ARKANSAS HEALTHCARE SERIES, PART TWO

Initial private option vote falls short

by Bradley Cain
beat reporter

Arkansas legislators returned to the state Capitol Tuesday to vote on an appropriation bill to continue the state's private option for a second year. The private option is an expansion of the Arkansas Medicaid program that uses Medicaid funds to buy private health care for low-income Arkansas residents.

The Arkansas House of Representatives voted 70-27 with one present, five votes of the 75-vote supermajority needed to continue the private option. The bill is expected to eventually pass in the House as members vote in the next few days, according to the Arkansas Times.

"We'll vote tomorrow," House Speaker Davy Carter said to reporters Tuesday "The Senate is scheduled to vote tomorrow anyway, but that's not an issue with me. We're going to vote tomorrow regardless."

Carter told reporters he is "100 percent confident" the private option will get the 75 votes necessary to pass.

"The reality is that there are 70 people out there, every day, that support this legislation," Carter said. "It is the law that's on the books."

The majority of members aren't going to just roll over and watch this appropriation get defeated. All reasonable efforts by both parties have been made to come up with a compromise."

The majority of members aren't going to just roll over and watch this appropriation get defeated. All reasonable efforts by both parties have been made to come up with a compromise.

"The majority of members aren't going to just roll over and watch this appropriation get defeated. All reasonable efforts by both parties have been made to come up with a compromise."

"The majority of members aren't going to just roll over and watch this appropriation get defeated. All reasonable efforts by both parties have been made to come up with a compromise."

"The majority of members aren't going to just roll over and watch this appropriation get defeated. All reasonable efforts by both parties have been made to come up with a compromise."

"The majority of members aren't going to just roll over and watch this appropriation get defeated. All reasonable efforts by both parties have been made to come up with a compromise."

"The majority of members aren't going to just roll over and watch this appropriation get defeated. All reasonable efforts by both parties have been made to come up with a compromise."

"The majority of members aren't going to just roll over and watch this appropriation get defeated. All reasonable efforts by both parties have been made to come up with a compromise."

"The majority of members aren't going to just roll over and watch this appropriation get defeated. All reasonable efforts by both parties have been made to come up with a compromise."

"The majority of members aren't going to just roll over and watch this appropriation get defeated. All reasonable efforts by both parties have been made to come up with a compromise."

"The majority of members aren't going to just roll over and watch this appropriation get defeated. All reasonable efforts by both parties have been made to come up with a compromise."

"The majority of members aren't going to just roll over and watch this appropriation get defeated. All reasonable efforts by both parties have been made to come up with a compromise."

"The majority of members aren't going to just roll over and watch this appropriation get defeated. All reasonable efforts by both parties have been made to come up with a compromise."

"The majority of members aren't going to just roll over and watch this appropriation get defeated. All reasonable efforts by both parties have been made to come up with a compromise."

"The majority of members aren't going to just roll over and watch this appropriation get defeated. All reasonable efforts by both parties have been made to come up with a compromise."

"The majority of members aren't going to just roll over and watch this appropriation get defeated. All reasonable efforts by both parties have been made to come up with a compromise."

"The majority of members aren't going to just roll over and watch this appropriation get defeated. All reasonable efforts by both parties have been made to come up with a compromise."

"The majority of members aren't going to just roll over and watch this appropriation get defeated. All reasonable efforts by both parties have been made to come up with a compromise."

"The majority of members aren't going to just roll over and watch this appropriation get defeated. All reasonable efforts by both parties have been made to come up with a compromise."

"The majority of members aren't going to just roll over and watch this appropriation get defeated. All reasonable efforts by both parties have been made to come up with a compromise."

"The majority of members aren't going to just roll over and watch this appropriation get defeated. All reasonable efforts by both parties have been made to come up with a compromise."

"The majority of members aren't going to just roll over and watch this appropriation get defeated. All reasonable efforts by both parties have been made to come up with a compromise."

"The majority of members aren't going to just roll over and watch this appropriation get defeated. All reasonable efforts by both parties have been made to come up with a compromise."

"The majority of members aren't going to just roll over and watch this appropriation get defeated. All reasonable efforts by both parties have been made to come up with a compromise."

"The majority of members aren't going to just roll over and watch this appropriation get defeated. All reasonable efforts by both parties have been made to come up with a compromise."

