Barby Smith

Barby and Dwight Smith

Barby Smith, who died Aug. 11 at the age of 66 after a two-year battle with cancer, worked along side her husband Dwight Smith, campus minister, since the day they were married in 1958.

They had three children, Tanya, Chuck and Dirk.

Besides having a family together, they also worked together with churches in the Northeast for 22 years. Since 1981, the Smiths worked with the College Church of Christ and its Campus Ministry and International Campaigns programs.

"She was my team-mate ever since we first got married," Dwight said. "She was my right arm. We never perceived that as being anything different, spectacular, unusual. ... We were a team."

For 14 years, the Smiths traveled to Scotland as campaign leaders. Dwight planned to return to Scotland in the near future.

Lena Rae Hendrix, 1985-2004

Staff remembers friend, co-worker, spirit

Sophomore Lena Hendrix, leadership editor of the Petit Jean, died in a four-wheeling accident Oct. 16 while at her grandparents' home near Nashville, Ark. Sophomore Brandon Dodds, Lena's boyfriend, survived the accident.

Lena, 19, was an honor student and a member of Ko Jo Kai.

Her unexpected death shadowed the staff's work on the Petit Jean with sorrow and pricked the hearts of those who knew her.

While we mourned the loss of a friend, we, who knew her, took refuge in the comfort of her memory. Our staff was brightened because of Lena's presence.

"Lena was someone I looked forward to seeing each day," junior Christina Boils, academics editor, said. "She had a great personality and a contagious laugh that made me feel at ease when I was around her."

Senior Jamie Higgins, athletics editor, agreed with Boils' sentiments, saying that Lena was full of love and joy and was always a pleasure to work with.

Jim Miller, Petit Jean adviser, remembered several qualities about Lena, but one remained at the front of his memory — her commitment to her home and family.

"Lena was an example to me because she had her priorities in order; it was obvious her relationship with God and her family were her most treasured possessions," Miller said.

Four days before her death, Lena wrote an essay explaining her love of her rural home.

"I want to smell the dirt from the freshly turned fields and ride my four-wheeler down the dirt road, splashing in puddles and watching the birds fly up out of the grass on either side of the road," Lena wrote.

"I feel like a cliché right now, the simple, down-home girl who spreads her wings and goes to find her fame and fortune in the city, but in the end decides she is better suited to the farm, so she returns home."

Dodds said nothing about Lena was short of amazing.

"There's nothing you can't say," Dodds said. "Everything about her was special. The word special defined Lena."

A pre-med major, Lena set impressive goals and planned for success. Her love for her home, family, friends and God provided a refreshing example for those of us on the staff. We will remember Lena for what she taught us during her short time in this world. †

"I thought he had died ... but when I read the e-mail, it said he had been baptized at a young singles' retreat."

TESS WHITE /// SENIOR

The student body was made up of an eclectic group of students with a variety of experiences. While some moments affected a few years, others left an impression on lives. Others decided an eternity.

Getting invited to become a part of the social club she wanted was a moment that mattered to freshman Mallory Breshears. She admired the women she was going to spend her college years with, she said.

"I got so excited when I got the bid for Ko Jo Kai," Breshears said. "I knew I was going to make great new friends."

Sophomore Ian Lee said his family's adoption of a young girl this year was a experience that would influence the rest of his and his family members' lives.

"A moment that mattered to me was seeing, for the first time, a gift from God in the smile of my little sister adopted from China," he said.

Getting engaged to SA President Jimmy Huff was an important, life-changing moment for chapel secretary Susan Berry.

"It was a big commitment that I was excited to make," she said.

For senior Tess White, a friend's decision to become a Christian was a highlight of her year. The moment she learned that he had given his life to the Lord, she knew his eternity had been changed.

"I got an e-mail from my dad, and the subject was 'Seb,' my friend's name," White said. "I thought he had died, because he did things that could get him hurt. But when I read the e-mail, it said he had been baptized at a young singles' retreat."

When I recall the events of the past year, I close my eyes and see snapshots. I don't see entire days or situations, but I see single moments in time that were important enough to me to store away.

I see myself jumping up and down beside my mailbox in the student center in the spring of 2004, clutching a letter that told me I had been selected as editor-in-chief.

I see my fiancé slipping a diamond ring onto my finger over the summer.

I see a girl I didn't know being baptized in the McInteer fountain in the fall.

I see the Petit Jean staff circled together, praying and crying, 24 hours after the death of sophomore Lena Hendrix, the leadership editor for this publication. At that moment I knew nothing would be the same about working on this book.

Moments that matter shape who we are. With new experiences, successes and trials, we become somewhat different people. We learn more about God and ourselves.

Each moment has the potential to change everything. One moment, we are going one direction. The next, something happens and we switch directions. I have found that it is those deciding moments that matter. Those moments define all that follow them.

As the school year ends, the contents of this book move from currency to memory. Our lives will continue to be reshaped by new moments that matter, and the people we were this year will remain a part us.

I hope this year was filled with moments that mattered to you. I hope this year has been filled with growth and success for you. I pray that you are a person more in love with the Lord because of your experiences.
