The Arkansas Legislative is working hard and coutously regarding funding of Arkansas Medicaid private option plan. According to the New York Times, the plan allows federal funds granted to the state through the Affordable Care Act's Medicaid expansion to be used to buy private health care insurance for Arkansas residents living under or close to the poverty level. The expansion passed last year in the House and 28-7 in the Senate, with the 75 percent required percent for allocation of funds under the Arkansas Constitution. However, extending the plan past this year requires a new vote, and with such a high requirement, every legislator who changes his or her stance on the issue opposes a senator’s threat to the funds granting, according to Arkansas Gov. Mike Beebe, a Democrat. "We've pointed out we have a Republican legislature, but that’s he’s at the front of our concerns," Beebe said in a question-and-answer session with Kaiser Health News. "It’s the 75 percent (applicable) requirement under our constitution for appropriating any money, not just health care. It’s a huge deal. Getting 75 percent is not a small thing. It’s difficult, and to get 75 percent of those letters in either house is a monumental task. That’s more significant and consequently more than a threat going forward for partisan Republican—Democratic philosophies because it was passed with a majority of Democrats and Republicans. Since the expansion passed last year, 83,000 Arkansans have signed up for the private option, 53 percent of whom are under 40 years old, according to the Arkansas Department of Human Services. If the plan is not extended, it could mean all of these residents without access to health insurance as it is today, according to Beebe. Governor Beebe said one of the reasons people opt out is because health insurance is not a premium tax on all health insurance policies, which will allow medical providers to increase their costs without a further tax increase, according to him. ‘Private option’ on verge of breakdown

"People who work on minimum wage jobs really are working hard and playing by the rules, but they are living in poverty," Copley, who is also a United Methodist pastor, said. "For me, as a person of faith, the God that I so in Scripture has a great concern for those who are poor and a concern that they do not remain poor." Senior Mary Kate Collins, chair of the College Republicans, said an increase in the minimum wage would do more harm than good. "It’s too much, too fast." However, Pryor said he would support the ballot initiative in Arkansas. According to a report from Arkansas Advocates for Children and Families, 15 percent of the Arkansas workforce would benefit from increasing the wage. The report also stated that 85 percent of minimum wage workers are age 20 and older, a majority are full-time workers and 85 percent work more than 20 hours per week. The ballot initiative from Arkansas Advocates for Children and Families, which would leave the federal government to bear the increased cost without a further tax increase, would create an $85 million budget hole and devastate hospitals that are counting on our new federal funds.

Retired police lieutenant analyzes recent felonies

by Alecia Holtsclaw

Since the start of 2014, there have been several felonies in Searcy and the surrounding area. On Feb. 3, an armed robbery occurred at First Community Bank, on Jan. 24 a shooting and robbery took place in the J.C. Penney parking lot and on Jan. 13 a grand larceny was stolen and her grandson later arrested for the murder. Arrests have also been made regarding both the bank robbery and the J.C. Penney shooting.

Retired Searcy police officer Roger Pearson believes crime activity can be attributed mainly to the economy. "There’s not really different about the dynamic in Searcy (in the last few years) except for the economy," Pearson said. "When you have a bad economy you have an increasing number of people stealing and people without insurance. Pearson worked for the Searcy police for 15 years. "There are several factors that I attribute the current number of arrests," he said. "First Community Bank, on Jan. 24 a theft happened and on Jan. 22 a shooting and robbery happened in the J.C. Penney parking lot and on Jan. 13 a grand larceny was stolen and her grandson later arrested for the murder. Arrests have also been made regarding both the bank robbery and the J.C. Penney shooting."

"Harding" for Center for Advanced Training Minister program and volunteers as a chaplain for the police department. According to www neighbordscout.com, Searcy has a crime index of 15 out of 100, with 100 being the safest. This means that Searcy is only safer than 15 percent of cities in the U.S. At points of comparison, the crime index is 8 for Chicago, 22 for New York and 1 for Little Rock. Pearson noted that the Searcy police department has limited capabilities, due to part to financial limits, however, he does not see this as a reason to be worried. Pearson also credited the overwhelminly Christian population in Searcy for the safety of the city.

"I can’t say this statistically, but I can relate to you my relationship with officers in other parts of the state: Harding is probably the best anyone can ever write," Pearson said. "Harding is very, very good, and I have been taking care of their community of their students." Searcy Police Department was unavailable for comment.

Bible conference to focus on individuality

Next Friday and Saturday, Feb. 21-22, Harding will host the annual Women’s God’s Service Conference. The WINGS Conference theme this year is “Blessing the Good China” because it is the 10th anniversary of the event.

The keynote speakers for the weekend are Elaine DeWit on Friday evening and Tiffany Bledsoe on Saturday morning.