"The majority of members aren't going to just roll over and watch this appropriation get defeated. All reasonable efforts by both parties have been made to come up with a compromise."

"The majority of members aren't going to just roll over and watch this appropriation get defeated. All reasonable efforts by both parties have been made to come up with a compromise."

"The majority of members aren't going to just roll over and watch this appropriation get defeated. All reasonable efforts by both parties have been made to come up with a compromise."

"The majority of members aren't going to just roll over and watch this appropriation get defeated. All reasonable efforts by both parties have been made to come up with a compromise."

"The majority of members aren't going to just roll over and watch this appropriation get defeated. All reasonable efforts by both parties have been made to come up with a compromise."

"The majority of members aren't going to just roll over and watch this appropriation get defeated. All reasonable efforts by both parties have been made to come up with a compromise."

"The majority of members aren't going to just roll over and watch this appropriation get defeated. All reasonable efforts by both parties have been made to come up with a compromise."

"The majority of members aren't going to just roll over and watch this appropriations
'Blackfish' sparks controversy, questions

Tabor Hammond student writer

Seaworld had controversy after the critically acclaimed documentary, “Blackfish” hit the screen. Many people enjoy the sights and sounds at Seaworld; however, “Blackfish” aims to show why these orcas are suffering

Sawyer said people need to know what happens behind the scenes. “Blackfish” aims to show what happens behind the scenes. "It’s not completely wrong to house these animals," said junior Sawyer, biology major, and aspiring marine biologist. "They may have killed people, but it also shows that they sign up for that when they take the job. They know there is a chance that they could lose their life. A killer whale can grow to 30 feet and weigh up to 11,000 pounds. I do believe they should be housed because something that is significantly larger than they are in nature, in a wild they could swim 50 miles a day.”

Seaworld has received massive amounts of feedback since the screening of the heavy documentary. According to www.mysuarinsfacts.com, musical artists such as Tracy Adams, Heart and Joan Jet have canceled performances in support of the film. Sawyer said Seaworld is simply trying to promote itself for the sake of itself. According to Seaworld's website, “Blackfish' comments are so emotional and emotionally manipulative statements concerning the collection and separation of killer whales. "Through strong footage and video mismatched to the narrative, the film implies that Seaworld collects killer whales from the wild and separates mothers and cubs.

Sawyer said CAB is trying to give out this show to CAB workers who would like to put on an open mic night every Tuesday night at 9:30 p.m. in the community room next to Starbucks. All students are welcome to sign up to be a part of this event throughout the year or just a part of the open mic night.

I love open mic night and it is a great venue for people to start performing or just show off their talents. I love open mic night because it gives people the opportunity to put themselves out there without a huge frightening crowd. - senior Laura Sawyer

"'Blackfish' is a huge application for smartphones that messages to see more killer whale and orca information and its false theories. This is an opportunity to put the public up with the truth and help them learn," said Sawyer. “It gives me a chance to live out my passion for marine biology,” Sawyer said. “I want people to be more aware and help preserve these animals.”

Lauren Adkins, Heart and Joan Jet have burned their name on Seaworld and have canceled performances in support of the film. Sawyer said the film is not completely wrong to house these animals, but it also shows that they sign up for that when they take the job. They know there is a chance that they could lose their life. A killer whale can grow to 30 feet and weigh up to 11,000 pounds. I do believe they should be housed because something that is significantly larger than they are in nature, in a wild they could swim 50 miles a day.”

Seaworld has received massive amounts of feedback since the screening of the heavy documentary. According to www.mysuarinsfacts.com, musical artists such as Tracy Adams, Heart and Joan Jet have canceled performances in support of the film. Sawyer said Seaworld is simply trying to promote itself for the sake of itself. According to Seaworld's website, “Blackfish' comments are so emotional and emotionally manipulative statements concerning the collection and separation of killer whales. "Through strong footage and video mismatched to the narrative, the film implies that Seaworld collects killer whales from the wild and separates mothers and cubs.

I love open mic night and it is a great venue for people to start performing or just show off their talents. I love open mic night because it gives people the opportunity to put themselves out there without a huge frightening crowd.

