Dear Dr. Chalk:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter.

And if you are willing to do so, we would like to take you up on your offer to accept a "trial assignment."

Possibly the best way to approach this would be for you to select one of the subjects in which you are most interested, as described in your letter. Then just drop me a note, expanding to four or five paragraphs, the thrust of what you would like to say.

Please select a subject on which you have three or four anecdotes or incidents which you can relate to illustrate the point you will be making. I mention this because we have discovered that our readers respond more readily when an article relates in this way to experiences which they may face themselves.

I can assure you, Dr. Chalk, that we are looking forward to working with you.

Sincerely yours,

Robert Walker
Editor

P.S. The next time you are coming into the Chicago area, I certainly hope you will allow an extra half-day and pay us a visit. If you will let us know in advance, we can pick you up at the airport.
