Dear Brother Lemmons:

The September 6 issue of the Firm Foundation is one of the finest in recent months. our excellent plea for the ACC graduate school was appreciated by me in the midst of all the charges and counter-charges regarding "Intellectualism." My own deep concern for graduate study in Bible, although unfulfilled largely in my own life, has centered around the conviction that only in a depth of understanding of the original languages and conditions can one preach the Bible the simplest. Our goal is the simplest, most powerful presentation of the gospel in words that every man can understand. For this reason I regard your editorial endorsement and plea for the school a fortunate one.

The recent series of articles by J.D. Thomas has, of course, been deeply appreciated by me. Finally, after all these months, positive writing concerning the New Testament doctrine of the Holy Spirit has appeared. Brother Robert Lawrence's article on "The Fruit Of The Spirit" was also a very excellent one. I do hope that you will this fall write on the subject of the Holy Spirit; and, above all, that you will write Biblicly concerning this profound subject.

I send you my prayers and personal best wishes.

Fraternally yours,

John Allen Chalk