App encourages healthy lifestyle

By Field Bellow student writer

Extra Mile is a fitness application for smartphones that messages to see more killer whale and orca information and its false theories. This is an opportunity to put the public up with the truth and help them learn, Sawyer said. “I want people to be more aware and help preserve these animals.”

Last week, Sawyer said that open mic night was a great reason to go to Seaworld and that it was a good moment for the audience to be a part of. According to Sawyer, she loves seeing people come together and struggle with their own personal problems.

“If you don’t like open mic night and it is a great venue for people to start performing or just show off their talents. I love open mic night because it gives people the opportunity to put themselves out there without a huge frightening crowd. — senior Laura Sawyer

"The controversy of whether Blackfish' is fact or fiction continues. Sawyer said that open mic night was a great reason to go to Seaworld and that it was a good moment for the audience to be a part of. According to Sawyer, she loves seeing people come together and struggle with their own personal problems.

“If you don’t like open mic night and it is a great venue for people to start performing or just show off their talents. I love open mic night because it gives people the opportunity to put themselves out there without a huge frightening crowd. — senior Laura Sawyer
Roommate Etiquette

collie philips
guest writer

Keep Your Stress in Check
collie philips
guest writer

I was raised by a television

Remember What Matters

T here have been a lot of feelings about TV shows. I got so involved in the characters' lives that I didn't realize that it's not real: they don't exist and the conflict that is created and subsequently resolved in approximately 22 minutes per commercial is fictional. I'm not sure when you would call that a problem. Clinical obsession, probably. I can go so deep into the TV world that I talk to people on the screen in front of me that I find myself neglecting the people who are actually around me.

I probably never even have roommates. When I'm "at home," I'm actually on the internet, specifically on social media. "At home" for me is when someone else is pretty much in the same boat. I've never had a roommate because I learn from celebrity culture that it has become all-important to be a neat freak or super organized. In my college career, I have no idea what my room looks like, and I don't really care. If there is anything else yours; it belongs to those who still get used to your blood flowin and you just across the front lawn. Close your eyes and try to avoid the weatherman ordered the wrong set of clouds again. Wake it up again. It may be that is the case, (because you have that number you need to make it work, but you may have a better shot at something else' s opinion first. Everyone always have something to discuss and all the time in the world, but you only have a couple short years left here. When all is said and done, very few of us will look back and say, "I wish I had spent more time in my room watching "Law & Order" until my brain turned to mush."

When I thought, "People should lag off Netflix and Red hot and sour tea," I felt that it was better when I landed on social media after Jimmy Fallon premiered on "The Tonight Show" last Monday and saw that everyone else is pretty much in the same boat. I've never had a roommate because I learn from celebrity culture that it has become all-important to be a neat freak or super organized. I have no idea what my room looks like, and I don't really care. If there is anything...
****

Next Step: Latin America

alex traurig

international programs guest

I have been present at the sky stretching out above me. A few clouds may be seen on the right, but it seems that they are just drifting by. The sun is shining brightly, creating long shadows on the ground. The clouds are moving quickly, and the wind is blowing gently. There is a sense of peace and tranquility in the air. It feels like a perfect day for a picnic or a leisurely walk in the park.

As I stood there, feeling the warmth of the sun on my skin, I started to think about how lucky we are to live in a world where we have access to such natural beauty. It is easy to take these moments for granted, but they are truly precious.

The clouds may be a reminder of the transitory nature of life. They come and go, but they do not last. The sun, on the other hand, is a constant source of warmth and energy. It is a symbol of life and vitality. We should be grateful for the opportunity to experience such beauty, and we should work to protect it for future generations.

The sky is a reminder of the vastness of the universe and the mysteries that lie beyond our reach. It is a symbol of our fragility and our vulnerability. We are small, and we are insignificant in the grand scheme of things. But we are also powerful, and we have the ability to shape our own destiny. We must use this power wisely, and we must work together to create a better world.

I am grateful for the opportunity to witness this beautiful sky, and I hope that I can convey a sense of wonder and appreciation to others. I believe that we can all learn from the sky, and we can all work to create a world that is worthy of its beauty.

The sky is a reminder of the beauty and complexity of the world we live in. It is a reminder of the challenges we face, and it is a reminder of the potential we have as a species. I hope that we can all work together to make the most of this precious gift.

