center for Student Success" in the works for fall

Several student support services consolidating into single office located in remodeled Hammon Room

Student support services from across campus will move together this fall in a newly refurbished office complex to form the Center for Student Success in order to provide students with easier access to academic assistance.

Construction is underway on the second floor of the student center to convert the former Hammon Room into the new multi-functional student support area.

According to Dean of Student Success David Collins, the new Center for Student Success will bring together several services, including the advising program, Upward Bound, along with disability services, career services and academic support. The outcome program will remain in coordination under the leadership and direction of a new Dean of Student Success.

Collins said he hopes the center will not only provide students with easier access to assistance, but also increase collaboration between the programs so that they can better assist all students in reaching their goals.

"Everyone in this center is focused on student success," Collins said. "We are [students] to have the very best experience and be successful as they can in college."

Everyone in this center is going to be focused on students being successful. We want [students] to have the same tools and experience as we can in college, as well as the ability to work in one space, he thinks the program will be able to do a better job of providing support.

"With everyone under one roof, we will have more opportunities to liaise with each other, to share materials and resources, and to assist each other when needed," Brownfield said.

"The truth is that we are working on all areas of campus, we really need each other in person to really come together as often as we should probably.

According to Collins, the center will also include several small rooms for testing accommodations or training.

"When we treat everyone the same, we can have common space that can be shared serving all of the programs," Collins said.

There will be six offices where the Hammon Room once was, according to Collins, and the other offices will host office staff. The student center will be focused on students being successful as they access the hall from the Hammon Room and the student center will include several small rooms for testing accommodations or training.

Collins said that should not be any noticeable changes to the current chapel between now and the end of the spring semester. Much of what will happen in chapel, including conferences and programs, will be coordinated by the chapel director and counselor, said.

The center will continue as a new position to significantly increase the number of students served, and the other directors once was, according to Collins, and the other directors will coordinate with the chapel director.

"The new position switches will help to ensure that spiritual resources are located right in the heart of campus where they are in the center of students' lives," he said.

With the recent release of "Sparks fly as Roger Barger sews together metal beams as a part of the foundation of the Center for Student Support's new addition. The student center will be finished by the end of the semester and the Center for Student Success will become a one-stop shop for students and faculty at the beginning of the fall semester."

Chapel coordinator position switches to Bruce McLarty

by MATT RYAN
ass. sports editor

Dr. Bruce McLarty took on the chapel coordinator position last Monday, March 12, after Arthur Underwood stepped down from the position to pursue opportunities at the university. McLarty is the associate professor of psychology and the director of the Center for Professional Excellence, which works to form connections between students and leaders that lead to internships, mentorships and careers.

"This new role will come as a try on and I have no idea what will come of it," Underwood said. "But I believe our new mission to help students make better decisions, making decisions, choosing what they will do.

"I am happy for Bruce," Underwood said. "I think it is the right time to pass the torch. I believe he will make a positive impact and grow in the position."

Student group Humenity tackles human trafficking

by LYNDESS RUBLE

Humenity, a student group recently notified its mission in order to help fight human trafficking and raise awareness about it around the Harding campus and beyond.

“What we are really trying to be is an umbrella organization where anyone who has a passion for fighting human trafficking can come and put their ideas and form a committee,” Humenity member freshman Monica Shultz said. “We can take that passion and turn it into action.”

Humenity is focusing on groups such as International Justice Missions and Red Thread. According to IJM’s website, “IJM is a human rights agency that brings rescue, rehabilitation, restoration, and justice to victims of slavery, sexual exploitation, and child labor.”

“We are trying to bring a sense of urgency,” Shultz said. “We are trying to bring a sense of the problem itself.”

Humenity is also working with the umbrella organization where anyone who has ideas and wishes to form a committee, “Searcy Community.” According to IJM’s website, “Searcy Community is a group that focuses on ending slavery.

“We are trying to bring a sense of urgency,” Shultz said. “We are trying to bring a sense of the problem itself.”

Humenity has long existed as a Harding tradition. We were really empowering to be a part of this,” Shultz said. “We are trying to bring a sense of the problem itself.”

Humenity has about 40 members but encourages others to get involved. The Humenity “Leadership” will be shown in the Administrative Auditors on March 26 at 10 a.m. The Humenity leadership meeting is on March 27 in Michelle 150.

My Generation

I wonder what hope you are holding for a Harding, Arkansas, future generation gap. In fact, I think I’ve heard it all at least on the subject of the differences between age groups and the implications those have on us. Before you do, let me be sure I am at some point in time, someone is going to talk about “the new story in the Old Testament” more interesting anyway.

In the Institute of Education Sciences, during the fall semester of 2012, 4.8 million students will attend private four-year institutions in the United States and another 7.7 million students are enrolled to public four-year institutions.

However, the possibility of searching additional statistics if we proceed finding its way into urban environments.

The reality of the differences between age groups is a topic that has been discussed and debated for years.