Associate professor Ann Warebrook and Tori Rine oversee the plans for the conference. They chose the theme, booked the guest speakers and selected the panel of speakers from Harding’s campus.

“We wanted it to be a celebration of the conference and a reafﬁrmation of our relationship with God,” Rine said.

Westbrook said the ladies came up with china as a common Christmas gift and because they discovered there are many spiritual parallels.

“Each person’s china pattern is different — the way God interacts with each person, with each person’s way of living develops spiritually is different,” Westbrook said. “China is also very strong and has a lot of endurance. It has to go through a really tough process.”

The ladies also these ideas about china patterns represented the types of There are ways to take badges and losses in our lives and make those turn around and become different things.

personalities found in the church. “I think God designed us with all kinds of talents and skills,” Rine said. “I hope all the people who attend will recognize that God created each one of us in an individual, just like someone who crafts ﬁne china or a potter who molds clay. He does it one at a time, and such a one is beautiful in its own right but also beautiful in a set. We come together and we complement each other.”

Westbrook said community members will take a step further by repurposing broken china into food for school children. The relics will be on sale at the conference, and the proceeds will go toward a women’s center.

Broken china can still be used, they said, to take hardships and losses in our lives and make those turn around and become different things,” Westbrook said.

About 250-300 visitors attended the WINGS conference from all over Arkansas and from out of state this year.

The ladies are also accepting entries for an ugly plate contest. Pictures must be posted to the WINGS Facebook page, and the winner will be announced at the closing session, March 22. An individual or group will be chosen at random from a student ID. Rine said half of the cost of the event will be included the food and a small gift for the speakers.

The Marriage and Family Therapy Program and Counseling Center also assist with some of the cost.

“We try to keep the cost as low as possible,” Rine said.

Westbrook said the goal of the conference is for women to learn and benefit from the event because they heard what they over the weekend.

“The ultimate goal is for women to feel like they’ve had a chance to reﬂect and maybe grow a little bit, be able to go back home and be able to do more and work on their spiritual lives,” Westbrook said. “It’s like one of these meaningful experiences.”

Rine also said that women who attend will be blessed by the conference.

“I pray that people come with open hearts and open minds, to be ready to have fun and fellowship with sisters at all ages and stages of life,” Rine said. “I pray that this is the direction God wants us to take this conference and that we have his blessing. We want it to be in praise and honor and glory to God.”

Utilize Your Rose-colored Glasses

One of the most difficult things about creativity for me has been learning to be optimistic. And not just the kind of optimism that sees a glass as half full, but the kind of optimistic that looks at a problem, stops complaining and finds a way to fix it. I think we could all use a little help on the mindset shift.

Being a practicing capitalist of the millennial generation, I found myself being a cynic about almost everything. While it’s OK to be proud of the occasional sarcastic, witty, sassy, little put-down in which you are constantly asserting the worst of people, society and humanity (which you have and those around you) in a constant state of sadness and disappointment. You are constantly scrutinizing and dwelling on the problems instead of focusing your energy on the solution.

However, a side effect of cynicism not often discussed is the effect it has on creativity and innovation. The core of both creativity and innovation is identifying a problem and then imagining a solution.

This is the most important thing I could ever hope for you to learn from this book. So if you feel that any of it or all of it is unreasonable, then realize that you always have the power to change it (at least change your perspective).

One of the “secrets” of creativity is usually just sitting down, thinking through and reimagining the possibilities. Along with optimistic problem solving, discounting the cynical attitude will also help you realize the importance of other people in your creative process. Just think about where creative ideas often grow. They may begin as a singular thought in the shower, but they fully come to life when you are out in the world, talking with friends,whelming and boldly dreaming of plans and hopes for your ideas. To do so requires a certain amount of humility and optimism about possibilities and your own abilities.

Lastly, and closely related to the topic: I’ve dedicated an entire chapter to people, the kind that are often the heroes of other human beings. Maybe it is means stopping yourself and realizing you have the power to change your perspective on those issues and, in the process, make yourself a better person.

I went to Florence in the fall of 2013. I am a sophomore and have been looking forward to this trip since I was very young. Ever since I had decided on Harding, I wanted to go to Florence. Italy has always held a fascination for me. It is a world of excellent food, amazing art and beautifully preserved history. I was very excited, and the trip was more perfect than I could have imagined. I lived in an Italian villa, walking walls in the city of Florence and simply experiencing the Tuscan countryside was easily the highlight of my short life thus far.

A funny thing happened to me in Wal-Mart last week. I was standing behind a woman at the checkout when I realized I had forgotten to get a new bag of Werther’s Original hard candy. Yes, I know that is the same brand that Werther’s Original had candy. Yes, I know that your favorite. I was convinced I was Elmo’s goofy sidekick Mr. Noodle. Sometime after that woman thought I was.