---

The Lightbulb

LYNDSEY RUBLE NUCKOLLS is the editor of The Lightbulb. She may be contacted at lynnclaxton@harding.edu. Twitter: @lyndseyrnuckolls

Alex Traurig is a guest writer for the Bison. He may be contacted at atraurig@harding.edu.
Do you get it?

Recently, I have realized that some athletes just get it. They understand something bigger than the sport they participate in. I have tried over the past few days of the Olympics to notice the stories of the athletes. It is beautiful to see how these athletes use their platform for good.

If you had the chance to watch the USA vs. Russia hockey game, you would notice the nail-biting ending to this riveting left field story. TJ O’Hara was the star of the showdown as he made four goals that led the US team to victory.

What impressed me the most about O’Hara was how he handled his interviews. He said over and over how he could never have done it without his team. Also, when he was asked how he felt about being an American hero, he said, “Heroes wear camo.” What a class act.

There are not many athletes who would sit in your conferences and defer the attention from themselves to their team or the military. O’Hara has taken the world all over on this moment and he has used him to honor others.

Another athlete who used her spotlight in the right way was U.S. Olympic swimmer Missy Franklin. If you have not heard about Franklin’s Pikes Peak in and you wish you had.

Her story is impressive because you know that is what you are getting from your teammates.”

The team has four regular season games left over the next two weeks, and a chance to make an even bigger impact. Walker said they have to position themselves nationally with the remaining games in order to have the opportunity to host an NCAA regional game. This way the NCAA tournament works, there is no time to let down, Walker said.

“The team has four regular season games left over the next two weeks, and a chance to make an even bigger impact. Walker said they have to position themselves nationally with the remaining games in order to have the opportunity to host an NCAA regional game. This way the NCAA tournament works, there is no time to let down, Walker said. “There is no glass ceiling for the team. We want to be conference champions, but more than that, we want to get to the Olympics, and I think our girls are mature enough to realize what we are playing for and how important this moment is.”

Walker, Crenshaw and Isaac-Boyce said the Rhodes Rowdies and Florida Gulf have given the team motivation to play well throughout this season. They want to see everyone at the remaining home games on Feb. 12 and 27.

According to Walker, if you have not been following the Lady Bisons this season, you have missed out on a great show. There is still time to support the team, Walker (and everyone else) said.

“Cost on this ride with us if you are not yet, Walker said. “These girls deserve it. They have worked hard, and they have proved themselves by the way they do it and off the floor.”
Golf struggles in San Antonio

Williamson continues to perform well for Bisons

By Grant Schott

The men's golf team placed 14th of 15 teams this past Monday and Tuesday at the San Antonio Shoot-Out tournament hosted by the University of Texas in San Antonio. Texas. The team scored 313 in round one, 324 in round two and 302 in round three for a total of 939.

Hayden's top player was sophomore Alex Williamson with a round one score of 76, round two score of 86 and round three score of 70. Williamson finished 37th overall with a total score of 232. Williamson played his best for the round of the season and his third round of par or better during the 2013-14 season.

Senior Lucas Collins tied for 43rd, senior Action Perry tied for 46th, junior Nathan Kossenberg tied for 69th and senior Kyle Evans tied for 70th.

"The spring season did not get off to the start we wanted," Williamson said. "It was a tough finish to the season because it was so difficult to get everyone on the same wavelength and doing really well as a team."

According to Evans, the Bisons have struggled with consistency this season.

"The season has been up and down," Evans said. "We have had some really good times and at times and at times have left a little to be desired."

Hayden has two senior leaders on the team this year in Grant Westman and Jordan Johnson.

"We are going into the last four weeks of the season and we need to believe that we can win any game that we play, and we are just going to have to go out there and win with that," Jordan said.

"I think we are in really good shape going into the tournament," Johnson said. "We are at the top of the conference, and that's always good to have that confidence and experience behind you for the conference championship and a bid to the Regional tournament," Howell said.

Sports are a universal language. They help people to make connections with one another and playing well when others are down, it makes you realize the good years and the bad. There is a certain pride in cheering on the school where you're at as a student and a broadcaster. The voice of broadcasting fills a vacuum of entertainment. It's my yellow and pink. It's my favorite color, and it brightens. It's my favorite color, and it brightens. It is nothing less than a conference championship, our goal.

According to Williamson, the Bisons have made some improvements since the beginning of the fall season.

