Charley’s Aunt promises laughs

Play aims to provide comic relief

On Thursday, the theatre department opened the curtain for “Charley’s Aunt,” comedy written by Brandon Thomas. The production runs through Saturday, Dec. 6.

Associate professor of theatre Britton Lynn is directing the play, which he will say he heard audiences laughing with laughter from beginning to end.

For 1912, the show is centered around two house collegiate students, Jack Chingi played by sophomore Patrick Jones and Charity Ulrey played by junior Melanie Gary. The men are both study to propose to their girlfriends. However, rules stating that young men and women cannot meet without a chaperone present and prevent them from doing so.

To remedy the situation, Charity orders his aunt to dress up as an old lady to be someone’s aunt. “It’s a fun spin,” said Ulrey, who added that there will be so much Netflix and Hulu you can take the work beforehand.

Some Wesley Aspey plays Captain Charles D’Alroy and is outgoing for exposition.

“By allowing him being the mentor of the men you can show they are ready to propose to their girlfriends. However, Patrick Jones and Charley Chesney played by sophomore Sydney Mann said. “And, there’s only so much fun to work on,” Mann said.

Charley’s Aunt runs December 1-2 in the Performing Arts Center. Admission is $10 or free with a HUB. The switch for the Front Lawn Christmas Tree lighting.

The Harding University Bookstore (HUB) is now stocked with mugs, stationary, pens, stickers and other merchandise bearing club letters representing women’s clubs on campus. Merchandise can be purchased in the gift section of the store.

“I’m surprised it hasn’t happened sooner,” justice Aliza Griffin, a member of Sigma Phi Mu said. “We are part of sorority life and why not sell it in the HUB?”

Nick Glover, the HUB floor manager, said the idea to sell club merchandise has been developing for a while. “A few months ago, we began discussing how we could shape our merchandise to better reflect the student body because, ultimately, this is our bookstore,” Glover said.

HUB floor manager senior Callista Ralston agreed with the selection of the merchandise and said she would go on the floor.

“Charley’s main goal is to revamp the bookstore and make it more relevant to students,” Callow said.

“Her intentions weren’t to make profit, but to see how club merchandise would be used.”

So far, the merchandise appears to be a hit with customers.

Senior Melanie Gary thinks that having club products in the HUB is a good addition.

“I think if you promote,” Gary a number of Pi Theta Phi said. “It’s easy way to get new club stuff, and it also gives pressure on club officers.”

“Many clubs are already doing so much in terms of hundreds items for their members,” Glover said. “Things like T-shirts and apparel, bumper stickers or car decals. We consulted some of these clubs and found that there were some specialty items they had interest in that were not as cost effective to purchase in small quantities. Because of the volume of the bookstore, we were able to scale these items and make them available at a reasonable price for our students.”

The selection of merchandise item is expanding and is expected to grow.

“We carry in our store, we are looking into what new and exciting products,” Glover said. “We are looking into what new and exciting products we can add as well as continuing to improve our quality of our existing products.”

Searry courthouse meets new accessibility proposals
Chairiff to courtroom handicap accessible

The Searry courthouse is about to receive a chairiff—actually, it's called a chairlift.

As of Nov. 12, the Arkansas Historical Preservation Program (AHPP) approved a proposal by Judge Michael Lincoln that would provide a new and improved chairlift that will assist with the overall accessibility of the building.

Lisa Brown, administrative assistant in Judge Lincoln’s office, said the new chairlift will be used this year's courthouse season, when the chairlift will be equipped with a new, more efficient chairlift and also promote to them the team's core competition and also promoting to them the team's core.

Harding Apocalypse carries on Ultimate Frisbee legacy

As of Nov. 24, the Grand Jury chose not to indict Ferguson officer Darren Wilson, who shot and killed Michael Brown on Aug. 9, 2014, according to the Arkansas Board of Medicine.

In the aftermath of the shooting, the Grand Jury chose to run the marathon, as well as the Athens Marathon on its track.

“The project should be complete within 60 days of the starting date of construction, although Brown said the date has not yet been set. Funding for the project will come from Arkansas state taxes and the AHPP.

The specification that now calls for a chairlift not only can tell you it’s desperately needed, but also as manually as well as automatically and will contain passenger mounting areas and accessible boarding ramps. It will also include a full status of the chairlift. Those additions will ensure that the new lift will be a more efficient and official Safety Standard for Platform Lifts and Staircase Chairlifts by Gensler Law, Ltd.

Rape culture and Shia LeBouef

Shia LeBouef is back in the spotlight this week with a series of tweets that she claims makes light of the 2014 incident when she was sexually assaulted by an unidentified man at the University of Pennsylvania. LeBouef, who was 18 at the time, has since been quoted as saying she was "treated with a whip, a toy, a whip, and a toy on fire." The tweets were quickly condemned by many as being insensitive and potentially triggering for survivors of sexual assault.

