Dear Faye:

I am sorry that we were unable to get together in our recent visit to Dallas. It was, however, a pleasure to talk with you by telephone. I had a note from you when I got home yesterday from another meeting. It is good to know that you are settled in your work and in your apartment.

I cannot impress upon you to firmly the necessity of not only knowing but obeying the will of God. You have a greater appreciation for truth than most people. Truth exists in religion just as much as it does in science or in any other area of life. My one concern and hope for you is not that you have affiliation with this or that religious group but that you do simply what the Bible directs. That is our only aim as Churches of Christ. To the extent that we push denominational ideas or teach things not revealed in God's word, we are no longer the Church of the Bible.

I send you my very best wishes for your new situation.

Fraternally yours,

John Allen Chalk