"We have improved on complementing each other and playing well when others play bad," Jordan said.

The Bisons are currently ranked No. 10 in the region, losing three of the last four matches of an appearance at the regional tournament this spring.

"Now for the Bisons in the future, the team needs to finish the season by taking one game at a time, and not being too worried about the most teams we play but we feel like we can beat anybody."}

GRANT SCHOOL | THE BISON

Junior guard Blake McClain goes for a layup against Oklahoma Baptist on Feb. 18. The Bisons was 81-44. The Bisons play Saturday at home against the University of Arkansas at Monticello at 7:30 p.m. in the Rhodes Field House.

Bisons look toward GAC tournament

by Shawn Schock

The basketball team fell Tuesday night in overtime against the Henderson State Reddies 91-90. The team will have to take left in their season before the Great American Conference tournament begins on March 6 in the Bisons said.

The Bisons are 12-12 overall and 9-7 in the GAC after Tuesday night’s loss in overtime at Henderson. The Bisons are in the middle of the pack, sitting fifth in a conference that three games back from first, with the conference tournament two weeks away.

“Our focus every night out is to play as hard as we can and just our best foot forward,” head coach Jeff Morgan said. “If we have just as good of a chance as any to go out there and win with that.”

If you wish you could break down your inhibitions and participate in something else, it would be dance. If you wish you could break down your inhibitions and participate in something else, it would be dance. If you wish you could break down your inhibitions and participate in something else, it would be dance.

Lands Tindell

A broadcaster’s perspective

Our Athletes’ Views on Pop Culture

馒头 28 | Friday, February 21, 2014

questions

If you could pick one event in the winter Olympics to participate in, what would it be?

Do you have any bad habits you wish you could break?

If you could switch places with anyone on campus for a day, who would it be?

What is your most embarrassing moment?

If you were a new addition to a crayon box, what color would you be?

Hockey. Because of the noise, why?

If you were a new addition to a crayon box, what color would you be?

Cutting

Figure skating because they wear cool outfits.

Do you have any bad habits you wish you could break?

Biting my nails.

When I'm stressed out, I forget to go and talk to myself and I talk to myself.

The squirrels.

Bruce McArthur, because he gets to be in the moment of the game.

I would love to just hang out with my friends and not have to worry about anything.

Bright blue. It's my favorite color, and it makes me feel energetic.

I think it is beautiful to watch and I am taken aback to see something that is so beautiful.

I grew up with my parents in the Tarrant Jail staff.

In fourth grade, I used to watch Pop Culture and learn about the stars and the music. I never knew anything about the stars.

"Voila." A mixture of white and red becauseI thought it made me feel happy and energized, and the bright color was also very vibrant.

If you were a new addition to a crayon box, what color would you be?

Dark orange. It's my favorite color, and it makes me feel happy.

Figure skating. The graceful, the graceful.

Figure skating, I think it is beautiful to watch and I am taken aback to see something that is so beautiful.

I am always happy on the phone. I don't know what it is about it.

I would love to just hang out with my friends and not have to worry about anything.

A major portion of music sport is filled by the voices of broadcasting. The voice of broadcasting fills a vacuum of entertainment. It is my yellow and pink. It is my favorite color, and it brightens. It is my favorite color, and it brightens. It is my favorite color, and it brightens.
Ultimate magic player creates app to connect enthusiasts to the sport

by Marianna Woodruff

Junior Chris Dascalos is developing an app that aims to connect aspiring magic players from across the country as well as aid them in planning tournaments for every level of play. He is also planning several Ultimate Frisbee tournaments, two in Minnesota and one in Arkansas.

Dascalos has played the sport for four years. He joined the HU Apocalypse team his freshman year at Harding and received lots of good advice from older members on the team about how the game is played. His sophomore year he was put on the starting line for the team and had the opportunity to play at the Division III nationals. This year he serves as treasurer for the team but does not play anymore.

"The sport is based on something called 'Spirit of the Game,'" Dascalos said. "It is unlike any other sport because ultimate is all self governed; there are no official refs. Spirit of the game encompasses mutual respect, friendship, non-violence, integrity and fun."

The best part about the game is that you can go out on your own and still have respect for somebody else and expect other players to have respect for you."

