Dear Brother Stovall:

I have thought several times in the last few months that I would write you regarding the present status of my book, The Praying Christ and Other Sermons. I have received a credit for a balance owing to Christian Publishing Company and a check for $100 as the only remuneration on the contract signed at the time that the book was published. I do not have my records at hand regarding the amount of that balance, but could locate it if you cannot find the amount.

I have never known as to how many or few copies of the book were sold. I assume that no more than that represented by the amount of money I have received from your company.

Would it be possible for you to do some kind of accounting on this particular book? If so, could you check to see if I have some royalties coming to me? Any attention that you can give to these questions will be deeply appreciated by me. As you can well appreciate, this time of year causes one to check and recheck all possible sources of income to meet expenses that seem to be rising so dramatically these days.

Thank you for any attention that you can give to these questions.

Sincerely yours,

John Allen Chalk