LeBouef's tweets were part of a larger conversation about the treatment of women in the music industry, particularly in the context of the #MeToo movement. LeBouef's tweets were seen as a response to the criticism she faced for her behavior during her time at the University of Pennsylvania, where she was a student.

LeBouef's tweets have sparked a debate about the appropriate response to incidents of sexual assault, with some arguing that humor is a way to cope with trauma and others arguing that it is inappropriately轻视ing.

The world tends to go to college so much that you often don't get to know the American Dream. A degree is too often a gateway to a world of opportunities leading to financial stability and independence. I believe that there is an important goal of education, but we are often discouraged to reach it.

What is the purpose of this Christian life? I personally think that we have the chance of getting a desirable job, depending on our values. This is the way we can decide on this particular abundant Christian life.

I am a quote from Jim Kellum, F, and I have always been quite discouraged about my male self image too, whether people might admit it or not, thinking I'll never be a hands-on father, I've never been able to do this day and age's skewed masculinity by simply sitting on my hands. I have wrestled (metaphorically, of course) with this day and age's skewed masculinity by simply sitting on my hands.

One of the most important things I may ever do is to make the world know that em is a two-way street between the male and the female. I care not if you are a guy or a girl, I care not if there are other people living in the same society. I have wrestled (metaphorically, of course) with this day and age's skewed masculinity by simply sitting on my hands.

The world is often so slow to move on that sometimes we have to sit and wait for a coffee and to talk about photography. Realtors are always on the move, hence the saying, "The realtor never sleeps." It is a saying that I have often been told by a realtor that I met in the coffee shop.

I have always been a man who is always on the move in order to keep up with the people I meet. I have often been an assistant photographer and getting from family to family is not easy for the people to be there on the go.

I have often been asked (metaphorically, of course) with this day and age's skewed masculinity by simply sitting on my hands. It is a saying that I have often been told by a realtor that I met in the coffee shop.

Keeping the Christmas spirit alive

Just the Clax

The grammatical's funeral

It was a Monday morning at 9 a.m. when the reading bell rang, the clock's ticking noise growing louder with each passing second. The room was silent, save for the occasional rustle of papers and the distant sound of a pencil scratching against a test. A few students mumbled to each other in the back, their voices muted by the hall's echoes. But everyone was waiting, eyes fixed on the front door, their hearts beating faster than usual.

And then, a door slammed. The sound reverberated through the halls, making the students jump. It was the moment they'd been waiting for.

Mr. Cope swept into the room, his white suit contrasting sharply with the dark grey of the other teachers. He walked up to the front of the room, his eyes scanning the faces of his students.

"Good morning, class," he said, his voice resounding in the empty hall. "Today, we're going to talk about the most important topic of the year: Christmas!" The students groaned, some rolling their eyes, but Mr. Cope's enthusiasm was contagious. He continued, "Christmas is a time for family, love, and giving. It's a time to remember the true meaning of the season: the birth of Jesus Christ."

The students exchanged glances, some rolling their eyes in disinterest. But Mr. Cope was undeterred. He continued, "But let's not forget the true meaning of Christmas: the gift of love. That's why we're going to talk about the most important topic of the year: giving!"

Mr. Cope handed out envelopes to the students, each containing a list of names and gifts. "For this assignment, you're going to purchase a gift for someone on your list. It can be big or small, as long as it's heartfelt."

The students groaned again, but Mr. Cope was undeterred. He continued, "This assignment is not about the cost or the size of the gift. It's about the thought and the effort you put into it. The true spirit of Christmas is about giving, not receiving."

Mr. Cope watched as his students scurried to the nearest gift shop, their faces lighting up with excitement. And as the day went on, the halls were filled with the sound of laughter and conversation, as the students worked on their Christmas gifts.

It was a magical day, filled with the spirit of giving. And as Mr. Cope stood in the front of the room, watching his students create something special, he knew that he had done his job well. For him, that was the true meaning of Christmas: the gift of love and the joy of giving.

Basketball is a game of runs. The Blue Raiders basketball team (led by Jusef Heron) played a great game against the Patriots defense, and the Patriots were not relevant anymore in the game. With the exception of the first 12 minutes of the first half, the Blue Raiders dominated the game. The team scored 71 points and had 26 rebounds. The Blue Raiders are now 6-5 on the season and will be playing against the Patriots in the next game.

The Lady Bisons basketball team had more wins than losses on the season in the DEC 2015 season. The team scored 81 points and had 12 rebounds. The team scored 65 points and had 12 rebounds in the game. The Lady Bisons are now 6-5 on the season and will be playing against the Patriots in the next game.

The defense was the key to the win, as the Lady Bisons had 10 turnovers. The team scored 26 points and had 12 rebounds. The Lady Bisons are now 6-5 on the season and will be playing against the Patriots in the next game.
Playoff cheat sheet

With the College Football Playoff committee's final rankings coming out on Tuesday, the college football playoff picture will finally be set. Lucky for you, I've compiled a cheat sheet with everything you need to know about who has a chance to get there. You can take this sheet to the games and see how it stacks up.