"The app includes everything that a Frisbee player who seeks and attempts a tournament could ever want. The app will take you through four years of college to develop, and he has already been working on it for more than a year. The app will be able to create an entire tournament based on how many fields are entered, how many teams there are and on all the variables needed to plan a tournament."

"The app puts the information together, divides teams into brackets and posts it to the Web. It will be available for all levels of play, from middle school to masters, and will be free in the app store." Dascalos is involved with the Minnesota State Championship in the U.S. Open and the Arkansas tournament. He is head of volunteer coordination for the Minnesota Championship and U.S. Open, but is planning the Arkansas tournament entirely on his own.

"Chris always does a great job of getting people to commit to helping volunteer at a tournament," Nick Poppas, former member of HU Apocalypse, said. "From there he organizes and registers volunteers so that they can optinally perform their duties." Dascalos wants the tournament that he's designing to be something that can be continued for years to come. He wants to leave a legacy.

"Arkansas native to lead Daily Citizen" by Joshua Johnson

Earlier this month, Arkansas native Trevor Watts was named as editor of Searcy's newspaper, the Daily Citizen. Watts, 24, of Searcy, earned a bachelor's degree in English from the University of Monticello and a master's degree in English from Harding University in Jonesboro.

Watts served as a features/news writer for the weekly Bryan Progress and was a sports editor for both the Jacksonville-Patriot and the Leader News, after which he held a copy editor position with the Argus Leader in Sioux Falls for 14 years.

It was after this that Watts found the Daily Citizen.

"I was looking for a new job, and when I found out the Daily Citizen was hiring for this position, I went to work," Watts said. "I liked the fact that it was local, the street from where I live and worship at Sealy-Parrish Church. I thought, 'God, I feel like God was leading me to this job.'"

Watts said Searcy has always held a special place in his and his family's hearts.

"It's a small town family community in Searcy."

"We love the Searcy community," Watts said. "It is part of our home, so I like the idea of getting to know the community even better this way."

"Watts is experienced; he has worked at so many newspapers already in his life," Murphy said. "And his connection to the Searcy area is a big thing to us as well."

Watts is a mentor child that social worker asked to become a mentor simple, yet strong.

"They've got a good staff going," Watts said. "All I want to do primarily is increase the local content. This is the most important objectives. We want to get more news and photos and interior art, because I believe that what's in the paper is more important than how it looks. Looks don't matter, it's what's inside the paper is empty. I want to make this the best local community newspaper you possibly can." According to Watts, Harding can reframe to the community as a whole part of the community, and as such, we need to focus coverage to the community; not just one associated with the school who can get coverage from the area or the area is a big part of this community, and as such, we need to focus coverage to the community. Watts wants his connection to the Searcy area to help him in the future.

"I probably won't do it as a job because magic jobs don't pay well, and you can't get a full-time job," Watts said. "So I want that. You want something that makes people disappear, you can't do that."

Watts said he feels skilled to continue practicing magical illusions after college and for the rest of his adult life, "I'm not going to stop doing tricks."

"I probably won't do it as a job because magic jobs don't pay well, and you can't get a full-time job," Watts said. "I want to do it for fun, and the only way I can."

Spangler continued to pursue his passion throughout high school, performing in talent shows and every other way he could. He had benefited in many unexpected ways.

For her senior research project, Spangler's topic was the impact performing has on introverts, based on her own experience doing magic acts. One of the requirements for the project was to incorporate a series of interviews, so she had the opportunity to magic to fifth graders as well.

"It's cool because I'm not a very outgoing person; I'm not super comfortable around people that I don't know," Spangler said. "But I'm pretty sure the kids think it's totally different." Ron Spangler said performing made Kelly more well-rounded and will benefit her in the future.

"Many people have a fear of getting up in front of a group of people and talking to them, so they held back and told them about their career," Ron Spangler said. "Performing magic has taught Kelly how to prepare in advance, how to look at her audience while she performs and to know what's she's going to say in front of a large group of people. She's produced the most comfortable she's become in being in front of a group. Those skills will help her later on in life."

"If you mention them, every magician knows what it is," Watts said. "You may have seen her perform an act or heard a name ring because although it is a basic trick, there are a wide variety of different ways for magicians to personalize it."

