Dear Dr. Foster:

How pleasantly surprised Sue and I were to get your recent note. Yours was the first letter addressed to me as Executive Editor of the Sweet Publishing Company. Needless to say, it could have come addressed in any fashion and Sue and I would have been thrilled to hear from you and to be reminded of the many beautiful things that occurred in our lives because of your personal ministry.

We look forward to our move to Austin, Texas, where the Sweet Publishing Company is located for several reasons. Among those reasons will be the added stimulation of being near a great university that reminds us of our own University of Tennessee. Because of the opportunities we see around us, I will be attending the University of Texas Law School beginning with the June term, and studying for the next twenty-seven months. This will be in addition to my work with the Sweet Publishing Company, which for this next two or more years will obviously have to take less than my best and full attention.

Sue and I hope that in the days ahead we will have an opportunity to see you again and recall with you the many meaningful occasions that made our lives much richer.

Sincerely yours,

John Allen Chalk