Snowchi, I'll pass

If you have not tuned in to the Olympics, then shame on you! But there are people out there who have talked about the possibility of the United States doing well in the 2014 Winter Olympics. Speaking of doing well, Sochi's weather has been a problem, but I am pretty sure the main reason Sochi was chosen to host the Winter Olympics was due to the conditions of the winter climate. Not exactly ideal for the indoor facilities, but it is been a blessing to be able to work in the indoor facility.

Coach assistant Kenzi Garcia said he thought the transformation would come in the weight room. The team worked out in the indoor facility due to the conditions of the outdoor pipe. If you were watching, you probably heard the commentators talking about how the condition of the pipe was shabby. They would struggle to even put the guys through a lot with our weight training program due to the conditions of the winter climate. Garcia said, "It brings you together as a team and it makes you tougher, and we just want our guys to come out and compete extremely hard while representing the university in a positive way." After two series were canceled, substitute junior Shane Kinnear said the pitching and defense held up well in the first two games, considering the inability to practice outside. The team worked hard before the field, which unfortunately had no snow Saturday prior to the Lyon series starting.

"Our defense looked as good as it could be for not being able to field a ground ball on an actual field," Kinnear said. "Our pitching looked great. The guys out there did a good job and gave us a great chance to win the games."

Garcia said the team's depth would be an asset throughout the remainder of the season, after utilizing pinch runners to help score in game two. "We were able to put in a pinch runner and score because we had enough that feeling," Bass Adams could have come in the game late and play well," Garcia said. "Having guys come off the bench and play well will be a strength for us throughout the season."

Throughout a professional lifetime, a person might change jobs or move to different cities, feeling uncertain about what exactly they want to do with their life. This was not the case for Rodger Gilliam, who has known what he wants to do since his first day on the job at Harding Press on Sept. 6, 1968. He has worked for 46 years and is currently their shop foreman.

Gilliam has lived in Searcy his entire life. When he was 15 years old, his father moved to Searcy, Arkansas, and his father would allow him to get one. After his father agreed, Gilliam used his new tire life. When he was 15 years old, he likes to do since his first day on the job.

Rodger Gilliam has worked with their Addressograph, an address labeling system. During the past few decades with expansive new growth and booming economic, "the old days" are not quite gone yet. There are still several places that have stayed with the past. Joe's East End Barber Shop, with its original 1958 furniture and its own, Joe Cunningham, would give free haircuts to children that could not afford them.

I like everything about it. I enjoy it...you feel like something making something from nothing... Rodger Gilliam, shop foreman

Gilliam has lived in Searcy his entire life. When he was 15 years old, his father moved to Searcy, Arkansas, and his father would allow him to get one. After his father agreed, Gilliam used his new tire life. When he was 15 years old, he likes to do since his first day on the job.

Rodger Gilliam has worked with their Addressograph, an address labeling system. During the past few decades with expansive new growth and booming economic, "the old days" are not quite gone yet. There are still several places that have stayed with the past. Joe's East End Barber Shop, with its original 1958 furniture and its own, Joe Cunningham, would give free haircuts to children that could not afford them.

Throughout a professional lifetime, a person might change jobs or move to different cities, feeling uncertain about what exactly they want to do with their life. This was not the case for Rodger Gilliam, who has known what he wants to do since his first day on the job at Harding Press on Sept. 6, 1968. He has worked for 46 years and is currently their shop foreman.

Date style: casual for Valentine's

Today is the day we have been talking about for weeks. We have been trying to decide whether or not to send flowers to our crush, but which brand of chocolate is the best, where to go on our date and, most importantly, what to wear on that special day. This is where I come in.

Because this is my first fashion column, I feel the need to give you a quick disclaimer. I am not the boss. I cannot tell you exactly what to wear or how to wear it. However, I can give you my opinions on what I like, love and hate. On vaccinations, men should wear an outfit that is not only comfortable but also suitable for the occasion. For the first time in history, it appeared as if the athletes being represented in the games. For the first time in history, it seemed as if the athletes being represented in the games.

For the first year of the Sochi Winter Olympics, the opening ceremony included more money in the past. Russia put their best foot forward in the winter Olympics since the last. Nowadays, the athletes are being represented in the games. For the first time in history, it seemed as if the athletes being represented in the games.

Don't let the stress of whether or not your date will like your outfit, the music, or the movie get you down. While Russia put their best foot forward in the winter Olympics since the last, nowadays, the athletes are being represented in the games. For the first time in history, it seemed as if the athletes being represented in the games.