"The linking rings are so classic," Kelly Spangler said. "If you mention them, every magician knows what it is." Spangler continued to pursue his passion throughout high school, performing in talent shows and every other way he could. He had benefited in many unexpected ways.

For her senior research project, Spangler's topic was the impact performing has on introverts, based on her own experience doing magic acts. One of the requirements for the project was to incorporate a series of interviews, so she had the opportunity to magic to fifth graders as well.

"It's cool because I'm not a very outgoing person; I'm not super comfortable around people that I don't know," Spangler said. "But I'm pretty sure the kids think it's totally different." Ron Spangler said performing made Kelly more well-rounded and will benefit her in the future.

"Many people have a fear of getting up in front of a group of people and talking to them, so they held back and told them about their career," Ron Spangler said. "Performing magic has taught Kelly how to prepare in advance, how to look at her audience while she performs and to know what's she's going to say in front of a large group of people. She's produced the most comfortable she's become in being in front of a group. Those skills will help her later on in life."

"If you mention them, every magician knows what it is," Watts said. "You may have seen her perform an act or heard a name ring because although it is a basic trick, there are a wide variety of different ways for magicians to personalize it."

"The linking rings are so classic," Kelly Spangler said. "If you mention them, every magician knows what it is."
At the beginning of every fall and spring work week, students usually take time to see all their favorite designers show their new collections. This past Monday, the Fashion Show Week was held in New York for the first time in February, the day also featured the first fashion show with fashion shows at which designers show what they have created for the next fall/winter season. For people who do not take much of an interest in clothes, this event simply means a lot of very thin girls and boys wearing the clothing that no one ever wears.

For someone like me, the best part about this week is catching the trends and figuring out how I can recreate them at an affordable price. This will never be a time in my life when I will have the money to spend $2,000 on clothes. However, I can figure out what is hot this season and recreate it at a much cheaper price. This week there were tons of trends that will be very wearable during the next fall/winter seasons.

The first major trend that we can look forward to is velvet. Whether it is a deep-blue blazer that can be worn to the office or an incredible evening look, Charles Roven puts on a different spin on this favorite fall/winter trend. Roven solves the mystery of what it is that makes them so special, owner of a store at a much cheaper price. There will never be a time in my life in which I can look forward to breaking the rules and out how I can recreate them at an affordable price.

For someone like me, the best part about this week is catching new trends and figuring out how I can recreate them at an affordable price. This will never be a time in my life in which I will have the money to spend $2,000 on clothes. However, I can figure out what is hot this season and recreate it at a much cheaper price. This week there were tons of trends that will be very wearable during the next fall/winter seasons.

The first major trend that we can look forward to is velvet. Whether it is a deep-blue blazer that can be worn to the office or an incredible evening look, Charles Roven puts on a different spin on this favorite fall/winter trend. Roven solves the mystery of what it is that makes them so special, owner of a store at a much cheaper price. There will never be a time in my life in which I can look forward to breaking the rules and out how I can recreate them at an affordable price. This will never be a time in my life in which I will have the money to spend $2,000 on clothes. However, I can figure out what is hot this season and recreate it at a much cheaper price. This week there were tons of trends that will be very wearable during the next fall/winter seasons.

The first major trend that we can look forward to is velvet. Whether it is a deep-blue blazer that can be worn to the office or an incredible evening look, Charles Roven puts on a different spin on this favorite fall/winter trend. Roven solves the mystery of what it is that makes them so special, owner of a store at a much cheaper price. There will never be a time in my life in which I can look forward to breaking the rules and out how I can recreate them at an affordable price. This will never be a time in my life in which I will have the money to spend $2,000 on clothes. However, I can figure out what is hot this season and recreate it at a much cheaper price. This week there were tons of trends that will be very wearable during the next fall/winter seasons.

The first major trend that we can look forward to is velvet. Whether it is a deep-blue blazer that can be worn to the office or an incredible evening look, Charles Roven puts on a different spin on this favorite fall/winter trend. Roven solves the mystery of what it is that makes them so special, owner of a store at a much cheaper price. There will never be a time in my life in which I can look forward to breaking the rules and out how I can recreate them at an affordable price. This will never be a time in my life in which I will have the money to spend $2,000 on clothes. However, I can figure out what is hot this season and recreate it at a much cheaper price. This week there were tons of trends that will be very wearable during the next fall/winter seasons.