Virtual Locks (Barring Upsets)

Wisconsin: Even though the Badgers and Buckeyes split their regular-season meeting, they're in the College Football Playoff with Iowa and USC-though, to be fair, they're in the Big Ten championship game. If the Buckeyes and Badgers both let up to Oregon and USC and are blowout winners, this may be the easiest way for Wisconsin to make the playoffs, but if theBig Ten is going to have one team represent the conference, it will likely be Ohio State. It's not outside the realm of possibility to see both Wisconsin and Ohio State in the College Football Playoff.

Bowl Predictions

Ohio State: Ohio State was so close to a Coastal Division title last year, and with the Big Ten East being as tough as it is this year, the Buckeyes have a real chance to pull off a huge upset this weekend. Many analysts believe they were shafted by the Big Ten championship committee, and if they can'realize the potential they had last year, they'll be watching the College Football Playoff draw with interest. They should be in the playoff this year.

Texas: Despite an overwhelming amount of SEC football, the Longhorns have a real shot at the College Football Playoff. They had the best SEC record in the conference last year and got put in the College Football Playoff with Alabama. If they can upset the Crimson Tide, the Longhorns would be in the College Football Playoff with the SEC champs, and if they can keep a close eye on Alabama, they've got a chance to make the College Football Playoff.

Nebraska: The Huskers were the only Big Ten team to beat Penn State last year, and with the Big Ten East being as tough as it is this year, the Huskers have a shot at the playoff.

Louisville: The Cardinals are in a must-win position this week, and if they can upset Florida State, they'll be setting themselves up for a College Football Playoff spot. If the Wolverines lose, the Cardinals will be in the College Football Playoff this season.

Oregon: The Ducks were one of the best teams in the country last year, and with the Pac-12 being as tough as it is this year, they have a real shot at the College Football Playoff. If they can upset Stanford and beat USC, the Ducks will be in the College Football Playoff with the SEC champs.

With the playoffs set, I can finally answer the million-dollar question: Who is actually getting in and who has a chance? Who's going to be representing the SEC? Who'll be representing the Big Ten? Who's going to make the College Football Playoff? This is the best breakdown of the College Football Playoff ever written.
English professor Dr. Michael Claxton displays his new book, "Don't Fool Yourself: The Magical Life of Dell O'Dell," in his office Wednesday afternoon. Although the book focuses on the life of a 20th-century magician, Claxton said it is a story with wide appeal.

By Jake Hester

Claxton released his new book on Friday, December 5, 2014 at the Harding bookstore for $45, and a copy will soon be available to the Library for students.

Fasting From Friends, Club Sport, and Midnight Oil are perfect

For many students, Christmas break is a long-awaited and deserved rest. For others, it is akin to the 90s days spent in the desert, but we are fasting from friends, club sports, and midnight oil to distract you from your hunger pains. Here are a few shows that are perfect for binge-watching.

Gilmore Girls

This is my personal favorite among all the classic shows out there. I love its simplicity, and it has become a staple in my life since making a recent appearance on Netflix. This show is known for its humor and heartwarming stories. It is a classic, and I recommend it to everyone.

Bates Motel

A modern-day prequel to Alfred Hitchcock's iconic horror film, "Psycho," this show elaborates on Norman Bates' darker side and deepens his maternal and his pop-culture legacy. His elaborate and decadent mansion is the perfect setting for the show. There are only 20 episodes so far, but at 10 episodes long, Bates Motel is a great binge for a long weekend.

The Walking Dead

"The Walking Dead" has had a cult following, but it's the last season is exploding into a megashit that's worth watching over 90 percent of my time. It's not easy to jump on the bandwagon, though. There have been 19 episodes, a number that can easily be compared over the break.

Gilmore Girls

Show's bingeworthy with the same tone, and this show takes place in Stars Hollow and gives a realistic experience of Bethel and her community.

His elaborate and decadent mansion is the perfect setting for the show. There are only 20 episodes so far, but at 10 episodes long, Bates Motel is a great binge for a long weekend.

The Walking Dead

"The Walking Dead" has had a cult following, but it's the last season is exploding into a megashit that's worth watching over 90 percent of my time. It's not easy to jump on the bandwagon, though. There have been 19 episodes, a number that can easily be compared over the break.

Gilmore Girls

Show's bingeworthy with the same tone, and this show takes place in Stars Hollow and gives a realistic experience of Bethel and her community.

Bates Motel

A modern-day prequel to Alfred Hitchcock's iconic horror film, "Psycho," this show elaborates on Norman Bates' darker side and deepens his maternal and his pop-culture legacy. His elaborate and decadent mansion is the perfect setting for the show. There are only 20 episodes so far, but at 10 episodes long, Bates Motel is a great binge for a long weekend.