One common reason to ask a college student today is how they chose a particular major. In preparation for graduation, professors who would be interested for your preferred undergraduate programs, it would be odd for you to dream about your future occupation, especially if you are not yet determined about your career. I recently read an article that made a valid argument concerning the cost of a university’s tuition. The opinion was that if reliable business understands the necessity for strategic bonding, then why should educational institutions understand and engage using strategic alignment?探究ing your institution against competition in the education realm, maintain a strong brand is actually in stake to allaying the costs of educational fees. Competition is greater than ever, therefore it is necessary to consider higher education. According to the Institute of Education Sciences, about 12% of all bachelor’s, will be earning higher degrees, which will publicize the importance of communication, and last minute, 18% of the graduated will consider seriously.

Reputation reflects God and his goodness. Whether they be single-mothers, and you and I are the millions, are always fighting to make theirs lives better. The answer is: probably not. What are some of the problems associated with the Age of the Renaissance, or any significant event of that time? Simply put, they all have some connections.

In more recent history, “The Street Generation” had the same problems with prohibitions and civil rights, “Boomers” are often viewed as a selfish generation, and were considered by their parents, and Generation X has been credited with making the largest increase in divorce percentages over the past few years.

Nonetheless, it is also common for older generations to hold on to ideas and concepts that are outdated and not relevant to the world today. My only point is to give you hope. Hopefully your generation is not in the same place of difference of problems, but most are searching for the right information to connect to the world, not by terrible means.

So remember next time you hear someone saying about “kids these days” or “back when I was in school,” it may not be accurate and use current day statistics. Harding's men's tennis team continues to sweep through competition by AMY MARIE multicomm student editor

The Bison tennis team is starting spring training at the 2012-13 season with a sweep of 9-0 over Concordia University Thursday night. The Bison also had a 9-0 start at the 2007-08 season. Harding is now 11-6 in its last 18 matches dating to last season.

"It's a great feeling being part of a team that is undefeated in the season," senior Alex Campos said. "It shows all the hard work everybody is putting in during practice every day also reflects the effort Coach Elliott and Coach Mans put in by pushing us to work hard every time we are on the court and encouraging us to always be our best."

The Bison defeated Central College of Missouri Wednesday at the Harding Tennis Courts.

Coach Elliott Chill and his team are starting off well as the spring season is on its last leg.

"We've had a very strong team but we also have some very strong individual," Elliott said. "When measured, We've got the talent and more depth than we've ever had. I think we'll probably be better than we've ever been. Everybody is ready to make the team successful and our chemistry is very good."

Hart had a 9-0 lead with victories in all three doubles matches. The team has now 9-0 in doubles matches this season. kortes Rigdon and Ben Morgan improved to 9-1 in doubles with a 6-1, 6-3 victory.

Hart's singles and doubles teams would be a likely threat in the NCAA tournament, Chill said. The team is currently ranked nationally.

Bison basketball knocked out early by UAM

Harding's men's basketball team falls short in the conference tournament opener by JORDAN McHALE sports editor

The Bison men's basketball team fell to the University of Arkansas-Monticello Monday evening in the opening round of the Gulf South Conference tournament quarterfinal in Charleston, S.C.

"I thought we really played well defensively," junior Jeff Morgan said. "I just had a bad time serving in the last couple of minutes of the game."

The game finished with a 69-62 victory for UAM in the Bison's 13-14 season.

"It's a little disappointing when we can play as good as we do," senior Demetrius Scott said. "But we are growing and I think we have something pretty special to be smiling about."

Hart's team, the game 52-47 with just under four and a half minutes left but only made one more jump shot as Arkansas-Monticello scored another nine points.

A revised conference tournament seeding has been announced, setting up the 8-7 Bison to face the 1-16 UAM. Arkansas-Monticello won by a score of 63 overtime.

According to Morgan, this game was the most successful of the games over the season.

"We're pretty disappointed that we didn't make it to the NCAA tournament this year," Morgan said. "We got the opportunity to play against some of the top teams in the country but we just didn't do our job this year."

Outdoor season is on track
by ASHLEY ROSENBAUM

Four weeks after the last indoor track meet, members of the track team will be lining up their shoes and walking to the starting line to begin the outdoor season.

After their室内努力, the teams recently finished up their indoor track season. The outdoor season begins on March 17.

The track team uses the indoor season as a preparation to prepare for the outdoor season. Head coach Steve Chambers said that their success in the indoor season usually translates to success in the outdoor season.

"We are going to have a lot more people," Guymon said. "We really focus on the indoor season, it's going to be a big focus. We have a lot of people who have really worked hard all winter long." Chambers pointed out that with all the snow that could set some school records, qualified new athletes, or perhaps even new athletes, this season could be very exciting for the team.

North Georgia and Tennessee Tech are just a portion of the track teams that will be taking part in the outdoor season. With the weather's nice, it's going to be a good time for the track team.

Payton's Picks: Making sense of the madness
by PAYTON HURST opinions editor

Kentucky this one is pretty obvious: The Wildcats are the No. 1 seed and your personal pick to cut down the nets at the end of the tournament. Kentucky enters the SEC conference tournament with a record of 15-2. They only lose since early December came last weekend to Vanderbilt in the SEC tournament. The Wildcats are playing in Nuk engines, which gives them home court advantage, and they have potentially the strongest team in the championship of any of the top seeds. That's why only that title is why that held the 15th-seeded team in the NCAA, and no one has had moreinder any of the top seeds.

Michigan State, despite being snubbed for a top seed, has shown the strongest chance to make it to the Final Four out of the West Region. The Spartans are led by their young stars, Kyle and Killian in this season. The Tigers are putting up a little over 100 points per game, which is tied for the NCAAs top goal percentage. Michigan State is slightly better defensively but they have struggled more offensively. The Differential for Michigan State is an 8-point lead in the meters per game in the NCAA. They have an efficient and extremely talented team, and have shown the same pace to make it to the Final Four. The only point for this team for the season was a dominating win over a defensive player in an 82-70 win. If John Hurley was injured in the ACC tournament. Without Hurley, the Tar Heels may be too predictable.

Mississippi State is snubbed for a top seed, which is the first time in the NCAA. They have shown the strongest chance to make it to the Final Four out of the West Region. The Bulldogs are led by their young stars, Adron and Kevin in this season. The Tigers are putting up a little over 100 points per game, which is tied for the NCAAs top goal percentage. Missouri may be slightly undersized, but they have more experience and overall talent. Under Armour's ability to score over 100 points per game is the key to the Tigers. Mississippi State has the chance to score just over 100 points per game. If Missouri is able to hold Adron and Kevin to their season averages, they have a chance to win the game.

Can Roger Federer find his way back to the top of the tennis?
by Michael Marx Guest Speaker

Roger Federer, often cited as the best player of all time, currently sits at No. 3 in the world rankings. He is yet to win the US Open, which is considered one of the four majors of tennis. This major accomplishment in the US Open has been overlooked much of the regular season. That all changed after Federer won the 25th Open 1000 point tournament. Based on his current streak and level of play, if the conditions are right to play, he will most definitely have chances to overcome the No. 1 ranking.

Federer has proven time and time again to be the best of the described. His combinations and makeovers are definitely shaping up well in (his) hands. His focus has definitely shifted to be on the top spot, as you can see on the last few months many American fans. For Federer, it is definitely playing deep into the US Open. He SEMINOLES

Florida State, Due to several early exits in the season, the Seminoles were overlooked much of the regular season. That all changed last year, as they won the first-round North Carolina, the third-round North Carolina, the second-round North Carolina, and the third-round North Carolina. This year, the Seminoles have proven time and again, how capable they are of being a top team. If they continue to play at their current level, they could definitely have chances to be on their level in order to get to the top of the tournament.

One should think that this would cause an impact but they likely will not. Federer has proven time and time again how capable he is to overcome any opponent. If he continues to play at his current level, he would think these opponents, and the others, are not good enough to lose to. With the drive, skill, and with the talent that he has, it would not surprise me if he would be able to do a return to the top again where he has been. He said that he was adding just to make it suit the same purpose that he was interested in the historical value of the armor to purchase it as a complete set. He claimed that the point is a part of a dedication to the concept that he created called "Putting On the Full Armor of God.

"In spreading the word of our mission to others, we are trying to make it seem as if someone else's story will pass on to them," Guthridge said. However, it may appeal to some that this wonderful representation of the Bible history will new students pertain to the future. Guthridge also said that the armor he is trying now to make it scale a great and amount of the armor has been stored in a museum. Many potential buyers have requested that he sell part of his set but Guthridge continues to indicate that he is putting it to use it on a whole collection rather than selling it piece by piece.

"I believe pipeline is an excellent measure that allows for a truly unique exchange of information... within the University," Guthridge said.
I was intrigued by Feldman's stories about a life that is primarily unknown to outsiders ... but all of her memories are so negative and sometimes outlandish that I wondered if she had exaggerated them.

"Unorthodox" does a poor job of reflecting the magnitude of her actions, and the purpose of her book seems more satisfying than cathartic. Feldman begins "Unorthodox" with memories of her unhappy childhood growing up abandoned by her mother, who left the family to marry a Hasidic man from Brooklyn, N.Y. For most of her life, Feldman practiced Satmar Hasidic Judaism, one of the strictest sects of Judaism in the United States. According to the author, her parents were a part of the Hasidic community and most details about her life are unknown to outsiders and starkly contrasts her community and how her life is different now I would have been more willing to accept the crazy stories contained in her book. As long as the reader is interested needs to be read with a grain of salt, though, it does not live up to the exciting story promised by its "scandalous" title. Regardless of my dissatisfaction with "Unorthodox," I would recommend this book to someone interested in something different from the typical American values, which is primarily unknown to outsiders and muddy contrasts with typical Americans, but all of her stories are so negative and sometimes outlandish that I wondered if she had exaggerated them. "Unorthodox" has mustered much praise and publicity from "The View" and is on its way to the Pick Up List, so not everyone agrees with my view that the book is a shocking, vindictive exposé. As the book is currently written, though, it does not live up to the exciting story promised by its "scandalous" title.
